Foreword

TENDERLY we lay the baby on the altar. For its shortcomings, we plead only our lack of experience in such matters and the painful outcries of our Class Treasurers as they strove to keep us within the dulling confines of a budget. For its virtues we bow with heartfelt thanks to Miss Marion L. Phillips and Miss Marjory L. Jones of the Class Secretaries Bureau and Mr. James W. Boyden of the Yale University Press. Without their untiring help and guidance, we suspect there would have been no baby at all.

Our principal regret was the impossibility for financial reasons of including dozens of excellent and interesting pictures which you were good enough to send us. Our chief satisfaction has been the heart-warming response which produced this flood of photographs and completed questionnaires and the occasion which our labors have given us to be in touch again with long-remembered friends.

WHITNEY GRISWOLD, '29

President of Yale University

We know him, many of us intimately, as an enlightened and forthright man, who truly understands what must be the nature of a university if it is to fulfill its responsibilities to all mankind.

May he ever count on and receive in his work the intelligent support of 1926 and 1926 S.

YALE UNIVERSITY
NEW HAVEN CONNECTICUT

OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

August 1, 1951.

To the Members of the Class of 1926 and 1926 S

It is a pleasure for me to extend to you my congratulations on the occasion of the publication of your Twenty-five Year Record and to thank you, both personally and officially, for your loyal and generous support. I know of no other Class which combines such great individual talent with such enlightened class spirit. I am proud to count so many of you among my personal friends, and I am grateful for your strong right arm in University affairs.

After Twenty-five Years

By Sherman Kent.

TO all of us who have come back to football games, alumni days, and reunions, the changes in the physical Yale of our day are obvious. It would be relatively easy to tick off the big ones, and if I thought that there was a bare chance of your being satisfied with such an enumeration I would be well pleased. But this was not the job that Bates McKee and George Flinn gave me. They gave me the much harder task of trying to put my finger on one of the most important and subtle changes: how are today's students different from us; what would strike us as new if we could recapture our late teens and go through Yale again in the Class of 1951; what is there about the spirit of the place that is different.

The easiest place to start is for us the saddest. There probably always have been and probably always will be great teachers at Yale, and much of what we call the spirit of the place is what these men have contributed to the atmosphere of undergraduate life. What is sad is that the names must be continually changing. For us of 1926 and 1926 S., this means that 1951 did not know the minds and personalities of Mitchell, Lull, Warren, Keller, Berden, Zeleny, Woodruff, Bennett and Phelps. Nor did 1951 live in an environment charged with what these men believed and what they taught. 1951 will have a notion of the spirit of Yale which, with these great men missing, is certain to be different from ours.

There is another big change and also a sad one. The passing of Sheff, at least in its undergraduate incarnation, has had a considerable effect on the spirit of Yale. From our mature point of view it was probably a poor plan to separate physically and socially men who wanted to study the things that Sheff men studied from the men who studied the things that Ac men studied. It is probably a good thing to have unlike-minded men get together in their college years, go to classes together, eat and talk together under a single roof. But from the nostalgic point of view, the passing of Sheff is by no means all good. It is hard for any of us—no matter what side of Wall Street he was reared on—to imagine any kind of roster of Yale men that doesn't have names with the "S" after the class numerals. It is hard and also sad for any of us to try to imagine what a football or prom week-end would be without Sheff parties. Sheff men themselves, better than I, can fill out the list. Let me just say that when they choose to grieve they will have lots of Ac company at the wake.

In 1951 then, there is a different faculty from ours, a Sheffless undergraduate world, a very different kind of physical plant, and a college system which has significantly altered the social life of the students. But what about today's students? What can be said of how they resemble us and how they do not?

Taken collectively (and on the somewhat bold assumption that New Haven is the cultural center of the world), a large number come from distant parts. Thanks to alert and loyal alumni many more boys turn up from unexpected places than was true in our day. In the years immediately after the war there were a lot of boys who came to Yale as undergraduates only because some of their military training had taken place on the Yale campus. Released from service, they decided to come back for the real thing. The University adopted the wise policy of encouraging this group. One of the results is that there are more loyal alumni than ever in the Western and Southern states who are keenly interested in sending the best boys of their communities on to New Haven. The geographical cross-section is thus not only more representative, but because a large number of these boys got their schooling in high schools and are more dependent on outside financial assistance, the social cross-section is also more representative of the country as a whole. Yale College of 1951 is a much fairer sample of studious seventeen-year-old Americans than were Yale College and Sheff in our day.

Again, collectively, and on paper at least, these new matriculants are a good bit brighter than we were. In today's competition for entrance, some of us (and I head the list with my own name) just would not get in. Every year the number of applicants gets larger and if the Board of Admissions had admitted them all, Yale would be almost as large as the University of California. But the Board admits only about one in four and each year, having gone through the incredibly difficult and thankless task of selection, is able to announce to the faculty that the new entering class is better than the last. One sometimes gets the idea that in another decade faculty and Freshman class should swap places.

As far as Freshman performance is concerned, the classes are better and better—especially in the academic sense. Whether the boys are also more mature and responsible is another question. They certainly act that way, but I would be hard pressed to say if this is a result of the character of the boys or of the splendid administration of the Freshman Year. In the light of the way they behave in their next three years, I would incline towards giving the bulk of the credit to Dean Buck and his staff. They run a very fine operation.

In those next three years something happens. And it is at this point in the analysis that your reporter wonders whether he is becoming an antique sourpuss with a warped view on life at Yale, or whether what he is about to write is the objective judgment of a rational Yale professor. He hopes it is the latter. The point is that too many of these boys who come in on a wave of praise and high promise from the Board of Admissions and who perform ably in their first year are neither mature nor responsible in their next three.

By this I mean principally that they are little concerned over the business of getting an education.

Maybe getting educated was not our primary concern, but we were quite a different group from the point of view of academic potential. It is surprising and painful to find the new crop, of which we expect so much, being every bit as blind to their opportunities, perhaps blinder, than we were.

I can begin with the week-ends and with girls. As I look back on my own college days and on those of my closest friends, it seems that we spent most week-ends in town and that we saw our girls half a dozen times a year—usually at big shebangs either in New Haven or on the Poughkeepsie, Northampton, Wellesley, New York, or home town circuit. Not that our week-ends in the City of Elms were spent in the Library, nor that we saw no girls—my thoughts run to Jigger McCarthy's and Pop Carroll's pleasure domes—but that if we were engaged in whooping it up, the whooping was done locally and, may I say, casually. Today things are different. Very large numbers of the boys are on the women's seminary circuit, which now includes Hartford, New London, Bridgeport, etc.; and an almost equally large number have their girls to New Haven. They often start coming in on Friday afternoons, and, if they or their escorts are the studious type, they often come to classes Friday or Saturday and sit decorously in the back row. A lacrosse game with Rippleriver at Yale Field is the excuse for delegations of students to call upon their College Masters and ask that the week-end be proclaimed a gala with a dance in the College common room. Big football week-ends and Derby Day resemble such events in the big co-educational institutions. Girls—all kinds of them—are around the Yale premises in such numbers and on such a number of occasions, that a casual visitor from 1926 or 1926 S. might mistakenly conclude that Yale College was perhaps co-educational. It isn't; the girls are not there to study. Their number in town and the number of boys out of town is something of an index of the boys' willingness to put second things first.

I will now advance to the classroom. Cuts are no longer limited in the Junior or Senior year and on an average Juniors and Seniors cut perhaps twice as much as we were permitted to. Whereas we were allowed to cut thirty classes a year, my guess is that they average around sixty. I have had a number of students who cut more than twenty-five per cent of the classes in my course, and if my course had been on the Tuesday, Thursday, Saturday cycle, for reasons cited above, my worst cutter would have gone far beyond that. Saturday classes are sparsely attended; and on days of big college events, so few students come that there is often little point in the professor's giving the lecture. The week-end, which now embraces all of Saturday, is being pushed back to Friday afternoon. My Friday 1:45 would generally have twice as many men absent as the Monday or the Wednesday classes.

If you are concerned over this lack of a sense of self-discipline and responsibility, as I am, you will ask, "How do they get away with it?" We know what would have happened to us if we had chronically overcut. The answer is that Yale College is now operating on the assumption that its students are grown men and that whether they choose to go to class or not is their own affair. Cuts are liberally allotted to Sophomores; and for Juniors and Seniors, cuts are, as I have remarked, virtually unlimited. I say, virtually, because the Dean's office can tell a young man that he may not cut another class under penalty. Some young men go to class until they find out that their professors—who do not take attendance as a rule—are not noting their absences. Then they may decide to run the risks of cutting in the fair certainty that their absences will not be reported.

One may well ask how Yale College came to the view that its students were grown men. Not having asked the Dean about the matter, I can only speculate.

In the first place, the immediate post-war classes did contain a very considerable proportion of grown men. Most of them were veterans. Any teacher will tell you that having these men as students was the high point of his teaching career. They were mature and still uninhibited. They were earnest without being grinds; they were bright; and most of them knew exactly what they were after. They were grateful for criticism and even though many of them had every right to ask for special privileges, they did not. Of course, many of them wanted to go on to professional schools where competition for admission was hot and where they could not be admitted without a good college record. This unquestionably had something to do with their earnestness, but after all, what better reason? The college did exactly right in treating these men as mature and solid citizens.

In the second place, the faculty got spoiled by these men. They were so good that professors relaxed all kinds of discipline. Many a professor stopped taking attendance, never gave an unannounced test, slacked up on his required reading assignments, in the knowledge that his best students were doing it, plus all the optional reading, at his mere suggestion. Many a professor let students come to class late and in parts of their uniforms, even when the top part was nothing more than a dirty skivvy shirt. Some professors are said to have let the boys smoke in their large lecture classes. If the Dean's office had wanted to crack down in a disciplinary way, it would have had as much of a problem with its little group of recalcitrant professors as with its problem students.

The prime beneficiaries of all this relaxing of the rules we of 1926 and 1926 S. knew so well were the students who were not veterans, who were two, three, four, and even five years younger than the veterans, but who entered college and graduated with the veterans. In one sense, they are beneficiaries, but in another they are victims. They are getting all kinds of privileges, yes; but they do not know how to use them. They are being treated like grown men: some of them are; but many are children. Many of them are more like children than any of us were in the years 1922 to 1926. The only growth I perceive in the worst of them is the year-by-year increase in the ingenuity of their excuses for not having done their work.

The most significant change that we would find, therefore, if we could come back to Yale as Juniors and Seniors would be a notable slackening of discipline. To some of us it would make no difference; some of us would do our work and grow up under the kind of guidance we got in the classroom and from friendly teachers. To others of us, it would make a big difference. No small part of my own education came directly from Roswell P. Angier and Frederick Scheetz Jones, rest their souls; not to mention Joe Ellis, Flash Merritt, and my chapel monitor. I hate to think what report I might have had to give my father in June, 1926, if those admirable citizens had not been breathing down my neck for four years.

The letup in discipline shows itself in many other ways. Dress I have touched on. What goes for the classroom goes everywhere. Levis and khakis—by no means always clean—are the equivalent of our gray flannel pants; and gray flannel pants and sport coat is the uniform of the elegant. The matching pants, vest, and coat are roughly the equivalent of a 1926 Lucius done out for the kill. Neckties are a rarity; the coonskin coat and chesterfield have been replaced by the all-purpose trench coat; and hatlessness, far from being a Senior's privilege, is a universal. All this is fine up to a point, but I personally feel that Yalermen should be able to distinguish between a seat of learning and a stable after three years in the former, and that even the most obtuse of them should not object to being asked to wear clean, though informal, clothes to class and to wear a coat and tie to the evening meal in the College dining hall. The most obtuse, for your information, object vigorously to both requests.

Having written what stands above, I wonder whether or not I am entitled to beef about today's undergraduates. After all, Yale, like any representative American institution, must inevitably reflect the values of, and the strains within, the larger society. And certainly there is little in that larger society today which can give the boys the sense of security and the promise of continuity that we had in our four years. There is plenty within that larger society to worry today's students, to upset their plans, to shake their sense of security, and to skew their values. God knows how we would have reacted to the prospects of being drafted for military service, or how we would have behaved when the only certainty of such a prospect was its uncertainty. The country's inability to make up its mind on half a dozen real survival issues is something not characteristic of the country of our youth, and that today's boys carry to New Haven the doubts and fears of the country at large is not surprising. Thus instead of griping about modest changes in undergraduate standards over the last twenty-five years, I should be thankful that our fairly looney world is not producing a larger quantity of completely disorganized and undisciplined students and that the life of a Yale professor, though sometimes difficult, is not a downright precarious one.

(Note—At our reunion I learned from the authorities that Yale College would probably discontinue unlimited cuts next year.)

1926-1926 S. Twenty-fifth Reunion Gift

THE total amount we have turned over to the Alumni Fund is $100,116.77. This came from 506, or 67%, of the 750 living members (graduates, non-graduates, and affiliated members) of the two classes. In addition, we had twelve In Memoriam gifts. The individual contributions ranged from $2 to $5,000. A recapitulation of the way the money was distributed between the various sizes of contributions is annexed.

It is unbecoming to boast, so we simply point out that another table annexed shows that 1926 and 1926 S. now have the following three records for Twenty-fifth Reunion gifts: (1) the largest contribution (and in this respect both 1926 Ac and 1926 Sheff individually outdid all previous records), (2) the largest average contribution per Class member, and (3) the largest average contribution per contributor. We also have the record for the largest total contribution for the twenty-five years since graduation. In one important respect, percentage of contributors, we fell considerably behind 1924. Our only consolation on this score is that for 1924 Ac, Ted Blair ran up the unheard of record of getting contributions from 89% of the Class.

The first credit for the record contribution goes to the members of 1926 and 1926 S. They gave beyond ordinary generosity and up to the point of mass impoverishment. To those of us who worked on the campaign, the response was a heart-warming experience. Special credit is due to the thirty-three underwriters who agreed to stand by for an impressive amount of money in order to accomplish the $100,000 goal. We are glad to report that when the final figures were in, we were able to give them some relief and to call on them for only $7,510 of what they had undertaken.

Great credit goes to all the members of the Committee. They worked hard and faithfully and discovered classmates with money to give, where none had been seen before. They unflinchingly attended luncheon meetings where the choicest of food and drink were served. Their names are:

Stout Presents Our $100,000 Gift to Yale

ON behalf of 1926 Ac and Sheff, A. Varick Stout, Jr., presented our $100,000 Twenty-fifth Reunion Gift to President Griswold at the 250th Anniversary Alumni Meeting in Sprague Hall on Sunday afternoon of the Reunion weekend. His remarks follow:

Twenty-five years ago this June the combined Classes of 1926 Ac and Sheff graduated from Yale into the world of the fabulous twenties—a world of easy money and low taxes, of subscriptions to the Bowl, of very few large benefactors and twenty million dollar endowment drives. We graduated a rather heterogeneous mass with a Class secretary—one for Ac and one for Sheff—Class agents, no executive committee, no organization of any kind, no Class dues. The University in those days didn't have to concern itself with class organizations because the alumni, as individual givers to the Alumni Fund, were not as important then as they are in these days when the contributions from all of us are so vitally important.

For twenty years the Class of 1926 carried on in this rather haphazard manner without any organization. After the termination of World War II some of us got interested in organizing the Class a little bit better and to our surprise found that other classes were doing the same thing. We also found a very receptive ear at the University. They were only too willing to help us in any way they could.

During the first twenty-four years after our graduation the combined Classes of 1926 Ac and Sheff contributed to the Alumni Fund slightly less than $68,000—an average of a little less than $3,000 a year, an average of $3 to $4 for each individual. We're not proud of this record. It is pretty pathetic. This past year we began thinking of our Twenty-fifth Reunion. We heard that it coincided with the 250th Anniversary of the founding of Yale. We also heard that the Alumni Fund as a special contribution in honor of this 250th Anniversary was going to set a goal for itself of $1,000,000.

With some misgivings and trepidation we decided to see if we could raise one tenth of this amount, or $100,000. Before going any further I would just like to mention four of my classmates who have made this drive possible: Charles H. Willard, E. Bates McKee, James D. Andrew and Brittin C. Eustis. Without their tireless efforts it would have been impossible to carry this task through to its ultimate conclusion.

We have no gift over $5,000. We have one of $5,000 and two between $2,000 and $2,500, and a dozen to fifteen of $1,000 to $2,000. All the rest are small. Approximately 70% of the Class have contributed. By the 30th of June, which is the termination of the Alumni Fund Drive, we will have $100,000.

We have a wonderful University. We have the finest president in the land. I'm sure that Yale is on a threshold of great days to come as it has been in the past. But that depends on all of us. Without our unfailing support—each individual, not a few rich men because they are getting fewer and fewer, but all of us—it is going to be impossible for this University to carry on. Free education and free enterprise are two horsemen that must always ride side by side. If we support the University as my classmates have done, Light and Truth shall never perish from this earth.

Our Twenty-fifth Reunion

June 15-18, 1951

By Howard S. Lipson.

WHAT is a "reunion"? Webster's Collegiate Dictionary says: "A reuniting of persons after separation." Of "reunite" it says: "To unite again; to join after separation." Daniel goes in circles—seemingly lacking words to describe "reunion." How then to describe adequately the return to Yale of 1926 Ac and Sheff on the twenty-fifth anniversary of our graduation?

Yale Class Reunions, a helpful handbook written by the Yale Association of Class Secretaries, starts off by describing some of the things Webster misses. A few are fairly obvious, some worth repeating, in so far as they may have some significance for us. The first says, "Reunion is for a Yale man a return to his own gang, to those he talked with and walked with, to those he ate with and roomed with, to those he admired and those he envied, to those with whom he fought and struggled and competed." Another: "Reunion is a return home, to one of the most beloved and most comfortable dwelling places that we have ever had." Another says: "Reunion is, more simply, a superb gathering of old friends at an old home, where every one can relax and be himself again as he was in his young and carefree days."

None of these is altogether adequate. The one that, in certain respects, comes closest to a major experience of ours says: "Reunion is a restatement of our allegiance to a great alma mater, whereby we gain new strength in the feeling that we are a part of something that is strong and bright and good, and we learn again to hold our heads high at being worthy sons of our own 'mother of men.' "

Ergo it was truly moving to hear President Whitney Griswold attest our "worthiness." To quote in part from his remarks when he acknowledged our gift to him of the silver traveling clock that "shines in the night," he concluded: "I also want to say to you all how much I appreciate the devoted service and work that you have done for Yale. Your illustrious representatives on the various Yale committees and organizations have made 1926 famous as one of the most patriotic and public spirited of all our classes. I knew you all well enough in college to appreciate the feelings that you have for this University and I feel that little argument over first premises is required with this Class. I think that you have shown repeatedly and consistently an understanding of what Yale means and what a University is for. I congratulate you for this and I count on you as I do few other classes to carry us forward in our next 250 years."

Then, when Charlie Willard and Jim Eustis followed this by presenting our Class gift to the Alumni Fund, President Griswold said: "Gentlemen: I don't think Demosthenes himself could respond to two such tributes in such rapid succession. I have known a little bit about the plans and hopes this Class has had and its intentions for the Alumni Fund, and again I say it proves a great and very encouraging affinity between your Class and your interests in this University and the responsibilities those of us who work here have to carry. I think of you as a sheet anchor and all other metaphorical signs of a good sound 250 years to come, and I would just as leave put another couple of ciphers on the end of that whether the $3,000 dollars comes in or not."

The $3,000 we were short of our $100,000 goal on Saturday afternoon did come in, and an all time record Twenty-fifth Reunion gift was achieved by 1926 and 1926 S., to the everlasting credit of Willard and Eustis, co-chairmen of our Twenty-fifth Reunion Gift Committee, their committeemen and the Class.

One of the most pleasant features of Saturday afternoon was a reunion with our former instructors. Undoubtedly, the greatest and most lasting element by which we are bound to Yale is the faculty who taught us. Their scholarship, their teaching and the labors stimulated in us by them will always be a living part of us. Many of our undergraduate values have been lost, strayed or stolen, but we proved at this reunion that we had a profound and precocious wisdom as Seniors, when in response to the question, "What thing about Yale either in the curriculum or extra-curriculum do you think benefited you most?" we said, "Association with classmates" and "The English courses and the contacts with inspiring instructors." It was still true when we assembled together again on Saturday afternoon with such former faculty members as President-Emeritus Seymour, Dean Norman Buck, Dean Meeks, Professor Nettleton, Dean DeVane, Marshall Bartholomew and Bob Kiphuth. Through the affectionate genius of John Hoysradt and Ben Cutler, we again heard President Angell, Johnny Berdan, Professor Woodruff, Billy Phelps, Dean Brown, Dean Jones, Professor Tinker, Tucker Brooke, Dean Simonds and Professor Lull. Dean Mendell and Professor Keller sent greetings to all of us with their regrets.

Let us start at the beginning. The History of the Class of 1926 written Senior Year opens with Hank Potter's account of our Freshmen year. " 'Gentlemen of the Freshmen Class' said a little man with a large head, and with these words our life in what some one has quaintly called Yale University began. What a strange group was gathered together on that memorable afternoon of September 28, 1922." Over a hundred of this same "strange group" arrived in Branford Court Friday evening, June 15, 1951, and kept coming. No indoctrination was needed. Century Milstead's welcoming committee, even for those who were attending their first reunion, had nothing to do. Three hundred "characters" registered and took up where they had left off. Many more, judging from the "regret" comments, were there in spirit, many in memory.

Bill Kip in his account of Senior year describes that famous, perpetual poker game. It picked up again Friday night as if it had never ended and there was little difference in its participants, excepting maybe Jack Newbold's hair. Tom Sweeney groaned and lost in the same old way, and Bates McKee showed that even twenty-five years hadn't dampened his ardor for inside straights. Others inaugurated the big marquee, with two bars and four bartenders, and the walls of Harkness echoed happily with old familiar voices.

Eleven o'clock Saturday morning witnessed the official renaissance. Rooms were assigned on a first come, first served basis in the Branford College courts and in Wright Hall. Some got their old rooms; many more, old roommates. By the engineering ability and hard work of Don Savard, the Nathan Hale uniforms were finally sorted and handed out. Registration went smoothly, despite the fast moving scene, owing in great part to the able work of two conscientious sons, Jim Gage, Jr., and George Fahy, just completing their Freshman year.

A well-heeded announcement was made at twelve. "Unless you play golf or go to the movies only during reunions, we urge that you plan to spend all Saturday afternoon in Branford except for quick tours. Entertainment starts at noon and is continuous." It did and it was. A fine orchestra appeared and tuned in on the Class at lunch in Branford dining hall. Cutler arrived and the show was really on. A remarkable quintet of the four beautiful DeGlorias and Ben sang outside the marquee while late comers matriculated to the music of the Whiffenpoof Song. The stage with a back-drop of Osborn Hall completed the scene.

The Yale Dramat had painted so realistic a front entrance of our dearly beloved Osborn of sacred memory that Hoysradt, Milliken and Rowell bumped their heads trying to walk in. Because Osborn is so featured, it might be well to explain its raison d'être. In Bill Kip's account of Senior year he reported: "Weeping and Gnashing of Teeth:—It was a sorrowful little procession of Seniors who on the night of March 30, 1926, paid their last respects to that Architectural Triumph of the age—Osborn Hall. It was an impressive tribute to a vanishing landmark which these perhaps a trifle over-sentimental youngsters gave on that solemn occasion. The procession formed in the Quadrangle. It was led by Ben Cutler's trombone, which was closely followed by Ben himself. Mason and his saxophone added inexpressibly to the general atmosphere of woe. Closely behind the leaders were a number of men in hooded black robes—sturdy youths, such as Hoysradt, Potter, Rowell, Gillespie, Milliken, Kip and Goss, who cried like children. They were followed in turn by many others in various suits of melancholy. Some bore aloft sparkling torches; others carried incense; all were in depths of despair, wailing and moaning in a most piteous fashion. Arrived at the historic old Hall there was much keening and reverent salaaming. Bond and Gonzalez were even seen to genuflect. Subsequently there was a huge meeting in the famous lecture room. Speeches were made recalling the dim past when Mr. Phelps enjoyed art and Mr. Tinker was still nervous. The whole was conducted with solemn dignity. The meeting over, the throng dragged its lugubrious way back to Harkness, where its members swooned away from the intensity of their grief. Isn't it pathetic!"

In memoriam, Ben and his trombone once more led a sorrowful procession of keeners to Osborn Hall, who wailed and wailed. This touching ceremony ended, Ben took the stage and began the proceedings with these words: "I think that about our time the Yale of a certain period more or less came to an end, and a new Yale started from that point. In our Senior year, Osborn Hall was torn down and to me it represented a good backdrop to center our activities around. We're going to have as many of the professors here with us as are able to come. Those who are not here we will respectfully imitate. Now, I would like to ask Charlie Seymour (I can call him 'Charlie' because he was a Whiffenpoof too) to give us a few words and maybe he will lecture to us as he used to when he addressed us as underclassmen."

President-Emeritus Seymour addressed us in part as follows: "Men of 1926, whether north or south of Grove Street, I give you a very warm welcome—if the authorities of the University recognize the fact that I am still in a position to give you that welcome. I give it anyway. I am very privileged to join in your reunion celebration. I am particularly happy to be present and participate to some extent in this oratorical dirge that celebrates the memory of our dearly beloved building. I confess that some quarter century ago my feelings were a little hurt that I was not invited to partake of the procession which prostrated itself before Osborn in those days.

"Forty-seven years ago, as a Freshman, I had my first recitation there. I had my first job as an instructor in what they called A-3, a loft at the top of Osborn which probably very few of you aspired to. Gradually, very gradually, as my salary was slightly—and very slightly—increased, I progressed downstairs finally to A-1. It was a convenient room for a lecture because the platform was large. There was little danger of falling off as in some of the other rooms, and the seats were designed obviously for the students. Except for the center aisle, it was possible for the undergraduate at the sides to slumber unobtrusively and without interruption. I suppose the happiest days of my academic life as far as teaching went were spent in Osborn Hall. If it hadn't been torn down, I should probably never have gone to Woodbridge Hall. And I greet the Class not merely for its devotion to this revered monument of the departed Yale, but also for the qualities which it has shown in its four years in college and its twenty-five years since. I say, and I expect no contradiction, it is the most colorful class of Yale's last fifty years.

"I salute you and I thank you, if I may, on behalf of the University and on behalf of the alumni body for the support you have given over the years and up to today, unmatched for your understanding as manifested by your support of the needs of Yale and of the great opportunity which we face in the years ahead. We are going forward from today, and it's a period which looms as difficult and dangerous. For it, I believe we're well prepared, and we have in Whitney Griswold an imaginative and a determined leader but, most of all, we count, and we count with faith, on the support of the alumni body."

Ben presented a token of our appreciation to President Seymour, following which Dean Meeks, who was attending his Fiftieth Reunion, recounted his pleasant recollections. He reminded us that it was we who gave him the largest registration in his architecture class. He credited us with changing his favorite condemnatory expression from "tour de force" to "it smells." John Hoysradt then added a few more poignant details. By the time John, doing a beautiful job despite a bad cold, had taken us to Chapel with Dean Brown, to the Dean's office with Dean Jones, and to classes with Woodruff, Tinker, Tucker Brooke, Simonds and Billy Phelps, our memories were well stimulated and we were all back on the campus in spirit when Ben interrupted proceedings to welcome President Griswold, escorted by George Flinn and Varick Stout, to our midst.

"Come on, Whit," Ben called to our "favorite Freshman" making slow progress through his friends to the stage. Whit seemed to agree with the observation, made as we presented him with a token of our esteem, that we could take some credit for his career since the example we as Seniors set him as a Freshman must have done him some good. On a slightly more formal plane, Charlie Willard and Jim Eustis then made the presentation of our $100,000 Twenty-fifth Reunion gift to the Alumni Fund.

Classes resumed and Professor Nettleton, father of our own Ed, took over. After several delightful anecdotes of Billy Phelps, he described our Class in flattering comparison with his own of 1896. Standing at the podium in front of the Osborn facade he concluded his remarks to us as follows:

"What a class you are of '26. You are the pivotal class this year, looking back at the first twenty-five years that followed the Bicentennial, reviewing the twenty-five years that have come since your graduation down to this anniversary of the 250th, and representing the past and the future. No class in Yale's history, I should say, is so pivotal. No class is so contradictory. You are at once the preserver and, in the destruction of compulsory Chapel, the destroyer. Preserver and destroyer. Yes, 'What poise,' as Billy Phelps would say.

"Out of the background of your wonderful experience with the past you are, the pivotal class, best fitted to understand the past and the present. And as you face forward to this next quarter century, we of the Class of '96 at our fifty-fifth anniversary join with you as joint heirs of Yale's proud past and partners in Yale's present enterprise, prophets of her onward and upward career."

All of this so stirred us up that Ben got Marshall Bartholomew to lead us through every verse of "As Freshmen first we came to Yale."

It was hoped that Professor Lull would be with us. Not all of us took Organic Evolution but as Seniors we voted it among the 'Most Valuable Subjects' and rated Richard Swan Lull with Tinker, Allison, Phelps and French. Ben's best imitation, when he really rivals Hoysradt, is of Professor Lull. His outboard motor story when the dear professor finally "got her started and you should have seen the phosphorous," tickled us all and we only wish this grand gentleman could have told it himself. With his teaching of evolution, we got a lot of our philosophy.

Dean Norman Buck, Master of Branford, most coöperative in the matter of our housing and return to old Harkness, greeted us and disclosed a personal secret. He had lived in Harkness as a proctor in our day, he said, and considered himself a disciplinarian failure from the experience. We nearly gave him a complex but he indicated that he has forgiven and forgotten when he said, "You are more than welcome to everything there is in Branford." Mindful of his position on the Admissions Board and the futures of our sons, we were forbearing thereafter.

Dean DeVane opened: "Gentlemen of the Class of 1926: This was the first class I ever taught, if you can call it that, at Yale"—and proceeded to admit he had lately reviewed the marks he gave us and never since had his touch been so soft. (My diploma had circles under its eyes when I got home!) He also told us the only risqué story we heard. It was a good one, too, coming from the Dean of Yale College.

Bob Kiphuth got a big hand and acknowledged that it was largely owing to our boys, Choate, Bronson and Peterson, that the Yale Swimming Team resumed its winning ways in 1925.

We ended classes for the day by singing "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow." Admiral Robert "Cruiser" McManus then gave us a preview of his "Memoirs of World War II," which has more tang and bang in it than Lawrence in Arabia. He and Paul Ritter had a mission that defies description escorting Mrs. Roosevelt to meet Chiang Kai-shek by submarine and bomber. It's never been told before, not even in Mrs. R's diary.

Some one now made a cutting request, "Put your hats on boys, Pach wants to take your picture." We had it with our hats off. As long as Mummy Field, Ed Austin, Gordon Sweet, Dog Taber, Jack Gillespie, Bob Phillips, Crow

Freeman, Grant Mason and a few others stick to their treatments, the rest of us can part our hair with a wash rag and we'll still look good as a Class.

When our official Class picture had been taken, Mrs. Buck was escorted from her near-by Master's House by Potts, Goss and Varick Stout and presented with a large bouquet of delphinium and white carnations. Practically surrounded by three hundred members of a Class her husband admittedly could never control, she had us all in the palm of her hand with her fine humour and graciousness. Somehow we felt better about the changes in Harkness since our time.

By now one of those perfect June evenings was descending on Branford, the lights were coming on in the rooms, and the scene took on a warm, secure glow—from the golden aura shining through the big marquee, from the throng inside, and from inside the throng. The Branford College dining hall, a magnificently panelled combination of ancient Gothic and the latest in cooking facilities, was the scene of the Ac dinner. There were no speeches and the food was wonderful—so it was a success! Because of the capacity of the Branford dining hall and possibly for one or two other reasons, Sheff had a separate dinner at Ceriani's. Nearly a hundred attended and it was equally informal, jovial, and speech-less. To be truthful, Art Greer did make one little speech. He spoke on two counts, this book and George Flinn, who was thanked for his work as chairman of the '26 S. Executive Committee. Let Ac say "Amen" to that!

There was singing under the elms thereafter far into the night. How much "desire" there was is unreported. The bartenders said nobody was missing, including a sizeable representation from most of the reunion classes. Maybe it was our fine singing that drew them in.

Sunday was another beautiful day withal somewhat confusing. It was astounding to awaken "a few minutes later," and look out on Branford Court to a sparkling sun shining on a pristine marquee, a clean green lawn. Mrs. Buck is a good housekeeper. Gone were the debris and wreckage of Saturday night. It was serene and peaceful. The bartenders looked like angels in their clean white aprons carefully polishing glasses to eternity. Even Art Greer had gone to bed.

Those who attended the Service of Remembrance in Battell Chapel Sunday morning may not have recognized the Reverend Anson Phelps Stokes, who gave the sermon, but certainly took a more personal part through the presence of the Reverend Sewall Emerson. It was a most impressive service and a time to recall those missing from our ranks.

The busses left early for the outing on the practice fairway of the Yale Golf Course. The sun felt good. Baseball flourished and a few extremists even played golf. Keen Cutler and Murray Wheeler smuggled in some hard liquor which was an excuse for the beer purists to go crash '45 W's outing, where six Rheingold girls were having good clean fun with Tex and Jinx McCrary.

Meanwhile, in New Haven at Sprague Hall President Griswold presided at the 250th Anniversary Alumni Meeting. August Heckscher, '36, spoke of the responsibility we have as maturing alumni to aid in keeping Yale intellectually spacious and to hold the line against bigotry and the "canalizing" of education. Varick Stout made the official presentation of the Class Gift and did us proud, while an able escort of Andrews, Eustis, McKee and Willard gave support on the speakers' platform. It is too bad the two o'clock University ceremonies conflicted with our outing and that the whole Class was not present at a most impressive event.

The reception at President Griswold's home was remarkable for its simplicity and friendliness. In the atmosphere of the old Victorian house with its beautiful gardens, it was an unforgettable experience to sit on the porch with a number of our boys, with the lovely Mrs. G. and her equally beautiful daughter and listen to those two old musicians, Whit Griswold and Ben Cutler, reminisce of Edgartown jam sessions.

Sunday night after supper in Branford College, Dave Gregg and Jim Cooper put on a stimulating and well-attended Forum. Tom Mendenhall, Professor of History, and Ernest Pollard, Professor of Biophysics, conducted a discussion group revolving around the Humanities and Sciences at Yale. Many questions were asked, many answers advanced. That our boys can still concentrate was irrefutable. Wit and good humor sparkled and large brain waves engulfed the assemblage. Every one passed the course, to judge by the professors' reactions.

Adjournment broke the crowd into small thirsty clusters in and around the headquarters. The singing started. The Glee Club nucleus of Jim Cooper, Jack Gillespie, the inexhaustible Cutler, MacManus and a few others kept the train on the track and made it all sound terrific. Later, though the Baldy Stewart branch of Longley's was missing, along with P. Ring and the old gym on Elm Street, a suitable substitute was found on Chapel. The toasted bun is apparently a thing of the past, but there was the same crowd of familiar faces. Walking back to Harkness after midnight along that stretch of High Street where there has been no change, you caught again the witching spell from the Old Campus asleep, the buildings dark and shadowed, "Bones" mysterious and ageless in its ivy.

In no time at all, a bright sun came coolly down out of the elms of Branford and leaped in lengthening strides across the green grass. Art Greer went to bed and the Class slowly came awake on a beautiful Monday morning in June.

There were no visible signs of host pains as we prepared to welcome our wives and children. They drifted in slowly at first and individual groups could be recognized. Charlie Willard, complete with Mrs. and the twins, the Fred Rehbergers, the Squidge Lord brood, the Graf family, the McMani and other clans arrived in time to appear in the Class movies. They do justice to the superlative family qualities of the Class. John North's clown entertained the growing crowd until Maestro Cutler was ready to stage his parade of the children. In blue scarves and Nathan Hale hats, carrying balloons, bulldog pennants and Rockwell signs, they marched with our Colonial Band around Branford in an impressive and moving demonstration of what we had accomplished in a constructive way in twenty-five years.

Despite the fact that over six hundred attended the luncheon we gave in honor of Mrs. Whitney Griswold and that we had as guests a distinguished group of faculty and University officials, everything went off on schedule. Even our two enormous floats, complete with beer, band, loudspeaker and McManus (or is that redundant?), moved out on time. The ride through New Haven to Yale Field was a riot of sound and color. Arrived there we paraded around the field, cheered the Harvard team as Barry Durfee led us, cheered President-Emeritus Seymour, cheered President Whitney Griswold. It seemed unfortunate at the moment but it was probably just as well that that was the end of our cheering. In the ensuing confusion we lost our seats, our microphone, McManus and our band—and Yale lost the ball game. But we had won Yale and so went home rejoicing.

ROGER KEATING ADAMS. Accountant, H. D. Taylor Company, wholesale distributors, 101 Oak Street, Buffalo 5, N.Y.; residence, 46 Berkley Place, Buffalo 9.

"When the votes were counted some twenty-five years ago, your humble servant received none, particularly for that interesting little item—the 'one most likely to succeed'; to date I have certainly not made a liar out of anybody," is Adams' initial remark. "Life has been pretty good to me, however, even though fame and fortune have passed me by. I have been able to live in my own home town, always well fed and housed. I have been married some eighteen years, each better than the last. Recently we became parents. We are weathering this rather unexpected experience and hope for the best, even though we should better by all rights be becoming grandparents.

"Fortunately, I enjoy working pretty much for itself alone. I have had a number of jobs, but nary a 'position.' Some have been more interesting than others, but none distasteful. I hope I am settled for a while, with a company which has been in business since 1833. If not, I guess I will hold together somehow, always assuming that the 'American System' lasts out our time.

"We live very quietly most of the time. I do a lot of the household chores and patching up of the place. My wife, a Smith graduate of 1930 and formerly active in good works, finds motherhood a full-time job. Scout work has been very interesting to me, and I have learned quite a bit about boys, enough in fact to be glad our child is a girl if I had to become a parent at such a late date. Life at New Haven seems a good ways back, but certainly the years spent there are not to be regretted. We did not all learn how to make money, but most of us picked up friends and a few ways of life which have not come amiss."

From 1927 to 1929 Adams was in the engineering department of the Buffalo Forge Company, and during the next eleven years he was a statistician with O'Brian, Potter & Company. He then worked in the production control department of the Bell Aircraft Corporation until 1945, was comptroller of J. C. BeVier, Inc., from 1945 to 1949, and then an accountant with the Consolidated American Truck Lines, Inc., until taking his present job in February, 1950. He has been active in Boy Scout work continuously since 1927, following an hiatus while in New Haven, and is engaged in most of the activities at the troop level: assistant scoutmaster, scoutmaster, committeeman, and financial officer.

Mrs. Adams' maiden name was Martha Roberts Sidway. She is the daughter of Frank St. John and Amelia Roberts Sidway. Their marriage took place May 12, 1933, in Buffalo, where their daughter, Janet Amelia, was born on July 9, 1947.

THOMAS AFFINITO. Physician and surgeon; office and residence, 128 West Main Street, Meriden, Conn.

Affinito has both an M.D. degree and the degree of Master of Surgery from McGill. He interned at the Hospital of St. Raphael in New Haven and was then a resident in surgery at the Beekman Street Hospital in New York. He has been practicing in Meriden since 1934 and, in addition to his private practice, is on the surgical staff of the Meriden Hospital. He is a member of the Connecticut State Medical Society and the American Medical Association.

His marriage to Mary Doyle, daughter of Thomas and Mary Curley Doyle, took place in Naugatuck, Conn., on November 25, 1934. Mrs. Affinito lived in New Haven before she was married. There are two children in the family: Thomas, born on July 6, 1936, and Jean on May 31, 1941.

JAMES DHU ANDREW, JR. Project manager, Babcock & Wilcox Company (steam power boilers and related equipment), 85 Liberty Street, New York, N.Y.; residence, Old Chester Road, Essex Fells, N.J.

"I studied engineering after graduation and am practicing engineering as a 'boiler-maker'—almost entirely public utilities," Andrew writes. "Most of my travels have been on the Eastern seaboard, west to St. Louis, north to Boston, and south to Washington, inclusive—with one two weeks' jaunt to Italy on some E.C.A. power installations.

"I wasted little time after college, getting married and creating daughters. They are now at that marriageable stage, which seems to have its problems.

"I spend my week-ends golfing, my only exercise—and am glad when in the 80's—rest of off-time is typical for a country home with endless chores. This life has allowed my hair to gray slightly—and thin, though there is not as yet any baldness. The weight situation is a problem, as I am now thirty-five pounds above my college days."

Andrew's first job (1926-29) was with Dwight P. Robinson, Inc. He worked for the United Engineers & Constructors, Inc., the following year and has since been with the Babcock & Wilcox Company, his present position dating from 1947. He is a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

His marriage to Elizabeth Skillin, daughter of Edward S. and Geraldine Fearons Skillin, took place on April 12, 1929, in Glen Ridge, N.J. Their oldest daughter, Joan, who was born on April 1, 1930, in Germantown, Pa., graduated from Miss Hall's School in 1947 and is a member of the Class of 1951 at Connecticut College for Women. Marjorie, the second girl, born August 14, 1931, in Orange, N.J., is in the Smith Class of 1953; she prepared at the Kimberly School in Montclair, N.J. The youngest daughter, Barbara, was born in Rosemont, Pa., in 1934 and died there the following year.

JAMES RAE ARNEILL, JR. Surgeon, Arneill Clinic, 1765 Sherman Street, Denver, Colo.; residence, 2525 East Cedar Avenue, Denver.

"I am very busy doing general surgery in Denver," Arneill says. "In 1946, after my release from military duty, I organized the present Arneill Clinic of twenty professional men. Purchased a hotel and remodeled it into a clinic. Have gotten a fine group of highly trained specialists in the clinic. Many of the doctors graduated from Yale, Harvard, or Princeton and wanted to live in the West.

"We own a house at Hobe Sound, Fla., and have a fine vacation there each winter. We usually drive the 2,100 miles.

"Joyce and I are going to try raising orchids in our greenhouse this winter. We still play a lot of golf and tennis. Just bought a house trailer to take on fishing trips to Wyoming. It is going to have its own electric plant, so the ice box lights, radio, fans, etc., will work even in the wilds."

Following his graduation from the Yale Medical School in 1929, Arneill interned at the University of Michigan Hospital for a year. He was a surgical fellow at the Mayo Clinic during 1930-31 and then house surgeon at the Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center in New York for three years. During his military service (1943-45) he was assigned as chief of the surgical service at the Army Thayer General Hospital in Nashville, Tenn. He ranked as lieutenant colonel at the time of his release from the Army.

Arneill, who was certified some years ago as a fellow of the International College of Surgeons, is on the staffs of several Denver hospitals. He belongs to the Colorado State and County Medical societies, the American Medical Association, the Medical Review Club, and Nu Sigma Nu medical fraternity.

Mrs. Arneill, whose maiden name was Joyce Porter, is the daughter of Louis H. Porter, Yale '96, and Ellen Marion Hatch Porter. They were married in Stamford, Conn., in 1929. James Rae Arneill, 3d, who was born in Ann Arbor, Mich., in 1930, was married in 1948 to Joanne Bowie and has a daughter, Dianne, born in 1949. He prepared at the Fountain Valley School and is now taking a business course at Denver University. Bruce Porter Arneill, born in New York in 1934, is at Hotchkiss.

THOMAS ARNOLD. Co-owner, Muriel Manny, retail dealers in lingerie and corsets, 137 Fairfield Avenue, Bridgeport, Conn.; residence, 88 Eastwood Road, Fairfield, Conn.

Since January, 1944, Arnold has been the co-owner of the above business, obviously in partnership with his wife, whose maiden name was Muriel Manny. Mrs. Arnold is the daughter of Joseph O. and Elizabeth Lamoureux Manny, and they were married in Bridgeport on November 23, 1943. They have a daughter, Diane, who was born on June 29, 1945, and twin sons, Thomas John and John Thomas, born October 20, 1946. The children were all born in Bridgeport.

FREDERICK WILLIAM BACKES. Address, Old Billerica Road, Bedford, Mass.

GEORGE GAUCH BAILEY. Address, 7 Nicholson Street, Joliet, Ill.

CHARLES CHASE BASSETT. Vice-president and director of sales, Cowles Chemical Company, manufacturers of industrial chemicals, 7016 Euclid Avenue, Cleveland 3, Ohio; residence, 2916 Fairmount Boulevard, Cleveland Heights 18.

Bassett writes: "I spent the summer of 1926 in Europe and then entered the Graduate School of Business Administration at Harvard, where I roomed with Jack Dougherty. A week after graduating from there in 1928, I married Betty Thomas, Vassar '25, and settled down in New York and went to work with Jim Darcy at the Rogers Products Company. Betty and I spent the summer of 1931 in Europe and on our return, moved to Cambridge, then in 1935 to near-by Belmont, Mass. All three daughters were born while we lived in the East. We moved to Cleveland in 1941.

"During all this time my hair has gotten very white and my disposition black, but I've only gained five pounds or so. Had serious trouble with my back about five years ago, so now my sports are confined to fishing and an occasional game of mixed doubles at tennis.

"My job requires that I do a lot of traveling, which cramps most local civic and other activities, but I have kept up my interest in the University School (where I prepared for college), even though I have no sons to send there, and have been active on a number of committees of alumni. But most of all I like to sit down and chew the fat with my classmates at New Haven. The 'good old days' were pretty carefree, weren't they?"

Bassett was with the Rogers Products Company (lubricating equipment) of Jersey City, N.J., until 1931, his position being that of sales manager. During the next nine years he was vice-president and general manager of the Mitchell Wing Company of Cambridge, Mass., distributors of laundry and dry cleaning supplies and equipment, and from 1936 to 1940 treasurer of the Beach Soap Company in Lawrence, Mass. He is on the board of directors of the Cowles Chemical Company, with which he became connected as vice-president and director of sales in January, 1941.

Mrs. Bassett's maiden name was Elizabeth Beaumont Thomas. She is the daughter of Dr. Philip C. Thomas and Ethalinda Beaumont Thomas, and they were married on June 9, 1928, in New York City. Their daughters, Linda, Helen, and Elizabeth, all attend the Laurel School in Cleveland, where Mrs. Bassett teaches, and hope eventually to enter Vassar. They were all born in Boston, the oldest on May 6, 1934, Helen on January 8, 1936, and Betsy on March 28, 1938.

ROBERT JAMES BEATTY. Died April 28, 1951.

Beatty was connected with the Federal Glass Company of Columbus, Ohio, as development engineer and a member of the board of directors from 1927 until his death. His first job after graduation (July, 1926-June, 1927) was with the Hart Glass Manufacturing Company of Dunkirk, Ind., as "roustabout." He was a registered professional engineer—mechanical—in Connecticut, Illinois, New York, and Ohio and a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers (on executive committee, Columbus section, 1948-49), the National Society of Professional Engineers, the University Club (trustee, 1929-31), the Athletic Club, the Columbus Country Club—and the Burlington Liars Club! He had written six songs, "published by the Edwards Music Company during 1942-43 without creating a commotion, though one lasted about four months on the networks."

He was married on August 27, 1934, in North Hollywood, Calif., to Helen Cartwright Hartje, daughter of Charles Gaut and Naomi W. Davis Hartje, of Los Angeles. Their daughter, Suzanne Cartwright, was born August 17, 1935, and died September 1, 1936. The older boy, James Means, was born July 9, 1937, and the younger, Robert James, Jr., on August 22, 1939. The children were all born in Columbus, and the boys are at the Columbus Academy preparing for Yale.

"Trying to recall 'travels, recreations, hobbies, etc.,' over a period of a quarter of a century brings to mind a multitude of long-forgotten sins, both of omission and commission," Beatty wrote. "The farther back I go the more evident it is that they are best still forgotten, in direct ratio to the time elapsed, though many chuckles are included therein.

"As for travels, a summer in Europe in 1929 should qualify. The number of times I have been from coast to coast on this side is unknown and is only worthy of mention in that all means of transportation except walking have been employed at one time or another, viz: air, water, rail, and highway, with top and bottom extremes en route being Panama and Canada.

"Consideration of 'recreations and hobbies' reveals that some of these are no longer, I regret, physically possible. Of the more mentionable of these, I would include bowling, golf, and semi-pro baseball. The last named I gave up in 1939 after five or six years and a couple of re-routed fingers. I bowled my last ball last spring several weeks before the season ended.

"I can say without blushing that I am a pretty fair country cabinet-maker when the muse is with me, and as a gadgetrician, I believe I could give Rube Goldberg a run for it. Another effort that started out as a hobby bids fair to be a Frankenstein. We inadvertently put out about 150 little-bitty fruit trees. After six years they are no longer little-bitty, and what with pruning, spraying, cultivating, and trying to outguess rabbits and crows, it is beginning to occur to me that applewood makes very fine logs for the fireplace. Photography and portraiture can be included in this classification, but paradoxically I do not have any snapshots of recent years.

"Took a whack at 'cosmetics' ten years ago, and the red ink was just starting to turn pink when essential supplies were cut off by W.W. II. However, I have been receiving free samples of all sorts of smelly things since the alleged end of the war and am able to come home surrounded with exotic aromae and not create strained conversation. This is very handy.

"On the subject of 'hopes and ambitions,' I believe these are best described as having followed a hyperbolic curve with enthusiasm plotted against time. As for 'regrets,' I have none. That is water over the dam. And 'satisfactions'? I'm never satisfied, being somewhat of a frustrated perfectionist, and there is no such thing as perfection. Possibly this should come under 'regrets.' Otherwise I can say that my family is my greatest satisfaction, and they make pretty good window dressing too.

"Outside of an enthusiasm for outrageous puns and writing an occasional song, that about covers the field. In which connection I might observe that any cigar is Ezio to smoke if you Pinza end off first. Wow!"

BERESFORD ELLSWORTH BECK. Vice-president, Arizona Flexicore Company, manufacturers of reinforced concrete floor and roof systems, 1600 South Euclid Avenue, Tucson, Ariz.; residence address, Box 631, Route 6, Tucson.

Beck completed his course in architecture at Yale in 1928, receiving the degree of B.F.A. at that time. He was licensed in Illinois in 1929 and in Arizona in 1942. He worked summers during the period from 1926 to 1928 as an architectural draftsman with Robert S. DeGolyer & Company of Chicago and continued with the firm on a regular basis for the next three years. He was an architectural draftsman with Philip Mayer in Chicago the next year and an engineering draftsman with the Pure Oil Company, also in Chicago, during 1932-33. The following year was spent as a designer of the Century of Progress (Chicago). From 1934 to 1942 Beck had his own office in Chicago, and from 1943 to 1945 he was assistant plant engineer with Consolidated-Vultee in Tucson. He has been with the Arizona Flexicore Company since then and became vice-president of the company in 1948. Since 1943 his work has been almost entirely machine designing.

He has served on the advisory council of the Tucson Medical Center since 1948 and has been president of the School Health Council since 1949. He is a member of the Iktinos Society.

He was married June 12, 1934, in Evanston, Ill., to Dorothy Dayton, daughter of David Draper and Louise Winchell Dayton. Mrs. Beck's home was in Wilmette, Ill., before her marriage, and their sons, David Beresford and Jonathan Dayton, were both born there, the older boy on November 4, 1936, and the younger on June 19, 1939.

Becks sums up other things as follows:

"Travel—extensively by car throughout the United States, except New England, parts of Canada, and Mexico. No foreign travel.

"Recreations—a soft touch at golf, a good wing shot, competent deep-sea fisherman, a total loss at stream fishing, can generally stay on a horse. Used to own and operate a plane, but no longer—it costs too much.

"Hobbies—None, unless a continuing interest in geology could be so classed. [This interest was stimulated by courses at Northwestern University during 1941-42.]

"Ambitions—1) To break 80 just once; 2) to acquire a small ranch and watch my older son work it.

"Regrets—1) That I stayed ten years too long in Chicago; 2) That my former good friends from Yale seem to believe that the western boundary of the U.S. is the Monongahela."

JOSEPH CONGDON BELDEN, JR. Secretary, Belden Manufacturing Company (electrical wire, cable, and cordage), 4647 West VanBuren Street, Chicago 44, Ill.; residence, 771 East Barberry Lane, Lake Forest, Ill.

Belden starts off with "The enclosed picture is not of my grandson, but my son! Is there not a prize from the other extreme for the Class Boy?" [Ed. note: There's quite a bit of competition indicated!] He adds, "I have no hobbies unless uninspiring 80's golf and pictures like the attached can come under that head. My greatest regret is that I could not live up to George Flinn's name for me of 'net star' and 'lion of the links.'"

"Economic relationships might be called a special interest, but with the state of the world the way it is today I wonder if there is such a thing. "My hope is to get a ticket for South Pacific some time in the next fifty years."

He worked in the bond department of the Chicago Trust Company during 1927-28 and during the next four years was a statistician with James H. Oliphant & Company, also of Chicago. Since December, 1932, he has been with the Belden Manufacturing Company, becoming a director in 1937 and secretary in 1946. From October, 1942, to February, 1945, Belden was on active duty as a lieutenant in the Naval Reserve. He was at the Quonset Point Naval Air Station until December 26, 1942, and was assigned to the Northwest Sea

Frontier at Seattle and Portland from January to November, 1943, when he was transferred to the Naval Air Station at Atlanta. His final assignment (March, 1944-January, 1945) was with Fleet Air Wing 2 at Hedron, Kanehoe, Oahu.

Belden's marriage to Mardo Pattou, daughter of Albert Brace and Marjorie Peck Pattou, took place on April 20, 1940, in Lake Forest. Their son, Joseph Campbell, was born on September 30, 1946.

MITCHELL BENEDICT. Lawyer, 635 Majestic Building, Denver, Colo.; residence, 701 Dahlia Street, Denver.

"After graduating from Yale in 1926, I took the easy way and went to work for Otis & Company," Benedict says. "The company suffered a serious relapse in 1931, at which time, having recently been married, my job as a customers' man walked out from under me. During the next three years, in the height of the Depression, I was fortunate to obtain a political job with our city administration. During this time I went to Westminster Law School, a night school, with the idea of being able to become self-employed when the political job would give out in four years. My father was a lawyer, and after graduating from law school and being admitted to the bar in 1934, I became an employee and office boy for Benedict & Phelps, who had practiced in Denver for many years. Eventually my father and I went into practice together, and since his death a year ago I have truly been self-employed.

"I have a wife and two children, and we spend our summers near Estes Park, where we have a summer home. That is, my family spends their summers there, and I spend the week-ends there. I manage to get in my share of fishing during the summer, duck hunting in the fall, and golf during other periods when I am not working.

"Living so far from New Haven, when we take a trip or vacation we usually go to California or Arizona. I have been to New York but once since graduating, but I certainly am hoping and looking forward to seeing my old classmates at reunion this coming June."

Belden was admitted to practice in the United States Courts, as well as in the Colorado Courts, in 1934. His practice consists of a general civil practice, corporation, real estate, taxation, and oil and gas law. He is a director of the Sterling Lumber & Investment Company, the Bennett Properties Company, Horace W. Bennett & Company, and the Fifteenth Street Investment Company. He belongs to the Republican Associates and the Denver Country and University clubs.

Mrs. Benedict, whose maiden name was Helen E. Henry, is the daughter of Frederick T. and Alice Gentlee Meldrum Henry. They were married in Denver on January 3, 1931, and the children were both born there, Barbara on May 25, 1933, and Mitchell, 3d, on January 6, 1940. Barbara is in the Class of 1951 at the Kent School for Girls in Denver.

DAVID BRIGHAM BENNETT. Structural engineer, The Austin Company, industrial builders and designers, 19 Rector Street, New York, N.Y.; residence, 251 Walthery Avenue, Ridgewood, N.J.

Bennett has been a structural engineer with The Austin Company since 1936. Previously he had been with Ford, Bacon & Davis in New York, the U.S. Coast and Geodetic Survey in New Jersey and New York, and the Corbetta Construction Company.

His marriage to Marian Townsend Booth, daughter of Edward Smith and Helen Townsend Booth, took place in Ridgewood on June 22, 1929. Their son, Harrison Booth, who was born on November 16, 1931, in Ridgewood, graduated from the Ridgewood High School in 1949, attended Williston for a year, and is now studying in the School of Commerce and Business at the University of Alabama, where he is in the Class of 1954.

WILLIAM GRANT BENTON. Address, 52 Kirkham Avenue, East Haven, Conn.

JOHN SHEPARD BINGHAM. Salesman, Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Company, 51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W., Washington 1, D.C.; residence, 2017 Luzerne Avenue, Silver Spring, Md.

From September, 1927, to September, 1938, Bingham was with the City Bank Farmers Trust Company in New York City. Since then he has been in the insurance business in Washington, at first with the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company and, since January, 1945, with Acacia Mutual.

Bingham's marriage to Russell Brashears, daughter of Shipley Brashears, Jr., and Annie R. C. Carraway Brashears, took place in Rockville, Md., on February 24, 1926. Her home was formerly in Washington. They have two children: John Shepard, Jr., born June 12, 1929, and Carol Jean, born March 20, 1935, both in Flushing, N.Y. John, Jr., who is a Senior at the University of Maryland School of Agriculture, is a member of the Air Force R.O.T.C. Carol is a Sophomore at the Montgomery Blair High School in Silver Spring.

FRANK LEE BISHOP. Managing director, KFEL Broadcasting Station, Albany Hotel, Denver 2, Colo.; residence, 2771 South Ogden Street, Englewood, Colo.

Bishop, who became managing director of KFEL, the Mutual Network affiliate in Denver, in 1929, has also been managing director of the Electronic Muzak Network since its establishment in 1945. His marriage to Margaret Mary Butler, daughter of Thomas J. and Virginia A. Lyons Butler, took place in Denver on September 18, 1924. Mrs. Bishop's home was formerly in New Haven. They have two daughters, both of whom were born in Denver, Jane Katherine on May 31, 1940, and Julie Lee on December 4, 1942.

NATHANIEL BISHOP. Electronics consultant to Time, Inc.; business address, 835 Hope Street, Springdale, Conn.; residence, 4375 Congress Street, Fairfield, Conn.

Bishop writes: "After graduation I went to work for the Bell Telephone Laboratories. In 1927 I was assigned to the early Bell system television demonstration and, on the completion of this work, was sent into the field on broadcast transmitter improvement and installation of new equipment. In a matter of ten months I had been in forty-two states. By nature not subscribing to the life of the traveling man and desiring to get my roots back into the soil of Connecticut, I accepted employment in Bridgeport with the Harvey Hubbell Company as their radio specialist.

"Shortly after the stock market crash in 1929 I met the present Mrs. B., which happy circumstance, added to the fact that I had not been tempted by the brokerage business, helped me to weather the storm of the late Twenties and early Thirties. We were married in 1931 and after a long honeymoon in Europe, returned to face the bleak realities of the Depression years. I spent considerable time on experimental development on my own hook up to 1934, when I decided that employment was more to be desired than the possibility of developing some startling new electronic gadget in my cellar.

"I joined the General Electric radio division in Bridgeport in 1934 and became assistant to the commercial engineer and finally manager of the field technical section. I left G.E. at the end of 1937 to return to a consulting practice. I went into the field of designing and installing custom-built sound systems for private homes and at the end of one year of this type of activity (aided and abetted by the sale of two patents which I held in my own name) convinced myself that I had finally found my proper niche, as I was able to keep the larder full and have time for hunting, fishing, and associated activities, which really are my major purpose in life.

"My consulting work finally got into an association with Major Armstrong, the inventor of FM, and I assisted him in establishing some of the early FM relay techniques. This blissful estate of affairs was interrupted by World War II, and I returned to G.E. in Bridgeport, where I assisted in the development and manufacture of radar equipment for the Bureau of Ships and the Air Force."

In August, 1945, Bishop joined the production research staff of Time and has since been engaged in work at their Springdale division on electronic research and development as applied to the graphic arts. He has had articles published in Photoengravers Bulletin, the Penrose Annual (London), Radio Engineer (now defunct), QST, and Radio News. He is a licensed professional engineer in Connecticut and a member of the Institute of Radio Engineers, the New York Yale Club, the University Club of Bridgeport, the Pequot Yacht Club, the Fairfield Country and County Hunt clubs, the Saugatuck Fish and Game Club, the Aubichiwi Gun Club, and the Massachusetts Beach Buggy Association. For recreation, he fishes at Nauset Beach, Cape Cod, and shoots at Redding, Conn.—“As long as I can keep up with my bird dog, in spite of the thirty-five pounds added since graduation, life continues to hold considerable promise,” he remarks.

His marriage to Joan Merwin Stanford, daughter of George I. and Grace Merwin Stanford, took place at Greens Farms, Conn., April 9, 1931. The children are: Judith, born May 21, 1933, and David on August 16, 1937, both in Greenwich. Judith is a Senior at the High Mowing School, Wilton, N.H.

“Looking backward over twenty-five years, there doesn’t seem to be much of interest or of moment to report,” Blake says. “It is of interest to myself, of course, that I survived the awful late Twenties and early Thirties, for I hadn’t dug roots into the economic system before the great Depression. That was tough for almost every one of our college generation.

“I have had the good fortune to live a good quiet life with no spectacular success or failures. I would have little advice to pass on to this new generation of graduates, even if they would listen. The philosophy of Yale, as I got it, to educate the whole man, not narrow specialists, is a wise one on the whole, and I am happier and, I hope, a wiser man because of it. But I would make one amendment, add at least one elective. Be also a specialist at some one profession or trade. If not as a doctor or an engineer—and you’d better be an expert fast in a special field in those professions too—then make it as plumber, painter, electrician, or carpenter.

“Travels? My wife and I have seen America first and latest, with a quick tour of Europe in 1948. We’ve been to many of the great national parks, we’ve cruised on the Great Lakes, vacationed in Nantucket, driven to Charleston and the Smokies in the spring, and last winter circumnavigated Florida by car. We like the Adirondacks, Quebec, the Gaspé Peninsula, and even little old New York, which we tour and enjoy when visiting relatives come to call. The Middle West is my wife’s home country, and we’ve visited Illinois, Iowa, and Michigan many times.

"Recreations? Travel, of course, has been a major activity, particularly of late years. This does, however, raise hell with another, my amateur efforts at gardening. We did start to establish a line of cocker spaniels, until one was poisoned, and another run over, and we lost heart.

"Hopes? Ambitions? Satisfactions? Regrets? My wife and I have been active internationalists since the late Thirties. We helped found Federal Union, an organization gathered around Clarence Streit and his book, Union Now, to promote a federation of the Atlantic Democracies. Then came Pearl Harbor and I returned to engineering and worked for Army Ordnance. My wife has remained very active in World Federalist organization work, while I continue to work the other side of the street. For if there is to be our kind of peace ever again this world, we believe, a considerable amount of international law must be established and applied at the end of an international nightstick. We had better build up a mighty big, long, and tough stick or all of us will be much less fortunate than Robert Vogeler. He survived and escaped because there is still considerable democratic power in the world. That power must be increased and speedily, and consolidated with that of all those of like mind or we and our western civilization will not survive these troubled times.

"I am an optimist, of course, and I believe it is possible that we will survive, provided we keep our eyes on the common danger and work for the common good. And if we do not become too absorbed in our very pleasant, very comfortable, and selfish personal interest, such as I have confessed to above."

Blake held a lieutenant's commission in the Specialist Reserve, attached to the New York Ordnance District, from November, 1928, to January, 1937, and worked there as a civilian from December, 1941, through March, 1946, successively as an inspector, engineer, and contract and termination negotiator. His present position dates from January, 1950. In the past he has been connected with the following: I. P. Morris Corporation of Philadelphia, the Certainteed Products Corporation of Niagara Falls, the E. W. Bliss Company of Brooklyn, N.Y., the Educational Research Bureau of Putnam County, N.Y., the Bronxville (N.Y.) Public Schools, the Thomas School, Rowayton, Conn., Sam Tour & Company of New York, and the Hydraulic Press Manufacturing Company of Mt. Gilead, Ohio. Blake is a member of the American Ordnance Association. He took an M.A. at Columbia in 1935.

His marriage to Mildred Currey Mighell Riorden took place in South Bend, Ind., September 2, 1935. She is the daughter of Wynn Currey and Ada Thomas Mighell and formerly lived in New York. Blake's stepson, Shane Edwin Riorden, born in Baltimore, November 5, 1924, graduated from the George School in 1942, from Harvard in 1946, and from the Columbia Law School in 1951. He served as a combat infantryman (buck sergeant) with the 411th Infantry, 103d Division, in the European theatre. He was married June 10, 1947, at Fort Hamilton, N.Y., to Virginia Lastayo, and has a daughter, Ellen Ann, born October 5, 1948.

MEEDY SHIELDS BLISH. Address, Blish Milling Company, Seymour, Ind.

ALFRED WILLIAM BOWIE, JR. Assistant branch sales manager, Remington Rand, Inc., 315 4th Avenue, New York 10, N.Y.; residence, Little Silver Point Road, Little Silver, N.J.

From July, 1926, to September, 1927, Bowie was timekeeper and transitman in an engineer party of Marc Eidlitz & Son, general contractors, during the next four years was with A. W. Bowie, Inc., engineers and constructors, as cost engineer and job superintendent, following which he was a sales representative and special government representative with the International Business Machines Corporation until April, 1942. He was then at the headquarters of the U.S. War Department as a civilian consultant in the Control Division, Services of Supply, until July, 1943, when he returned to I.B.M. as a special government representative. He continued with them until December, 1944, when he took a position as sales representative with Remington Rand. He has been assistant branch sales manager of the New York branch since February 1, 1947.

Bowie was first married in November, 1927, in Yonkers, N.Y., to Mary T. Giblyn, daughter of Charles and Virginia Taylor Giblyn. They were divorced in July, 1937, and the following month he married Marianne Drischler Remschall, daughter of Carl and Ida Stier Drischler, in Alexandria, Va. Her death occurred in February, 1938. On July 1, 1939, his marriage to Beth Ann Batcheler Karling, of Buchanan, Mich., daughter of George H. and Lucy E. Jakway Batcheler, took place in Jeffersonville, Ind. He has two sons: Christopher G., born July 29, 1930, in Binghamton, N.Y., and Joel Ferguson, born January 6, 1941, in Washington.

As to other things, Bowie says, "My travels have been mostly on business and all within continental limits, ranging from Taxco, Mexico, to Toronto, and from New York to San Francisco. My principal and really extensive travel consists of daily commuting from Little Silver to New York City—a neat ninety miles round trip.

"All that for the sake of living on tidewater—ye old Shrewsbury River with its black mud bottom, where the eels live happily in abundance, and can stay there for all of me. But the crabs and clams—now that's different. And in late August and early September the snappers (young blue fish to you), whole schools of them, jump right in your boat. Contrary to some opinion, the screens enclosing our front porch are to keep the snappers off the porch on cool September evenings and not to keep out the mosquitos. Copper mesh won't keep out our mosquitos—they kick it through. Steel lattice is a deterrent—sort of tires the big one to hold it open so the young can get in to feed.

"This is not the time of year to work up a rhapsody over Lightning Fleet No. 80 based on the Shrewsbury Sailing Club, Oceanport, N.J. Come this reunion in June, and the chances are that every last man in attendance will be filled not only to the full but to the overflowing with intimate details of who did what to whose rubbing strake when he luffed him off the course on the starboard tack. Right now the ice skating is wonderful.

"Satisfaction? One most worthy of mention is that I have finally completed this thing!

"Regrets? Only one that comes to mind at this particular moment is that I never learned to run a typewriter with even a minute degree of proficiency, so that hacking these memoirs into the granite of Stone Mountain in heroic size would have been a breeze by comparison with the travail of the session which has now ENDED!!!!"

ROBERT BOZZI. Physician; office and residence, 406 Roseville Avenue, Newark, N.J.

Bozzi received the degree of M.D. at the University of Naples in 1936. He interned at St. Luc Hospital in Montreal during 1936-37 and at the Hospital of St. Raphael in New Haven the next year and was a resident at the Columbus Hospital during 1938-39. Since then he has been practicing in Newark, where he is on the staffs of both the Columbus and Memorial hospitals. He is a member of the Essex County Medical Society and the American Medical Association.

In September, 1942, Bozzi went on active duty as a captain in the Army Medical Corps. He was assigned first to the 100th Infantry Division at Fort Jackson, S.C., and in January, 1944, to the 30th Infantry Division at Camp Atterbury, Ind. He left for the European theatre the following month and took part in the Normandy campaign and the battles of Northern France, Rhineland, and Central Europe. He returned to this country in December, 1945, and in March was released from active duty with the rank of major.

His marriage to Caroline Massa, daughter of Vincent and Lena Moscatiello Massa, took place in New York City on June 16, 1929.

ELLIOTT ESTÉR BRAINARD. Vice-president, Lock Joint Pipe Company, East Orange, N.J.; residence, 413 North Arlington Avenue, East Orange.

Brainard reports: "After three years' training with the Public Service Electric & Gas Company of New Jersey, I decided in favor of less technical and more commercial endeavor and joined the Lock Joint Pipe Company under 'Pop' Hirsh, famous Yale catcher of 1901 and author of 'Boola-Boola.' Soon entered the sales department and have remained in this branch primarily. Was made assistant secretary about 1935, treasurer in 1940, vice-president in charge of foreign sales in 1946, and vice-president in charge of sales in 1950. Commenced extensive traveling around U.S.A. in 1931. Made first foreign business trip in 1935 to Brazil. Since then have spent large part of time on foreign prospects, living mostly in Mexico during 1944-45 and mostly in Brazil during 1946-49. In July, 1949, went to Europe and on to Israel—in 1950 to Brazil, Canada, England, and France. Present prospects seem to be much more time in U.S.A. in administrative capacity.

"Up till 1935 played lots of golf, then switched to tennis, but in recent years business interfered with these and chief athletic diversion became swimming, for which Rio de Janeiro gave lots of opportunity, despite long hard hours trying to do a $10,000,000-job in a hurry under handicap of Latin Amanha or Manana to you.

"Principal hobby is working with my hands in miscellaneous carpentry, plumbing, or masonry jobs around house. Like to build furniture, do interior decorating, modernize kitchens and bathrooms. Currently trying to build some summer homes on shore property at Boothbay Harbor, Maine."

Brainard has the following additional positions at the present time: vice-president, Lock Joint Pipe C.A.—Venezuela, Lock Joint Pipe Company de Mexico, S.A., and Lock Joint Pipe Company de Puerto Rico, S.A.; manager, Sociedade Industrial Tetracap Ltda. of Brazil. He has contributed a number of articles on concrete pipe and water supplies to technical trade journals since 1935. The only one which he mentions specifically is "Additional Water Supply for Rio de Janeiro, Brazil," in Hacienda and Fazenda, fall, 1949. He is a member of the American Water Works Association, the American Concrete Pipe Association, the Concrete Pipe National Industry Advisory Committee, the Rock Spring Country Club of West Orange, American Airlines Admiral, and United Airlines 100,000 Mile Club (over 500,000 miles). At present Brainard is serving on the industrial committee of the Orange Memorial Hospital drive and of the Upsala College building campaign.

He was married in East Orange, October 19, 1929, to Lois Forsythe Smith, daughter of Thomas Melville and Jane Ebersole Smith. Her home was formerly in Milburn, N.J. Their older daughter, Beverly Ann, who was born in Orange, December 21, 1930, attended Wellesley during 1948-49 and has since been at Ohio University, Athens, Ohio. The younger girl, Barbara Lynn, born November 2, 1935, in Orange, is a Sophomore in high school.

LOUIS HARRAH BRÉGY. Assistant to the president, La Luz Mines, Ltd., 230 Park Avenue, New York, N.Y.; residence address, Box 447, Westport, Conn.

Brégy, who has been engaged in mining since graduation, has been assistant to the president of La Luz Mines, Ltd., for some time and at present is also associated with Panaminas, Inc. His first job was with the International Nickel Company of Canada as engineer in charge of diamond drilling at the Frood Mine in Sudbury, Ontario. He was later engaged in the examination of mines in North Carolina and Virginia and subsequently became connected with the Tonopah Mining Company of Nevada as engineer in charge of exploration. During this period he was a director of the New Almaden Mines Company and the T. & G. Railroad Company of Philadelphia. Brégy is a member of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers.

His marriage to Anne Spotswood Bunting, daughter of Oscar S. and Mary P. Harriss Bunting, took place in Petersburg, Va., on February 15, 1927. They have two sons: Louis F., born August 29, 1933, in Richmond, Va., and Robert S., born January 14, 1938, in Philadelphia.

ALFRED GARDNER BROWNSON. Salesman, H. B. Brainerd, Inc. (insurance), 49 Pearl Street, Hartford 3, Conn.; residence, 36 VanBuren Avenue, West Hartford 7.

Brownson worked for The Travelers Insurance Company during the first seven years after graduation and was with the Socony-Vacuum Oil Company, Inc., from 1933 to 1935. He then returned to the insurance business, this time with H. B. Brainerd, Inc. He enlisted in the Coast Guard in 1942 and was stationed near Atlantic City until discharged because of a physical condition in 1944. He ranked as seaman 1/c.

Brownson is a member of the University Club of Hartford. He is still a bachelor. He writes briefly, "I haven't traveled far since going to California in 1927 and to Florida in 1938. In the last few years I have developed a real hobby for boats. Aside from the work and pastime indicated, I have no special interests."

DANIEL HARVEL BUCHANAN. Address, Coppertop, Maple Avenue, Cheshire, Conn.

ROSWELL SEYMOUR BUCK. Vice-president, Hill Mortgage Corporation and Hill Real Estate Corporation, 1230 Rand Building, Buffalo 3, N.Y.; residence, 821 Auburn Avenue, Buffalo 22.

Buck was a structural engineer with Thomas H. McKaig, a consultant architectural engineer, from 1926 to 1929 and the following year was with the John H. Black Company of Buffalo, manufacturers of light weight aggregate haydite. He then joined the Hollenback Inspecting and Testing Laboratories of Buffalo as an engineer and continued with them until September, 1932, when he became associated with the Nye Mortgage Corporation of Buffalo in mortgage servicing. Since giving up that position in May, 1935, Buck has been associated with the Hill Mortgage and Real Estate corporations, first in charge of real estate maintenance and later in charge of certain territories for the production of new mortgage loan business. His position as vice-president dates from 1945. Entirely as a side line he conducts an insurance business specializing in fire and inland marine insurance.

During the period from 1946 to 1948 Buck took courses at the University of Buffalo Law School. He is vice-president of the Buffalo Real Estate Board, Inc., a life member and director of the Buffalo Canoe Club (formerly fleet captain), and a charter member and formerly lieutenant commander of the Buffalo Power Squadron. He was at one time a deacon of the First Presbyterian Church, and he belongs to the Midday Club and the Murray Hill Ski Club. He has repeatedly worked on local committees for the Community Chest, Y.M.C.A., Y.W.C.A., and other local drives and is active in the Y.M.C.A. Hi-Y program.

Buck adds, "I joined the Army's Engineer Amphibious Command in August, 1942, as a specialist in navigation with the rank of captain. In November, 1942, I was assigned to the 542d Engineer Boat and Shore Regiment, which was activated at Camp Edwards, Mass. The 542d was then transferred to Fort Ord, Calif., where it staged for the Western Pacific theatre. The unit arrived in Rockhampton, Queensland, in February, 1943, and went into intensive training. In June, 1943, the 542d was sent to Oro Bay, New Guinea, and from there participated in almost every amphibious operation to and including the Leyte Gulf operation in the Philippines. My particular work consisted largely of taking delivery of and fitting out boats which were bought or built by the Army and in skippering air-sea rescue craft which was used largely for reconnaissance patrol and communication.

"While I was in the Army in 1942-43 and 1944, my ship stopped briefly at Auckland, New Zealand. We landed in Australia at Brisbane. I spent about six months there—in Sidney, Brisbane, Rockhampton, and Townsville. My outfit then went to New Guinea, where we were consecutively in Oro Bay, Lae, Finchhaven, Biak Island. I left the outfit at Biak and returned home.

"We usually take a winter vacation for a couple of weeks of skiing. In recent years we have been to the Laurentians, various resorts in New York State, Vermont, New Hampshire, and Pennsylvania, and last year went out to Banff for two weeks of skiing in the Canadian Rockies.

"Our other major hobby is yachting. For twelve years we owned a Class R sloop which we cruised and raced all over Lakes Erie and Ontario. Since the war we have usually taken a house on the Canadian shore of Lake Erie for the summer and have confined our cruising activities to Lake Ontario."

He married Sally Smith, daughter of Dr. Lawrence H. Smith and Vera Peek Smith, in Buffalo on August 19, 1939. Mrs. Buck formerly lived in East

Aurora, N.Y. They have two children, both of whom were born in Buffalo, Catherine on October 30, 1942, and Winthrop Lawrence on October 20, 1946.

WINTHROP PORTER BUCK. Address, East Main Street, Oyster Bay, N.Y.

ROBERT WILLIS BUDD. President, Great Lakes Greyhound Lines, 2301 West Lafayette Boulevard, Detroit 16, Mich.; residence, Vaughan Road, Bloomfield Hills, Mich.

Budd started with the Greyhound Corporation in 1931 as vice-president of the Eastern Greyhound Lines. Two years later he became president and a director of the Central Greyhound Lines, Inc., and its subsidiaries, and he was subsequently vice-president and general manager of the Canadian Greyhound Lines, Ltd., and general manager of the Eastern Greyhound Lines of New England before becoming president of the Great Lakes Greyhound Lines in February, 1947. He is at present also vice-president and general manager of the Eastern Canadian Greyhound Lines, Ltd., president and general manager of the Indiana Greyhound Lines, Inc., and of the Ann Arbor City Bus, Inc., president and a director of the Greyhound Terminals of Detroit and Toledo, vice-president of the Vermont Transit Company, Inc., and a director of the National Association of Motor Bus Operators and the National Travelers Aid Association.

Budd spent the year 1926-27 as a mechanic with the Northland Transportation Company and was then made assistant manager of operations. After serving in that capacity for a year, he was appointed manager of operations, and he became vice-president of the company in 1929 and president in 1930. He belongs to the Society of Automotive Engineers, the Detroit Athletic Club, the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club, the Bloomfield Hills Country Club, the Chicago Club, and the Tavern Club of Cleveland.

His first marriage, to Dorothy Ashburn Bell, daughter of Albert Henry Bell, took place in Waco, Texas, April 28, 1928. They were divorced in 1941. On December 9, 1942, he was married in Chicago to Margery A. Coe Selover, of Cleveland. He had two children by his first marriage, Robert Ralph and Geoffrey Spaulding; the latter died in Cleveland on August 19, 1946. His daughter by his second marriage, Virginia Ashcom, was born August 22, 1946, in Cleveland.

ROBERT WILLIAM BULLOCK. Special representative (in public relations), Federal Reserve Bank of New York, 33 Liberty Street, New York, N.Y.; residence, Hotel Lucerne, 201 West 79th Street, New York 24.

Bullock writes: "I am planning to spend a month in England and Scotland this summer—the first reunion with my three brothers in thirty-one years. I, of course, am in New York City in central banking. The next brother (Alec) is in southern California. He has been an amateur steeplechase jockey and polo player and is now training race horses for Bing Crosby and Lyn Howard (the horses aren't much good: breeding is what counts—that's why a jackass never won the Kentucky Derby); the next brother (Cecil) teaches at a prep school in England. He was '31 Ac; spent three years at the Imperial Naval Academy in Hiroshima, a year at Oxford, and a year in Denmark. The youngest brother (Harold) is with the British subsidiary of Caterpillar Tractor in Nairobi, Kenya, East Africa. How's that for being spread apart and in different occupations? Mother lives in England and father in Florida. The youngest brother was in the R.A.F. for five or six years. Cecil is regarded as something of an authority on Japan and published a book on his experiences there (1932-35).

"Previous travels have been as follows: 1927 (two months) in Scotland, England, and France; 1947 (two weeks)—flew to and from Scotland and England. Recreations: all sports, practically—particularly horses. Spend most of my week-ends gardening and farming. Am known as the 'slave labor' of the Federal Reserve Bank on account of the latter. A pretty handy guy to have around."

Bullock, who has been with the Federal Reserve Bank since 1933, was appointed a special representative in connection with public relation activities in May, 1951. He was with the sales department of the Firestone Tire & Rubber Company from 1926 to 1928, was a member of the domestic inspection staff of the National City Bank of New York the following year, was associated with Harold E. Talbott, Jr., as treasurer of the Lenzol Syndicate from 1929 to 1931, and during 1932-33 was an accountant with Allen R. Smart & Company, certified public accountants. From 1945 to 1947 he served with the 7th Regiment, New York State Guard. He has been secretary of the New York Rugby Football Club and during the period from 1935 to 1940 managed several Canadian and Cambridge University teams which toured in the United States.

Bullock was married April 25, 1931, in Washington, D.C., to Jessica Stewart MacRae, daughter of Stewart and Jessie Stewart MacRae. Her home was formerly in New York. They were divorced in 1939.

WILLIAM CLAPP BULLOCK. Manager, uptown bond department, Bankers Trust Company, 529 5th Avenue, New York, N.Y.; residence, 249 Tokeneke Road, Darien, Conn.

Bullock graduated from the Harvard Business School with the degree of M.B.A. in 1929. He was with the Curlee Clothing Company for the next three years, with Blyth & Company from 1933 to 1942, and then, on April 1, went on active duty, as a lieutenant, U.S.N.R. He was assigned to inspection service in Newark, N.J., until September, 1945, when he returned to inactive duty with the rank of commander. He has been with the Bankers Trust Company since November of that year.

Bullock's marriage to Elizabeth Chadwick Van Wagnen, daughter of Ray Mathew and Margrita Schummers Van Wagnen, took place at Niagara Falls, N.Y., on July 7, 1934. William Clapp Bullock, Jr., who was born in Bronxville, N.Y., on June 28, 1936, is scheduled to enter Andover in the fall of 1951 and is "pointing to Yale." Cynthia Chadwick Bullock was born January 15, 1941, also in Bronxville.

"I have a swell family," says Bullock. "Very few major regrets or disappointments—probably the greatest one being that my entire three and a half years in the Navy had to be spent in Newark—with no sea or advanced base duty. One hell of a way to help fight a war!

"My hobbies are gardening and fresh water fishing. For a number of years, except during the war, I have spent vacations in the Canadian woods bass and trout fishing. My recreations are mostly swimming and some tennis."

VAN VECHTEN BURGER. Partner, Pershing & Company, brokers, 120 Broadway, New York, N.Y.; residence, 21 East 87th Street, New York.

Burger reports as follows: "After graduation I had no idea what I was going to do in the way of work, and after a trip to Europe I started out in the brokerage business, where I have worked ever since, with the exception of three years out for World War II.

"In 1931 I bought a seat on the New York Stock Exchange and in 1932 joined Weicker & Company. In 1939 Jack Pershing, '31 S., two Princeton men, and myself formed Pershing & Company, where I still operate.

"Most of my interests have centered around working, bringing up a family, and golf and tennis. Travels have not been extensive, except for last summer, when I took the family to Europe for three months. My golf has gotten much better than at New Haven, fortunately, and I was lucky enough to win the club championship a couple of years ago down at Rockaway Hunting Club in Cedarhurst. This gave me a great deal of satisfaction, naturally, having been a hacker in the old days, but I got even more of a kick out of winning the father-daughter tennis tournament at Farmington last year with my younger daughter, who carried me through the whole nerve-wracking afternoon."

Before joining Weicker & Company, Burger was successively with the following New York firms: Livingston & Company (October, 1926-February, 1929); Wright, Slade & Company (February, 1929-September, 1930); Tailer & Robinson (September, 1930-May, 1931), and was independently engaged from then until September, 1932. His war service covered the period from October, 1942, to December, 1945. He went on active duty with the rank of lieutenant and was a lieutenant commander at the time of his release. He had been a member of Squadron A, New York State Guard, from January, 1940, to September, 1941, and served on the New York State Draft Board from July, 1941, to October, 1942.

Burger was a trustee of the Spence School in New York from 1946 to 1949, and he has been a governor of both the Rockaway Hunting Club and the Lawrence Beach Club in Cedarhurst for several years. He belongs also to the Pilgrims, the St. Nicholas Society, and the Racquet and Tennis and River clubs of New York.

He was married November 17, 1930, in New York, to Rosalie Evans, daughter of Hartman K. and Mabel Curtis Evans. Their children were all born in New York, Beverly on October 19, 1931, Evan on October 30, 1933, and Van Vechten, Jr., on January 3, 1940. Both girls have attended the Spence School and Farmington. Beverly, who was for a time a member of the Class of 1951 at Bennett Junior College, was married February 3, 1951, in New York to Lawrence Alexandre, of New York.

GEORGE WATSON BURR. Address, Lockhart, Fla.

DAVID ALLAN BURT, JR. Partner, Hazlett, Burt & Watson, brokers, 215 Wheeling Steel Building, Wheeling, W.Va.; residence, Kenwood Place, Wheeling.

Burt became a member of the above firm, which is a member of the New York Stock Exchange, on October 1, 1938. He was secretary-treasurer and a director of the Jefferson Company (strip coal mining) from 1934 to 1945 and during 1940-41 served as president of the Ohio Valley Board of Trade. He was co-chairman of the 1948 and 1950 campaigns of the Wheeling Community Chest, served on the executive committee of the Huroquois Council, Boy Scouts of America, from 1939 to 1942, has been treasurer and a director of the Ohio County Anti-Tuberculosis League since 1949, and in 1950 was appointed director of civil defense for Ohio County. That year he became president of the Wheeling chapter of the Order of Symposiarchs.

In May, 1942, Burt was commissioned a first lieutenant in the Air Force and assigned to the 8th A.A.F. in England. He was promoted to captain the following October and assigned to the 12th A.A.F. in the North Africa invasion. Following a promotion to major in January, 1943, he was transferred to headquarters in the Pentagon Building. In June, 1944, he was transferred to the headquarters of the Air Service Command at Wright Field as chief of officer personnel and served there until he was released from active duty in May, 1945. He had been promoted to lieutenant colonel in October, 1944, and is now a colonel in the Reserve, serving as commanding officer of the 9489th Voluntary Air Reserve Training Squadron.

On January 5, 1929, he was married in Steubenville, Ohio, to Katherine Louise Dean, daughter of Albert Sommers and Emily Smith Dean. Their older son, Robert Joseph, born November 25, 1929, in Wheeling, graduated from the Salisbury School in 1948 and is at present at the University of Alabama. William Dean Burt, who was born October 9, 1933, in Wheeling, is a Senior at Salisbury and hopes to enter Yale with the Class of 1955.

BENJAMIN PLATT BUSH, 2D. General sales representative in the northeastern United States for the Robinson Corporation of Roselle Park, N.J.; business address, Room 2018, 90 West Street, New York, 6, N.Y.; residence, Ridgedale Avenue, R.F.D. 1, Whippany, N.J.

"I have had twenty-five good years," Bush says. "Have made no great marks in the world, but have no complaints for the record. My efforts have kept me just ahead of the requirements for a good living. I have some good friends but not enough enemies and too few children.

"My work has been confined to two lines of endeavor—engineering sales and production engineering. I am pleased to be working for myself in both these fields at present. There is very little security, but it is not nerve-wracking or boring. I play a little lousy golf and fish and hunt in the Poconos (nice club). Hope to learn the art of taking big brown trout on a fly—they are there, but I can't catch them. Hope to see my son back from the wars and leading a life he likes. Hope I can die before I become a burden to myself or others. Hope I don't miss my Twenty-fifth Reunion."

Additional details: "Out of college into Florida Power & Light Company—underground, electrical engineering; above ground with DeLaval Separator Company as industrial salesman; up a pole with the Pennsylvania Power & Light Company as an electrical conservation engineer; down to earth with the Depression as a salesman for pipe welding fittings for the Bonney Forge & Tool Works; thence to Tube Turns, Inc., as assistant New York sales manager; thence to John B. Astell Company, New York, as vice-president in charge of welding fittings sales; spent war as general manager of R. J. Sheriden Company making portable gasoline pipe line; have been mostly on my own since that time."

In addition to his connection with the Robinson Corporation, manufacturers of stainless steel and other corrosion resistant light wall pipe fittings for the chemical and allied industries, Bush is associated with R. S. Stangland, a consulting engineer, in connection with gypsum wallboard mill machinery and plant operation. He says he has spent a lot of time with the Green Door Players of Madison, N.J., in various capacities—"mostly back stage, fortunately."

His marriage to Frances Brown, daughter of Gabriel Scott and Grace Little Brown, of Easton, Pa., took place in New York on July 19, 1929. Their son, Benjamin Platt, 3d, is on active duty as a private in the 121st Jet Squadron, Air National Guard Air Police, which was federalized on February 1, 1951. He was born July 27, 1931, in Easton, and after attending the Madison High School and the Berkshire School, was a Freshman (cadet) at Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

MAX CAPLAN. Physician, 219 West Main Street, Meriden, Conn.; residence, 28 Hayes Street, Meriden.

During 1927 and 1928 Caplan was a medical technician with the Yonkers (N.Y.) Board of Health. He attended the University of Louisville School of Medicine from 1929 until 1933, when he received his M.D. degree. He was an interne at the Jewish Hospital in Louisville during 1932-33 and was on the staff of the Louisville City Hospital for the next three years, serving successively as a junior interne, senior interne, and assistant resident. Since 1936 he has been engaged in the practice of medicine in Meriden. He has been chief of the medical staff at the Meriden Hospital since 1949 and at present is also attending physician at the Rocky Hill (Conn.) Veterans Hospital, consultant physician at the Bradley Memorial Hospital in Southington, Conn., and a clinical instructor in medicine at Yale. Caplan became a diplomate of the American Board of Internal Medicine in 1947 and of the American Board of Gastroenterology in 1950 and is an associate of the American College of Physicians. He has had several articles published in medical journals. He is vice-president of the Meriden Kiwanis Club.

He was married on May 31, 1935, in Louisville, to Mildred Virginia Gorham, daughter of Fred Jaynes and Ethelyn May Keller Gorham. Mrs. Caplan, who is recording secretary of the Susan Carrington Clarke Chapter of the D.A.R., is serving at present on the State D.A.R. Approved School Committee.

"One of my greatest interests has been collecting a large library of classical recordings, and I now have about 450 albums," Caplan says. "For several years I studied the cello, for two years also took accordion lessons, and from 1929 to 1936 was tympanist with the Louisville Symphony Orchestra. I take great pride in my very large vegetable and flower garden, also in my five well-trained house dogs. For a number of years I've been interested in amateur photography and have taken some rather fine pictures of patients, my dogs, and places of special interest I've been to on vacation trips."

EDWARD CAROFANO. Owner, Center Pharmacy, 576 Campbell Avenue, West Haven, Conn., and Parkview Pharmacy, 207 Orange Avenue, West Haven; residence, 273 Center Street, West Haven.

Carofano tells us that he became the owner of the Center and Parkview pharmacies in 1928 and that he is not married.

YI MING CHANG. Address, Box 12, San-Hsi, Chi-Kiang, Szechuen, China.

GEORGE CLIFFORD CLARK, JR. Engineer, Southern New England Telephone Company, 227 Church Street, New Haven, Conn.; residence, 33 Rockefeller Avenue, West Haven.

Clark has been with the Southern New England Telephone Company since 1926. His present job as engineer for central office and P.B.X maintenance dates from 1949. He is a member of Annawon Lodge, No. 115, F. and A.M.

His marriage to Vera Jeannette Willis, daughter of John A. and Mary A. Smith Willis, took place in Bridgeport, Conn., on September 15, 1928. Their daughter, Mary Lou, who was born in New Haven on June 17, 1929, graduated from the West Haven High School in 1946 and from Barnard College in 1950.

Clark sums up other things as follows: "I enjoy vacation traveling in Maine and New Hampshire and trips to New York City. Golf still is a fine game, fishing next in line. Plays at the Shubert continue to be of great interest. During the past have taken part in semi-professional light opera and drama. Have sung in various places; am second tenor in a quartette and a local male chorus. Like recordings generally—constructed amplifiers for good quality reproduction. Am an amateur painter and interior decorator."

ROBERT OBER CLARK. President, Jewel Paint & Varnish Company, 345 North Western Avenue, Chicago 12, Ill.; residence, 418 Brierhill Road, Deerfield, Ill.

"It's amazing to think back over twenty-five years and realize how little there is to report of your own personal activities that would be of any particular interest to any one but yourself and your family"—thus Clark. "Business-wise I've been in the same company since October, 1926, when I returned from a summer in Europe. A number of you will remember the famous 'student third' voyage of the New Amsterdam that year.

"Circumstances largely beyond my control made me treasurer in 1928 and president in 1933—a fine time to take on that job! There were a couple of rough years, but latterly things have been going well—particularly since the formation of Colorizer Associates a year and a half ago by nine companies to market jointly a swell color system. [He is its president.] That's been a lot of fun.

"My favorite avocation is the Canadian woods, and Martha and I have covered a good deal of northwestern Ontario by canoe in the summer when family production didn't interfere. Last summer the whole family undertook—with the help of a couple of other lads—the construction of a cabin as headquarters on Upper Mointon Lake, Ontario—and got quite a workout in the process. Hope to finish it next year.

"I'm a middle 80's golfer—most of the time—and I manage to keep extremely busy as a painter and general repair man about the house, the latest project being a kitchen remodeling job that's kept me out of trouble quite a while."

Clark served as president of the Chicago Paint, Varnish, and Lacquer Association from 1941 to 1943, and he was regional vice-president of the national organization in 1942 and a member of its executive committee from 1943 to 1946.

On July 3, 1928, he was married in Paris to Martha Johnston White, daughter of Selden F. and Agnes Johnston White, of Evanston, Ill. There are three boys in the family: Robert O., Jr., born June 20, 1931, Selden White on May 10, 1933, and Edwin H., 2d, on May 29, 1938, all in Evanston. Robert, Yale '54, prepared for college at St. George's School. Selden is in the Class of 1951 at Andover.

GORDON EDWARD CLAY. Assistant treasurer, Volkart Brothers, Inc., general importers and exporters and cotton merchants, 508 Cotton Exchange Building, New Orleans, La.; residence, 1303 Arabella Street, New Orleans.

Clay writes: "I have been in the cotton business ever since leaving New Haven. Have only gotten up East once—in 1940—and then only for a short visit. Hobbies were tennis and badminton, now reduced to bridge. I regret that I am so far off the beaten path I never get to see anybody from '26 S. except Jim Eustis occasionally. I can offer any one who will venture this far South a true mint julep."

From 1927 to 1940 Clay was a partner in Bouden, Clay & Company, cotton futures brokers. He has since been associated with Volkart Brothers, Inc., whose head office is in New York City, and in January of this year became assistant treasurer of the company. He is also secretary and treasurer of its subsidiary, the Magnolia Compress & Warehouse Company, Inc.

He was married in New Orleans on October 22, 1926, to Thelma M. Lewis, daughter of Sidney F. and Evelina Nicaud Lewis. Their twin children, Gordon E., Jr., and Joan E., were born in New Orleans on July 2, 1929. Gordon, Jr., who attended Tulane University as a member of the Class of 1951, is a seaman in the Naval Reserve (Organized). Joan was in the Class of 1947 at the Sacred Heart Convent.

CORNELIUS JANSEN CLOPPER. Manufacturing engineer, Western Electric Company, 100 Central Avenue, Kearny, N.J.; residence, 59 Forest Road, Tenafly, N.J.

Clopper has held the above position since 1945. He was a cadet engineer with the New Jersey Public Service Electric & Gas Company from 1926 to 1928 and did actuarial work with the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company from 1935 to 1937. While in England during 1933-34, he studied applied statistics under Egon S. Pearson at the University of London and was co-author with him of Binomial Theorem Applied to Fiducial Limits, published in London in 1934. Clopper served as president of the Tenaflly Community Chest in 1950 and during the past two years has been president of the Tenaflly Badminton Club. He belongs also to the Patten's Bay Yacht Club of Surry, Maine.

In February, 1943, he entered the Naval Reserve as a lieutenant. Following his indoctrination at Quonset, he took the air combat information course there. He served aboard the original Coral Sea (CVE-57) from its commissioning in August, 1943, until October, 1944, successively as ship's A.C.I. officer, squadron A.C.I., V-3 division officer, and senior deck officer. The ship operated in the Pacific—at Tarawa, Kwajelein, Emirau, and Saipan. From January, 1945, until his release from service with the rank of lieutenant commander in October, 1945, Clopper was A.C.I. officer with VPB-98, an advance training unit in San Diego.

His marriage to Helen Smith, daughter of K. B. C. Smith and Helen Davis Smith, of Englewood, N.J., took place in Hackensack, N.J., on December 31, 1927.

"My engineering work at the Western Electric Company keeps me pretty close to home now, but back in 1933 I had an opportunity to go to England to study for a year," Clopper says. "Living in London was a real treat and a great experience. Then during the long vacations at Christmas and Easter Helen and I toured Europe, seeing Paris and other parts of France, Italy, Switzerland, Belgium, Holland, Denmark, Finland, and Russia. In the war I got as far south as Espiritu Santo and as far west as Guam.

"In 1937 Helen and I built our home in Tenaflly. As it turned out, we picked a pretty good year to build. Since then I have made gardening and home care a hobby and recreation. In the summer time we usually go down east to Surry, Maine, on Union River Bay. Sailing, swimming, fishing, and excursioning are the main activities on vacation. A snapshot is enclosed of me at the tiller of an Atlantic class sloop a couple of years ago. The two boys are sons of a friend of mine. My main hobby now is color photography, and I have some excellent slides."

ALBERT BURTON COATES. With the York Iron Mining Company and the Michigan Land Company (iron mining and investments), State Bank Building, Tower, Minn.; mailing address, Box 698, Tower Post Office; residence, Pike Bay, Minn.

Coates has been connected with the York Iron Mining Company and the Michigan Land Company for some time. He is a bachelor.

CHARLES DUNHAM COOK. Electrical engineer, Rural Electrification Administration, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Independence Avenue and 14th Street, S.W., Washington 25, D.C.; residence, 2402 30th Street, N.E., Washington 18.

Cook was a student engineer with the Connecticut Light & Power Company in Waterbury from June, 1928, to May, 1929, and during the following year was assistant to the material efficiency engineer of the Westinghouse Lamp Company at Bloomfield, N.J. From May, 1930, to November, 1941, when he took his present position, he was with the Consolidated Edison System of New York City as an engineering assistant. Cook took evening courses at the New York University Graduate School of Business Administration and in June, 1940, received the degree of M.B.A.

He was married to Helen Laird Acker, daughter of James Laird and Maude Gray Acker, in New York on April 14, 1934. They have two sons: Charles Dunham, Jr., born on January 19, 1935, and Peter Michael on June 25, 1940, both in New York.

CHARLES GRAY COOPER. Vice-president, Cooper-Bessemer Corporation (diesel engines, gas engines, and compressors), 440 Continental Building, Washington 5, D.C.; residence, 2546 Massachusetts Avenue, N.W., Washington 8.

Cooper took special courses at Massachusetts Tech after graduation and from 1927 to 1931 was with the Chapman-Stein Company. Since then he has been with the Cooper-Bessemer Corporation. He was made Washington district manager in 1933, became a director of the company in 1945, and was elected a vice-president in November, 1950.

Cooper was a lieutenant in the Naval Reserve from 1936 to 1941, when he received an honorable discharge. He belongs to the American Society of Naval Engineers (of whose council he was formerly a member), the Society of Naval Architects and Marine Engineers (formerly vice-chairman of the Chesapeake section), and the Masonic order. From 1941 to 1943 he held office as president of the Yale Club of Washington.

He was first married in 1932 in Ossining, N.Y., to Dorothy Alice Booth, daughter of Edmund W. and Molly M. Smith Booth, of Grand Rapids, Mich. Her death occurred on August 15, 1949. On December 9, 1950, Cooper married Mrs. Marguerite Hosack Doelker, of Columbus, Ohio. His son, David Booth, who was born in New York in 1933, attended St. Albans in Washington and is now a Senior at Hotchkiss.

"My hobbies are golf, fishing, good conversation, and a never-ending interest in the mystery of what makes us tick," he says. "As I get older, I find my closest friends among the people who continue to enjoy that same search."

HARRY EDWARD COOPER. Manager, lastex yarn division, U.S. Rubber Company, 1230 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y.; residences, 164 Boulevard, Pelham, N.Y., and Indian Neck, Branford, Conn.

Cooper, who has been with the U. S. Rubber Company since 1926, spent the period from 1927 to 1930 in the Far East on the company's plantations. He lived in Rhode Island in 1931, and again from 1934 to 1944, and since then has divided his time between Branford and Pelham. He spent the year 1932-33 in England, Hungary, and Italy on business and made another business visit to England a few years later.

Cooper is a sub-committee member of R.M.A. and of O.P.S. and belongs to the Yale and Metropolitan clubs in New York, the Pelham County Club, and the Turk's Head Club in Pine Orchard. "At this age I confine my athletics to golf (high handicap)," he says. "Special interest: raising and providing for the education of three children and trying to convince them (in spite of the record during their lifetime) that the Republicans may win again nationally."

Cooper's marriage to Helen A. Meffert, daughter of William L. and Helen A. Forster Meffert, took place in Mt. Vernon, N.Y., on May 24, 1930. Their children are: Joan E., born in New Haven, March 29, 1931, Judith A. in Providence on June 3, 1934, and William M. on March 30, 1937, also in Providence. They have all attended the Pelham High School. Joan is a Sophomore at Mt. Holyoke, and Judith expects to matriculate there in the fall.

WILLIAM EMER CRANSTON, JR. President, Thermador Electrical Manufacturing Company, 5119 District Boulevard, Los Angeles, Calif.; residence, 1430 Old Mill Road, San Marino, Calif.

Another fortunate member of the Class—"Since 1926 I've had an interesting, happy, and lucky life—fortunate in marrying the right girl, who kept me on the beam," Cranston says. "Arrived in California in 1930 to manage a small manufacturing company. Took the option to buy a lot of it. In 1932 merged it with another one, and the outfit has grown considerably through the years.

"Have two daughters and two sons who were exposed to Yale last summer at the '25 S. Reunion, of which Class I was a member for two years before staying out of school and returning with you.

"I follow the boys around in tennis tournaments and play golf whenever I can. Regret distance prevents seeing except for short visits, my Eastern friends of New Haven days."

From 1926 to 1930 Cranston was a production engineer with the Hoffman Specialty Company and during the next two years was vice-president and general manager of the Hoffman Specialty Company of California. He has been associated with the Thermador Electrical Manufacturing Company (electrical and metal products) since then, first as vice-president and general manager and since 1945 as president. He is a director of the Morris Stamping & Manufacturing Company, the Lumidor Manufacturing Company, and the California Manufacturers Association. He has served on the California State Board of Apprentices in the Mechanical Trades, was president of the Electric Club of Southern California during 1940-41 and a director of the Pacific Coast Electrical Association from 1945 to 1950. Cranston has contributed articles to various trade magazines. He is currently a director of the Welfare Federation of Southern California and of the Annandale Golf Club and belongs to the American Legion, the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, and other organizations. During 1947-48 he held the office of president of the Yale Club of Southern California.

Mrs. Cranston, who was Anne McPartland, daughter of John Edward and Mary Ellen Boyhan McPartland, attended the Yale Music School. They were married on June 29, 1926, in New Haven, where their older daughter, Lanny Mary, who is a student at the University of California, was born on April 26, 1929. The other children were all born in Los Angeles, William Emer, 3d, on October 11, 1934, John M. on February 11, 1937, and Janet Elizabeth on September 3, 1940. The boys are in high school.

FRANCIS HOOPER CRONAN. Address, 745 Riverside Drive, New York 31, N.Y.

HENRY DICKSON CRUTE. Head, Henry D. Crute & Associates, Inc., engineers and contractors, North Haven, Conn.; residence, 8 Garfield Avenue, Hamden, Conn.

Crute established the above firm in October, 1947. During the first year after graduation he was a construction engineer with Gibbs & Hill and then went with James McWalters & Son as construction superintendent, leaving a year later to become associated with W. H. Crute, Inc., in the same capacity. He was director of the Connecticut Geodetic Survey from 1933 to 1943, a field engineering associate with the Factory Mutual Fire Insurance Companies for the next three years, and a project engineer with M. Shapiro & Sons during 1946-47. He is a licensed professional engineer and land surveyor in Connecticut.

Crute's marriage to Helen M. Lowe, daughter of Edward T. and Helen Tracy Lowe, of New Haven, took place in Carmel, N.Y., on November 14, 1930. They have two sons: Michael Henry, born June 26, 1935, and Jeffrey on April 22, 1943, both in New Haven. The older boy is in the Class of 1953 at the Hamden High School. One of Crute's ambitions is to get two more Crutes through Yale—the other to see another Republican President. Collecting American antique furniture and old pewter is his hobby.

WILLIAM GREATHEAD CURRAN. Advertising representative, Time, Inc., 1900 Fisher Building, Detroit 2, Mich.; residence, 17508 Charles Street, Grosse Pointe 30, Mich.

Curran has been with Time since May, 1943. From April, 1927, until December, 1945, he was a member of the New York Stock Exchange. He was first married August 30, 1926, in New York to Helen Dolores Roosen, daughter of Herman Dudley and Clarita Roosen. His second marriage, to Katherine Barker, daughter of Harold O. and Helen Moffett Barker, took place in New York on May 5, 1939. Curran has three children: William G., Jr., born June 10, 1927, in New York; Pamela, born February 5, 1930, also in New York; and Christopher Barker, born December 6, 1945, in Detroit. Bill, Jr., who prepared for college at Haverford, is a Senior at Yale; he served in the Merchant Marine and is now in the Marine Corps Reserve. Pamela has attended Miss Hewitt's School.

Curran sums up the rest as follows: "Traveled through Europe, where I saw everything—but lost a thumb in Paris on Bastille Day. My recreations are now but few, being 46—golf, bowling, and an occasional libation. My hopes and regrets were tied up in the Stock Exchange from 1927 to 1945; had plenty of both. My ambitions—to stay healthy, enjoy the company of my family and friends, and have a little fun."

JOHN ROBERT DAILY. Address, 258 Bradley Street, New Haven, Conn.

FRANK HENRY D'ANDREA. Physician; office and residence, 191 Hubbard Avenue, Stamford, Conn.

D'Andrea, who specializes in anesthesiology, is director of the department of anesthesia at the Stamford Hospital and at St. Joseph's Hospital, also in Stamford. He graduated from the Yale Medical School in 1929 and was an interne and resident at the Stamford Hospital during the next three years. He was made a diplomate of the American Board of Anesthesiology in 1944 and is a fellow of the American College of Anesthesiologists and the International College of Anesthesiologists. He belongs to the New England and American Societies of Anesthesiologists, the International Anesthesia Research Society, the American Medical Association, the Stamford and Connecticut State Medical societies, the Innis Arden Golf Club, and the Knights of Columbus.

He says that he turns to golf for recreation and that his hobby is pipe collecting—he has over 300 from all parts of the world. He makes frequent trips to New Haven to see football, baseball, and basketball games and crew races at Yale.

D'Andrea's marriage to Josephine Carofano, daughter of Michael and Mary Grace Lavorigna Carofano, took place in New Haven on August 4, 1930. They have three children, all of whom were born in Stamford, Frank Henry, Jr., in 1931, Ann Marilyn in 1937, and Joan Frances in 1945. Frank, Jr., prepared for college at the Fairfield Preparatory Schools and is now in the Yale Class of 1952. In 1950 he won his letter as coxswain with the 150-pound crew.

MARTIN HAYNES DANIELL. Manager, Jackson-Marvin Hardware Company, 843 Whalley Avenue, New Haven, Conn.; residence, Center Road, Woodbridge, Conn.

Daniell started out as an apprentice with The Pennsylvania Railroad. In 1927 he went to Puerto Rico to take a job with the South Porto Rico Sugar Company, with which he was connected in various positions until 1946. He was superintendent of colonos at the Guanica mill in Puerto Rico for seven years and for two years was assistant to the general manager in the Romana mill in Santo Domingo. He had one year's service as a private in the Puertorican State Guard, and he belonged to the Lions Club in Puerto Rico and the Rotary Club in Santo Domingo.

In 1947 Daniell became manager of the Jackson-Marvin Hardware Company in New Haven. At the present time he is serving as secretary of the Connecticut Hardware Supply Company and a director of the Connecticut Hardware Association. He is also a director of the Woodbridge Country Club.

He married Winifred J. Marvin, daughter of Gordon H. and Helen Kneen Marvin in New Haven on September 18, 1933. He has one son by his first marriage, David Lowry, born on June 12, 1932 in Ensenada, Puerto Rico. His children by his second marriage are: Martin Haynes, born June 10, 1935, Sarah Marvin, born December 22, 1937, Gordon Marvin, born March 19, 1940 (all in Ensenada), and Ellen, born July 14, 1947, in New Haven.

"After seventeen years in Puerto Rico and Santo Domingo it has been great to get back to the U.S.A., and especially the New Haven area," says Daniell. "There is nothing like going away to make you appreciate coming home. My chief satisfaction is a large and healthy family, and my chief ambition is to see them educated and well started on their way. No major regrets."

BERNARD RAYMOND DAVIDSON. Address, 100 McKnight Road, St. Louis, Mo.

JOHN WILLIAM DAVIDSON. Lawyer, 125 North Main Street, Port Chester, N.Y.; residence, 95 Betsy Brown Road, Port Chester.

During the first year after graduation Davidson was an engineer with the New York Telephone Company and then took up law. He studied at Columbia during 1927-28 and at New York University for the next two years, graduating with the degree of Juris Doctor in June, 1930. He belonged to Phi Delta Phi and was awarded the Senior Class first prize. In February, 1931, he was admitted to the New York State Bar after the required six months' clerkship, which he spent in his father's office in Port Chester. Davidson, who specializes in banking, probate, and real estate law, is counsel for the Port Chester Savings Bank, the Life Savers Corporation, and Arnold Bakers, Inc. (both of the latter connections are with respect to real estate), and is associate director of the County Trust Company of Port Chester.

He has been a trustee of the Port Chester Public Library since 1935 and its president since 1946. He was general chairman for the local Community Chest drive in 1940 and has also been chairman of the Chest's professional and special gifts division on three or four occasions. In 1950 he was on the executive committee of the Y.M.C.A. Building Fund Drive. From 1942 to 1945 he served as a government appeals agent.

He was married on September 11, 1930, in Port Chester, to Helen Berault, daughter of Arthur G. and Helen Q. Berault. Their children were all born in Port Chester, John A. on April 10, 1934, William C. on May 3, 1936, and Helen on March 19, 1940. The boys go to the Brunswick School in Greenwich, Conn.

"We have traveled generally throughout the eastern half of the United States from Maine to New Orleans, and through the West Indies, and have enjoyed it immensely," Davidson says. "My hobbies are woodworking, bird study, and astronomy. My main ambition at the present time is to have my two boys attend Yale University. I also hope at least one of them will wish to become a lawyer and to be associated with me in the same manner in which it has been my privilege to be associated with my father. After that my wife and I hope to do more frequent and extensive traveling, that is if there is anything left after the three children have received their education."

HAWTHORNE DEMING. Manager, lamp and lighting sales division, International General Electric Company, 570 Lexington Avenue, New York 22, N.Y.; residence, Hamilton Lane, Darien, Conn.

Deming, who has been with G.E. since graduation, writes as follows: "After a year in Mexico, a year in Newfoundland, and seventeen years in Schenectady, have settled and built in Darien, Conn. Am a bridge-playing commuter to New York on the New Haven Railroad (7:49 A.M.)."

"Still think I can play tennis and badminton, although I have had some sad reminders of age in this connection lately—am thinking seriously of taking up golf, but may postpone it for ten years or so.

"I travel frequently overseas in line of duty—have spent time in Mexico, Newfoundland, Central America, Cuba, Puerto Rico, Venezuela, Colombia, Turkey, Egypt, North Africa, and most of the countries of Europe.

"Hobbies: bridge, tennis, fishing; am fairly handy with a hoe and mower around the house."

Deming's position as manager of the lamp and lighting sales division of the International General Electric Company dates from 1946. He belongs to the Illuminating Engineering Society, the International Commission on Illumination, and the Yale Engineering Society. From 1938 to 1943 he had various rôles in productions given by the Schenectady Civic Players.

He was married in South Windsor, Conn., September 8, 1928, to Katharine Tudor Green, daughter of Charles Joseph and Katharine Pelton Green. They have two children: Charles Hawthorne, born July 5, 1929, and Lynn Tudor, born February 21, 1937, both in Schenectady. Charles attended The Hotchkiss School and is now in the Bowdoin Class of 1951.

CHARLES ROBERTSON DEWHURST. Superintendent of industrial relations, Public Service Electric & Gas Company, 80 Park Place, Newark, N.J.; residence, 147 Godwin Avenue, Ridgewood, N.J.

On July 1, 1950, Dewhurst became superintendent of industrial relations for the Public Service Electric & Gas Company, with which he has been associated since graduation. He is licensed as a professional engineer in New Jersey and is a member of the National and New Jersey Societies of Professional Engineers, the New Jersey and American Gas associations, and the Masonic order. In 1944 he was master of Fidelity Lodge in Ridgewood, and for two years (1946-48) he was a trustee of the Westside Presbyterian Church, serving as president of the board in 1948. He served as treasurer of the Orpheus Club of Ridgewood from 1934 to 1940 and as its first vice-president in 1950.

"I do some singing (first tenor) with a quartette to amaze the natives around these parts," he adds. "Play some golf on occasion, which bothers the greens-keepers no end. Drive to Florida (Miami) between hurricanes to visit my brothers and sisters, who have lived there since 1921. Enjoy Scotch, bridge, and good health."

Dewhurst's marriage to Miriam E. K. Wilson, daughter of John and Hattie N. Smith Wilson, of Bridgeton, N.J., took place in Chestertown, Md., on January 2, 1928. Their daughter, Diane, who was born in Ridgewood on September 23, 1930, is a member of the Class of 1952 at Elmira College.

LIVINGSTON THOMAS DICKASON. Address, 10 Sinclair Terrace, Short Hills, N.J.

PAUL REIGNER DOTTERRER. Vice-president, trust department, Bank of New York and Fifth Avenue Bank, 48 Wall Street, New York 15, N.Y.; residence, 14 East 90th Street, New York 28.

Dotterrer doesn't mention any previous business connections, so we assume that he has been with the Bank of New York and Fifth Avenue Bank right along, with time out for service in the Naval Reserve from 1942 to September, 1945. He ranked as lieutenant commander and was assigned first to the Office of Naval Officer Procurement in Philadelphia and then, from September, 1944, until his release from service, to the Office of Procurement and Material in the Office of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

He belongs to the Naval Order of the United States, the Sons of the Revolution, the Yale Club of New York, and the Racquet Club of Philadelphia. Dotterrer's marriage to Kathleen Gray, daughter of Virginia Payne Robbins Gray, took place in Pelham, N.Y., in 1939. Her home was in New York City before she was married.

JOHN KINNEY DOUGHERTY. Executive vice-president, B. F. Gladding & Company, Inc., fishing line manufacturers, South Otselic, N.Y.; residence, 58 Sullivan Street, Cazenovia, N.Y.

Dougherty attended the Harvard Business School from 1926 to 1928, when he received the degree of M.B.A. He was in the brokerage business for the next ten years and was then with Lamneck Products, Inc., manufacturers of furnace pipe, until April, 1942. He was commissioned a lieutenant, U.S.N.R., in April, 1942, and went on active duty in June. After six months at the Naval War College in Newport, he was assigned to the Bureau of Ordnance as assistant planning officer for underwater ordnance. In November, 1944, he was assigned as war plans officer on the staff of the Commander of Minecraft, Pacific Fleet. He became aide and flag secretary to the Commander the following May, in which capacity he served until April, 1946. At the time of his release to inactive duty two months later, he ranked as commander. Dougherty served in the forward Pacific area from February, 1945, to April 1946, and was in Okinawa and the Japan occupation. He was awarded the Legion of Merit with Combat "V" and the Order of the British Empire.

In 1946 he became connected with the Lennox Furnace Company, manufacturers of residential heating equipment, and remained with them until November 13, 1950, when he became executive vice-president of B. F. Gladding & Company, Inc. His marriage to Helen Batcheller, daughter of Franklin Alden and Helen Leffingwell Batcheller, took place in New York City on September 12, 1933. Mrs. Dougherty lived in Yonkers before she was married. They have a daughter, Julie, who was born in Dayton, Ohio, on April 16, 1941.

ROBERT CUNNINGHAM DOUTHITT. Manager of industrial relations, United Engineering & Foundry Company, 948 Duquesne Way, Pittsburgh 22, Pa.; residence, 251 Beverly Road, Pittsburgh 16.

Since 1944 Douthitt has been manager of industrial relations with the United Engineering & Foundry Company of Pittsburgh, designers and builders of rolling mill and heavy machinery. We take it that he has been with the company since graduation. He reported that he is married, but didn't supply the details.

MAURICE ALOYSIUS DOYLE. Address, Apartment 528, Elks Club, Omaha, Nebr.

CLARE HILL DRAPER, JR. Address, Draper Corporation, Spartanburg, S.C.

JOHN MILTON DURAND, JR. Address, 275 Arlington Drive, Pasadena, Calif.

RICHARD DERBY ELWELL. Principal, McKinsey & Company, management consultants, 60 East 42d Street, New York, N.Y.; residence mailing address, 5 Atlantic Avenue, East Rockaway, N.Y.

Elwell's place of abode will undoubtedly arouse a good bit of envy—he lives aboard the houseboat, "Atalt," at East Rockaway, which should afford a wonderful respite from the care of management consulting. He has been principal of McKinsey & Company since 1945 and was formerly with R. H. Macy as a micro-motion study engineer; vice-president and general manager of A. J. Warm; and head of the merchandise preparation department of Montgomery Ward. He is a licensed professional engineer, has contributed numerous articles to trade publications, and belongs to the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

Elwell was a lieutenant commander in the Naval Reserve during World War II. He served in the Pacific theatre and was also officer in charge of the Materials Handling Section of the Bureau of Ships and Accounts.

He was first married in 1929 in Montreal to Ethel Olive Joseph, daughter of Henry Joseph. They were divorced in 1949. His second marriage took place in New York in 1949 to Ruth Hatch Brown, daughter of D. Brown and Ruth Hatch Brown. Her home was in Cedarhurst, N.Y., before she was married. They have two sons: Richard Derby, Jr., born in 1932, and David Henry, born in 1935, both in Long Island. Both boys went to Andover, and Richard later attended Harvard.

CHARLES JOSHUA EPSTEIN. Address, 47 West 56th Street, New York 19, N.Y.

PHILIP BERNARD EPSTEIN. Owner, Philip B. Epstein, dealer in wiping cloths, cheesecloth, and industrial textiles; business and residence address, 1209 President Street, Brooklyn 25, N.Y.

Epstein writes: "During the first six years after graduation I did quite a bit of traveling as salesman. My work carried me throughout New England, New York State, Pennsylvania, and a little beyond Washington, D.C. I hoped to get to Florida and the West Coast, but somehow the opportunity never presented itself.

"Settled in Brooklyn in 1930 and was married to a Brooklyn school teacher in 1931. Raised a family of three, two boys and a girl. We bought own home in Brooklyn six years ago. For the last fifteen years we have been spending our summers at Long Beach, Long Island—a little bathing, fishing, and lounging around. During the winter have been kept quite busy attending social functions, fraternal organization meetings, gin rummy games, and sports events.

"I am looking forward to the time, which I hope will be in the near future, when I can take about three months away from my business and do some extensive traveling throughout the country and possibly through South America, on a strictly pleasure basis."

Before establishing his present business in October, 1939, Epstein worked for several concerns in the textile industry, both in connection with production and sales. He had attended the Philadelphia Textile School during 1927. He belongs to the Yale Engineering Association, the Masonic order, and the Knights of Pythias.

Mrs. Epstein was Dorothy Glickman, daughter of Nathan and Lea Glickman. They were married on May 23, 1931, in Brooklyn, and the children were all born there, Henry M. on May 23, 1935, Richard S. on November 28, 1939, and Leonore N. on December 6, 1944. The older boy is in his third year at Erasmus Hall High School in Brooklyn.

BRITTIN CARTWRIGHT EUSTIS. Partner, Spencer Trask & Company, investment bankers and stock brokers, 25 Broad Street, New York, N.Y.; residence, Old Chester Road, Essex Fells, N.J.

Eustis reports as follows: "After graduation I worked in New Orleans for a year [with E. A. Pierce & Company] and then moved to New York. In 1930

I married Peggy Fox from New Orleans. We moved to New Jersey after the children were born. Had the usual tough time making ends meet during the Depression of the Thirties. During the war I was in the 7th Regiment, New York Guard. Joined up as a private and came out a lieutenant in Company B. Art Greer was in the outfit, but in Company L. Spent some months in War Department in Washington when the Renegotiation Section was first being set up.

"For quite a few years spent summers in Bay Head, N.J. More recently have traveled during vacation time. Hobbies are pretty much confined to golf. Usually Jim Andrew is a member of the week-end foursome. Also do a bit of trap and skeet shooting at the Essex Fells Gun Club."

In 1943 Eustis was admitted to partnership in Spencer Trask & Company, with which he became associated in 1927. Mrs. Eustis was Lucille Miriam Fox, daughter of Crichton Brooke Beresford and Berthe Marie Pitot Fox. They were married in New Orleans on October 1, 1930. Their older daughter, Peggy Brittin, who was born January 9, 1932, attended the Kimberley School and the Warrenton Country School and is now in the Class of 1952 at Bennett Junior College. The younger girl, Miriam Cartwright, born September 30, 1933, is in the graduating class at the Kimberley School.

TRACY FABIAN. Superintendent of distribution, Bridgeport division, United Illuminating Company, 1115 Broad Street, Bridgeport 1, Conn.; residence, Arden Road, Bridgeport 19.

"I went abroad with Don Gifford immediately after graduation and started in the utility business on October 1, 1926," Fabian says. "Have been in the same business ever since, with only one change in employment. Hobbies, much to my wife's dislike, have been largely civic activities, such as church, Boy Scouts, and Kiwanis, which she says keep me out too much. Have also done some photography as a side line. Built a new house in Trumbull in late 1949 and 1950, and we are now enjoying country life."

Fabian was with Charles H. Tenney & Company until March, 1936, becoming a member of the audit staff in 1928 after two years as a student engineer. He was then with the Beverly Gas & Electric Company as assistant manager until joining the United Illuminating Company in April, 1939, as assistant secretary and assistant treasurer. He has been superintendent of distribution for the Bridgeport division since May, 1946. Since 1950 Fabian has been fire commissioner in Trumbull. He has served as a vestryman and clerk of Trinity Church, Southport, and as president (1946) and lieutenant governor (1949) of the Bridgeport Kiwanis Club and has been secretary of the University Club of Bridgeport since 1943. His Boy Scout positions have ranged from scoutmaster to council president, in which capacity he is serving at present.

He was first married in June 23, 1928, in Haverhill, Mass., to Hilda Janet LaCroix, daughter of Charles LaCroix. They were divorced in 1940. His second marriage, to Marion B. Hutton, daughter of Wallace C. and Bertha Schneider Hutton, took place in New Haven on April 25, 1941. They have two children: Pamela Hutton, born March 12, 1944, in East Haven, and Wallace Tracy, born May 30, 1947, in New Haven.

GEORGE EDWARD FAHY. District traffic manager, Southern New England Telephone Company, 40 Court Street, New Britain, Conn.; residence, 97 Meadowbrook Road, West Hartford, Conn.

In 1944 Fahy was made district traffic manager of the Southern New England Telephone Company, with which he has been connected right along. His marriage to Mary Catherine O'Brien, daughter of Thomas J. and Mary Elizabeth Twohill O'Brien, took place in New Haven on April 9, 1931. They have three children, all of whom were born in New Haven, George Edward, Jr., on January 2, 1933, Thomas Brian on October 23, 1936, and Mary Elizabeth on February 27, 1938.

"The demands of the telephone business kept me strictly on the 'home front' during the war," says Fahy. "That job, coupled with being chairman of a gasoline and oil panel and also a chief air raid warden, constituted my civilian contributions.

"Young George is active in the Air Force R.O.T.C. at Yale [he is in the Class of 1954] and has his eye on making the Freshman baseball team. Tom is a good prospect for Herman Hickman in 1955, and Betsy is the champion tennis player for her age group in West Hartford. Membership in the Hartford Yale Alumni Association brings me into occasional but too infrequent contact with some of the '26 gang."

FRANK HAMPTON FAUST. Manager, trade relations, air conditioning department, General Electric Company, 5 Lawrence Street, Bloomfield, N.J.; residence, 36 Afterglow Avenue, Montclair, N.J.

After a brief period as an assistant instructor in surveying at Yale in 1926 Faust entered the employ of General Electric. Prior to 1932 he worked in various departments and divisions of the company and has since been in the air conditioning department, where his position was that of commercial engineer until 1947, manager of the commercial engineering division for the next two years, and manager of trade relations since April, 1949. In addition to special training courses with General Electric, he has studied at the Case School of Applied Science (air conditioning, 1931), the Harvard Medical School (industrial physiology, 1934), and Lehigh (automatic heating, 1937).

Faust is vice-president and a director of the Air Conditioning and Refrig-erating Machinery Association, chairman of the committee on air conditioning of the National Fire Protection Association, and a member of technical committee E on fuel oils of the American Society for Testing Materials. Since 1934 he has also been a member and representative on the joint committee for rating refrigerating equipment of the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers, and he is a fellow and director of the American Society of Refrigerating Engineers (has served in the past as chairman, vice-chairman, or member of a number of committees). He belongs to the Yale Engineering Society and the Graduates Club and is a licensed professional engineer in New York State. Faust is editor-in-chief of the Handbook of Oil Burning (Oil Heat Institute of America) and associate editor of the American Society of Refrigerating Engineers' publication, Refrigeration Applications Data Book. He contributed a chapter on "Heating, Ventilating and Air Conditioning" to Museum Buildings (American Association of Museums, 1950) and one on "Unit Air Conditioners" to the Guide of the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers and articles on "Air Conditioning" and "Heating and Ventilating" to the Encyclopaedia Britannica Books of the Year (1943-1949) and Ten Eventful Years. A number of papers which he has written have been presented before professional societies and published in their transactions.

On August 20, 1938, he was married in Paterson, N.J., to Ruth Higbid Peeples, daughter of Thomas Raymond and Abbie Higbid Peeples. Her home was formerly in Savannah. They have two daughters: Elizabeth Hampton, born September 7, 1940, in Hackensack, N.J., and Carol Abbie on October 24, 1945, in Montclair.

EDWARD PERCY FENN. Office manager, Connecticut Light & Power Company, Litchfield, Conn.; residence, Washington Depot, Conn.

Before going with the Connecticut Light & Power Company, Fenn was for three years an engineer with the Torrington (Conn.) Company. He is a director of the Litchfield County Y.M.C.A., chairman of the every member canvass committee of the First Congregational Church of Washington, and a past commander of Gage-Zumpf Post, No. 87, of the American Legion.

A member of the Army Reserve since 1926, he was on active duty from December, 1941, to January, 1946. He had two and a half years' overseas duty, mostly in New Guinea and the Philippines, with the balance in the United States. His last primary duty during the war was as assistant executive officer, Engineer Section, G.H.Q., Southwestern Pacific Area. He was awarded the Legion of Merit. At present Fenn has the rank of lieutenant colonel.

His marriage to Nan M. Replogle, daughter of Mahlon H. and Ada E. Stapleton Replogle, took place in Washington on August 18, 1939. Her home was formerly in Baltimore. They have two daughters, both of whom were born in Washington, Mary Alice on July 26, 1941, and Margaret Ann on October 9, 1946.

"This is a hard one for me," said Fenn, when he came to our final question. "We don't set the world on fire up here in the country, but on the whole we have a pretty good time taking everything into consideration. Our home, our work, and our outside activities keep us more than busy. We have but one regret, our friends of twenty-five years ago just can't seem to find Washington on the map."

ANTHONY MARINO FERRIOLO. Owner, Colonial Pharmacy, Connolly Parkway, Hamden, Conn.; residence, 80 Dorrance Street, Hamden.

From 1927 to 1939 Ferriolo was assistant manager of the Liggett Drug Store in New Haven. During the next eleven years he owned and operated the Century Pharmacy in New Haven and then bought the Colonial Pharmacy, which he is now operating. During 1949-50 he served as president of the New Haven Pharmaceutical Association. Ferriolo says that his special interests are sports and music. He was president of the Music Parents' Club of the Hamden High School during 1948-49, and he is a member of the Knights of Columbus (4th degree).

Ferriolo's marriage to Dolores Cochiarelli, daughter of John Cochiarelli, took place on September 28, 1930, in New York City. They have three children: Robert Anthony, born January 7, 1932; Carol, born June 26, 1938; and Peter Michael, born January 16, 1945. The children were all born in New Haven.

EDWARD PATRICK FEUSTEL. Plant superintendent, Acme Wire Company (insulated wire, coils, and varnish insulations), 1255 Dixwell Avenue, Hamden, Conn.; residence, 232 Sherman Avenue, New Haven, Conn.

From 1926 to 1941 Feustel was engaged as a research chemist. Since March of the latter year he has been plant superintendent of the Acme Wire Company. His hobbies are golf and duckpin bowling, and he holds office as assistant secretary of the National Duckpin Bowling Congress. He belongs also to the New Haven Rotary Club. Feustel's marriage to Anne Day, of New Haven, took place on November 14, 1931.

LEON AUGUSTUS FISH. Owner of real estate business; business and residence, 172 Post Road, Darien, Conn.

"After graduation I started in country real estate in Darien and have remained with it ever since," Fish says. "We decided on winter vacations and have usually spent them in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. I still enjoy bridge, bowling, swimming, and some occasional tennis. Whenever I have had the opportunity,

I have always enjoyed traveling: to Europe one summer, to California a few years ago, and at other times short visits to Nassau, Bermuda, etc. We lead now a somewhat quiet country life and take an interest in town affairs as time and inclination permit."

Fish belongs to the Wee Burn Country Club of Darien and the Yale Club of New York. His marriage to Muriel Strand, daughter of Olaf Theodore and Regina Logan Strand, took place in Portchester, N.Y., on January 3, 1935. Her home was formerly in Duluth. They have a daughter, Linda Marie, who was born in Norwalk, Conn., April 6, 1940.

GEORGE HAMILTON FLINN, JR. Vice-president, George H. Flinn Corporation, general contractors, 551 5th Avenue, New York 17, N.Y.; residence, North Street, Greenwich, Conn.

Flinn reports: "After graduation I spent over a year on a trip around the world, visiting over forty countries. Then went to work in the family construction business (vice-president, Booth & Flinn Company, Pittsburgh, 1927-29; vice-president, George H. Flinn Corporation of New York, since then).

"I have managed to find time over the years to go on three big game hunts in Alaska and Canada, four trips to Europe, and quite a few fishing trips in Florida. Hunting and golf have been my hobbies over the years. In 1934 I was president of the Pennsylvania Golf Association.

"The smartest move I ever made was in 1946, when, better late than never, I ended my forty-year bachelorhood and started raising a family."

And the details of his service in World War II: "Commissioned lieutenant in Naval Reserve in February, 1942. Promoted by stages to commander. Released to inactive duty, December, 1945. Spent over twenty-seven months at sea aboard various aircraft carriers. Saw action in twelve Pacific campaigns. Was wounded in action in November, 1944. Was air operations officer for over a year on U.S.S. Lexington. Ended the active phase of service aboard her in Tokyo Bay in September, 1945. Received Purple Heart and Bronze Star."

Flinn belongs to the Round Hill Club of Greenwich, the National Golf Links of Southampton, the Pine Valley Golf Club, and the Yale, Racquet and Tennis, and St. Anthony clubs of New York. His marriage to Evelyn T. Lilley Williams, of Coronado, Calif., daughter of Theodore Lilley, '10 S., and Evelyn Dutton Lilley, of Waterbury, Conn., took place in New York City on April 27, 1946. Their children were both born in Greenwich, Negley Lawrence on March 5, 1947, and Lisa Berry on April 7, 1949.

THEODORE CARPENTER FLINT. Address, 8 Simpson Road, Ardmore, Pa.

DAVID MATTHEWS FORKER, JR. Vice-president, The William Powell Company, valve manufacturers, 2525 Spring Grove Avenue, Cincinnati 22, Ohio; residence 2243 Grandin Road, Cincinnati 8.

Forker, who has been with The William Powell Company since graduation, became vice-president of the company in April, 1937. He is also treasurer and a director of the Security Storage Company and a director of the Security Rug Cleaning Company, the Model Laundry Company, and the Cincinnati Equitable Fire Insurance Company. He is serving as regional vice-president of the National Security Industrial Association, a trustee of the Children's Hospital, and a director of the Cincinnati Union Bethel and Maple Knoll. He belongs to the Rockwood Philosophical and Historical Society.

Forker was married in Cincinnati on October 18, 1934, to Margaret Elizabeth Nichols, daughter of Harold Willis and Margaret Rowe Nichols. They have a son, David Matthews, 3d, born on October 24, 1939, and a daughter, Margaret Nichols, born on April 5, 1937.

JAMES G. FOX, JR. Director of production, General Chemical Division, Allied Chemical & Dye Corporation, 40 Rector Street, New York, N.Y.; residence, 244 Gregory Avenue, West Orange, N.J.

Fox entered the General Chemical Division of the Allied Chemical & Dye Corporation from Yale and became director of production in August, 1945. The company has thirty-five plants in the United States and Canada. Fox's travels have taken him all over Canada, as well as this country, and have been too often repeated, he says.

In answer to our question as to special interests, he said, "That's easy. It's been my privilege to see at least a thousand college graduates come into my operating units, and we have taken pleasure in contributing to their guidance and development. Yale has been reasonably represented in that number. The Yale men have done well and on their own steam."

His recreations and hobbies are the usual ones—"a pretty good duplicate bridge player (just short of one master point). Golf—a duffer but a persistent perennial. Gardening—pretty successful, if we must say so, in chrysanthemum production—big beautiful ones the family is eager to wear to the Yale-Princeton games."

Fox is a member of the American Chemical Society, the American Management Association, the Downtown Athletic Club of New York, and the Rock Spring Country Club. His marriage to Edna Ziegler, daughter of Edward Lee and Ida Victoria Snyder Ziegler, took place in Valley Forge, Pa., on September 15, 1930. She formerly lived in Philadelphia. They have two children: James G., 3d, born September 25, 1931 and Phyllis Ziegler, born August 6, 1933, both in East St. Louis, Ill. James, who graduated from Valley Forge Military

"I have led a fairly sedate life, pursuing a steady path through interests in cellular physiology and medicine into psychiatry and psychoanalysis," Frank tells us. "The war provided an interlude, with two years being spent on duty in the Aleutians doing medicine and psychiatry. Photography and deep-sea fishing helped preserve equilibrium during this period. On return to civilian life in 1946, about half time became devoted to organizing courses and teaching residents in psychiatry, the rest of time being devoted to private practice. Renewed interest in private flying, took pilot's license, and flew own plane for time. Continued boating, fishing, photography, and playing bridge. Summers and vacations still are divided between island in St. Lawrence and the New Jersey coast. Continue to be a liberal Democrat politically, but with little active participation. Have been active in various psychiatric and psychoanalytic organizations and have written and lectured a good deal."

Frank took his M.S. at Yale in 1930 and his M.D. in 1931 and has, in addition, done graduate work at the Woods Hole Marine Biological Laboratory and the New York Psychiatric and Psychoanalytic institutes. He interned at Sinai Hospital in Baltimore during 1931-32 (becoming a diplomate of the National Board of Medical Examiners in the latter year) and from 1932 to 1934 was a resident at the New York State Psychiatric Institute and Hospital. Since 1934 he has been engaged in private practice, specializing in psychiatry and psychoanalysis, with the exception of the period from June, 1942, to February, 1946, when he was in the Medical Corps. He ranked as a captain at the time of entering service and as a major at the time of his release. His first assignment was as chief of the neuropsychiatric section at Camp White, Oregon (July-December, 1942), and from then until February, 1945, he was chief of the medical service and of the neuropsychiatric sections in station hospitals at Umnak, Dutch Harbor, and Shemya. He received a commendation for his work there. Frank's final assignment was at Camp Pickett, Va., where he was in charge of psychiatric training and therapy at the Convalescent Hospital.

At present he is associate psychoanalyst on the collaborating staff at the Psychoanalytic Clinic for Training and Research at Columbia, clinical professor of psychiatry at the College of Medicine at the State University Medical Center at New York, and associate visiting psychiatrist at the Kings County Hospital. At various times in the past he has been an assistant and instructor in psychiatry at Columbia, on the faculty of the Long Island College of Medicine (assistant professor, associate professor, and professor of clinical psychiatry), psychiatrist for the New York League for the Hard of Hearing, associate psychiatrist at the Psychiatric Institute, and consultant in psychiatry at the Veterans Administration Hospital, Northport, N.Y. He is the author of articles which have appeared in the Journal of Nervous and Mental Diseases and the Psychoanalytic Quarterly, of chapters in Spiegel's Progress in Neurology and Psychiatry and Hoch's Psychosexual Development in Health and Disease, and of Peace of Mind—Goal or Illusion? published as Mental Forum No. 6 Indianapolis, 1949. Frank is a member of the executive council and a fellow of the board of professional standards of the American Psychoanalytic Association, a fellow of the American Psychiatric Association, and a member of the American Orthopsychiatric Association, the Association for Psychoanalytic Medicine of New York, and the New York Yale Club. Since 1947 he has been a director of the Jewish Association for Neighborhood Centers.

He was married August 14, 1935, in Elberon, N.J., to Doris Claire Ansbacher, daughter of Louis A. and Clara Wechsler Ansbacher, of New York City. Their children are: Richard Lionel, Jr., born February 12, 1942, and Linda Claire, born May 13, 1947, both in New York.

ROBERT RALPH FRANKEL. Address, 6347 Canal Boulevard, New Orleans, La.

HARRISON CROWELL FREEMAN. Assistant treasurer, Hartford Steam Boiler Inspection & Insurance Company, 56 Prospect Street, Hartford 2, Conn.; residence 24 Mountain Road, Farmington, Conn.

Freeman writes: "I have been in businesses associated with investments since graduation, except for a year's teaching in Switzerland and subsequent travel around the Continent which was more in the nature of a lark. I have been in my present position since 1936.

"My hobbies, changed since undergraduate days, are now more in the field, as opposed to indoor sports—fishing, hunting, and an occasional round of golf. With two boys not yet in their 'teens, however, I find that baseball, football, and bicycling are also still on the agenda.

"To all our classmates a note that we live in Farmington around the corner from Miss Porter's School and ten miles from Miss Walker's in Simsbury. We hope those of you with daughters in either school will look us up when visiting the area."

Freeman's teaching experience in Switzerland was at the École de Rosey at Rolle. He was a bond salesman with Spencer Trask & Company in New York from 1927 to 1930 and with the Chemical Securities Corporation for the next two years and then moved to Springfield, Mass., to take a position in the trust investment of the Third National Bank. He gave this up in 1936, when he became connected with the investment department of the Hartford Steam Boiler Inspection & Insurance Company. Freeman is president and a director of the Enfield Construction Company and the Connecticut Investment Management Corporation, a director and member of the finance committee of the Farmington Savings Bank, and a director of the Whiton Machine Corporation. He was appointed chairman of the committee for real estate revaluation in Farmington in 1946, is at present chairman of the board of trustees of Almada Lodge (Times Farm Corporation), and has been a solicitor in the Hartford Community Chest drives. He is president of the Farmington Country Club and belongs also to the Avon Polo Club, the Hartford Gun Club, the Hartford Club, and the New York Yale Club.

His marriage to Pauline S. B. Smith, daughter of Bruce D. Smith, Yale '04, and Pauline Mackay Smith, of Colorado Springs, took place in Nantucket, Mass., on June 24, 1938. Their older boy, Harrison Crowell, Jr., was born May 28, 1940, and the younger, Joseph Starbuck, on April 8, 1943, both in Hartford.

GEORGE CLARENCE GAULT. Director, program planning section, housing division, Connecticut Public Works Department, 500 Capital Avenue, Hartford 6, Conn.; residence, 18 Florence Avenue, New Haven 13, Conn.

"My special interests have been—until World War II, Consumer Coöperatives, since then, adequate housing for young families," Gault tells us. "Study of the successful growth of consumer coöps for a century in pre-socialist Great Britain and in Scandinavia convinced me that this system of free enterprise is economic democracy paralleling our political democracy. As one of the organizers of our New Haven Food Coöp in 1935, I am happy that it still flourishes with substantial support of the Yale community.

"The shortage of housing after World War II which denied wholesome family life to millions of young families created an alarming emotional instability in both parents and children. In my opinion, this is a community problem of paramount importance. Immediately upon leaving military service, I devoted my energies to providing enough housing by new methods. First, I tried to promote coöperative housing, only to find that both government and the public were not yet ready to accept it. Because inflation had blocked private industry from filling the need, recourse to public aid was necessary. I am proud to have played a major rôle in the conception of Connecticut's unique program of 'Home Ownership,' because I believe that home owners become our most stable and responsible citizens."

Back in 1929 Gault was a chemist with the Seamless Rubber Company in New Haven, and during the next eight years he was night manager for Western Union in New Haven. From 1937 to 1942 he was with the Connecticut State Employment Service as applicant relations supervisor in Middletown, Bridgeport, and Stamford and then for two months was in the personnel division of the War Production Board in Washington. In May, 1942, he was commissioned a first lieutenant in the Army Air Force and subsequently served as a squadron, group, and field adjutant and as director of administration and personnel at air bases of the Training Command and of the 2d Air Force in Waco, Pyote, and Galveston, Texas. At the time of his separation from service in February, 1946, he ranked as lieutenant colonel.

Following his release from service, Gault became managing director of the Coöperative Homes of West Haven, Inc., and served in this capacity until 1948, when he went with the Citizens' Housing Council of Greater New Haven, Inc., as housing investigator and a member of the board of directors. From 1949 until May, 1951, he was supervisor of housing studies with the Connecticut State Housing Authority and has since held his present position. He served as treasurer and a director of the Coöperative Consumers of New Haven, Inc., from 1936 to 1939 and of the Stamford organization for the next two years, was research director of the Veterans Housing Council of Connecticut in 1948, and since 1950 has been a cubmaster of Boy Scouts. He has served on the executive committee of the State Capitol Employees Local, A.F. of L., and has been active in the New Haven chapter of the American Veterans Committee, serving as vice-chairman in 1948 and 1950 and currently as chairman. Since 1949 he has been a member of Americans for Democratic Action.

Gault was married April 5, 1928, in New Haven to Evelyn Marian Collins, daughter of Homer Fisher and Beatrice Delia Woods Collins. Their oldest son, Malcolm Douglas, who was born in New Haven, August 30, 1929, enlisted in the Air Force in March, 1949, while a student at the James Hillhouse High School in New Haven, and is now stationed in Germany. The second boy, Robert Bruce, was born in New Haven, February 20, 1931, and died in Stamford, January 30, 1940. The youngest, Gregory Fisher, was born in Stamford, January 31, 1941.

DONALD STANTON GIFFORD. Artist; residence, Eel Point Road, Nantucket, Mass.

"Sorry to be so long to answer, but having so little to say it takes twice as long"—thus Gifford. He goes on, "I have long since given up the big city (except for an occasional visit) and settled down to small town life, which leaves little of interest to tell about on that score.

"Of myself—soon after leaving in 1926, I returned to Yale to attend the Art School, etc., and have devoted myself from there on in one way or another to this field of endeavor. I can't lay any claim to any fancy prizes or titles or anything like that. Probably too old-fashioned. I still like to see something look like what it is supposed to look like. Anyhow, I find it a pleasant life, and have managed to keep most of my hair and most of the spring in the step, although I doubt very much if I would care to try to jump anything higher than a curbstone.

"However, enough of this, I will leave the space for those who have something to talk about. I only hope that, come spring '51, most if not all of us will be able to get back to New Haven to renew the old friendships and discuss at more leisure and in more detail all that has happened to us in our first twenty-five years. Until then, so long and best regards."

Before entering the Yale Art School in 1927, Gifford was connected for a time with the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company. He studied at Yale until 1930 and at the Académie Julian in Paris the following year and has since been a free-lance artist.

He was on active duty in the Naval Reserve from March, 1942, to February, 1946. He was in charge of a training ship for officers at first and later for the most part served as an anti-submarine warfare specialist. He returned to inactive duty with the rank of lieutenant commander. Gifford says that he has been connected with the usual social and relief organizations common to small towns, such as hospital drives, Boys' Club, Chamber of Commerce (before it folded!), etc. He is still a bachelor.

SEBASTIAN GIULIANO. Address, 468 Franklin Avenue, Hartford, Conn.

STANLEY GILL. District manager, Taylor Forge & Pipe Works, 417 City National Bank Building, Houston, Texas; residence, 2420 Brentwood Drive, Houston 19.

Gill sent us the following summary covering the period since graduation: "Assistant football coach, Yale Freshmen, fall 1926 and 1927; sales engineer for Ingersoll-Rand Company, 1927-31; teacher—football coach—truck driver—stone setter—farmer—warehouse supervisor, 1931-1934; sales engineer, Taylor Forge & Pipe Works, New York City, 1934-47; district manager in Houston since April, 1947."

During 1941-42, while living in New Jersey, Gill served on the Mendham Township School Board. He was president of the Brookside Rod and Gun Club during 1944-45 and is at present a member of the Engineers Club of Houston, the American Society of Naval Engineers, the American Welding Society, and the New York Yale Club. He says that he is an amateur artist—exhibitions on display at all times at Houston home address.

Gill's marriage to Bernice Brown, daughter of John and Caroline Walker Brown, took place in Nyack, N.Y., on February 10, 1934. Her home was formerly in Piermont, N.Y. They have three daughters: Carol, born May 21, 1935, in New York City, Judith on February 26, 1937, in New York, and Susan on May 24, 1942, in Morristown, N.J. Carol is a Sophomore at the Kinkaid Preparatory School in Houston and Judy in junior high there.

ARTHUR SHIRLEY GLEASON. Salesman, Yale & Towne Manufacturing Company, 2534 North Broad Street, Philadelphia 32, Pa.; residence, 1171 Edge Hill Road, Abington, Pa.

"During the first two years out of college I did not stay in one job over six months," Gleason tells us. "Had a bad case of 'itching feet' and toured the U.S.A., ending up in Ogden, Utah, in the fall of 1927. It was while working at the Amalgamated Sugar Company there that I met the future Mrs. Gleason, of Kaysville, Utah, who, believe it or not, did not change her name when she married! Got back East in the fall of 1928 and started working at Yale & Towne in Stamford, Conn. Our material handling division was moved to Philadelphia in 1931. In 1932 I left our engineering department to go into sales and have been selling Yale trucks ever since! My highest hope is to have Jack Arthur Gleason be Yale 1959!

Gleason's first business connection was with Mack Trucks, Inc., at Allentown, Pa., and he was later with the Bailey Meter Company at Fullerton, Pa. He belongs to the Philadelphia chapter of the American Society of Material Handling Engineers. His marriage to Claire Gleason, whose parents are Sumner and Edith Crawford Gleason, took place in Denver, Colo., on May 29, 1930. Their daughter, Eleanor Louise (nickname Sally Lou), who was born November 1, 1933, is graduating from the Abington High School this June and will enter Randolph Macon Woman's College with the Class of 1955. Jack Arthur, born November 12, 1936, is now in junior high.

OLIVER PERRY GOKAY. Comptroller, Cleveland Graphite Bronze Company (automotive parts), 17000 St. Clair Avenue, Cleveland 10, Ohio; residence, 3068 Livingston Road, Cleveland 20.

Gokay was with the International Telephone & Telegraph Corporation from 1926 to 1930 and with Price, Waterhouse & Company for the next eleven years, giving up this connection in November, 1941, when he went on active duty in the Army. He served in the North Atlantic Engineer Division until January, 1943, and from August, 1944, to December, 1945, was in the Pacific—in Hawaii, Leyte, Okinawa, and Korea. He was released from active duty in 1946 and now ranks as a lieutenant colonel in the Civil Engineer Corps of the Organized Reserve, of which he first became a member in 1926.

Gokay went with the Cleveland Graphic Bronze Company as assistant comptroller in 1946, after a brief connection with Management Planning, Inc., and was made comptroller in April, 1948. He became a C.P.A. in Ver-

Gokay's marriage to Margaret Lucille Whitehead, daughter of Edward Dennis and Margaret Cecilia Bigane Whitehead, took place in Cincinnati, Ohio, on June 21, 1947. Her home was formerly in Cleveland, where their son, Robert Lewis, was born on April 19, 1948.

GEORGE SAMUEL GOLDMAN. Physician; office and residence, 333 East 50th Street, New York 22, N.Y.

After graduating from the Yale Medical School in 1929, Goldman was an interne at the Babies and Children's Hospital in Cleveland and a resident in psychiatry at the Boston Psychopathic Hospital. He continued his training at the New York Psychoanalytic Institute from 1931 to 1938 (remaining there as associate psychiatrist for four more years) and during this period was associate psychiatrist at Stony Lodge, Ossining, N.Y., clinical assistant in the psychiatric and neurological clinics at Mt. Sinai Hospital in New York (later research assistant), and associate director of the Hillside Hospital, Glen Oaks, N.Y. (subsequently attending psychiatrist).

Since 1935 Goldman has been engaged in the private practice of psychiatry and psychoanalysis in New York, except for the war period. At present he is associate attending psychoanalyst at the Psychoanalytic Clinic for Training and Research at Columbia and associate in psychiatry at the College of Physicians and Surgeons. In the past he has been a psychiatric consultant to various social agencies in New York, a faculty member of the New York Psychoanalytic Institute, a member of the faculty at the Long Island College of Medicine, and attending neuropsychiatrist at the Veterans Administration Hospital at Northport. He has contributed a number of articles to professional journals (two of which were written in collaboration with other doctors); these have appeared in the American Journal of Physiology, the Psychoanalytic Quarterly, the American Journal of Orthopsychiatry and Psychiatry. He has also contributed to Diseases of the Nervous System, published in 1941, the Bulletin of the U.S. Army Medical Department for 1946, is the co-author of chapters in volumes 4 and 6 of Progress in Neurology and Psychiatry and the author of Real and Imaginary Illness (New York State Committee on Mental Hygiene, 1940) and Notes Concerning Civilian Morale and Panic (New York City Committee on Mental Hygiene, 1942). Goldman belongs to the American and New York County Medical associations, the American Psychiatric Association, the American Psychoanalytic Association, the Association for Psychoanalytic Medicine, the New York Society for Clinical Psychiatry, the Schilder Society for Psychotherapy and Psychopathology, the American Group Therapy Association, the National Committee for Mental Hygiene, and the New York Academy of Medicine.

He went on active duty as a captain in the Medical Corps in September, 1942, and was assigned as Army psychiatrist to organize and direct a mental hygiene consultation service in the Infantry Replacement Training Center, Camp Wheeler, Ga. He served in this capacity at that post and at Fort Lee, Va., until March, 1945. He was then transferred to the department of psychiatry in the Office of the Surgeon General in Washington and until his discharge in July, 1946, was in charge of the psychiatric film program of the Army. He supervised and collaborated in the production of two psychiatric films, "Shades of Gray" and "Let There Be Light," receiving a citation from the Surgeon General and the Army Commendation Medal for the latter. He was discharged with the rank of lieutenant colonel and during the next three years served as consultant to the Surgeon General.

Goldman was married June 11, 1941, in New York City to Jeanne Gordon Rosenbluth, daughter of Morris and Kathryn Gordon Rosenbluth. Their daughter, Kathryn Louise, was born March 15, 1946, in New York.

FRANKLIN IRVINE GREENE. President, Alexander Grant's Sons, hardware distributors, 119 East Washington Street, Syracuse 2, N.Y.; residence, 4 Brattle Road, Syracuse 3.

Greene reports: "After marrying the boss' daughter, subject settled down to a life of luxury by working 50-60 hours a week at the hardware business, which fortunately prospered. A happy marriage produced two children, who take after the old man, good in looks, mediocre in mental brilliance, and with a tendency towards the same allergy. After shots, pills, and potions for twenty years this allergy had one good result, forcing me to buy a summer place in South Bristol, Maine, where I am now compelled to spend two months each summer without a guilty conscience, playing tennis, sailing, and such.

"Over a period of years I have had to pro-rate my spare time to gardening in the spring, tennis in summer, bird hunting in the fall, and skiing in winter, besides operating a full size basement workshop.

"A fairly average and dull life, but lots of fun.

"I regret losing contact with classmates, as I have never been in shape during reunion to get back—asthma is a vicious affair."

Before joining Alexander Grant's Sons in 1929, Greene was for three years a research chemist with the Atmospheric Nitrogen Corporation. He has been president of the hardware company since 1940. The date of his marriage to Eleanor M. Grant, which took place in Syracuse, was October 12, 1929. She is the daughter of Alexander R. and Franc Moulton Grant. The children were both born in Syracuse, Alexander Grant on December 6, 1931, and Nancy Cameron on August 29, 1934. Alexander, who is a Freshman at Middlebury, prepared for college at Andover. Nancy is in the Class of 1951 at Chatham Hall.

ARTHUR FURBER GREER. Assistant United States manager, Ocean Accident & Guarantee Corporation, Ltd., and vice-president, Columbia Casualty Company, 1 Park Avenue, New York 16, N.Y.; residence, Bedford Four Corners, R.F.D. 1, Mt. Kisco, N.Y.

Here's Greer's story: "Upon graduation I embarked on an investment banking career with Lee Higginson & Company. The starting pay was small, but it was a great training school, with promise of finding the pot of gold after a period of years. Unfortunately, the firm was the bankers for that plausible but crooked international financier, Ivar Krueger. When his machinations came to light in 1932, Lee Higginson closed the doors, and instead of having a pot of gold, I didn't even have a pot. In the meantime I had married a St. Louis gal, Alice Chapman, in 1931 and by virtue (and I stress that word) of the operations of the laws of nature, we were about to welcome our first born, Jay, in August, 1932. Fortunately for me, I was offered a job with the successor corporation to Lee Higginson, which was formed shortly after the old firm had to close its doors. Job is the right description for it, as they put me to work selling securities, at the bottom of the 1932 Depression, to their old customers who had lost their collective shirts. However, it was excellent experience and enabled me to keep both my family and the wolf reasonably well fed during that trying time. In 1933 I went with Cassatt & Company, who provided struggling security peddlers with the additional facilities of a membership in the New York Stock Exchange. This change was made possible through the good offices of Charles Watson, Yale '27, who was then a partner in Cassatt & Company. In January, 1934, I was sprung from the confines of Wall Street, when I was offered the position of investment officer of the fire and casualty insurance company group of the Commercial Union Assurance Company, Ltd. It was a most interesting job, made even more pleasant because a grand guy, Thatcher M. Brown, Yale '97, was chairman of our finance committee. I remained in that position until August, 1947, at which point I was placed in the second administrative job running our two casualty companies, the Ocean Accident & Guarantee Corporation, Ltd., and Columbia Casualty Company. (adv.)

"In the intervening years, virtue had again reared its ugly head, and Peter Greer joined the clan in January, 1935.

"During the war years Uncle Sam left me alone. My small contribution to that unpleasantness was as vice-chairman of the Pound Ridge (N.Y.) Civil Defense Unit, four years in the 7th Regiment, New York Guard, and teaching numerous civil defense units around Stamford, Bedford, South Salem, and Pound Ridge how to shoot a rifle. I am still active in this latter activity and not only get a great deal of personal enjoyment out of it, but am glad to be able to contribute to the knowledge of residents of our community in how to handle firearms properly and safely.

"My home is in Bedford, where I am not far distant from such 1926 notables as George Flinn, Os Lord, Ed Hogan, Bates McKee, Charlie Willard, Dave Gregg, Bill Bullock, Herb Simmons, and numerous others, as well as such characters as Bill Chappell and Bill Lawrence of that 1927 outfit.

"My older son, Jay, is a Freshman at Yale, after graduating from Taft in 1950. He not only enjoys Yale, but also finds those surrounding female institutions of higher learning most intriguing. My younger offspring, Peter, is in his second year at Taft and is hopeful of becoming a member of Yale 1957.

"Life has not done badly by me during the past twenty-five years—swell family, interesting job, good health, and nothing to fear except the deducts on my salary check."

Greer is assistant United States manager of four firms in addition to the two mentioned above—the Commercial Union Assurance Company, Ltd., the Palatine Insurance Company, Ltd., the Union Assurance Society, Ltd., and the British General Insurance Company, Ltd. Since 1948 he has been a member of the Boy Scout Council in northern Westchester County. Aside from voting regularly, he has had no political activity other than a connection with the Willkie campaign in Pound Ridge. He belongs to the New York Yale Club. January 20, 1931, was the date of his marriage (in St. Louis) to Alice Louise Chapman, daughter of Benjamin Gaines Chapman, Jr., and Lucile Cary Campbell Chapman. The boys were both born in New York, James Alexander, 2d, on August 18, 1932, and Peter Chapman on January 26, 1935.

DAVID GREGG, JR. General counsel, Buckeye Pipe Line Company, Room 2200, 30 Broad Street, New York 4, N.Y.; residence, 11 Meadowbrook Road, Darien, Conn.

For two years after graduating from the Harvard Law School in 1929, Gregg was with the New York law firm of Breed, Abbott & Morgan. In 1930 he became a lawyer for the Buckeye Pipe Company (common carrier transportation of oil by pipe line in the states of New York, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Ohio, and Pennsylvania) and its affiliates and subsidiaries and in 1948 was appointed general counsel. He is a director of the company, as well as of the Indiana Pipe Line Company, the Northern Pipe Line Company, Brett, Wyckoff, Potter, Hamilton, Inc., and the Family Service Fund, and a trustee of the Darien Home Bank & Trust Company. From 1941 to 1944 he was treasurer of the Darien Republican Town Committee and during the next three years was a member and chairman of the Darien Charter Commission. He is on the Darien Boy Scout Council and in 1949 acted as chairman of its fund drive.

The Class certainly owes a debt of gratitude to Gregg for his service as secretary of '26 S. He is vice-president of the Yale Association of Class Secretaries and a member of the Alumni Board's executive committee. He belongs to the New York Yale Club and the Tokeneke Club of Darien.

He was married November 6, 1930, in New York City, to Virginia Wyckoff, daughter of Walter C. and Josephine Watson Wyckoff. They have two sons: David, 3d, born January 29, 1933, in New York, and Arthur Watson, born November 6, 1938, in Norwalk. The older boy is entering Yale from Deerfield Academy with the Class of 1955.

"Business life has kept me from indulging in avocations to the extent desired; however, on a long winter's night a good book before an open fire has sometimes been my good fortune," says Gregg. "Now that a den-library has been recently added to our home, this enjoyment will, I hope, be more frequent. The field of active participation in sports is more gratifying to me than being an onlooker—for instance, the strenuous though losing battle against Ben Cutler a few years back in our tennis finals; also arduous evenings of badminton with Jack North, Hal Deming, and Bill Bullock in the Darien High School gymnasium; then again swinging an axe on a frosty week-end in my woods with a group of amateur lumbermen who nurse their aches on Monday in their sedentary occupations. Last summer my avocation was a once-in-a-generation trip to Europe.

"As for satisfaction, well, my family has brought me untold pleasure, as have my business associations in a congenial working atmosphere. My regrets are few, concerned primarily with professional politicians who defeated a charter which a few of us amateur politicians drafted and had approved by the Connecticut Legislature."

WILLIAM CARLETON GRUSS. Engaged in estate administration and management; residence, 145 Wisteria Drive, Dayton 9, Ohio.

During 1926-27 Gruss was a factory representative for the Servel Corporation (mechanical refrigeration) in San Francisco and the following year represented an automobile distributor. He was in the investment banking business from 1929 to 1942, being connected with the N. S. Talbott Company for the first two years of this period, and from 1942 to 1946 was a procurement contract negotiator for the U.S. Signal Corps and Air Force. Since then he has been engaged as an administrator and/or consultant in the settlement of estates and their resultant management and has also been handling investments on his own account.

Gruss was married April 8, 1925, in New York City to Elva Marie Blackwell, daughter of William L. and Laura Oletta Jacobs Blackwell. They have two children: Suzanne Carleton, born June 25, 1928, and William Carleton, Jr., July 20, 1930, both in Dayton. Suzanne spent two years at Ohio

State University with the Class of 1950 and then went to the Katharine Gibbs School in Boston, where she graduated in 1949. Her marriage to Richard Thomas Blomquist took place in Dayton, September 16, 1950; he is completing his Senior year at Ohio State. William, Jr., attended Kentucky Military Institute from 1945 to 1947, graduated from the Oakwood High School in Dayton in 1949, and was then in the Class of 1953 at Ohio State for a while.

WILLIAM BALDWIN FLETCHER HALL. President, General Industries, Inc. (pre-fabrication), 3033 Wayne Trace, Fort Wayne, Ind.; residence, 1241 West Sherwood Terrace, Fort Wayne.

From Hall: "After graduation Graham Hopkins ('26 Ac) and I returned to the Lincoln Life Agency School, where we were alleged to have learned the fine art of persuading life insurance applicants to put their name on the dotted line. From there, I was shipped to the oil fields of Texas, where the Boerger Field boom was at its height and any one could have sold fans to Eskimos, which probably accounts for a modicum of success in the underwriting field. However, in 1927 a guy named Lindbergh flew the ocean, and I was immediately bitten by the bug to zoom up to the dangerous trails to fame and fortune, much to disappointment of my father who agreed to the whole idea only if I would go back to post-graduate work in aeronautical engineering and pay for my own flight training. (He seemed to feel that this would be a reasonably safe barrier between me and very much flight time.) I returned to the University of Michigan, became a member of the Zeta Psi fraternity, and obtained a master's degree in aero (mirabile dictu), in addition to a considerable amount of familiarization work with the rum-running trade along the Detroit River.

"From there to Pensacola, Fla., as a seaman 2/c, obtaining wings in June, 1930, by dint of much hard work and liberal application of Shinny, the Florida moonshine firewater of the Prohibition era, and from there to the Fleet as an observation wing pilot on the flagship Texas, which fortunately put to sea very seldom. I spent a very pleasant two months observing war maneuvers in Panama, mostly from the bar and swimming pool at the Union Club. After a year of this, I was ready to show the world my genius at business and finance and founded a flying service in Fort Wayne, which during the boom times of 1932 promptly demonstrated to me that the greatest danger in aviation was starvation. In the midst of this, I was bitten by the lovebug and ended up on a honeymoon, where we got pleasantly stranded completely without funds in Fargo, N.Dak., the day the banks closed.

"Ten years and three kids later finds our hero a staid mortgage banker heading up the mortgage loan department of Lincoln Life Insurance Company and also chairman of the Fort Wayne Housing Authority, where for the cause of private capital system we put on a 50-unit pre-fabricated house project to demonstrate how private capital can build public housing without subsidies to rent for $2.50 a week per house. This seemed to achieve some national attention, not only in Life Magazine and Reader's Digest, but also with a lot more heat than light from the New Republic and A.F. of L. publications. Next came the war, when I reinstated my wings and for the first time since 1926 crossed paths on numerous occasions with some of the old gang, both in the Training Command at Jacksonville and at Pearl Harbor and points west.

"Since hostilities, I have followed the inspiration of the Housing Authority experiment, redesigning it for commercial use, and General Industries, small but 'mine all mine,' is now shipping houses as far as Colorado and the East Coast and selling from $6,000 up. Just recently, put about four of them together and built one for myself and family, which now includes the original three kids and Michael William, the post-war crop. I hope all hands will consider this an invitation to drop in and see us whenever they can."

The flying service of which Hall was president from 1930 to 1932 was called the Aereco Flying Service and combined commercial aviation with student instruction. For some time before leaving the Lincoln National Life Insurance Company in 1942, he had been second vice-president of the company. He gave us the following details of his service in World War II: "Returned to duty as a lieutenant, U.S.N.R., in June, 1942. Was assigned to Admiral A. B. Cook's staff at the N.A.O.T.C., N.S., Jacksonville, Fla. In 1943, as lieutenant commander, was training officer at the Naval Air Gunner's School, Jacksonville (approximately 3,000 men in training). In 1944 on staff of Admiral E. L. Guenther, COMAIRPAC, in the Pacific forward areas, flying chiefly carrier type and small twin-engine type, with active duty at Guam, Saipan, Tinian, and Okinawa. At the end of hostilities returned to inactive status with the rank of commander."

Hall's marriage to Margaret Sarah Niezer, daughter of Charles M. and Rose Fox Niezer, took place at Fort Wayne, December 26, 1931. The oldest boy, Peter Vincent, born April 14, 1934 in Fort Wayne, is the Class of 1953 at Lake Forest Academy. The other children were also born in Fort Wayne, Ann on June 4, 1937, Charles Niezer on March 8, 1940, and Michael William on March 20, 1947.

MORRIS ALBERT HANKIN. Physician, 43 Trumbull Street, New Haven, Conn.; residence 1620 Boulevard, New Haven.

Hankin reports as follows: "After graduation I took a job as bacteriologist at the Lederle Antitoxin Laboratory, doing research work in anaerobic organisms. After three years there, I went to the Long Island College of Medicine to get my M.D. While there, I was head of my fraternity of Phi Delta Epsilon. Then came back to New Haven to be with my wife and daughter and to take an internship at Grace Hospital. Am now practicing internal medicine and enjoy it very much. I have been very active and interested in the Medical Society at the county level.

"I enjoy travel and have been all over this country—roaming by car. Was collecting stamps for a while and was on the board of governors of the New Haven Philatelic Society. In 1939 had to undergo some surgery on my leg and ankle for spurs, and this hobby was a godsend. Joined the Woodbridge Country Club three years ago and have been its secretary for the past three years. My golf has improved a lot too. Just lately have started to play duplicate bridge, which occupies a lot of time."

Hankin served on the board of governors of the County Medical Society from 1948 to 1950 and in 1949 was chairman of the membership committee and of the board of governors of the New Haven Medical Society. He is also a member of the State Medical Society and a fellow of the American Medical Association.

Mrs. Hankin, whose maiden name was Sadie Leaff, is the daughter of Aaron and Bertha Majakousky Leaff, of New Haven. They were married in New York City on March 7, 1929, and their daughter, Joan Elin, was born in New Haven on May 18, 1930. She graduated from the Day School in New Haven in 1948 and is now a Junior at Flora Stone Mather College at Western Reserve University.

WILLIAM HUGER HARDIE. In New York sales department, Foster Wheeler Corporation, manufacturers of steam generators, condensers, heaters, cooling towers, oil refineries, etc., 165 Broadway, New York 6, N.Y.; residence, 7 Chestnut Place, Short Hills, N.J.

Since Hardie doesn't mention any previous business connections, we assume that he has been with Foster Wheeler right along since graduation. He is a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, the Downtown Athletic and Yale clubs of New York, the Baltusrol Golf Club, and the University Club of Washington.

His marriage to Jessie Edson Hendrick, daughter of Frank and Katharine Mumford Hendrick, of Mountain Lakes, N.J., took place in New York on July 8, 1932. Their children are: William Huger, Jr., born March 1, 1938, and Robin Mumford on April 7, 1942, both in New York.

Hardie writes: "The traveling I have done has been a bit extensive, running from Maine to Texas and from New York to California in this country, touching all but about two states, mainly due to business. My foreign travel includes visits to most of the Canadian provinces, Bermuda, and northern Mexico. My longest foreign trip was when my wife and I took our own car to Europe, spending some time in northern Africa and seeing mostly all of Sicily and Italy. We spent eight months in France, six of which were in the Villa Beau Soliel in Cannes (incidentally, that place is everything they say it is). We then spent a little over four months in the British Isles. The second trip to Europe consisted of a month's vacation in England.

"As far as regrets are concerned, the only thing I can think of now is that I wasn't born rich."

ALBERT SPEAR HARRIS. With Imperial Linens, Inc. (decorative linens), 302 5th Avenue, New York, N.Y.; residence, 350 East 77th Street, New York.

Harris has been with the above firm for some years. He was a member of the New York Curb Exchange from 1930 to 1940 and during the first seven years of this period was a partner in the New York Stock Exchange firm of W. J. Wollman & Company.

His marriage to Marion T. Ross took place in New York on June 2, 1934. She is the daughter of Edwin L. and Edna C. Krower Ross.

CLEMENT MADISON HARTLEY, JR. Address, Vacaville, Calif.

AUGUSTUS HASBROUCK. Chief design engineer, Pratt & Whitney Aircraft Division, United Aircraft Corporation, East Hartford, Conn.; residence, Millbrook Road, R.F.D. 2, Middletown, Conn.

"In the past twenty-five years I have led a life that could be considered dull," says Hasbrouck. [But just take a look at paragraph four.] He goes on, "The first two years following graduation were spent in New York City and consisted mostly in working, commuting long distances, and sleeping.

"I then joined Leo Kimball, a former instructor at Mason Laboratory, in designing and building a radial aircraft engine in Naugatuck, Conn. We carried this project through to the point of obtaining an Approved Type Certificate (No. 34) from the Government and were ready to start manufacture when we were hit by the financial collapse of 1929. The project was finally abandoned in 1931.

"During this latter period the girl who is now my wife was taking flying lessons at the field from which we flew our test airplanes. We were married three weeks before the engine project was abandoned.

"My wife is interested in farming and livestock, and I have learned by actual experience in these twenty years about horses, cattle, sheep, goats, pigs, dogs, including the best English mastiff in the country for 1950, common and Burmese cats, weasels, ferrets, rabbits, woodchucks, pigeons, chickens, ducks, geese, pheasants, and a South American ocelot. I have also learned about the preparation of land for crops, grass silage, corn storage, the danger of putting green hay in a barn, the temperature reached by the human body while mowing away hay in a barn in midsummer, etc. We now have a farm of about 100 acres on which a great deal of this knowledge has been gained. With this background of experience, we plan to concentrate our efforts on sheep, with about 100 head as our objective.

"While gaining experience in rural life, I have continued to work in an engineering capacity. At present I am in charge of a group of about one hundred people engaged in the design of aircraft engines for Pratt & Whitney Aircraft. The projects on which we work are of a classified nature and cannot be named or discussed.

"For many years I have had a desire to build a small, light car. It has never been forthcoming, but two years ago I designed and built a small tractor for my son. It has a two-cylinder, 10 H.P. engine and nine speeds forward. This is my nearest approach to an ambition of many years."

Additional occupational data: student engineer, Mack Trucks, 1926-27; design engineer, Kimball Aircraft, 1927-31; design engineer, Fuel Development Corporation, 1931-34; experimental engineer, Indian Motorcycle Company, 1934-39; designer, Pratt & Whitney Aircraft, 1939-43; chief design engineer since then.

Mrs. Hasbrouck's maiden name was Melissa Church Meadowcroft. She is the daughter of Frederick Herbert and Elizabeth Ingals Meadowcroft, and they were married in Guilford, Conn., on November 2, 1931. Their son, Frederick Kent, was born at Stafford Springs, Conn., January 14, 1937.

JOHN STEPHEN HASBROUCK. Chief design engineer, Pratt & Whitney Aircraft Division, United Aircraft Corporation, East Hartford, Conn.; residence, 2190 Main Street, Glastonbury, Conn.

"The first few years after graduation were what might be called uneventful," says Hasbrouck. "The usual activities connected with raising a family constituted the major program. This, of course, is nothing new to most people, I am sure. During the years 1935 and 1936, however, I spent a great deal of time traveling around the country on the airlines for P & W Aircraft. Several trips to the West Coast were included, but by far the most interesting was the flight from Miami to San Francisco via Mexico on the Pan American Clipper plane that was used to chart the mail route to Hawaii. So far as business activities are concerned, I have been trying to add my small bit to the improvement of aircraft power plants for the past twenty-one years.

"Hobbies have included a variety of things, including boats, automobiles, radio, printing, house design, and home workshop arts. 'A jack of all trades, a master of none' might be a fair statement along these lines. However, all have proved interesting and instructive, and I do not regret the time spent. I guess when one stops learning and says, 'There are no more worlds to conquer,' he might as well give up this life. During the past five years my son and I have been building a cabin in the hills of Vermont. With no outside help, we have still managed one room a year working during vacations and week-ends. Lots of fun! I feel that this project has added much to the family's way of life. A trip to California by car last year also added much to the family pleasure, especially since it brought us two new members—a son-in-law and a daughter-in-law.

"With the acquisition of years, glasses for reading, etc., the more strenuous activities are of necessity somewhat curtailed. However, this is a period where good books and further study offer much pleasure. During the past few years we have (including the younger members of the clan) taken up the study of world religions and philosophies, both ancient and modern, in an attempt to arrive at a fuller understanding of life and its purpose. We feel that through a more complete understanding of peoples and their way of thinking the solution to a better world will be forthcoming. This has been a most interesting study so far, and I hope to continue it for many years to come. Perhaps with the subjugation of the illusions of 'Self' to a grander over-all picture one may find true contentment. I aim to try!"

Before going with Pratt & Whitney in 1929, Hasbrouck had been connected successively with the test departments of the Mack Truck Company, the Texas Oil Company, and the City of New York, engaged in subway design. In his position as chief design engineer with Pratt & Whitney [prior to 1949 he had been successively a detailer, designer, and design project engineer], his time is devoted to work on piston and turbo-prop. type engines. From 1935 to 1943 he had the additional job of instructor in mechanical and descriptive geometry at the evening school of Hillyer Junior College in Hartford.

Mrs. Hasbrouck was Constance Marian Gray, daughter of Arthur Henry and Alice Townsend Gray; they were married in New York City, August 8, 1924. Their children are: John Stephen, Jr., born August 6, 1926, in New York, Alice Townsend on April 27, 1929, also in New York, and Patricia Helen on March 25, 1933, in Manchester, Conn. There was a joint wedding on January 6, 1950, in Las Vegas, Nev., when John, Jr., married Barbara Comerford and Alice married Raymond Comerford, of Pasadena. Hasbrouck says that two new members of the family are expected in 1951. John, Jr., graduated from Avon Old Farms in 1944 and Alice from Green Mountain Junior College in 1949. Patricia is a Senior at the Glastonbury High School.

GERALD MORRIS HASTINGS. Staff engineer, audio-video group, National Broadcasting Company, Inc., 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York 20, N.Y.; residence, 79 Elizabeth Street, Oradell, N.J.

Hastings, who was an accountant with the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company during 1926-27, worked for a builder the following year and has since been an engineer with the National Broadcasting Company. His position as staff engineer in the audio-video group dates from February, 1948. Hastings took graduate work in electronics at the Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute in 1945 and at Stevens Institute in 1947. He is a member of the Audio Engineering Society. He has served on the Oradell Board of Education since 1948 and during 1950 held office as vice-president.

Hastings writes: "Played banjo professionally while in college and for a few years thereafter, then dropped it until last few years, when I have been participating in several local shows, such as minstrel, cowboy, musical, etc. Most of my traveling has been done in connection with the building of broadcasting studios and associated equipment. This required a stay of several months in various cities, including Chicago, Cleveland, Washington, and Hollywood. The trip to Hollywood was made by car, and we were able to spend a little time at many points of interest along the way, viz., Boulder Dam, Grand Cañon, Estes Park, Painted Desert, Garden of the Gods, Pike's Peak, etc. A few short trips of a few days' duration were made to Harrisburg, Va., Portland, Augusta, and Bangor, Maine, and Eau Claire, Wausau, and Marinette, Wis., to add radio stations to the network.

"As for recreations, hobbies, etc., they are: an average game of golf, 95 to 105; fresh water fishing; badminton; skiing and ice skating; photography—mostly movies of family; raised mink, 1939 to 1942—discontinued because of World War II; Boy Scouts—member of committee since 1944, chairman in 1947, explorer leader, 1950; model airplanes—help my boys with their models and flights."

Hastings' marriage to Mildred Zimmerman, daughter of Philip and Minnie Weiss Zimmerman, of New York City and Woodmont, Conn., took place in New York on May 25, 1929. They have three sons: James L., born January 18, 1932, in Flushing, N.Y.; Stephen G., born May 11, 1934, in Norwalk, Conn.; and Peter J., born July 1, 1941, in Peekskill. The oldest boy graduated from Mt. Hermon in 1950 and then entered the Freshman class at Middlebury. Stephen is a Senior at the Dwight Morrow High School.

THOMAS CARMICHAEL HAYDOCK. Partner, Haydock & Company, investment counsel, 1201 First National Bank Building, Cincinnati 2, Ohio; residence, Shawnee Run Road, Indian Hill, Cincinnati 27.

Upon graduating from Yale, Haydock became connected with the investment counsel firm of Haydock & Company and in 1931 was admitted as a partner. He is a director of Crosby Motors, Inc., and the Metal Specialties Company and is serving on the advisory committee of the Y.W.C.A. In 1949 he was elected a councilman of Indian Hill Village. Haydock says that his hobbies are hunting and fishing when he gets time and week-end golf his recreation.

He was first married June 26, 1926, in Cincinnati to Jeanie Ross Galt, daughter of William and Agnes Jones Galt. They were divorced in 1934. His second marriage, to Margaret Scott Stoll Lillard, of Cincinnati, took place in Lexington, Ky., on May 17, 1935. She is the daughter of John G. and Helen Scott Stoll, of Lexington. Haydock has three children: George Sewell, 2d, born August 17, 1928, Thomas Carmichael, Jr., on February 18, 1932, and Nancy Ross on March 18, 1933, all in Cincinnati. George, who entered the Army last November, received his preparatory education at the Episcopal High School and subsequently attended Brown and the University of Cincinnati for a year each. Thomas has been at the Gow School for the past four years.

REGINALD RICHARD SANFORD HAYES. President, Packard Sales & Service, 350 George Street, New Haven, Conn.; residence, 31 Emerson Street, New Haven.

Hayes has been president of Packard Sales & Service, dealers in new Packard cars, since February 1, 1927. His marriage to Josephine Rooney took place in Bridgeport, Conn., on February 20, 1928. They have three children: Reginald, Jr., born in December, 1931, Mary Lou in November, 1934, and Margaret Ann in September, 1930. After finishing high school, Reginald, Jr., went to The Choate School and is now associated with his father in business. Margaret Ann was married some time ago and has a little girl, Linda, born in June, 1947.

FRANK HILL HEDGES, JR. Physician, 108 Scott Street, Joliet, Ill.; residence, 1211 Glenwood Avenue, Joliet.

Hedges sent us the following summary; "Following graduation I had four years of medical school at Columbia in New York, then five years at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore. Subsequent to the period in Baltimore, practiced for three years in Richmond, Va., and then moved to Joliet. Spent four years in the Army in World War II—in the Medical Corps, with service in Australia and New Guinea, assigned to a task force landing field hospital. Retired in 1946 for disability with the rank of major and returned to Joliet. Hobbies and recreations include mostly hunting and fishing."

Hedges, whose specialty is orthopedic surgery, was certified by the American Board of Orthopedic Surgery in 1940. He is a member of the Chicago Orthopedic Society, the Will-Grundy County Medical Society, and the Rotary, Elks, Rivals, University, and Country clubs in Joliet.

He was married in Baltimore in June 1935, to Dorothy Catherine Tiley. They have two sons: Frank Hill, 3d, who was born in Richmond in January, 1937, and James Rowland, born in Joliet in February, 1939.

FRANCISCO JOSÉ HENARES. Member, Maruri y Henares, architects San Rafael 818, Havana, Cuba; residence, Avenue Florencia y Loma, Reparto Havana Biltmore, Havana.

Henares writes: "After graduation in 1926 I went to the Yale School of the Fine Arts, graduating in 1928. For several months visited England, Belgium, France, Italy, Switzerland, and Spain. Came to Havana and in 1929 was admitted to the practice of architecture. Acted for several years as secretary of the West Indies Liquor Corporation in New Orleans, La., returning again to Havana and to the practice of my profession.

"When in New Orleans, acquired the hobby of playing golf and have continued doing so in Havana and hope some day to have the pleasure of playing with a member of the 1926 Class. The Yale Club of Havana meets fairly often for lunch, and we have about forty members. Club members have established a scholarship at Yale University for a graduate of Havana University."

Henares received a degree in architecture at Havana University in 1929 and was with Govantes y Cabarrocas for the next four years. The firm of Maruri y Henares, with which he has been associated for some time, specializes in residences and apartment buildings. Since 1950 he has been serving as municipal architect of Havana. He is a member of the Colegio de Arquitectos de la Habana, the Country Club de la Habana, and the Havana Biltmore Yacht and Country Club.

On September 5, 1929, he was married in Havana to Maria Elena Lanuza, daughter of José A. Gonzalez Lanuza and Carmen Alamilla Lanuza. She died two months later—on November 22d. Henares' second marriage, to Anicia Simpson, daughter of José A. and Marietta Aballi Simpson, took place in Havana on August 20, 1932. They have two daughters: Gilda Margarita, born in 1935, and Vivian Frances, born in 1942, both in New Orleans. The older girl is in her third year of high school at the Merici Academy in Havana.

HYMAN HENDLER. Science teacher, Bulkeley High School, Hartford, Conn.; residence, 106 Ardmore Road, West Hartford.

"I have lived a normal happy life with my family," Hendler says. "Since graduation I have taught school in Connecticut and have made many associations with thousands of youngsters. My college preparatory work has kept me pretty well occupied. My training and background have made it possible to educate and arouse an interest in the problems of a troubled world."

In addition to his position at the Bulkeley High School, which he has held since 1928, Hendler supervises a preparatory school for college entrance examinations. He took his M.A. at Columbia in 1929. He is a member of the religious school committee of Temple Beth Israel in West Hartford.

His marriage to Mina Antupit, daughter of Sam and Rebecca Marcus Antupit, took place in Hartford on December 25, 1932. They have a daughter, Phyllis G., who was born in Hartford on March 30, 1937.

HOBART JOHNSTON HENDRICK. President, H. B. Ives Company, manufacturers of builders' hardware, 5 Artizan Street, New Haven, Conn.; residence, 136 Blake Road, Hamden, Conn.

After completing the course at the Harvard Business School in 1930, Hendrick became connected with the H. B. Ives Company and since 1932 has been its president. He is a director of the Tradesmen's National Bank of New Haven and belongs to the New Haven Country Club, the Quinnipiack Club, and the Essex (Conn.) Yacht Club.

His marriage to Mary French Byxbee, daughter of Theodore and Edith French Byxbee, of Meriden, Conn., took place in 1937. Their children were both born in New York City, Betsey Byxbee on March 22, 1936, and Hobart J., Jr., on February 18, 1942. Hendrick's daughter is a Freshman at the Hamden High School.

He writes: "I feel that I have been fortunate in happening to have settled in New Haven, where at football time I do have an opportunity to see former classmates occasionally. I am happily married, have two fine children, and presently have no business problems other than government restrictions. Besides bridge, my only hobby is yachting."

BRUCE PATTERSON HENN. Methods analyst, The Travelers Insurance Companies, 700 Main Street, Hartford, Conn.; residence, 63 Kirkham Place, Newington, Conn.

Henn, who has been with The Travelers continuously since 1926, has held the position of methods analyst since May, 1946. He served as treasurer of the Newington Parent-Teachers Association from 1947 to 1949, has been a member of the Newington Elementary School Building Committee since 1948, of the Zoning Commission since 1949, and of the Republican Town Committee for the past year.

On June 30, 1936, his marriage to Bruna Cavalieri took place in Port Chester, N.Y. She is the daughter of Albert Cavalieri, of Hamden, Conn. Their son, Bruce P., Jr., was born in Hamden on June 2, 1939, and their daughter, Barbara P., in Buffalo, N.Y., on March 17, 1943.

ROTH FREDERICK HERRLINGER, President, Gummed Products Company, manufacturers of gummed tape, Troy, Ohio; residence, Peters Road, R.R. 3, Troy.

Herlinger was in the sales department of the Union Selling Company of Cincinnati from September, 1926, to December, 1927, and has since been with the Gummed Products Company, of which he became president in 1936. He has taken evening courses in business administration at the University of Cincinnati. Herrlinger is a trustee of the Stouder Memorial Hospital.

His marriage to Katharine A. Heekin, daughter of James J. and Alma Robson Heekin, took place in Cincinnati on November 5, 1927. Their older son, Edward F., 2d, was born September 3, 1928, in Cincinnati and was married September 15, 1950, in New York City to Marcia Van Every Pearsall. He graduated from The Taft School in 1946 and from Yale with the Class of 1949 March. Roth, Jr., who was born September 25, 1930, in Cincinnati and who is a Junior at Brown, also prepared for college at Taft.

To the factual data Herrlinger adds: "I lived in Switzerland for a year, during which time the U.S. banks closed, Hitler and Mussolini were ranting over the radio—this in 1932-33. Also a pleasant year or two was spent in Asheville, where Bill Coxe and his brother, Frank, were a big help; otherwise Troy has been our home.

"The feast or famine characteristics of the paper industry continue as usual, but I enjoy it. Occasional trips to Florida and Arizona and frequent business trips offer diversion from small town life."

SIDNEY EDWARD HILCOFF. Accountant and auditor, 42 Church Street, New Haven, Conn.; residence, 240 Knollwood Drive, New Haven.

Hilcoff is engaged in accounting and auditing in New Haven, where his marriage to Dorothy Naidorf, daughter of Solomon and Ida Naidorf, took place on April 5, 1930. Mrs. Hilcoff's home was formerly in Hartford, Conn. They have two children: Stephan, born June 20, 1934, and Linda Jane, born June 30, 1939, both in New Haven.

OTTO MAX HIRSCHFELD. Physician and surgeon, 1037 Albany Avenue, Hartford, Conn.; residence, 282 Fern Street, West Hartford.

"I do not have a very exciting story to tell," Hirschfeld says. "I graduated from medical school in 1931 and after two years of hospital work, opened my office here and haven't budged since. I remain a regular general practitioner, which category is gradually becoming extinct. I have made several trips to Florida, and my hobby is boating—though I get very little time for it."

Hirschfeld took his M.D. at Tufts Medical School in 1931, interned at the Springfield Hospital the following year, and was resident surgeon at Mt. Sinai Hospital in Hartford during 1932-33. He is now an assistant surgeon on the staff of the latter hospital and is a member of the American and Hartford County Medical associations, and the Connecticut State and Hartford Medical societies. He also belongs to the Brotherhood of Temple Israel and to U.S.P.S.

On September 17, 1927, his marriage to Ann Naidorf took place in New York City. She is the daughter of Solomon and Ida Leitman Naidorf, of Hartford. They have two daughters: Elizabeth Rita, born April 16, 1932, and Sheila Jane, born May 15, 1936. The younger girl is in the Class of 1954 at the Oxford School in Hartford. Elizabeth, who graduated there in 1950, is a Freshman at Elmira College.

HENRY ALBERT HOADLEY, JR. Field engineer, Southern New England Telephone Company, 326 State Street, New London, Conn.; residence, 28 Plant Street, New London.

"During most of the last twenty-three years I have been surveying and planning pole, wire, cable, and conduit lines used in the distribution of telephone service from the central offices to the subscribers' telephones," Hoadley tells us. "Much of this time has been spent in eastern Connecticut, where I am well acquainted with practically every passable road. The work is interesting, varied, and pleasant and with a fine company.

"While single, I traveled considerably for pleasure, including visits to Yellowstone, Glacier, Rocky Mountain, Grand Cañon, and Yosemite National parks. In 1932 I drove alone to Colorado and back, and while there drove to the top of Mt. Evans, the highest automobile road in this country. In 1936 my parents and I drove to California and back.

"In the last twenty years I have taken more than a mile of 16-millimeter movies, as well as many stills, with color pictures predominating since they were perfected. For nearly as long I have been interested in model railroad-ing. During that time I collected quite a complete outfit of oo-gauge equipment, but only recently acquired space where I can build a layout.

"I am very proud of my wife and three young children. We have a comfortable house and most of the things to go with it that we want. Our many good friends, quite diversified as to type and location, seem to like and respect us. We are far from rich, but life has treated us kindly."

Hoadley went with the Southern New England Telephone Company in February, 1928, following a year and a half as a student engineer with the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company in East Pittsburgh. He has been a member of the Connecticut Union of Telephone Workers since 1941, serving on the education committee during 1945-46 and as vice-president of the New London plant local from 1948 to 1950. He belongs to the Yale Engineering Association and is currently serving as president of the men's forum of the First Church of Christ (Congregational) in New London. From 1926 to 1931 he held a second lieutenant's commission in the Engineer Reserve.

Mrs. Hoadley was Mildred Jean Snider, daughter of Percy Robert and Anna Barbara Meier Snider. They were married in Toronto on November 9, 1940. Their children are: Steven Russell, born in New London on February 15, 1943; Barbara Elizabeth, born in Milford, Conn., August 14, 1945; and John Richard, born in New London, July 15, 1947.

ERNEST V. F. HOFMANN. Secretary, Frederick Hofmann Company (retail furniture), 887 Grand Avenue, New Haven 11, Conn.; residence, 990 Ridge Road, Hamden 14, Conn.

Hofmann has been with the family furniture business in New Haven since graduation. His marriage to Elizabeth M. Schmidt, daughter of Carl A. and Fanny Bruin Schmidt, took place in New Haven on January 26, 1939. Their daughters were both born in New Haven, Elizabeth Margaret on July 18, 1941, and Susan Elizabeth on October 13, 1944.

EDWARD CHARLES HOGAN. Sales executive, American Brake Shoe Company, 230 Park Avenue, New York 17, N.Y.; residence, Long Ridge Road, R.F.D. 1, Stamford, Conn.

Hogan, who has been with the American Brake Shoe Company since graduation, has had the position of sales executive since 1932. From February, 1943, to November, 1945, he was on active duty as a major in the Air Force, assigned to the Procurement Division at Wright Field, Ohio. He is president of the Stamford Hills Association and since December, 1949, has been a member of the Stamford Board of Representatives. Hogan belongs to the Yale and St. Anthony clubs of New York. As to other things, he says, "My travels have been relatively limited. My recreations are few and becoming fewer—my hobbies are painting (house type), dogs, and some golf. I'm afraid I'm a very dull guy for twenty-five years out."

His marriage to Kathleen Bagley, daughter of John Joseph and Mary A. Bagley, took place at Miami Beach, Fla., on March 30, 1937. Her home was formerly in Chicago.

WALLACE WRIGHT HOGE. Assistant treasurer, Celanese Corporation of America, 180 Madison Avenue, New York 16, N.Y.; residence, 59 Bedford Road, Summit, N.J.

Hoge graduated from the Harvard Business School with the degree of M.B.A. in 1928 and then became connected with the firm of Russell, Berg & Cummings, investment counsel, in Boston. He subsequently moved to New York to take a position with the Guaranty Company of New York. He was assistant manager of their government bond department at first and later of the municipal department. He later had a similar connection with Edward B. Smith & Company, at the time he left their employ being senior member of the buying department. In September, 1946, following a connection with the buying department of Morgan Stanley & Company, Hoge became assistant treasurer of the Celanese Corporation of America. At present he is a director of the Lorain Telephone Company and a trustee of the Estate of Anna L. Wallace Hoge. From 1946 to 1948 he served as chairman of the budget committee in the Summit United Campaign.

On August 3, 1929, he was married in Providence, R.I., to M. Louise Aldrich, of Warwick Neck, R.I. She is the daughter of Stuart Morgan and Martha Louise Blackwell Aldrich. They have three girls: Martha Louise, born May 7, 1931, Lucy Ann on July 8, 1932, and Abby Aldrich on October 27, 1935. The two oldest were born in Providence and the youngest in New York City. They have all attended Miss Chapin's in New York and Kent Place in Summit, where Abby is in the Class of 1953. Martha, who graduated from St. Timothy's in 1949, is now a Sophomore at Smith, and Lucy is a Senior at St. Timothy's.

EDWARD JOHN HOLAHAN. Construction engineer, Public Buildings Service, General Services Administration, 250 Hudson Street, New York 13, N.Y.; residence, 26 Sedgwick Avenue, Darien, Conn.

The proud possessor of car license plate Y-S 26 since 1936, Holahan writes, "Most of my travels have been incidental to my work on various construction projects. Raised from infancy in Darien, I have always during my travels kept it as my permanent residence. My travels have been restricted to the northeastern quarter of the United States. After tiring of our moving and house-renting efforts, we have finally settled down in our own house in my favorite town, whence most of my travels are confined to commuting to work in New York.

"My most enduring recreation is playing golf, which is now entering on its fortieth year. Whenever I traveled I managed somehow to play some golf. My best golf years were after college and my lowest handicap six (in 1937-38). It is now eleven. Since age sixteen I have done some hunting of upland game and from 1941 until last year owned an English setter 'Gallant Blue Boy,' whom I trained for hunting. My most recent hobby is not entirely my own choosing and sometimes is not overly recreational, albeit always good exercise. The new-old house we now own accounts for it. I am now a gardener, landscaper, tree surgeon, carpenter, painter, plumber, all in a small way, of course.

"Last but by no means least, since the mind and spirit are involved, has been my hobby of 'The Great Books.' I have been following the program by reading and discussing the classics at bi-weekly discussion groups. I cannot begin adequately to tell how much I have enjoyed them and how much I have benefited by the readings and discussions.

"Years before the Kefauver Committee flashed across the political firmament I made up my mind that, as an engineer and civil servant, I should not only live and work by 'the rules of the game,' but also, as in golf where umpires are scarce, by 'the ethics,' as Senator Fulbright so brilliantly put it recently on the Senate floor. As one of those whose salary increases never catch up with the mounting taxes and cost of living, this way of life is not easy to keep ever before my mind's eye. Therefore my special interests are not only competence in my work but also probity, integrity, and honesty in its performance. In my opinion the vast majority of federal employees subscribe to these same ideas; if not, they are worthy neither of the good name nor the exalted position.

"Hopes and ambitions—to get away from the paper and desk work and get out where the work (or sometimes—the play) is going on; to have my son enter Yale; satisfactions: many; regrets: none of note."

Prior to going with the Public Buildings Service in 1935, Holahan was connected successively with the Foundation Company of New York, the Tredennick-Billings Company of Boston, Gibbs & Hill, Inc., of New York, and the Connecticut State Highway Department. He took some war-time engineering courses at George Washington University and had a year of law there also. He has been a troop committeeman for the Darien Boy Scouts and has been active in their funds drives, as well as those for the Red Cross. In 1941 he was a member of the Red Cross blood donor committee. From 1926 to 1931 Holahan held a second lieutenant's commission in the Ordnance Reserve. He is a member of several golf clubs and of the Federal, Metropolitan, and Connecticut State Golf associations.

His marriage to Dorothy Hanigan, daughter of Adam Winfield and Mary Kendall Hanigan, took place in New York, August 4, 1932. Her home was formerly in Detroit. The children are: Edward John, Jr., born June 5, 1936, in Hempstead, N.Y., Mary Margaret on May 31, 1938, in Takoma Park, Md., and Catherine Jane on May 1, 1939, in Fremont, Ohio. The boy is a Freshman at the Fairfield (Conn.) Preparatory School, and Mary is in junior high.

HARRY SHERMAN HOLCOMB. Assistant district manager, central district, New England Electric System, 42 Main Street, Leominster, Mass.; residence, 87 Prospect Street, Fitchburg, Mass.

Holcomb, who has worked in the public utilities field since 1926 in various capacities, has held his present position since August, 1944. He has been vice-president and a director of the following companies since September of that year: the Athol Gas & Electric Company, the Gardner Electric Light

Company, the Leominster Gas Light Company, the Wachusett Electric Company, and the Winchendon Electric Light & Power Company. He has been on the board of the Athol Gas Company since September, 1950, and in the past has been a director of eight other gas and/or electric companies in Massachusetts. In 1945 Holcomb took the advanced management program at the Harvard Business School. He says that his principal hobbies are the making of reproductions of Early American antiques and cruising on the New England coast. [In a later report Holcomb said that he was no longer vice-president and a director of the electric companies mentioned, following their merger into the Worcester County Electric Company, but was vice-president and a director of the gas companies separated from the other concerns and formed into two companies known as the Athol Gas Company and the Wachusett Gas Company.]

His marriage to Julia Potter Himmelsbach, daughter of George Alexander and Jeannette Martha Potter Himmelsbach, took place in Buffalo, N.Y., on December 1, 1928. Their daughter, Hilary, who was born September 27, 1932, in Buffalo, is a Senior at the Masters School at Dobbs Ferry. Their son, Harry Sherman, 3d, was born May 22, 1940, in Buffalo.

ALEXANDER RANDOLPH HOLLADAY, 2D. President and treasurer, Wyndham, Inc. (investment trust), Box 2002, Wilmington, Del.; residence, Greenville, Del.

Holladay has been involved in aviation in one aspect or another the greater part of the time since graduation. He was with Pratt & Whitney Aircraft during 1927-28, with the Bellanca Aircraft Corporation for the next two years (continued as a director until 1935), and president of Air Service, Inc., from 1930 to 1935. During the next six years he was secretary of the Brandywine Oil Company, but gave this up in April, 1941, to go on active duty, with an assignment to the Matériel Command at Wright Field. He was promoted to major the following March and in September was assigned as plant representative to the Douglas Aircraft plant in Park Ridge, Ill. A promotion to lieutenant colonel followed in November, 1943. Holladay was released from active duty in February, 1946, and in July of that year was awarded the Legion of Merit for his work at Douglas. Since January, 1946, he has been president and treasurer of Wyndham, Inc.

His marriage to Lana Lainé, daughter of Damaso T. Lainé, of Havana, Cuba, took place at Villanova, Pa., on June 2, 1928. They were divorced in 1933. On June 26, 1941, he was married in Dayton, Ohio, to Thirza Grant Reynolds, daughter of Richard H. and Laura Williams Grant. Holladay's daughter, Lena Lainé, who was born on June 28, 1929, in Bryn Mawr, Pa., was married in October, 1949, to Russell Hurd Crawford.

JOSEPH STEFFENS HOLLISTER. Director, new development department, Hollister Estate Company (cattle ranch; walnut and lemon orchards); residence, Gaviota, Calif.

Since 1945 Hollister has been associated with the Hollister Estate Company as director of its new development department. His previous work had all been in the field of geology, and he is still engaged as a consultant geologist.

"I spent a good many years in foreign countries—in theoretical geology, then petroleum exploration—with the war period being spent in exploration work in Tierra del Fuego, Chile," he tells us. "I came to the conclusion that California was a good place to stay in. I was impressed by the value and need for new sources of water supply in California and on the family ranch, so started developing water in areas that had very little. This led to putting the water to use, as well as its conservation. Soil conservation and its problems followed. Now I am very much absorbed in the development of new projects on the 3,600-acre family ranch near Santa Barbara."

Hollister, who took his Ph.D. at the University of Göttingen in 1933, was a petroleum geologist for The Texas Company in California from 1934 to 1938, with the National Development Company in Manila for the next two years, and with the United Geophysical Company in Chile from 1942 to 1944. He is the co-author with Ralph D. Reed of Structural Evolution of Southern California, issued as an American Association of Petroleum Geologists publication in 1936. He is a member of that organization and also of the Geophysical Union, the New York Academy of Sciences, the California Academy of Sciences, and the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

His marriage to Kathryn Popham Montanye, daughter of Charles Harold and Edith Crowell Montanye, took place in London, England, on May 19, 1928. Mrs. Hollister's home was in Woodside, Calif., before she was married. Their daughter, Elisabeth, was born in Göttingen on February 5, 1929.

JOHN GRAHAM HOPKINS. General agent, Lincoln National Life Insurance Company, 216 Talbott Building, Dayton 2, Ohio; residence, 644 Garden Road, Dayton 9.

Hopkins writes: "During the past twenty-five years I've lived in many different cities—Cleveland, Ohio, Montclair, N.J., Harrisburg, Pa., Philadelphia, Washington, D.C., Hampton, Va., and finally Dayton. A tour of duty with the Air Force from 1941 to 1946 brought us to Dayton, and we decided to take root here after my release from service. Everywhere we have lived, Yale families have made our sojourn pleasanter. As the years go by, I am increasingly grateful for what Yale and its graduates have contributed to our way of life."

Hopkins' entire business career has been spent with Lincoln National as follows: agent, Cleveland, 1926-28; supervisor, Newark, N.J., 1928-30; manager, Harrisburg, 1930-31; agent, specializing in aviation risks, 1931-41; general agent, Dayton, 1946-. He served on the board of directors of the Dayton Life Underwriters Association from 1948 to 1950 and as president of the Dayton General Agents and Managers Association during 1949-50, and is currently chairman of the leaders' round table of the Ohio Underwriters Association. He belongs to the Dayton City Club and the Miami Valley Golf Club.

Hopkins entered the Air Force as a captain in October, 1941, and was assigned to duty at Wright Field, Dayton, in the equipment laboratory, where he served as executive officer and deputy laboratory chief until his release to inactive duty in December, 1945. He was awarded the Legion of Merit.

He was married on September 20, 1929, in New Haven, to June Elizabeth Rolfe, daughter of Charles E. and Emma Miller Rolfe. They have a daughter, June Anne, who was born May 22, 1940.

TIMOTHY EARLE HOPKINS. Address, 25 Taylor Street, Cranston, R.I.

RUSSELL GOODWIN HOPPEN. Address, Box 2902, Westville P.O., New Haven 15, Conn.

HORACE MANSFIELD HORNER. President, United Aircraft Corporation, East Hartford, Conn.; residence, 105 Bloomfield Avenue, Hartford.

Joining Pratt & Whitney Aircraft (now a division of United Aircraft) in July, 1926, as a "stock chaser" in the purchasing department, Horner became assistant sales manager in 1934, assistant general manager four years later, general manager in 1940, a director of the company the following year, and president in 1943. He has served on a number of vital boards and committees: advisory board, Congressional Aviation Policy Board, 1945; industry consulting committee, National Advisory Committee of Aeronautics, 1945-50; aviation research advisory committee, Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration, 1946-50; Hartford Army Advisory Committee, 1948-50; aircraft industry advisory committee, Munitions Board, and committee on national defense, U.S. Chamber of Commerce, 1949-50. In December, 1948, Horner was awarded the President's Certificate of Merit, and back in 1938 Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute gave him the honorary degree of Doctor of Engineering. In 1950 he was elected to honorary membership in Pi Tau Sigma, the honorary engineering society.

Horner is a director of the Hartford National Bank & Trust Company. "Have flown (passenger) over a million miles, including Hawaii and Europe, and over 10,000 miles in a helicopter—believed to be a world record,” he says. “For fun, there’s fishing and hunting. Have been going salmon fishing at the same club on the Mirimachi in New Brunswick every spring (except the war years) for the past twenty years. Have fished and/or hunted in about twenty states, including California, Wyoming, Colorado, Texas, Florida, Washington, Montana, Idaho, Missouri, South Dakota, Arkansas, Virginia, and Maine—with deep-sea fishing (blue marlin, etc.) off the Bahamas (Cat Cay Club.)

“I still get to a few horse races and have had an annual get-together with Phil Loughlin (roommate at Yale) at Louisville for Derby week-end for years.”

Horner’s marriage to Lela Thomas Shumate, daughter of Thomas and Lela Burwell Smith Shumate, took place in Roundville, Md., June 25, 1926. Her home was formerly at White Post, Va. They have two children: Leonard Mansfield, born in March, 1927, and Lela Burwell in March, 1930. Leonard, who graduated from Andover in 1945, served as a corporal in the Marines from 1945 to 1947 and was commissioned a second lieutenant upon his graduation from Yale in June, 1951.

LOUIS BERNARD HOROWITZ. Physician, Veterans Administration Hospital, San Fernando, Calif.; residence, 1913 Valley Street, Burbank, Calif.

Horowitz, who received his M.D., cum laude, was engaged in the private practice of medicine in New York City from 1932 to 1942, specializing in diseases of the chest. From August, 1942, to June, 1946, he was on active duty as a captain in the Army Medical Corps, with overseas duty in India from November, 1944, to January, 1946. For the past five years he has been on the staff of the Veterans Hospital in San Fernando. He is a member of the American Medical Association, the American College of Chest Physicians, the Bronx County Medical Society, and the Masonic order, during 1941-42 being master of Justice Lodge, No. 753, in New York.

Horowitz is married to the former Anne D. Krone, daughter of William Krone, of New York City.

LOUIS HORRVICH. District sales manager, Abbott Laboratories, manufacturing chemists, 211 West 14th Street, New York, N.Y.; residence, 12 Hewitt Avenue, Bronxville, N.Y.

Horrvich has been district sales manager for the Abbott Laboratories since September, 1933. His marriage to Dorothy Koppelman, daughter of Jacob and Jennie Forman Koppelman, took place in Hartford, Conn., on October 12, 1947. They have two daughters: Harriet Sue, who was born August 6, 1948, in Hartford, and Joan Carol, born September 30, 1950, in Bronxville.

LEROY HORTON. Purchasing agent, Robinson Furnace Company (warm air heating and distribution of Lennox furnaces), 4600 West Monroe Street, Chicago, Ill.; residence, 341 Hawthorn Street, Glen Ellyn, Ill.

"I have lived a very quiet life since leaving school," Horton says. "I entered the current family business, a small fuel and building material yard. I took a not very successful flier at being in business for myself for a couple of years following the death of my father, and then went with a small integrated oil company, first as a traveling auditor and then as assistant credit manager. During this period I acquired a wife. Since the University had not given me a degree, I had to marry to get one from the University of Illinois. Then after a job in Chicago, I moved back to Lombard to the materials business again. My war record is unimpressive, as I spent all of the time in this country, during which time my family gypsied around the country with me. After the war I settled in this suburb of Chicago, and after a year disposed of my interest in the family business, took a vacation, then settled down to be a commuter with a job in Chicago.

"I try to keep away from outside activities as much as possible, as I have two growing children, but somehow we manage to get mixed up in Scout and (Presbyterian) church activities, and then I try to get to lodge occasionally. I am treasurer of our local rifle club, which has won both the indoor and outdoor smallbore state championships, so that takes some time also. Army reserve activities are also time consuming. Otherwise we live a very quiet life. Vacations are usually a trip to Florida in March to attend the national midwinter smallbore rifle matches."

Additional details of Horton's business connections are as follows: Westmore Supply Company, Lombard, Ill., 1926-31, and 1939-43 (accounting and management); West Towns Business Service, Oak Park, Ill., 1931-33 (proprietor); Johnson Oil Refining Company, Chicago and Chicago Heights, 1933-38 (auditor and credits); York Safe & Lock Company, Chicago, 1939 (branch office accountant); Westmore Supply Company, Lombard, Ill., 1946-47; Robinson Furnace Company (cost accountant at first; purchasing agent since January, 1950). He has been active in Masonry, being a member of Glen Ellyn Lodge, No. 950, the Scottish Rite Consistory (Chicago), the Wheaton Chapter, Royal Arch Masons, and the Elmhurst Commandery, Knights Templar.

Horton, who had been in the Ordnance Reserve, reentered the Army on May 7, 1943, as a first lieutenant in the Coast Artillery. He was in a Harbor Defense Battery during the first part of the war and was then assigned to reception and separation center work until he went on inactive duty on September 30, 1946. He is now a captain in the Artillery Reserve.

He was married December 23, 1933, in Oak Park, to Sally Barbara Reif, daughter of Emil and Wilhelmina Meyer Reif. Their children are: Bradley Burr, born April 1, 1937, and Barbara Ruth, born March 27, 1939.

SAMUEL EUGENE HOYT, JR. New England representative, Zinkrich Company, Inc. (galvanizing compounds), 42 Broadway, New York, N.Y.; residence, Orange Center Road, Orange, Conn.

From 1926 to 1942 Hoyt was a regional director with the U.S. Rubber Export Company, Ltd. He was then in Washington as a captain in the Chemical Warfare Service and after his release in 1944 took the position of export executive with Muller & Phipps Asia, Ltd., remaining with them until 1946. During the next four years he was New England sales representative for the Polyphase Chemical Company and the Brooks Chemical Company and since January, 1950, has been with the Zinkrich Company, Inc. Hoyt belongs to the National Association of Power Engineers.

He was first married in 1934 in New York to Yvonne Bailey, of Nova Scotia, from whom he was divorced in 1935. In 1937 he was married in New York to Lillian Bruns, daughter of Henry Bruns, of Brooklyn. They were divorced in 1945.

He writes: "During the years 1926-42 I traveled extensively in Latin America and the West Indies for the U.S. Rubber Company. Particularly interesting were business trips in 1941 and 1942 to our military bases in the West Indies (Trinidad, Cuba, Jamaica, etc.) and Newfoundland. This was during the time they were being constructed. After a short hitch in the Chemical Warfare Service I returned to the New Haven area and made my home with my mother. Am devoted to Yale's athletics and seldom miss anything of importance. To be honest, the last five years have been rather dull ones for me."

JOHN RANDOLPH HUFFMAN. Project engineer for materials testing reactor project, Argonne National Laboratory; business address, Box 5207, Chicago 80, Ill.; residence, 169 Fellows Court, Elmhurst, Ill.

"Since graduation life has been most interesting," Huffman tells us. "First, a year in Copenhagen on a fellowship; second, fencing which stood me in good stead during my sojourn in Europe. Fencing has been an extremely interesting recreation, with trips to three Olympics and to Cuba, England, Scotland, and Canada, competing against international teams. During my fencing career I have amassed some 180 medals, fifteen U.S. championships, and several place positions in international championships. Since 1942 my completely absorbing hobby has been my work, which has been associated with the atomic bomb and the utilization of atomic energy. Even in this work travel and change of residence have contributed to the interesting work. Eight months at Columbia University, eight months at the University of Chicago, six months at Oak Ridge, one and a half years at Montreal, two and a half at Oak Ridge, and now two years at the Argonne National Laboratory. This work has mainly been associated with design and construction of atomic reactors. I am about ready to retire and grow old gracefully."

Before going to the University of Copenhagen as a research fellow, Huffman was a laboratory assistant at Yale (1926-27) and a junior assistant on high pressure research at the Mellon Institute (1928-29). From 1930 to 1932 he was a research catalyst chemist with the Standard Oil Development Company at Bay Way, N.J., and then returned to New Haven as a research fellow on gas reactions. Three years as a research assistant to Professor H. C. Urey at Columbia followed, and then from 1937 to 1942 he was an assistant professor of chemical engineering at New York University. Since then he has been with the Atomic Energy Commission.

Huffman has taken out a number of patents and has contributed articles to various professional journals, including the following: Journal of Chemistry and Physics, Indiana Engineering and Chemistry Journal, Annals of Education, Mechanical Engineering, Chemical Engineering Progress, Physics Review, Journal of the American Chemical Society, and several foreign publications. He has a professional engineer's license from the University of the State of New York and belongs to the American Chemical Society, the American Institute of Chemical Engineers, the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education, the American Scandinavian Foundation, Alpha Chi Sigma, Phi Lambda Upsilon, Gamma Alpha, Demolay (Legion of Honor, Kansas City), the Masonic order, the Amateur Fencers League of America (formerly president), the National Collegiate Athletic Association of New York (chairman, finance committee), and the United States Sport Federation and was formerly a member of the American Olympic Association.

He was married November 18, 1950, in Seattle, Wash., to Berenice Norma Smith, daughter of Jesse Norman Smith.

EDWARD INGALLS. Consultant, Scudder, Stevens & Clark, investment counsel, 1 Wall Street, New York 5, N.Y.; residence, 4 Southwoods Lane, Scarsdale, N.Y.

Ingalls was with Kissell, Kinnicutt from 1926 to 1930, subsequently with Young & Ottley and C. W. Young & Company, and then with Clarke, Sinsabaugh & Company until 1942, when it was merged with Scudder, Stevens & Clark. He served as a trustee of the Village of Scarsdale from 1947 to 1949 and as mayor from then until April, 1951. Other local activities have been in connection with the Scarsdale Community Fund, of which he was president in 1944 and a director during 1945-46, and the Scarsdale Town Club (on various committees of a civic nature). Ingalls says that his writings have been limited to newspaper accounts of civic addresses.

His marriage to Laura M. Caddell, daughter of John Bartlett and Anne Forbes Caddell, took place in Brooklyn, N.Y., on November 1, 1930. Their son, Edward Caddell, who was born in White Plains, N.Y., February 19, 1934, is a Junior at the Scarsdale High School.

This commuter writes: "I calculate that my longest trip has been 250,000 miles on the IRT Subway and New York Central Railroad, a trip completely devoid of interest, and one I am happy to say I am not yet complacent about. Vacation travels have varied between Canada, New England, and Florida. As to special interests, my hope is that with each five years of advancing age I will be able to take five strokes off the golf game and ultimately get it down to 90."

JEN HAN INN. Address, The Central Mint of China, Shanghai, China.

KENNETH WELLINGTON IVES. Division construction superintendent, New York Telephone Company, 219 South State Street, Syracuse 2, N.Y.; residence, 117 Academy Street, Manlius, N.Y.

Ives, who has worked continuously for the New York Telephone Company since graduation, has had the position of division construction superintendent since July, 1947. He is a trustee of the Manlius Baptist Church and belongs to the Technology Club of Syracuse.

His first marriage, to Louise G. Smith, daughter of William H. and Sarah Raymond Smith, took place in Albany, N.Y., in January, 1927. Her home was formerly in New Haven. They were divorced in 1936. In May, 1936, he was married in Delmar, N.Y., to Helen Dahl, daughter of Gunnar J. and Karen Svensrud Dahl, of Selkirk, N.Y. Ives has four children: Kenneth W., Jr., born July 20, 1930, in Glens Falls, N.Y., who graduated from the Manlius Military School in 1948; Jon R., born June 18, 1937, in Albany; Martha C., born April 6, 1939, in Albany; and Thomas M., born September 8, 1944, in Schenectady.

RALPH WILLIS JACK. Physician, 1700 Biscayne Boulevard, Miami 32, Fla.; residence, 100 West San Marino Drive, Miami Beach.

"I left Yale with the ambition to study medicine and have worked at that ever since," Jack says. "My only other ambition on leaving Yale was to marry the girl I proposed to the night of our Senior Prom. This I did as soon as I graduated from medical school. Ever since I have devoted my entire time to the making of a home and raising my family and the development of my practice in my chosen field of medicine, taking time out only to serve in the Navy during World War II. Outside of my own private practice, my chief interest has been to help my community in the improvement and development of its medical facilities.

"Since finishing medical school my travels have not been very extensive, being limited almost entirely to getting to the various medical meetings and conventions. While in medical school I was more fortunate, touring Europe a couple of times and spending one session at the University of Edinburgh. I also had the opportunity to serve for a short while as doctor on the private yacht-schooner of Count Felix von Luchner, the German sea devil. Perhaps this experience helped to lead to my choice of Navy for service during the last war and probably influences the only thing that might be called a present hobby. I am interested in small craft boating, and this is my chief form of recreation at present. I do not get away from my profession, however, even in this, since I call my small boat 'Lucina,' named after the Greek goddess of childbirth. It is best summarized in saying that I have a profession, a home, a family, a boat, and three Boxer dogs. This all affords much work, activity, interest, and contentment."

Jack took his M.D. at Johns Hopkins in 1930 and was an interne in obstetrics and gynecology at the Johns Hopkins Hospital from 1930 to 1932 and an assistant resident and resident from 1933 to 1935. He was also an assistant in obstetrics in the Medical School in 1933 and in pathology the following year and then an instructor in gynecology. Since 1936 he has been engaged in the private practice of obstetrics and gynecology in Miami. He was chief of the obstetrics department at St. Francis' Hospital, Miami Beach, from 1937 to 1942 and at present is attending surgeon in charge of the department of obstetrics and gynecology at the Jackson Memorial Hospital in Miami, chairman of the same department at Mt. Sinai Hospital, Miami Beach, consultant in obstetrics at the Monroe County Hospital at Key West, and a director of the blood bank of Dade County and the Dade County Cancer Institute. He has contributed a number of technical articles to medical journals, particularly the American Journal of Obstetrics and Gynecology.

Jack, who was on active duty from September, 1942, to December, 1945, as a lieutenant commander, U.S.N.R., was selected for commander in 1945. He served as medical officer in charge of the Dependents Unit for the Naval Hospital in Key West until 1944 and with the Amphibious Forces in the Pacific from then until the end of the war. He participated in the original invasion campaign of Iwo Jima and Okinawa and was awarded the Navy Unit citation with a gold star.

He is a diplomate of the American Board of Obstetrics and Gynecology and the International Board of Surgery in Obstetrics and Gynecology, a fellow of the American College of Surgeons, the International College of Surgeons, the Florida Obstetrical and Gynecological Society, and the Miami Obstetrical and Gynecological Society (secretary, 1947; vice-president, 1948), and a member of the Dade County, Florida State, Southern Medical, and American Medical associations, the Southeastern Surgical Congress, the South Atlantic Association of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, and the Continental Gynecologic Society. He also belongs to the Pithotomy Club of Johns Hopkins, the Miami chapter, Confederate Navy, and the International Yacht Club of Miami.

Mrs. Jack was Ruth E. Garland, daughter of Joseph E. and Gertrude Harris Garland. They were married in Farmville, Va., on June 25, 1930, and have two children: Joan Garland, born January 14, 1933, in Baltimore, and William David, 2d, on February 15, 1941, in Miami Beach. Joan graduated from Miss Harris' Florida School in 1950 and is now a Freshman at Smith.

STANLEY THEODORE JOHNSON. Sales engineer (Transmission Engineering Company), representing several companies as agent; business address, 6 Hartford Street, Newton Highlands 61, Mass.; residence, 41 Walden Street, Newtonville 60.

Johnson writes: "For two years I was on the student test course at the General Electric Company at the River Works, West Lynn, Mass. Had the pleasure of rooming with Ed Murray during this period. The next five years were with the Electric Storage Battery Company as sales engineer with the Boston office. Next, about six years with the home office of Stowe Woodward, Inc., of Newton—mostly inside work on sales correspondence. They make rubber-covered rolls for paper and textile plants. The past twelve years have been devoted to the sale of mechanical power transmission equipment, the last six years as factory agent. I operate under the name of the Transmission Engineering Company, representing as agent the John Waldron Corporation of New Brunswick, N.J., the Union Chain & Manufacturing Company of Sandusky, Ohio, and DeLaval Worm-Gear Division of Trenton. In other words, I am a member of the 'chain gang' recommending the use of chains, gear reducers, flexible couplings, and clutches to the discerning plant engineers in New England.

"It's been fun for the most part. I do remember that there was such a thing as a business depression in the Thirties and I got married in the Thirties, which is probably the experience of many in the Class.

"For recreation, I've enjoyed a duffer's game of golf and the same brand of tennis up to a few years ago. Probably an afternoon in the garden has given me as much pleasure as anything. With a rake or a spade in your hand, you can't do much worrying, and if you started a plant which later produced luscious red tomatoes or delicious Concord grapes, you have known solid enjoyment.

"Generally speaking, in the matter of politics I have a preference for an honest Republican in office. However, I confess to a reasonably broad-minded attitude on the subject of politics and religion. As far as my offspring are concerned, I hope they will be physically strong, mentally awake, and morally straight and I hope they enjoy as I have the job which they select as their daily chore. I haven't been west of Chicago nor south of Virginia—but there's always next month or next year. Yes, it's still fun after twenty-five years."

Johnson adds that he has always had an interest in the duties associated with active church membership, such as deacon and member of the prudential and financial committees, and that these have proved to be something of an avocation over the years. He belongs to Dalhousie Lodge of Masons in Newtonville and from 1926 to 1931 was a member of the Officers Reserve.

His marriage to Grace Hardy, daughter of Frank B. and Anna M. Hardy, of Allston, Mass., took place September 23, 1933, in Boston. The children were born there, Theodore Stanley on November 5, 1935, and Winifred on November 19, 1938. Ted has just finished his Sophomore year at the Newton High School, and Winifred is in junior high.

JAMES ASHTON LEE KAMPS. Address, care Secretary's Office, Yale University, New Haven, Conn.

CHARLES CLARKE KEELY. Civil engineer, 304 South La Brea Avenue, Los Angeles 36, Calif.; residence, 11 Berkeley Square, Los Angeles 18.

Keely has had his own office as a civil engineer since 1936. His previous experience was all in the field of engineering. He was with the Los Angeles Bureau of Power and Light from 1926 to 1928, did graduate work in water power at Massachusetts Tech in 1929, and was then with the Stone & Webster Engineering Corporation during 1930-31. From 1932 to 1934 he was associated with the Metropolitan Water District in Southern California and in 1935 was with the Associated Telephone Utilities. Keely served as a commissioner of the Los Angeles Department of Water and Power from 1941 to 1944. He is an associate member of the American Society of Civil Engineers and a member of the Illinois Society of Farm Managers.

He was married in Denver in 1933 to Beatrice Louise Sargeant, daughter of Raymond and Beatrice Ellwood Sargeant. They have three children, all of whom were born in Los Angeles, Charles C., Jr., in 1934, Russell D. in 1935, and Ann Virginia in 1937. The two boys are at Hotchkiss, and Ann goes to the Marlborough School.

JAMES GORDON KENEFICK. Head, circulation department, Yale University Library; residence, 482 Winthrop Avenue, New Haven 11, Conn.

Kenefick, who has been head of the circulation department of the Yale Library since 1932, says, "I have nothing very exciting to report. I worked part time in the library all through college and have stayed there since getting through. My twenty-five years since graduation have been devoted entirely to the library and to my family. I have enjoyed being here at Yale and watching the many changes that have taken place since we were students. Seeing the sons of our classmates arriving the past few years has brought home to me very forcibly that we are getting along. Hope to see my own son here shortly."

Kenefick is a member of the American Library Association. His marriage to Margaret L. Eustace, daughter of Edward J. and Helen F. Goggins Eustace, took place in New Haven on August 16, 1932. James Gordon Kenefick, Jr., who is a Junior at the James Hillhouse High School, was born in New Haven on September 17, 1934, and their daughter, Margot H., on May 27, 1937, also in New Haven.

JOHN EDWARD KERR. Address, care Mrs. John E. Kerr, 172 West 79th Street, New York, N.Y.

ROBERT KETTING, JR. Vice-president, Hatch & Bailey Company (building materials), 29 Marshall Street, South Norwalk, Conn.; residence, 57 Quintard Avenue, South Norwalk.

Ketting has been in the retail building materials business in South Norwalk with the Hatch & Bailey Company since graduation, becoming vice-president of the company in 1933. He is a director of the Norwalk Building, Loan, and Investment Association and belongs to the Shorehaven Golf Club and the Norwalk Shore and Country Club.

His marriage to Muriel Gertrude FitzSimmons, daughter of Thomas Francis and Sarah McKenna FitzSimmons, took place in Mt. Carmel, Conn., on January 27, 1932. Her home was formerly in New Haven. They have a daughter, Carol Anne, who was born in Norwalk on March 11, 1938.

ALEXANDER BARRETT KLOTS. Address, 215 Young Avenue, Pelham 65, N.Y.

RICHARD KOCH. Manager, Askania Corporation (chemical processing), Irvington, N.Y.; residence, 765 North Broadway, Hastings-on-Hudson, N.Y.; permanent mailing address, 907 South 16th Street, Newark, N.J.

Koch spent the year 1927 at the University of Munich as a student of the classics and related studies. He was editor for the McGraw-Hill Publishing Company for five years and was engaged in technical sales management and promotion with the Röhm & Haas Company for a similar period. He then held various concurrent editorial and technical connections up to the time of going with the Askania Corporation as manager in 1942 and has contributed a number of technical and general articles to magazines. Koch has been engaged in various types of relief activities, especially for post-war Germany.

His marriage to Geraldine Mercier Doyle, daughter of John T. and Geraldine Villiers Earle Doyle, took place in New York City on June 24, 1933.

CHESTER ARTHUR KOTTERMAN. Consulting engineer (metallic rectifiers), Bogue Electric & Manufacturing Company, Paterson, N.J.; residence, 579 Overlook Drive, Wyckoff, N.J.

Kotterman writes: "Starting as a physicist after leaving Yale, I soon found that I was better adapted to applied physics, so followed engineering work, becoming interested in metallic rectifiers. These electrical devices convert AC electricity to DC and fill a very important but little known niche in the electrical industry. I have specialized in this field for the past eighteen years and have established myself as a consultant and authority on the subject. This work has supplied a vocation, as well as an avocation. As an extra activity to my regular work I have spent the last four years in compiling and writing the material for an authoritative treatise on metallic rectifiers which will be the first book ever to be published in this field covering all types of metallic rectifiers.

"My principal hobby would be building and sailing boats if I had the time to follow this hobby. I have few regrets, having lived a fairly full life since leaving Yale. However, if I had it to do over again I believe I would have followed the teaching profession with the goal of becoming the president of an engineering college."

Kotterman's book, which is to be published late this year, will be entitled "Metallic Rectifiers." For a time after graduation he was on the technical staff of the Bell Telephone Laboratories, and he was subsequently chief engineer of the rectifier division of the P. R. Mallory Company of Indianapolis and of the Federal Telephone & Radio Corporation of East Newark, N.J. On September 23, 1921, he was married in Washington, D.C., to Catherine Roberta Fearson, daughter of William Penn and Anna Briscoe Thacker Fearson, of Georgetown.

JOSEPH LANDER. Physician, 1009 Mercantile Library Building, Cincinnati 2, Ohio; residence, 155 Linden Drive, Cincinnati 15.

Since his separation from military service in August, 1945, Lander has been engaged in the private practice of psychoanalysis and psychiatry in Cincinnati. He took his M.D. at Yale in 1929, later had four years of intensive study at the New York Psychoanalytic Institute in preparation for membership in the New York Psychoanalytic Society, and in 1942 became a diplomate of the American Board of Psychiatry and Neurology. Lander interned at Sinai Hospital in Baltimore during 1929-30 and was a resident in neurology at the Montefiore Hospital in New York from October, 1930, to July, 1932, and at the Rockland State Hospital, Orangeburg, N.Y., for the next six months, and again from October, 1933, to July, 1936. He was an assistant physician at the Neurological Hospital in New York from December, 1932, to October, 1933, assistant chief of the Psychiatric Institute at Grasslands Hospital, Valhalla, N.Y., from June, 1936, to June, 1938, and visiting psychiatrist at the Hawthorne Cedar Knolls School, Hawthorne, N.Y., for the next four years. Additional appointments during this period include the following: assistant in neurology, Columbia University; clinical assistant in neurology, Vanderbilt Clinic and Neurological Institute; assistant neuropsychiatrist, Vanderbilt Clinic; and assistant in neurology, New York University Medical College. He had been a consultant to a number of social work agencies in New York prior to his military service and in Cincinnati since settling there after the war. In addition to actual professional consultation work on a regular basis, for the education of the social workers, he has given a series of institutes and seminars for the agencies. At present he is a director of the Children's Protective Services of the Ohio Humane Society and the Jewish Vocation Service in Cincinnati, and he was formerly on the board of the Cincinnati Adult Education Council. He has had eleven articles published in neurological and psychiatric periodicals and has given many (probably several hundred) lectures on psychiatric subjects. Lander is a fellow of the American Psychiatric Association and the American Orthopsychiatric Association.

He was inducted into the Army in August, 1942, as a captain in the Medical Corps, served at an induction station in Cincinnati for about a year, and was then transferred to the Air Force as a psychiatrist. At the time of his separation from service in August, 1945, he was a major and had, for about a year, been in charge of the Air Force Convalescent Hospital at Fort Thomas, Ky.

"Have always been interested in travel and have been fortunate in being able to indulge this," he says. "Have been to Bermuda several times, Europe twice; went to Honduras while working on a banana boat in the early Thirties as ship's physician. Have also gone to Cuba several times, to Jamaica, and in 1950 had a fascinating trip through Mexico. Hope to continue this activity. I spend a great deal of time in gardening and manage to putter in the workshop in odd hours. The demands of professional life limit me, or I would spend much more time in these pursuits."

Lander was first married September 10, 1934, in New York City, to Heler

Ipcar, daughter of O. Ipcar. Her death occurred on June 20, 1935. On June 27, 1940, he was married in Scarsdale, N.Y., to Hazel Helen Feldman Prager-son, of Mt. Vernon, N.Y., daughter of Herman and Olga Arnheimer Feldman. They have two children: Susan Feldman, born April 29, 1941, in New York, and Robert Feldman, born March 2, 1943, in Cincinnati.

VICTOR JOHN LARSON. Chemist, Hercules Powder Company, Hercules Experiment Station, Wilmington, Del.; residence, 139 Tennessee Avenue, Pleasant Hills, Newport, Del.

"Have been employed as a chemist in several paint companies," Larson reports. "Enjoy work because of continual change in materials available, types of formulae, type of work—generally no titles, but continual pay checks—never out of work.

"Have been married almost twenty years—surprisingly still happily married. Have attended an occasional Yale alumni club meeting—not too interested—bad Yale man. Not much of interest to others."

Taking Larson's coöperation with us as evidence, we would say that he couldn't possibly be described as a bad Yale man.

His first job (1926-37) was with the Devoe & Raynolds Company as an analytical and formulating chemist. He was in Cleveland as a formulating and varnish chemist with the Arco Company during the next four years and in Newark the following year as a formulating chemist with the Vita Var Corporation. In 1942 he had a government job with the F.P.H.A. in Washington and since then has been with the Hercules Powder Company, at first in Mansfield, Mass., and since then in Wilmington. He is in charge of the varnish section of the products application laboratory and the synthetics research division and is also involved in the technical service and sales development angles. He is a member of the Federation Paint and Varnish Production Clubs.

Larson's marriage to Anne E. Strickland, of Boston, took place in Malden, Mass., on May 15, 1931.

FRANK WILCOX LAUDER. Owner, Frank Lauder—Jeweler, 96 Washington Street, South Norwalk, Conn.; residence, Englewood Road, South Norwalk.

Until 1929 Lauder was assistant superintendent of the Consolidated Gas Company of New York and during the next three years was assistant to the vice-president of the Automatic Signal Corporation in New Haven. He has been in the retail jewelry business since then and says that he earned the R.J. title in the American Gem Society through study with the Gemological Institute of America.

Lauder's marriage to Lois Katherine Hayes, daughter of Clifford P. and Nina Rowland Hayes, took place in South Norwalk on June 17, 1929. Their children were all born there, Margaret Jane on October 14, 1930, Nancy Lois on November 23, 1934, and Frank Wilcox, Jr., on April 20, 1941. The older girl is a Junior at Skidmore College and Nancy at the Northfield School for Girls.

GEORGE RICHARD LAURENCE. Instructor in science, Chatham School, Chatham, Mass.; residence, Old Harbor Road, Chatham.

"I have traveled up and down the Eastern coast," Laurence says. "Have devoted career to teaching, which I enjoy very much. Once in a while regret not going on into medicine as originally planned. For the last two years have taught science education and training for the Town of Chatham to high school and large groups of adults. Have time now (since getting out of private school teaching) to sing in the local choral group and a Lodge quartette. Have seen a couple of locations where I'd like to start my own private school.

"Hopes and ambitions: to do a bit of writing and keep the wolf from the door. Been too busy taking care of other people's kids to marry and have some of my own."

From 1926 to 1929 Laurence taught science at the Hampton Institute in Virginia. He was an instructor in chemistry and biology at Lawrence Academy, Groton, Mass., for the next five years, at Kimball Union Academy from 1934 until February, 1935, and then at Mt. Hermon until going to Chatham. He was football and basketball coach at Kimball Union and at Mt. Hermon coached football (under-sixteen-year olds) for twelve years. Laurence took his M.A. at Harvard in 1941. He is a member of the New England Association of Chemistry Teachers, the New England Association of Physics Teachers, and the Masonic order, being organist of St. Martin's Lodge in Chatham.

EDWARD ELLIOTT LEA. Secretary of the corporation and director of purchases, Ferro Concrete Construction Company, 203 West 3d Street, Cincinnati 2, Ohio; residence, 3533 Holly Lane, Cincinnati 8.

Lea went with the Ferro Concrete Construction Company as a timekeeper in 1926. He became assistant construction superintendent in 1928, construction superintendent a year later, served as assistant to the vice-president and purchasing agent from 1930 to 1933, as purchasing agent during the next two years, and since then has been secretary and director of purchases. During 1927-28 Lea took evening courses at the University of Cincinnati. He is vice-president and treasurer of the Budget Meat Plan of Cincinnati, Inc., has been a director of the Cincinnati Country Club since 1947, and belongs also to the Commonwealth Club (director 1943-44; treasurer 1948-49) and the Racquet Club, of which he was a director from 1933 to 1940 and president during 1936-37. He worked on the Robert A. Taft campaign in 1950 and has been active in the Community Chest and Red Cross campaigns each year. Lea goes on hunting trips from time to time with Mike Haydock, who has an island in McGregor Bay, Ontario.

He was married in Cincinnati on October 16, 1937, to Mary Morrison Roberts, daughter of Jesse Nevin and Mary Hunter Morrison Roberts. Their son, Edward Elliott, Jr., was born in Cincinnati on May 29, 1939.

PHILLIP EPHRAIM LEAR. Surgeon, Medical Arts Building, 142 Joralemon Street, Brooklyn, N.Y.; residence, 3177 Bedford Avenue, Brooklyn 10.

Lear writes: "From graduation to 1930 I did chemical research for a large Eastern public utility [Consolidated Edison]. Then I decided to go to medical school and graduated in 1934. I spent six years training in general surgery and have been teaching surgery and conducting a private practice in surgery from 1939 to date, except for the period of military service during World War II."

From 1933 to 1936 Lear was an interne and assistant resident in surgery at the Long Island College Hospital. During the next three years he was assistant resident and resident in surgery on the university service at the Kings County Hospital in Brooklyn, and he is now director of surgery on that service. He is associate professor of clinical surgery at the State University Medical Center in New York, surgical consultant to the Brooklyn Veterans Hospital, a fellow of the American College of Surgeons, a diplomate of the American Board of Surgery, and a member of the Brooklyn Surgical Society. During the war he was assigned as chief of the surgical service at the Valley Forge General Hospital in Phoenixville, Pa.

Lear's marriage to Dora Hersh, daughter of Phillip E. and Rose Henick Hersh, took place in Boston on September 27, 1936. They have two daughters, both of whom were born in Brooklyn, Elizabeth H. on March 22, 1940, and Marion Phillis on March 16, 1942.

JOSEPH LEV. Address, 274 East Hackett Boulevard, Albany, N.Y.

RALPH THEODORE LEVIN. Physician, Indianapolis Clinic, 3209 North Meridian Street, Indianapolis 8, Ind.; residence, 2883 North Centennial Street, Indianapolis 44.

Levin, who specializes in radiology, is an assistant in that department at the Indiana University School of Medicine. From December, 1941, to March, 1946, he was on active duty as a commander in the Naval Reserve. Levin is the co-author of an article published in the American Journal of Roentgenology and Radium Therapy for September, 1950, and the author of one in the October, 1945, issue of the U. S. Navy Medical Bulletin, another in the American Journal of Medical Sciences for March, 1951, and of one which is to appear in the American Heart Journal. He belongs to the American Medical Association, the American College of Radiologists, and the Indiana State Roentgen Society.

Mrs. Levin was Doris Bernstein, daughter of Nathan and Hilda Bernstein, of Indianapolis. They have three children: Sophia Ellen, born June 14, 1942, in Portsmouth, Va., Nathan Isaac on October 27, 1945, in Norfolk, Va., and Hilda Ann on November 23, 1948, in Indianapolis.

LEICESTER SARGENT LEWIS. Vice-president and secretary, Tabor Manufacturing Company (foundry equipment), 6225 Tacony Street, Philadelphia 35, Pa.; residence, 714 Pennstone Road, Bryn Mawr, Pa.

Lewis, who has been with the Tabor Manufacturing Company since graduation, has been secretary for some years and vice-president since 1945. He is a member of the Engineers Club.

He was first married in June, 1927, in Bryn Mawr to Audrey T. C. Sanders, daughter of Henry Neville and Lillian M. Caulfeild Sanders. Her death occurred in October, 1936. In July, 1937, he was married in Rye, N.Y., to Sara B. Peet, daughter of William Creighton and Meta B. Potts Peet. Lewis has two daughters: Sarah Lewis, born April 12, 1935, and Meta Brevoort on November 17, 1938. They were both born in Bryn Mawr and are attending the Baldwin School there.

HOWARD AMOS LIGHT. Owner, Valley Litho Company, 384 Dwight Street, Holyoke, Mass.; residence, 8 Elm Street, South Hadley Falls, Mass.

Since May, 1946, Light has been in the printing and lithography business, as owner of the Valley Litho Company. Before that he was successively a salesman for the Flinthote Company, manager of the Union Pin Company, and controller of the Sullivan Machinery Company. During World War II he had four years' duty as assistant branch chief of the ammunition branch at the Detroit Ordnance District and was awarded the Army Commendation Ribbon for his service. He had the rank of major.

Light's marriage to Loraine M. Carriel, daughter of Dwight H. and Bertha Brady Carriel, took place in Claremont, N.H., on November 23, 1940. They have two sons: Howard Amos, Jr., born on November 1, 1943, and Peter Eliot on April 5, 1945, both in Detroit.

VERNON WILLIAM LIPPARD. Dean, Department of Medicine and professor of pediatrics, University of Virginia; residence, 1903 Edgewood Lane, Charlottesville, Va.

"When I graduated in 1926, I expected to become a small town physician somewhere in New England," Lippard tells us. "Twenty-five years later, I find that I have lived in New York, New Guinea, Manila, New Orleans, and Virginia and that the intervening years have been passed in hospitals, laboratories, and classrooms rather than in a buggy. After spending my college years trying to keep away from a dean's office, I find myself in one about ten hours a day.

"We spend our summers at Georgetown, on the Maine coast, sailing, chopping wood, and playing tennis. When in the mood, I paint water colors and, although not in a class with Winslow Homer, enjoy myself. Have exhibited in shows of the New Orleans Art Association and the Albermarle Art Association. No prizes!

"Last summer we went to Italy, where I took part in a survey of health services, carried out under the auspices of the Italian Government, the Rockefeller Foundation, and the World Health Organization."

Lippard took his M.D., cum laude, at Yale in 1929 and interned at the New Haven Hospital. He was assistant resident and resident pediatrician at the New York Nursery and Child's Hospital from 1930 to 1932, resident pediatrician at the New York Hospital during 1932-33, and an instructor and associate in pediatrics at Cornell University Medical College during the next five years. In 1939 he became associate dean of the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Columbia, where he remained until 1946. He was dean and professor of pediatrics at the School of Medicine at Louisiana State University from 1946 to 1949, when he went to the University of Virginia as dean of the Department of Medicine and professor of pediatrics. Lippard is a member of the board of medical consultants of the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies.

He gives the following details of his World War II service: "Entered active duty as major, Medical Corps, U.S. Army, July 15, 1942, assigned to the 9th General Hospital. After training at Fort Andrews, Boston Harbor, and Fort Devens and attending the Medical Field Service School, Carlisle Barracks, Pa., sailed from San Francisco in July, 1943, for Australia with the hospital, as executive officer. Spent one month in Australia and moved to Goodenough Island, off the coast of New Guinea. Set up 1,000-bed hospital and directed laboratory and studies on scrub typhus. In July, 1944, moved with hospital to Biak Island, Netherlands East Indies, where we operated a 2,000-bed hospital which handled casualties from Palau Islands and Philippine invasions. In May, 1945, was transferred to headquarters, Army Forces of the Western Pacific, as chief of medical personnel. Discharged in December, 1945. Promoted to lieutenant colonel in 1943 and to colonel in 1945."

During 1938-39, while in New York, Lippard had an appointment as director of study with the Commission for the Study of Crippled Children, and in 1949 he was consultant on education for the health services to the State of Florida, as well as to the Italian Government. He has been engaged in numerous civic and relief activities, is a member of the local and state medical societies, the Society for Pediatric Research, Alpha Omega Alpha (honorary medical society), and the Farmington Country Club, and since 1949 has served on the executive council of the Association of American Medical Colleges.

In addition to a 218-page report on the Crippled Child in New York City, written in connection with his duties as director of study for the Commission for Study of Crippled Children in 1940, he is the author of Education for the Health Services in the State of Florida, published by the Florida State Boards of Education and Control in 1949. He is the co-author of the chapter on Personnel for the Health Services in the Report of the Commission for the Study of the Reorganization of the Italian Health Care Services, published in Rome in 1949, and the author or co-author of a number of articles, several of which have been published in the American Journal of Diseases of Children, the American Journal of Tropical Medicine, the Medical and Surgical Journal, and the Southern Medical Journal, as well as of a number of discussions and reports and articles in non-professional publications.

Lippard was married August 29, 1931, in Winchester, Mass., to Margaret Isham Cross, daughter of the Rev. Judson Lewis Cross (B.D. Yale 1904) and Florence Emily Isham Cross. Their daughter, Lucy Rowland, born April 14, 1937, in New York, is a high school Freshman.

JACOBO SENIOR LOBO. Died February 14, 1951.

When Lobo sent in his report some time before his death, he said that he had been president of Azucarera Amazonas S.A. (sugar growing and grinding) in Havana since June, 1945, and that until December, 1950, he had also been general manager of the Galban Lobo Trading Company S.A. He added, "I am still quite fat—weigh over 300 pounds. Mike Haydock and Ray Lull were down to spend a week of hunting and fishing early in December."

Lobo had been president of the Yale Club of Cuba since January, 1949. He was married on February 20, 1932, in Havana, to Estela Menocal, daughter of Narciso and Concepcion Otero Menocal. They were divorced in 1950. He had three children: Mario José, born December 15, 1932, Heriberto on July 16, 1935, and Virginia on July 12, 1938, all in Havana. The older boy, a Senior at the Canterbury School in New Milford, Conn., is planning to go to Yale in September, 1951. Heriberto is a Sophomore there, but has not as yet decided where he will go to college. Virginia, who is in school in Havana, is entered for the Ethel Walker School in 1952.

FREDERICK SIGISMUND LOEB. Engaged in economic research; residence, 2543 Paducah Street, Flint 4, Mich.

Loeb writes: "After graduation I became a salesman. Later opened an advertising agency [Loeb Radio Advertising Agency] in Pittsburgh with brother Howard, Yale '25. In 1933, along with Howard, bought Radio Station WFDF in Flint and was commercial manager there until the station was sold in 1948. I am now doing economic research as a hobby—which some day may also become a business." He lists other things as follows: "Travels: throughout Europe and most of the United States as vacations; hobbies, recreations, special interests: research; ambitions and hopes: to make research work helpful to the public; regrets: none; satisfactions: just plain happy over everything."

Loeb's marriage to Stella Kumorek, daughter of Charles and Julia Kumorek, took place in Flint on July 5, 1933. Her home was formerly in Pittsburgh.

THOMAS ASHTON LOGAN. Vice-president, Automatic Electric Sales Corporation, distributors of dial telephone systems and related communication apparatus, 21 East 40th Street, New York 16, N.Y.

Logan, who has been vice-president of the Automatic Electric Sales Corporation since April 1, 1947, is also president of the Automatic Telephone Services, Inc. He attended the Harvard Business School during 1933-34. On February 3, 1941, he entered active duty as a lieutenant in the Air National Guard. He served overseas for three years with the Air Force in the North African and Mediterranean theatres of operation and was awarded the Legion of Merit. He was separated from active duty as a colonel in the Air Force in March, 1946.

"I am still working on the first million and plan to get married as soon as I accumulate it," he says. "Cannot report much progress to date, but believe I am solvent. My primary concern at the moment is in trying to find a way of avoiding another hitch of military service."

ZACH SMITH LOGAN. Treasurer, Logan Company, manufacturers, Louisville, Ky.; residence, 2510 Grinstead Drive, Louisville.

Logan has been treasurer of the Logan Company of Louisville for some years. His marriage to Catherine Clay Hoagland, daughter of E. C. and Mary Orlando Johnston Hoagland, took place in Louisville on November 2, 1926. They have three children: Patsie Logan, born July 9, 1927, in Baton Rouge, La., Kitty Clay on June 13, 1929, in Louisville, and Zack Hume on February 5, 1944, also in Louisville. Patsie's marriage to William Peak took place in Louisville in 1948.

Logan likes to ride, and when his report came in June the family was just back from a ranch vacation in Tucson, Ariz. Last summer they were at Eaton's Ranch in Sheridan, Wyo.

PHILIP HENRY LOUGHLIN, JR. Vice-president, Curlee Clothing Company, Mayfield, Ky.; residence, Chappell Court, Mayfield.

Loughlin reports as follows: "After graduation I moved from Westminster, Mass., to St. Louis to take a position with the Curlee Clothing Company. In 1929 I moved to Mayfield, Ky., where the company acquired the Mayfield Woolen Mills. I was associated with S. H. Curlee, Jr., '26 S., in the operation of this company until it was absorbed by the parent company a few years later. Since that time I have operated the Mayfield plant and helped establish and build a new plant at Winchester, Ky. I make frequent trips to St. Louis and Winchester and occasionally to New York, but regret that I do not have the opportunity to see many classmates of 1926 S."

Loughlin has been vice-president of his company, which is engaged in manufacturing men's clothing, since 1945. He is a director of the Mayfield Insurance Agents and has been chairman of the Mayfield Electric Plant Board since 1947. He has been president of the Mayfield Country Club for the past three years and belongs also to the University and Racquet clubs of St. Louis.

On August 27, 1936, his marriage to Adelaide Jackson, daughter of Clarence Hughlette and Lucy Curd Jackson, took place in Mayfield. They have two sons: Philip Henry, 2d, born on October 14, 1938, and John Jackson, born November 8, 1944, both in Mayfield.

RAYMOND MILLS LULL. Engaged in farming; address, Given Road, Indian Hill, Box 199, R.R. 1, Cincinnati 27, Ohio.

Says Lull, "I hope my address after next year will be Mill Reef Club, Antigua, British West Indies, for at least six months of the year in the good company of Ren Bartram and Bert Work. The club is an interesting venture in pioneering in which I am intensely interested. Curiously enough, the membership of the club is at least 80 per cent Yale."

From 1928 to 1943 Lull was a partner in Haydock, Lull & Peabody (now Haydock & Company), an investment counsel firm. He was also secretary and a director of the Hotel Gibson Corporation of Cincinnati from 1930 to 1940, a director of the Leyman Corporation, Supervised Investments, Inc., and the Investment Counsel Fund, Inc., and president of the Radon Electronics Company during 1946-47. Since giving up active business, he has been engaged in farming. He was on active duty as a lieutenant commander in the Naval Reserve from 1942 to 1946, serving as field officer in the Office of Procurement and Material. He belongs to the Camargo Club of Cincinnati (of which he was secretary and a governor from 1930 to 1936) and to the Mill Reef Club at Antigua.

His marriage to Grace Templeton Leyman, daughter of Harry Stoll and Eva Belle Peck Leyman, took place in Cincinnati on June 22, 1929.

JOHN HENRY LYNCH. Sales engineer, Automatic Electric Sales Corporation, 21 East 40th Street, New York 16, N.Y.; residence, 50 Vanderbilt Avenue, New York 17.

"Have been in New York City most of the time, except for Army travel," says Lynch. "Nothing exciting to report. Have just been plugging along like most of the Class. Have been trying to 'settle up before I settle down,' but it looks like a difficult job at this late date! Have been back to most of the reunions and am looking forward to our Twenty-fifth."

Lynch has been in sales work with the following firms: Dictaphone Sales Corporation, New York City, for about eleven years; J. H. Lynch Associates (advertising and commercial art)—own business with a partner, for about a year before going into Army; Wassell Organization, Westport, Conn.—in New York City sales office; Automatic Electric Sales Corporation—since May, 1948. His company is engaged in the sale and distribution of the products of the Automatic Electric Company, originators of the automatic dial telephone equipment and associated products. A bachelor, he makes his home at the New York Yale Club.

Lynch entered the Army as a private in November, 1942, and subsequently served in the Medical and Quartermaster Corps and the Military Police. At the time of his discharge in November, 1944, he ranked as a sergeant.

BERT PARKER McCANN. Address, 6533 30th Avenue, N.E., Seattle 5, Wash.

FRED IGNATIUS McCARTHY. Address, 640 Whitney Avenue, New Haven, Conn.

CHARLES BOUDE McCLELLAND. Address, John Morrell & Company, Ottumwa, Iowa.

CHARLES DANA MCCOY. Petroleum refinery engineer and export manager, Foster Wheeler Corporation, 165 Broadway, New York 6, N.Y.; residence, Braemar Farm, Millington, N.J.

McCoy was with the M. W. Kellogg Company of New York during 1926 and 1927 and then became manager of the Aquatone Corporation of New York.

He has been with the Foster Wheeler Corporation since September, 1928, as a petroleum refinery engineer and, since 1946, as export manager. The company is engaged in the engineering, designing, fabrication, and contracting construction of petroleum refineries, chemical plants, vegetable oil plants, steam generators, condensers, etc.

"International engineering," McCoy says, "easily becomes the romance of life, recreation, hobbies, and special interests, all rolled into one. So there is little time for other interests. My hobbies of photography and stamp collecting are assisted by international travel, but operating a 200-acre farm home in New Jersey, civic, Boy Scout, and church activities must be crowded into those few hours at home between the frequent trips abroad. Last year my air travel exceeded 100,000 miles, including several visits to South and Central America, Europe, Mexico, and Canada.

"It is particularly interesting to live and think and feel with close friends in their businesses and in their homes in each of the many countries visited regularly. One is impressed by the excellence of their education and knowledge of languages, familiarity with the literature, history, and thinking of people outside their own country. In each country it is interesting to find that the ideals and objectives of the leaders and contributors to the advancement of civilization are based upon deep religious conviction applied to current problems for improved living conditions and brotherhood of man. Basically the free peoples of all nations and their religions by which they strive to live and build our civilization are universally identical. If we but learn the languages and peoples of other lands, we can find much to improve our own United States of a free America. Our success as a leader of nations in this world depends directly upon our capacity for Christian principles in our ideals, objectives, and leadership.

"Our professed world objectives such as 'our American way of life' and freedom slogans generally are not understood by the people of other nations and are not inspiring to those who have been torn from their homes and their religions by the ravages of war. If we are to give those people something to live by and fight for against the inroads of communism, then our presently professed objectives must become the demonstrated results of the ideals and objectives of Christianity or other religion which can be understood and embraced by the peoples of those nations."

McCoy's work in the petroleum industry naturally involved him in the defense program during the war. He gave some time to civilian defense also, although it is hard to see how he was able to find any time for that. He has served on the budget committee of the Passaic Township Community Fund and on the official board of Christ Methodist Episcopal Church in New York. His Boy Scout activities have included membership on the executive board of the Watchung Area Council and the chairmanship of the Somerset Hills district. He was on the executive committee of the Hotchkiss School Alumni Association from 1928 to 1949 and of the Yale Engineering Association from 1936 to 1946, and he has served as Class agent for the Yale Alumni Fund since 1932 and as a director of the Fund for the past three years. He has contributed articles on "Petroleum Refinery Planning" to trade magazines and in July, 1949, spoke before the first Pan American Engineering Congress in Brazil on "Coördinated Liquid Fuels Plan" and "Oilshale Retorting and Shale Oil Refining." McCoy was president of the St. Elmo Society from 1940 to 1943, and he belongs to the New York Yale Club, the University Club of Washington, the Pan American Association, the Brazilian-American Association, the Export Managers Club, the American Petroleum Institute, the Instituto Sud-American de Petroleo, and the Pan American Engineering Association.

He was married June 29, 1935, in New York, to Anne Stuart, daughter of Neil and Helen Stuart. Her home was formerly in Jersey City. Their daughter, Helen Stuart, who was born December 15, 1937, is at the Kent Place School in Summit, N.J.

CLIFFORD EDWARD McGRAIL. Commander, U.S.N.; officer-in-charge of construction and public works officer, Marine Corps Recruit Depot, Parris Island, S.C.

McGrail has certainly had an interesting life. He writes: "After graduating, I was employed as a mechanical engineer in railroad work [New Haven Railroad] for a year or so, but soon changed my position to civil engineering [first with the Connecticut State Highway and then with Blair, Inc., consulting engineers] and have been in this field ever since. As a member of the firm of Blair, Inc., I was privileged in helping to layout, plan, and build the new Yale of today with the construction of the $20,000,000 building program. Later, I was employed as construction supervisor for the State of Connecticut, having jurisdiction over the middle third of the state.

"A year before the last war I accepted a lieutenant's commission in the Civil Engineer Corps of the U.S. Navy and was immediately sent to the Canal Zone, where eventually I was in charge of all construction on the Atlantic side of the canal. After three years there, I was transferred to the Pensacola Naval Air Station and held various positions of interest during the latter part of the war. Next I was transferred to Lakehurst, N.J., where I learned all about blimps, helicopters, and the maintenance of huge hangers.

"As one might perceive, I wasn't very happy with my next assignment at Kwajalein in the Marshall Islands. Except for a pleasant air trip across the country, a voyage and sojourn at Hawaii, the rest of the trip was a nightmare. We (my wife and eleven-month-old child) flew to Kwaj via Johnston Island and almost missed Johnston Island in a storm. Many of our classmates probably know what it means to fly that route—but not with a wife and eleven-month-old baby! And Kwajalein—well, our idea of a good time was a ten-minute ride around the island on Sundays. My favorite hobby, golf, took an awful slump.

“Now we’re back in the good old U.S.A. and appreciate it more than ever. This is my first duty with the Marines, and I am enjoying it immensely. From the training here, one can easily see why they are so wonderful a fighting unit.

“Prior to the Korean situation, I had an opportunity to polish up my golf game. Of course, we are now very busy and for how long no one knows at this writing.”

McGrail, who was promoted from lieutenant to lieutenant commander in 1942 and to commander in 1946, has been at Parris Island since October, 1949. While at Lakehurst, he was public works officer and resident-officer-in-charge of construction, and at Kwajalein he was public works officer and officer-in-charge of the construction battalion detachment. He was licensed as a civil engineer in Connecticut in 1932. His marriage to May Vincentia McLoughlin, daughter of John V. and Mary J. Reynolds McLoughlin, took place December 26, 1940, in New Haven, where their daughter, Mary Elizabeth, was born on October 27, 1947.

NEIL WILSON MCKAY. Address, 66 Claremont Avenue, Buffalo, N.Y.

WARREN RENVILLE MCCANN. Address not available.

FRANKLIN CHALONER MCNAIR. Vice-president in charge of manufacturing, Taylor Forge & Pipe Works, Box 485, Chicago 90, Ill.; residence, 740 Ardsley Road, Winnetka, Ill.

From 1926 to 1930 McNair was in the securities business with George H. Burr & Company. Since then he has been with the Taylor Forge & Pipe Works, his present position being that of vice-president in charge of manufacturing. He is a registered professional engineer in the State of Illinois and belongs to the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, the Union League and Economic clubs of Chicago, the Duquesne Club of Pittsburgh, and the Chikaming Country Club of Lakeside, Mich.

His marriage to Marielouise Walstrum, daughter of Arthur and Marguerite Bourse Walstrum, took place in Chicago on December 3, 1948. She formerly lived in California. They have two children: William Chaloner, born September 17, 1949, and Marguerite Kathryn on February 15, 1951, both in Chicago.

WILLIAM EDWARD MARTIN, JR. Special agent, Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company, 503 Dime Building, Allentown, Pa.; residence, 27 North 8th Street, Allentown.

Martin reports: "I was assistant district sales agent for the Bethlehem Steel Company from 1927 to 1935 and lived as a bachelor in the progressive Pennsylvania city of York for nearly four years. Took a hasty vacation trip to continental Europe in the summer of 1932. I left Bethlehem Steel to become a special agent for the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company and in 1936 opened an office in Allentown. Married an Allentown girl in 1945.

"We have been taking our vacations at Skytop, Pa., in the Poconos or on the New Jersey coast. Last year we spent a week at 'The Cloisters' on Sea Island, Ga.—a garden spot and a most delightful place to spend a vacation. We expect to go there again this year. My favorite recreations are golf, skiing, and swimming.

"Started to raise a family rather late, but, as the saying goes, 'better late than never.' Have three beautiful daughters, all of whom, in the not-too-distant future, I am sure, would be delighted to have a father-in-law from 1926 or 1926 S. Still have hopes of having a son to play end on that championship football team of 1972."

Martin took courses at the extension school of the University of Pennsylvania from 1938 to 1942 and in 1945 became a chartered life underwriter. He is a member of the Lehigh Valley Life Underwriters, of which he was president some years ago, and belongs also to the American Society of Chartered Life Underwriters, the Livingston Club, and the Elks Club.

He was first married on March 27, 1940, in Allentown, to Eleanor Rose Roth, daughter of W. Belford and Olivia R. Young Roth. They were divorced in 1945. On July 12, 1945, he was married in Philadelphia to Jean Adele Snyder Wallick, daughter of Charles D. and Mable L. Lawfer Snyder, of Allentown. Their children are: Jan (Mrs. Martin's child by her first marriage, whom Martin has adopted), born October 20, 1944, in Allentown; Lynn, born January 6, 1947, in Bethlehem, Pa.; and Jill, born February 4, 1949, also in Bethlehem.

WISTAR HARRIS MARTING. Engaged in farming, Clarksville, Ohio; address, R.R. 1, Clarksville.

Marting writes: "I have now spent a little over two years running my two farms in southwestern Ohio. Nothing I have ever done has given me so much personal satisfaction. My only regret is I didn't start many years ago. I guess I have just always been a farmer at heart. My main activities are purebred Angus cattle, registered Berkshire hogs, and certified grass seeds. The first six months of farming knocked fifty pounds off the middle section, so I'm in better shape than twenty-five years ago.

"Strange as it may seem, I have less time now to hunt and fish than when I was in the coal business. I do get in one good hunting trip a year and have more time to train my dogs. Am now working on a young Labrador which shows great promise.

"Could rave for hours on the joy of country living versus city life. In my book there is just nothing like it."

The fuel concerns with which Marting was connected were the Consolidation Coal Company (salesman; later director of dealer sales), the Dickinson Fuel Company (Western sales manager), and the Truax-Traer Coal Sales Company (vice-president and director). It was at the end of 1948 that he left the coal business to operate personally the farms which he had operated as a side line since 1933. From 1944 through 1948 he was a director of the Kentucky Republican Club.

He was married on September 15, 1936, in Kansas City, Mo., to Ursula Murphy, daughter of David Andrew and Mary Alice Coffey Murphy.

HENRY McCRAKEN MASON. President, Henry M. Mason Company (building construction), 2206 N.W. Thurman Street, Portland 10, Oregon; residence, 1833 S.W. Laurel Street, Portland 1.

"I have little to report other than that I have been most fortunate both as to family and business," says Mason. "Construction work resembles having a bull by the tail and results in very limited traveling—two trips East and two to California in twenty-five years. The same applies to recreation, but I have managed to catch a fish or bang around a golf ball regularly every two or three years. My ambition is to continue as happy a life as I have had in the last forty-five years."

Mason has had his own business since January, 1947. The company is engaged in general contracting for the construction of buildings. From 1926 to 1928 he was a field engineer for the City of Portland Water Bureau and from 1929 to 1933 construction superintendent for the Ross B. Hammond Company, building constructors. He spent the period from 1934 to 1936 as a concrete technician with the Army Engineers at the Bonneville Dam, then returned to the Ross B. Hammond Company as general superintendent. Mason is serving at present as president of the local chapter of Associated General Contractors and as a director of the Oregon Building Congress. He has also been a director of the Builders Exchange and is an associate member of the American Society of Civil Engineers and a member of the Multnomah Athletic Club. He has taken part in the annual Red Cross and Community Chest drives.

On September 14, 1932, he was married in Portland to Elizabeth Russell Sewall, daughter of Chester D. and Mabelle Russell Renaud Sewal. There are three boys in the family: Henry Russell, born January 12, 1937, Thomas George on July 10, 1939, and James Michael on October 22, 1943, all in Portland.

PATRICK ANTHONY MAZZA. Sales engineer, Reliance Varnish Company (paints, varnishes, lacquers, etc.) of Louisville, Ky.; business and residence, 1516 North 15th Street, Reading, Pa.

Mazza has been a sales engineer with the Reliance Varnish Company since May, 1943. He had previously been connected with the Dura Gloss Rubber Company of New Haven as chemist and superintendent and with the Glidden Company of Reading as research chemist. He belongs to the Knights of Columbus and the Elks.

His marriage to Jean C. Aiello, daughter of George and Theresa Barbara Aiello, took place in New Haven on September 17, 1923. They have three children: Patrick A., Jr., born June 23, 1924, in New Haven; Diane U., born March 4, 1936, in Reading; and John A., born September 23, 1943, also in Reading. Pat, Jr., graduated from the Central Catholic High School in 1942 and received a B.S. at Notre Dame in 1945 and an M.D. at Jefferson Medical College five years later. Diane is a high school Sophomore and John is in kindergarten. "Yes, quite a stretch of years," Mazza says.

He adds, "During a trip to Buenos Aires some years ago, after 1926, as I was about to enter a restaurant, a heavy tap landed on my shoulder. Turning around, I had to look up, for it was a giant of a man, and as I was about to reach in my pocket for a coin, since he looked like a panhandler, he said 'me Louis Firpo.' And sure enough, Firpo it was. He just wanted to say hello and converse with Americanos. He asked about the U.S. and particularly about Jack Dempsey. I asked him how he was doing, and he pointed across the street to an establishment—'Louis Firpo—Stutz and Packards.'

"Other than this incident nothing unusually eventful has happened during the last twenty-five years."

JOHN CARLETON MENDILLO. Surgeon, 255 Bradley Street, New Haven, Conn.; residence, 24 Huntington Street, New Haven.

"By virtue of my profession," Mendillo writes, "I have spent practically my entire twenty-five years in New Haven. After graduating from the Yale Medical School, six years were spent in the New Haven Hospital to qualify in my specialty as a surgeon. Before starting my final year as chief resident surgeon, I spent two months in France and Italy as a Davis & Geck research fellow. I went into private practice in New Haven in 1936; got married and raised a family of five children. Traveling has consisted chiefly of visits to large medical centers for surgical meetings. In the summer I play tennis and swim at our summer beach house in Laurel Beach, Milford, and in my few spare hours during the winter I play badminton."

Mendillo has had the following appointments at the New Haven Hospital: interne in surgery, 1930-32; assistant surgical pathologist, 1932-33; assistant resident in surgery, July, 1933-January, 1935; resident surgeon, July, 1935-July, 1936; currently attending surgeon. He served as a clinical instructor in surgery at the Medical School from 1935 to 1946 and has since held an assistant professorship (clinical). At present he is also attending surgeon at Grace and St. Raphael's hospitals in New Haven and consulting surgeon at Griffin Hospital in Derby, Conn. He is a member of the American Board of Surgery, the Society of University Surgeons, and the Connecticut Board Surgeons, Inc., and a fellow of the American College of Surgeons and the International College of Surgeons. He also belongs to the New Haven City, County, and State Medical societies, the American Medical Association and from 1938 to 1942 served as secretary of the city society.

He was married on October 12, 1936, in Easton, Pa., to Emily Wetmore, daughter of Dr. S. S. P. Wetmore and Mabel Comly Wetmore. The children were all born in New Haven, Emily Ann on August 2, 1937, John C., Jr., on October 9, 1938, Stephen W. on October 9, 1940, Nancy C. on July 4, 1943, and James R. on August 21, 1945.

ALAN NORMAN MENDLESON. President, B. T. Babbitt, Inc., manufacturers of chemicals, cleaners, caustic soda, etc., 386 4th Avenue, New York 16, N.Y.; residence, 7 Oak Lane, Scarsdale, N.Y.

"Life just goes on," says Mendleson. "Raised one family and when they were in service started another—now almost six years old. Just a business man—no honors—no political ambition—just making a living. Get to Europe, South America, and travel just as a pasttime—and to see economic conditions elsewhere so I can appreciate the U.S.A. Farm in Maine in summers, collect first edition Clemens, American antiques; used to play tennis. No regrets—except physical discharge from the service due to heart attack."

Mendleson became president of his company on January 1, 1946. He is a director of the company and also of the B. T. Babbitt Corporation, B. T. Babbitt, Ltd., the Champion Chemical Works, Inc., and the E. Myers Lye Corporation. From 1930 to 1942 he held a Reserve commission as captain. He was on active duty (as executive officer at the Exchange School at Princeton University) with the rank of major from July to September, 1942, and was discharged for physical reasons the following month.

He is a member of the Officers' Club of the Army and Navy, the Masonic order, the New York Yale Club, the Harmonie Club, the Sunningdale Country Club, and the Country Tennis Club of Westchester. Mendleson is on the board of directors of the 92d Street "Y" and of the Westchester Children's Association. He has been active in scouting for a long time, serving as chairman of three troops, two dens, and an explorer troop.

His marriage to Babette Suzanne Kofka took place in New Haven on August 3, 1925. The two oldest children were born in Scarsdale, Jerry, 2d, on August 12, 1926, and Alan N., Jr., on September 7, 1927. The youngest, Jane I., was born in New York City on April 3, 1945. Jerry, who graduated from the Berkshire School in 1944 and the University of Virginia in 1949, served in the American Field Service with the French 1st Army during the war. Alan, Jr., was in the Class of 1945 at the Scarsdale High School and that of 1949 at Nichols College. He was a private in the Marine Corps.

KENNETH FREDERICK MERLIN. Treasurer, Lott-Merlin, Inc. (wrapping and printing paper distributors), Wall Street, Stamford, Conn.; residence, Tory Hole Road, Darien, Conn.

Merlin writes: "This year marks the twenty-eighth of my connection with the paper industry. Living within ten minutes drive of the office has its definite compensations. Own a nice house on two acres of ground in Darien, in which I live with my wife (twenty-two years of marital bliss), a son of fourteen, a daughter of sixteen, and two Golden Retrievers. My hobby, vice, and extravagance is a 42-foot twin screw sport fishing boat on which we spend most summer week-ends and vacations. Any members of '26 S. are invited to hail Salt on Long Island or Block Island Sound and come aboard for reunion and drink."

Since August, 1928, Merlin has been treasurer of his company, the main office of which is in Stamford, with branches in Bridgeport and Danbury, Conn., and White Plains, N.Y. He has been a director of the Stamford Chamber of Commerce since 1949, was president of the Stamford Rotary Club during 1943-44, and he belongs also to the Stamford Yacht Club, the Midtown Club of Stamford, and the New York Railroad Club.

Mrs. Merlin, whose maiden name was Josephine I. McMeel, is the daughter of James and Elizabeth McMeel. They were married in Old Greenwich, Conn., on October 16, 1929. Their daughter, Judith Ann, who was born August 30, 1934, in Stamford, is at Dana Hall, while Kenneth F., Jr., born March 8, 1926, in Stamford, is at The Hill School.

MARTIN MOSES MERRIAM. Lawyer, 157 Church Street, New Haven, Conn.; residence, 1499 Boulevard, New Haven.

From 1926 to 1930 Merriam was assistant general manager of O. B. North, Inc., of New Haven and during the next two years was with Bailey & Bailey, accountants and auditors. He then took up the study of law at Yale and after receiving his LL.B. degree in 1935, began practice in New Haven. During 1943-44 Merriam served as assistant chief of the legal division of the Springfield (Mass.) Ordnance District. He was comptroller of the Self Winding Clock Company of New York during the next two years and general manager of the Ibis International Corporation of New York during 1946-47 and at present is a director of the following New Haven concerns: Axtac, Inc., Swiss Automatics, Inc., the Triplem Company, and Meriel-Miles, Inc.

In 1943 Merriam took a special training course at the Harvard Business School. He is a member of the Federal Bar, as well as of the Connecticut State Bar, and belongs to the Connecticut State and New Haven County Bar associations. His marriage to Ethelynne Brazel, daughter of Louis and Anna Gainborough Brazel, took place in New York City on May 5, 1942.

He concludes briefly: "Hobby: photography, regrets: none; special interests: to stay alive in an 'atomic age.' "

JOSEPH METCALF, 2D. President and treasurer, Holyoke Worsted Company (worsted suitings), Kennebunk, Maine; residence, 21 Summer Street, Kennebunk.

Metcalf writes: "On May 1, 1951, I moved my business, the Holyoke Worsted Company, from Holyoke, Mass., to Kennebunk, Maine. We have bought a house there and plan to move the family there about the first of July. We would be most happy to have any classmates drop in to see us. My hobby is boating, and since the war I have spent the summer week-ends on our Casey Cutter cruising from Saybrook to Nantucket. This summer I will be hard at work ashore, but next summer plan to cruise Maine waters."

Metcalf has been president and treasurer of the Holyoke Worsted Company since 1940. During the preceding fourteen years he was with the Farr Alpaca Company, being agent and a director from 1936 to 1940. He is a director of the Hadley Falls Trust Company of Holyoke and of the Holyoke & Westfield Railroad and in 1934 served on the Holyoke Board of Aldermen.

On November 27, 1926, he was married to Alice Elizabeth Conrad, daughter of H. Murray and Ethel Josephine Folger Conrad, in Framingham Center, Mass. There are three boys in the family, all of whom were born in Holyoke, Joseph Metcalf, 3d, on December 20, 1927, Frank on May 19, 1930, and Conrad on February 7, 1934. Joseph, who is a graduate of Vermont Academy, is in the Class of 1951 at Annapolis. He was married on June 13, 1951, to Ruth A. Daniels, daughter of Dr. Marie Daniels, of Holyoke. Frank, who is attending Kenyon College, received his preparatory education at Proctor Academy. Conrad is now at Westminster.

FRANK JOHN MEYER. Address not available.

LOUIS FRANK MIDDLEBROOK. Physician and surgeon, 85 Jefferson Street, Hartford 6, Conn.; residence, 60 High Farms Road, West Hartford 7.

Middlebrook reports as follows: "After leaving Yale, I went to Johns Hopkins Medical School, where I graduated in 1930. By piecing together elective time between the third and fourth years, I was able to spend six months abroad, taking courses at the Medical School of the University of Kiel in Germany and at the Rotunda Hospital in Dublin. I concentrated on obstetrics and gynecology in both places. During part of that summer (1929) I toured Germany on a bicycle. After returning to finish medical school, my travels were over; and after the completion of my training I began practice in Hartford in October, 1932. This was four months before F.D.R. closed the banks. I started off in general practice—amassing the great sum of $660.40 my first year. At that point in my career I would gladly have welcomed socialization. I was able to limit myself to my specialty after three years and have become fairly well established since then. During a rather dull and somewhat frustrating tour of duty in the Navy Medical Corps in World War II I nearly succumbed to a coronary thrombosis, but have been able to open up shop again in the practice of obstetrics and gynecology, to which I returned in 1946.

"I have a summer home at Squam Lake, N.H., where I indulge in one month of recreation—with fishing, sailing, and boating. Obstetrical practice pretty well precludes any recreation for the other eleven months.

"I am shy on hobbies except for a modest interest in gardening, architecture, and photography. Many of my regrets I have forgotten—and have turned into satisfactions.

"My most special outside interest at present is the Connecticut Medical Service—a plan of prepaid surgical and maternity care—sponsored by the Connecticut State Medical Society and administered by Blue Cross." [He is secretary and a director of the organization.]

Middlebrook served his internship at the Hartford Hospital and his residency at the Providence (R.I.) Lying-In Hospital. He has been on the staff of the Hartford Hospital again since 1934, first as assistant visiting obstetrician and gynecologist and, since 1946, as associate obstetrician and gynecologist. He is also a consulting obstetrician at the McCook Memorial Hospital, of whose staff he has been a member since 1933. Middlebrook has made a number of "minor" contributions to medical literature in his speciality, and he has taken graduate courses in social work at the University of Connecticut. In 1942 he was certified as a member of the American Board of Obstetrics and Gynecology. He is a fellow of the American Medical Association and a member of the Connecticut State Medical Society, the Hartford County Medical Association, the Hartford Medical Society (associate librarian), the New England Obstetrical and Gynecological Society, and the Knife and Stork Club (formerly president) and has served on various committees of these organizations. He is an associate member of the Hartford Golf Club.

He held a commission as a first lieutenant in the Army Medical Corps Reserve from 1930 to 1940 and in November, 1943, went on active duty as a lieutenant commander (volunteer, specialist) in the Medical Corps, U.S.N.R. He was stationed at the Naval Hospital at the Marine Barracks, Quantico, Va., until February, 1945, when he was transferred on the sick list to the Naval Hospital at Newport, R.I. He was retired by the Navy in February, 1946.

Middlebrook was married in Hartford, September 11, 1935, to Eugenia Gertrude Caravatt, daughter of Peter Mary and Santina Gropelli Caravatt. Her home was formerly in Canaan, Conn. They have two children, both of whom were born in Hartford, Stephen Beach on January 30, 1937, and Nancy Burton on April 3, 1939. The boy is in the Class of 1954 at the Loomis School.

JOHN FLEEK MILLER. Physician, 13 West Church Street, Newark, Ohio; residence address, Route 3, Newark.

Miller received the degree of M.D. at Harvard in 1930 and served his internship and residency at the Children's Hospital in Boston. He was made a diplomate of the National Board of Medical Examiners in 1933 and a licentiate of the American Board of Pediatrics the following year. He has been practicing in Ohio since 1933, served as health commissioner for Newark from 1938 to 1940, and since 1949 has been a member of the Licking County Welfare Council. He has had several articles on professional subjects, mainly on intestinal parasites, published in various medical journals. Miller is a fellow of the American Academy of Pediatrics and the American College of Physicians.

In April, 1942, he entered the Army as a captain and was separated from service in 1945 with the rank of lieutenant colonel. He served during most of the war as chief of the pediatric service at the Gorgas Hospital in Panama Canal.

His marriage to Elizabeth Tomlin Lawther, daughter of William Lawther, Jr., and Eleanor Mary Shields Lawther, took place in Dubuque, Iowa, in 1930. Their son, William, who was born in Boston on January 31, 1933, graduated from the Newark High School in 1949 and is now taking a post-graduate year at Lawrenceville. Their daughter, Elizabeth Lawther, Jr., was born in Newark, March 2, 1938.

An orchid for a classmate! Says Miller, "I think I shall devote a few words to the praise of H. G. Phillipps for being the chief means by which I have been able to keep in contact with the Class. Bob always has periodically arrived and spent a short period with me telling me about the doing of the Class. He is a priceless asset to the Class.

"As regards hobbies, I play tennis, although during the last few years I find myself playing mostly doubles."

ALAN CUNNINGHAM MILLIKEN. Address, care Mrs. James Barlow Cullum, "Riveredge Farms," Reading, Pa.

LLEWELLYN PRICE MILLS. Men's wear buyer, Stewart Dry Goods Company, Louisville, Ky.; residence, 1820 Trevilian Way, Louisville.

During the first four years after graduation Mills was with Lord & Taylor in New York City, at first as a section manager and then as assistant buyer of men's wear. Since August, 1930, he has been a buyer with the Stewart Dry Goods Company in Louisville. He has been a solicitor for the various Community Chest and Red Cross drives and during the war was active in the civilian defense program, including the auxiliary police.

His marriage to Gladys Ethel Clark, daughter of Clyde Harrison and Ida Kramer Clark, took place in Louisville in March, 1933. They have a five-year-old daughter, Marilyn Clark Mills, whom they adopted in 1946.

"As a buyer, I have naturally done a lot of traveling," Mills says. "In the past four years I have gone to Europe three times, visiting England, Scotland, and France each time. During the war years I would make about two trips to California a year and about six trips to the New York market. Vacation trips have taken us to Wisconsin, Michigan, Indiana, Florida, and Cuba.

"Golf and amateur movies have been hobbies for a number of years. However, our young daughter is taking up more of my spare time. Would like to adopt another girl or boy.

"I regret that my New York trips have been so short that I haven't had a chance to visit New Haven in a number of years and renew old friendships."

WILLIAM RYAN MOLAN. Field supervisor, Connecticut State Employment Service, 92 Farmington Avenue, Hartford, Conn.; residence, 1 Highland Avenue, Torrington, Conn.

In his report sent towards the end of 1950 Molan said, "By February, 1951, I will have been in state service for sixteen years and like the work I'm doing well enough so that I'll probably continue in it. In the Thirties I played a lot of golf, but gave it up during the war and rarely play now. Since that time my principal hobby has been fishing—mostly trout, but some salt water fishing during the summer."

He gives further details—"With Connecticut State Employment Service since 1935, variously as interviewer, branch manager, assistant manager in Bridgeport and Waterbury, manager in Waterbury and Hartford; field supervisor since January, 1950; also field representative of War Manpower Commission, 1944-46. Previous to that, service manager, Fitzgerald Manufacturing Company, for two years; time and motion study engineer, Brown Instrument Company, Philadelphia, one year; production supervisor, Hood Rubber Company, Watertown, Mass., three and a half years."

During 1938-39 Molan served as vice-president of the Connecticut Labor Department Association, and he was Connecticut membership chairman of the International Association of Public Employment Services in 1944. He belongs to the Knights of Columbus, the Torrington Lodge of Elks, and in 1950 was president of the Elks Glee Club.

He was married on July 3, 1943, in Torrington, to Judith Anne Burns, daughter of Edward Joseph and Judith Marie Palm Burns. Their daughter, Judith Mary, was born in Torrington on December 31, 1945.

JOHN HARRY MOLTOR. Vice-president in charge of manufacturing, Art Color Printing Company, Dunellen, N.J.; residence, 501 West 7th Street, Plainfield, N.J.

"I am fortunate in that both Mrs. Moltor and myself have enjoyed a full life and good health," says Moltor. "I have had only one job and have been fortunate enough to have advanced to a good paying position. We are looking forward to retirement in a few years and expect to spend our time in boating, hunting, and fishing, which is our main interest in life, since we have had no children. We also hope to do some deep-water sailing and cruising in our own boat."

Since 1942 he has been vice-president in charge of manufacturing of the Art Color Printing Company, printers of magazines and large edition catalogues, with which he has been associated since graduation. He is a director of Gravure Research, Inc.

Mrs. Moltor's maiden name was Doris M. Moller. She is the daughter of Henry F. and Leah van Deyne Moller, and they were married in New York on September 15, 1928.

DAVID P. MONHEIMER. Assistant manager, Prudential Insurance Company, 44 King Street, West, Toronto 1, Ontario; residence, 121 Marquette Avenue, Wilson Heights P.O., Ontario.

"I'm lazy," Monheimer confesses. "My special hobby is sleeping and my most difficult single action, conscious or unconscious, is getting out of bed in the morning. I graduated as a metallurgical engineer and hope to close out as an insurance man. I can say that I have three main regrets: 1) that I didn't get married sooner; 2) that I didn't stay a metallurgist; 3) that I didn't keep up closer associations with my classmates."

Monheimer was a trainee with the U.S. Steel Corporation during 1926-27 and a metallurgist with the Cerro de Pasco Copper Company the following year. Since 1928 he has been with the Prudential Insurance Company and for the past eight years has had the position of assistant manager in Toronto. His marriage to Mary H. Marsh, daughter of Thomas and Anna Flinn Marsh, took place in Nutley, N.J., on April 12, 1943.

AMBERT GORDON MOODY. Manager, The Northfield Hotel, East Northfield, Mass.; residence, East Northfield.

From 1927 to 1933 Moody was connected with the product development department of the Fisk Rubber Company, during the last two years being a sales engineer. Since then he has been pleasantly situated in East Northfield as the manager of The Northfield Hotel—the kind of a job, he says, which requires too many hours to do much else except some fishing and sailing at their cottage at Spofford Lake, N.H.

Moody was formerly president of the Massachusetts Hotel Association, the Greenfield Rotary Club, and the Pioneer Valley Association (three county regional promotional associations) At present he is a director of the New England Hotel Association, a member of the resort hotel committee of the American Hotel Association, and a trustee of the Franklin County Public Hospital. He is active in church affairs and community duties and from 1946 to 1949 served as chairman of the Town Finance Committee.

His marriage to Violet Jeffcott took place in Mamaroneck, N.Y., on June 16, 1927. She had previously lived in New Haven and New York. Their daughter, Katherine Jeffcott, who was born in Springfield, Mass., on May 5, 1928, graduated in 1949 from Vassar, where she was a member of Phi Beta Kappa, and is now working for an engineering firm in New York.

WILLIAM HENRY MORGAN. President, Morgan Engineering Company, Alliance, Ohio, residence, 401 Glamorgan Road, Alliance.

Morgan became a director of his company in 1928, vice-president in 1935, and president in May, 1946. The company is engaged in the manufacture of electric overhead traveling cranes, rolling mills and steel mill machinery, forging plant equipment, and open hearth charging machines. Morgan is vice-president and a director of the Mt. Union Bank of Alliance and a director of the Chamber of Commerce. He is a registered professional engineer (industrial) in Ohio, an associate member of the American Iron and Steel Institute, and a member of the Association of Iron and Steel Engineers, the American Institute of Industrial Engineers, the United States Naval Institute, the Navy League of the United States, the Union Club of Cleveland, the New York Yale Club, and the Elks. He contributed an article, "Japan's Capital Ships," to the U.S. Naval Institute Proceedings for July, 1943.

On September 14, 1929, he was married in Massillon, Ohio, to Helen Campbell, daughter of Dr. J. Frank Campbell and Anna G. Williams Campbell. They have had two children: Mary Louise, who was born in Cleveland, May 24, 1930, and William Henry, 3d, who was born July 13, 1931, in Cleveland and died May 16, 1936, in Alliance. Mary Louise graduated from the high school department of the Ogontz School in 1948 and was married March 19, 1949, in Elkton, Md., to Robert Thomas Conroy. They have a daughter—"naturally a very superior child"—Annette Campbell, born December 21, 1949, in Miami. The Conroys are still living in Miami, where Morgan's son-in-law is attending the Law School of the University of Miami. He received his undergraduate education there and during World War II served as a first lieutenant in the Army Air Force.

Morgan writes: "I think that my answers to your questions have pretty well covered the field. I don't think that I have accomplished anything very spectacular since graduation. Have been with the same company, and have the same wife, which may be an accomplishment at that. I get around occasionally on business or otherwise and once in a while run into members of the Class, which is always a pleasure. I try to get back to New Haven at least once a year to the Princeton or Harvard game. I am still a pretty rabid Yale enthusiast and like to see them on top of the heap in sports, academically, and in every other way.

"Don't be too alarmed over that article on the Japanese Navy that the U.S. Naval Institute Proceedings published. It was strictly amateur armchair admiral stuff. My knowledge of the Japanese Navy has been gained at a point some 2,500 miles inland from the Pacific Coast.

"So far as participating in sports, golf about covers it. I am a lousy player, being an erratic southpaw, and have shown little or no improvement in the past twenty-five years, but there is always the hope that the next round will be better, and damn it, I like the game. Also, I might add bridge, canasta, and gin rummy, but on a strictly amateur basis. My wife put the finish on my tennis playing some time ago, after several friends dropped dead on the court. I tried to argue that they would have probably dropped dead in some bar or other less desirable spot anyway, but made no impression whatever.

"I enjoy watching most sports, football, baseball, basketball, and even TV wrestling, which should be the final proof of a highly educated and intelligent mind.

"Since you want to know the hopes of every member of the Class, I hope that you will have enough wheel chairs at reunion for the grandfathers in the Class (God, I never thought that I would get in that class!) At any rate there seems to be a medicine made especially for us which I believe is called Old Grandad. If any of the others don't get proper effect from Old Grandad, I would suggest a bottle of Hadacol. . . .

"As for my ambition, that's easy. My ambition is to see a Republican administration in Washington. To use the king's English, I am damned sick of these bastards that we have had in office since 1933.

"That's all, brother. . . ."

DAVID HICKMAN MOSS. Owner, D. H. Moss Implement Company, 1311 1st Avenue, North, Billings, Mont.; residence, 744 Avenue C, Billings.

Moss was in the ranch and cattle business from 1926 to 1937 and in the implement business during the next five years. From 1942 to 1946 he was cashier of the Little Horn State Bank of Wyola, Mont., and then returned to the implement business as owner of the D. H. Moss Implement Company. During World War II he served on the Draft Board.

On January 17, 1929, his marriage to Marjorie Beatrix Powers took place in Hardin, Mont. Mrs. Moss, whose parents are Leroy and Roxie Carpenter Powers, formerly lived in Quietus, Mont. They have a daughter, Marjorie Marilyn, who was born in Billings on January 6, 1936.

"The only regret I have is that most of the boys live too far away and I don't ever get to see them," says Moss. "My wife and daughter are real pals, and we all love sports, especially baseball. We belong to a duplicate bridge club, and I still abide by the rules that Jack Watson taught me at Yale."

WILLIAM KER MUIR. Assistant general manager, plumbing ware division, Briggs Manufacturing Company, 3001 Miller Avenue, Detroit 11, Mich.; residence, 211 Ridge Road, Grosse Pointe Farms 30, Mich.

From June, 1926, to December, 1937, Muir was with Detroit & Cleveland Navigation, of which he became general superintendent, secretary, and assistant treasurer. He was a vice-president of the Detroit Bank from April, 1938, to December, 1947, and has since been connected with the Briggs Manufacturing Company. He became assistant general manager in 1949. From 1931 to 1943 he served as a trustee of the Village of Grosse Pointe Farms and for nine years, beginning in 1940, he was a vestryman of Christ Church, Grosse Pointe.

His marriage to Florence E. Bodman, daughter of Henry E. and Florence Taylor Bodman, of Grosse Pointe, took place in Detroit on December 17, 1927. Their older boy, W. Howie, 2d, who was born in Detroit on September 23, 1928, is a Senior at Trinity and the younger, William K., Jr. (born October 30, 1931, also in Detroit), a Freshman at Yale. They both prepared for college at Hotchkiss.

EDWIN ARCHIBALD MURRAY. Assistant manager, compressor division, Worthington Pump & Machinery Corporation, Buffalo, N.Y.; residence, 114 North Street, Hamburg, N.Y.

For a number of years Murray was with the General Electric Company, at first in Lynn, Mass., as test engineer and later as application engineer, and then in Schenectady, N.Y., where his position was that of application engineer. He has been assistant manager of the compressor division of the Worthington Pump & Machinery Corporation since about 1948. He is active in Boy Scout work, serving as scoutmaster and chairman of the troop committee and as chairman of the post committee of the explorer scouts. Murray belongs to the Engineering Society of Buffalo. He is "nuts about skiing (should have discovered it years ago). You should try it sometime! As to work—don't make much money, but never a dull moment. Vacations—almost always spent in Connecticut (Westbrook) in the summertime, with a visit to New Haven to check over the situation now and then."

He was married in Middletown, Conn., on September 28, 1928, to Helen E. Kistner, daughter of Albert C. and Leora Parmelee Kistner. Their older son, David S., who is a Freshman at Yale, prepared for college at the Hamburg High School; he was born in Schenectady on September 5, 1932. The younger boy, Edwin A., Jr., was born in Buffalo on March 24, 1941.

JOHN HOFFMAN MURRAY. Address, "Hearthwood," Mill and Moredon Roads, Meadowbrook, Pa.

JOHN EDWARD NETTLETON. Engineer of toll fundamental plans, Southern New England Telephone Company, 227 Church Street, New Haven, Conn.; residence, 105 North Street, Milford, Conn.

Nettleton has been with the Southern New England Telephone Company since 1926, becoming district traffic manager in 1936, general traffic personnel supervisor in 1942, and engineer of toll fundamental plans three years ago. He is a vestryman of Trinity Church, New Haven, and has been district committee chairman of the Boy Scouts and held other positions during the past twenty-five years, although at present he is not very active in the organization. He belongs to the Connecticut Society of Civil Engineers and the Graduates Club of New Haven.

His marriage to Alice Charlotte Thiel took place in New Haven on April 26, 1930. They have three daughters: Barbara Ellen, born April 7, 1932, Jeanne Eleanor on May 1, 1934, and Audrey Alice on February 11, 1939, all in New Haven. Barbara is in the Class of 1954 at the New Jersey College for Women, and Jeanne is a high school Junior.

"As I look back over the years, one of my chief regrets is that I was not able to live at Yale during any of my four years there," Nettleton says. "I realize how much of college life and accompanying friendships I missed. Living in New Haven before and during college and working here now is probably the chief reason, but I will admit no good excuse, why I have never attended a reunion.

"The years have been good to me, however. I have three fine daughters and work I enjoy. Travel is one of my particular recreations, and we have pretty well covered this part of the country. The whole family drove to Yellowstone Park one summer, and my wife and I have cruised on the Great Lakes and toured through the Canadian Rockies.

"One of the hardest things to contemplate is the future of our children. As mine come to college age and think of planning for their adult years, I often find it difficult to look forward with assurance. Certainly the future is far more unsettled and fearful than it was when we graduated. But, as parents have done for generations, we can only hope that the foundation we give our children, together with a strong and abiding faith, will help them to do their small part in world progress and to do it better than we have done ours."

MEREDITH NICHOLSON, JR. Accounting consultant, State Life Insurance Company, State Life Building, Indianapolis, Ind.; residence, 2161 North Meridian Street, Indianapolis.

From 1926 to 1931 Nicholson was treasurer of the Fabric Products Corporation of Indianapolis. Entering the insurance field as an examiner with the Indiana State Department of Insurance in 1933, he was made chief examiner in 1940 and served in that capacity until January, 1945, when he joined the State Life Insurance Company as accounting consultant. He is a director of the Crown Hill Cemetery in Indianapolis.

Nicholson's marriage to Roberta West, daughter of Robert Henry and Nelda C. Windisch West, took place in Cincinnati, Ohio, on October 14, 1925. They have two children: Meredith, 3d, born December 2, 1926, and Eugenie Kountze, born March 1, 1929, both in Indianapolis. They are graduates (B.A.) of Indiana University, Meredith in 1947 and Eugenie in 1950.

JACOB NODELMAN. Physician, 26 Elm Street, New Haven 10, Conn.; residence 275 Whalley Avenue, New Haven 11.

Nodelman, who graduated from the Yale School of Medicine in 1929, spent the following year at Middlesex Hospital as house physician and surgeon and the period from 1930 to 1932 as resident surgeon at the Eye, Ear and Throat

Charity Hospital. Since then he has been engaged in practice in New Haven, specializing in ophthalmology, except for the war period, when he was on active duty in the Medical Corps of the Naval Reserve. His first assignment was to the Naval Hospital at Sampson, N.Y., and his second to the Naval Receiving Station at Pier 92, New York. He then served for a time at the Naval Armed Guard Center in Brooklyn, was subsequently on the U.S.S. Fond du lac (APA 166), later at the Naval Radio Communications Center in Los Angeles, with Acorn Unit 52 at Port Hueneme, Calif., and then at the Naval Hospital at Camp Pendleton. Nodelman ranked as lieutenant commander at the time he went on active duty and as commander at the time of his release from service.

He is a diplomate of the American Board of Ophthalmology and a member of the American Medical Association, the New Haven City and County Medical societies, the Connecticut State Medical Society (and of its eye, ear, nose, and throat section), the Order of American Military Surgeons, and the Phi Lambda medical fraternity. At the present time he is an assistant attending surgeon at the New Haven Hospital and the Hospital of St. Raphael, and attending surgeon at the Grace Hospital Unit, the New Haven Dispensary, and the Jewish Home for the Aged and holds an assistant professorship of ophthalmology in the Yale Medical School. He is unmarried.

JOHN HOLLISTER NORTH. Vice-president and secretary, Pendleton & Pendleton, Inc. (fire and casualty insurance), 135 Montague Street, Brooklyn 2, N.Y.; residence, 100 Hanson Road, Darien, Conn.

North, who has been associated with Pendleton & Pendleton since July, 1926, was made secretary of the concern in 1945 and vice-president in January, 1950. He has been on its board of directors for some time and is a manager of the Brooklyn Insurance Engineering and Inspection Bureau.

"For about fifteen years my 'travels' were daily trips on the famous Long Island Railroad," he says. "Finally saw the light and moved onto the Connecticut mainland in 1950."

He was first married in Brooklyn on September 25, 1926, to Marion Pendleton, daughter of Frederick S. and Clara Thorpe Pendleton. They were divorced in 1934. His second marriage, to Mary Louise Jones, daughter of Joseph William and Hazle Robinson Jones, took place in Corning, N.Y., December 8, 1934. Pendleton has three sons: James Hollister, born in Brooklyn in 1931; John Hollister, 3d, born in Corning, in 1935; and William Pomeroy, born in Mineola, N.Y., in 1941. Jim, now a Junior at Williams, prepared for college at the Emerson School, Exeter, N.H., and at Hotchkiss, where he was in the Class of 1948 and a member of the Cum Laude Society. John is in the Hotchkiss Class of 1953.

BAYES MARSHALL NORTON. Professor of chemistry and chairman, Chemistry Department, Kenyon College; residence, Gambier, Ohio.

Norton writes: "A year at Oxford attracted me into the academic profession, and so after spending a year with E. R. Squibb in Brooklyn and getting an appointment at Yale for the year after, returned to Oxford for a second year. Next instructed in Freshman chemistry at Yale for seven years and participated in getting the College Plan underway as a Fellow at Davenport College. After teaching a year at St. Mark's, I came out to Kenyon to teach general and physical chemistry. This has been a very rewarding career—about half of the students (which is nearly all who are best qualified) have gone on to graduate schools for advanced degrees. Small college teaching is certainly teaching at its best—with small Junior and Senior year classes, it is possible to get students interested in research problems and inevitably they want to go on for graduate work. Just before the war spent a summer with a colleague and a student on top of Mt. Evans in Colorado hunting mesons, when observing them was still quite a rare event. We caught some in a cloud chamber. Took up painting about this time and have had a lot of fun with it as a hobby since. After the A.A.F. had saturated the world with meteorologists, I joined the O.S.R.D. and was soon sent as its resident officer at California Tech, where the Mt. Palomar 200-inch mirror was an ornament in my office. A high spot here was escorting Dr. Lindemann and Lord Chervell (Winston Churchill's scientific adviser) on a visit to our desert rocket test ranges.

"Bayes and Jim were in their early teens while we lived in California, and we found it a very good place for growing boys of that age. Bayes got to play football in the Rose Bowl at a very early age on his junior high school team. We returned to Kenyon in the fall of '46, Bayes going to Millbrook School, where he was captain of the football team, and Jim to Exeter. Bayes returned to Ohio and is now a Junior (architecture) at Miami University. Jim graduated from Exeter, where he became good enough at swimming the backstroke to be on last year's Freshman team at Yale, where he is now a Sophomore and won his 'Y' this winter.

"Summers, except for the California years, have been spent at Martha's Vineyard, where the boys sail about 100 per cent of the time. Since 1936 I have supervised the family summer business interests on the Vineyard, which is one way a college professor can have a 'vacation.'

"Having taught for a considerable length of time in both large and small institutions, I am much impressed with the important contribution the best small colleges can make to education and feel that the foundations whose purpose includes support and advancement of education should give their help, not only to experimental projects, but also to make it possible for the colleges to do an especially good job in their normal activities which are carried on in a situation that has great advantages. I would argue a point made in a Yale Alumni Magazine article this winter (about which I've been smouldering ever since) that the small colleges lose their best teachers to the universities. I know too many who are absolutely first-rate who from preference have remained at colleges. An answer to the question of the relative advantages of a university vs. college is not a 'black' and 'white' one; the right answer depends on a great many factors, whether concerned with a career on a faculty or a choice of college as a student. Right now we are faced with dependence on some form of government support. As a civil servant in an agency which had as a prime purpose the obtaining through contracts the best talents and skills it could find, and then giving a free hand to persons whose services it had so acquired with the realization that doing any less would not be deriving maximum benefit for the government, I would not have serious misgiving about government's hand in the affairs of education, if O.S.R.D. were typical. I fear, however, it was not.

"I can certainly list college teaching as a very great satisfaction. Of the war years it is harder to say—there was much satisfaction in being a part of the extremely effective organizations in weapon research and development. However, much has been preached about the scientist developing the A-bomb. I can't speak as a scientist as my connection with the project was entirely administrative, but I hope that the existence of the bomb will have emphasized the fact that warfare has become completely devastating to the civil population of both the attacked and the aggressor; and this is true of modern warfare quite apart from the A-bomb. Science has taken the imaginary glamour and pageantry out of battle. Science can be a guarantee of peace until the world is free of barbarians who have been imbued with the idea man is a fighting animal."

Norton received a B.Sc. at Oxford in 1929 and a Ph.D. at Yale in 1934. While a technical representative for O.S.R.D., he supervised its research and development contract with California Tech for rocket ordnance, Manhattan District work for Los Alamos, etc. Before going into government service, he did some experimental work on the N.D.R.C. program on explosives and taught physics in the A.A.F. pre-meteorology program. He stayed in government service for a year after the war to finish up the transfer to the Navy of experimental operations at the Naval Ordnance Test Station, Inyoken, Calif. Norton received a Presidential Certificate of Appreciation for outstanding contribution to the work of the Office of Scientific Research and Development from the War and Navy departments. He is the author of the section, "Rockets," in Rockets, Guns and Targets, a volume in the official O.S.R.D. history, Science in World War II, and is an editor of the Ohio Journal of Science. He is a fellow and chairman of the chemistry section of the Ohio Academy of Science (vice-president elect), belongs to the Association of American University Professors (secretary, Kenyon chapter, 1940), the American Chemical Society, the New England Association of Chemistry Teachers, the Achilles Club, and the Martha's Vineyard Art Workers Guild and is rear-commodore and treasurer of the Vineyard Haven Yacht Club and a vestryman of Harcourt Parish.

He married Mariette Hoyt Knapp, daughter of James Hoyt Knapp, Yale '96, and Ethel Ferris Knapp, of Stamford, Conn., September 1, 1928, at Vineyard Haven. The boys were born in New Haven, Bayes Marshall, Jr., on September 11, 1929, and James H. K. on October 29, 1931.

JOSEPH ANGELO NOVARO. Chief engineer, New Haven and Milford Water companies, 100 Crown Street, New Haven 6, Conn.; residence, 102 Goffe Terrace, New Haven 11

From June, 1926, to May, 1928, Novaro was an engineer and estimator with E. W. Canning & Company, a building construction concern in Hartford. During the next thirteen years he was with a consulting office in New Haven specializing in municipal water supply in capacities of increasing responsibility (assistant engineer, design engineer, and resident engineer); the firm was A. B. Hill, Civil Engineer, which was succeeded in 1930 by Blair & Marchant, Inc., consulting engineers, and in turn succeeded in 1937 by Clarence M. Blair, Inc. Novaro was on active duty with the Corps of Engineers from July, 1941, to August, 1946. He was then with Clarence Blair Associates, Inc., for nearly the three years—for the first ten months as an employee and the rest of the time as a member and director of the firm, which act as consultants in water supply and sewage treatment. In June, 1949, he sold his interest in the firm to join the staff of the New Haven and Milford Water companies (water supply for New Haven and twelve surrounding towns) as assistant engineer. He was appointed chief engineer in 1951.

He gives the following details of his service record: "Entered service as a first lieutenant, July 24, 1941, and was assigned to the Puerto Rico District Engineer Office at San Juan. This office was subsequently designated as the Antilles Division Engineer Office, with jurisdiction in the Caribbean from Cuba to South America. Served successively as design engineer, chief of the inspection division, area engineer of the San Juan area, and finally as project engineer of the five and a half million dollar addition to the water supply of San Juan. Concurrent with these duties was also a member of the Puerto Rico Sector Malaria Board and water supply officer for the Antilles Division Engineer Office. With members of my organization, received commendation award and ribbon for our part in furnishing emergency water supply to the city of San Juan and near-by military installations for three weeks after their supply failed due to hurricane. Discharged as lieutenant colonel."

Novaro, who is a registered professional engineer in Connecticut, is a director and member of the legislative committee of the Connecticut Water Works Association, an associate member of the American Society of Civil Engineers (member, nominating committee, and chairman, membership committee, Connecticut section), and a member of the Connecticut Society of Civil Engineers and the American Water Works Association. A paper which he read in 1947 before the annual meeting of the Connecticut Society of Civil Engineers on the design and construction of water works facilities for San Juan was published in the society's annual report. He contributed a paper on the hydraulics of multiple reservoir systems using graphical analysis to the Engineering News Record for August, 1942

He was married in New Haven on July 14, 1931, to Minnie A. Andersen, daughter of E. Andersen and Minnie A. Gladwin Andersen.

CLIFFORD VERL PERRINE. Project manager, C. F. Braun & Company, engineers, manufacturers, and constructors, Alhambra, Calif.; residence, 1437 Caballero Road, Arcadia, Calif.

Perrine entered the employ of C. F. Braun & Company on August 15, 1926. The company's work is in connection with equipment and plants for the petroleum, chemical, and other process industries, and Perrine's job during the past year (project manager since January 1, 1950), has kept him hippoty-hopping around the country so much that he has hardly had time to draw a long breath. The latest project, he said when he sent in his report for our book, ran for about two years and covered twenty million dollars' worth of refinery installations for the California Refining Company, including a steam and electric power plant, crude distillation units, a gasoline reformer, and a catalytic cracking unit. He was indirectly involved in the war effort in building high priority plants for aviation gasoline, synthetic rubber, toluene, and such.

Perrine is vice-president of Mayflower Village, Inc., a real estate and income property ownership and management. His marriage to Katharine Sutphin Hatch, daughter of Metcalf Bradley and Lillian Remsen Phillips Hatch, took place in Nutley, N.J., on September 10, 1929. They have had three children: Bradley Verl, who was born May 13, 1931, and died December 20, 1940, in Arcadia, Calif.; Kathryn Ann (Kippy), born May 1, 1934, who is a Junior in the Monrovia High School; and Nancy Hatch, born November 1, 1938.

Peterson writes: "In 1926 I went into the oil business as assistant to the president of the Prudential Oil Corporation, which was subsequently taken over by Marland Oil and then merged with Continental Oil. Wisely started in Wall Street with Edward B. Smith & Company, brokers, in July, 1929—fired in 1932 and went with Standard Statistics as field staff representative. Become investment account supervisor in 1934 and in 1935 went into investment counsel business with J. & W. Seligman. Left there in 1939 to become a partner in the New York Stock Exchange firm of Roberts & Company.”

Peterson is a director of the Commodore Hotel, the Standard Cap & Seal Corporation, and Greer Hydraulics, Inc., treasurer and a director of the Camwe Snow Lake Gold Mines, Ltd., and a trustee of the Buckley Country Day School at Great Neck. From 1929 to 1933 he was a corporal in Troop E, 101st Cavalry, Squadron A, New York. He belongs to the Union League Club of New York, the Garden City Golf Club, the Maidstone Club of East Hampton, the Devon Yacht Club, and the National Golf Links of America.

Peterson was married on April 28, 1935, in Harrison, N.Y., to Medora Weymouth, daughter of Aubrey and Alice Weymouth. Her home was formerly in Flushing, N.Y., and their children were both born there, Aubrey Weymouth in May 7, 1937, and Karen Marie in March, 1939. They are both at the Buckley School; Aubrey hopes to go to Exeter in 1951 and later to Yale.

HENRY GODFREY PHILLIPPS, JR. Manager, Pittsburgh branch, Solvay Sales Division, Allied Chemical & Dye Corporation, 1107 Gulf Building, Pittsburgh 19, Pa.; residence, Wellington Apartments, 245 Melwood Street, Pittsburgh 13.

Phillipps, whose entire business career has been with Solvay, has been manager of the Pittsburgh branch since February, 1948. He is a member of the Masonic order, the Pittsburgh Athletic Association, and the Harvard-Yale-Princeton Club.

He was married May 14, 1941, in Columbus, Ohio, to Florence R. Martin Kear, of Mt. Vernon, Ohio, daughter of Charles E. and Lyria Clark Martin. They were divorced in 1948. Phillipps has two children and two stepchildren: H. Godfrey Phillipps, 3d, born April 1, 1933, in Dayton; Florence M. Phillipps, born March 24, 1934, also in Dayton; Charles Richard Kear, born March 26, 1923; and Beverly J. Kear Williams, born May 16, 1929. Godfrey attended the Columbus Academy during 1947-48 and has since been at Shady Side Academy in Pittsburgh. Florence was at Fairfax Hall, Waynesboro, Va., during 1948-50. Richard, who attended Ohio State University from 1945 to 1947, was a first lieutenant in the Air Force during the war. He was reported missing in action at Ploesti, but escaped and returned, and subsequently completed thirty-five heavy bomber missions. He was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross and three Air Medals. He was married on June 2, 1950. Beverly, who was married on March 15, 1946, has a son, Ronald, born February 12, 1950.

"In all these years I have cherished my Yale experience and associations as the most important of my life," Phillipps says. "I have sought out and had my greatest moments with fellow Elis. My hope is that my son will also go to Yale, even though it may mean transfer or delay to satisfy academic requirements. I have had an opportunity to travel rather widely, and my work has been extremely gratifying. I feel I have finally matured and have almost completed my philosophy. I have had a very full and rewarding life—I believe!

"While I have been divorced, it is not a bitter experience; rather an awakening. I believe I'm a better person for it.

"My hobbies are golf and swimming (and drinking!)

"I look forward eagerly to our Twenty-fifth Reunion and many more."

ROLLIN BAILEY PLUMB. Assistant sales manager, Russell, Burdsall & Ward Bolt & Nut Company, Coraopolis, Pa.; residence, 466 East Frost Place, Lake Forest, Ill.

Plumb has been assistant sales manager at the Coraopolis plant of Russell, Burdsall & Ward, manufacturers of bolts, nuts, screws, and rivets, for some time. Before going with the company, he was vice-president, general sales manager, and a director of the Eagle Lock Company and was also a director of Boswer, Inc., and the Peterboro Lock & Manufacturing Company. At the present time he holds office as president of the Central States Hardware Club, and during the war he was a consultant to the War Production Board and was also engaged in civilian defense work. As to other things, he says, "Travels: covering forty-eight states and Canada yearly for thirteen years; recreation: S.P.E.B.S.Q.S.A., Inc.; hobbies: sailing and hunting."

Plumb's marriage to Margaret Tomlinson, daughter of George and Sadie Wilcox Tomlinson, took place in Bristol, Conn., on October 23, 1926. They have two daughters: Sally R., born November 14, 1932, and Diana C. on November 8, 1936. Sally is a Senior at Luralton Hall and Diana a Freshman at the Lake Forest High School.

JOHN FRANKLIN PLUMMER, JR. Development engineer, Ingersoll-Rand Company, Phillipsburg, N.J.; residence, 820 Brodhead Street, Easton, Pa.

Plummer has been with Ingersoll-Rand since graduation—in Phillipsburg, except for the period from 1928 to 1940, when he was located in New York City. He has held the position of development engineer since June, 1940. He is a member of the Engineers Club of the Lehigh Valley.

On December 6, 1941, he was married in Easton to Gertrude Anna Teel, daughter of Forrest C. and Gertrude J. Teel. They have three children: Susan Teel, born August 9, 1944, and the twins, John Franklin, 3d, and Katharine Jean, on October 19, 1947, all in Phillipsburg.

"Married rather late in life, unfortunately," Plummer says, "but with three children in three years, we soon made up for lost time. Now have a fair-sized family, at least in numbers if not in age, and hope there will be some other sons of '26 S. left when the next J.F.P. is ready for Yale—probably about the time of our Fortieth Reunion.

"Any hobbies or recreations I may have enjoyed in former years have had to suffer since the twins arrived. Also have no particular hope or ambition to set any further records for the Class, but am glad that one of them is a potential Yale man.

"My travels also have been somewhat hampered in recent years. Consequently haven't been able to keep in contact with my classmates as well as I used to do when I was located in New York and made fairly frequent trips on business, etc. Any further traveling, for pleasure at least, will surely have to wait until the children are of age. Meanwhile can hope to get away for our Twenty-fifth and, I hope, for future reunions, etc."

IRVING LUCK POND. Assistant zone manager, Hudson Sales Corporation, 11148 Harper Avenue, Detroit, Mich.; residence, 18100 Sorrento Street, Detroit 35.

Pond writes: "After Yale and Babson [where he studied during 1925-26], I got tangled up in the automobile business and have rattled around in it ever since, except for one glorious year, 1948-49. Even then I handled sales of an automobile accessory that some of you may have had forced down your neck by the dealer who sold you your new car at that time. Then when you car buyers refused to be crowded into buying lots of accessories, I went back to the mines—this time for Hudson Motor.

"We all have some regrets through the past twenty-five years and mine is that I didn't team up with one of you and get into business manufacturing or distributing something instead of working all this time for the bigger corporations.

"The years have been especially kind in every other respect. I did find THE ONE girl in the world. Margaret and I have two very charming daughters and a Dachshund. Most of our vacations have been spent in or near the old homestead in Philadelphia. I sure wish I could get back to see you all this June, but I just can't get away until early July, so my best regards to all of you—and have one for me, will you?"

Some supplementary data: with Ford Motor Company in Detroit and Philadelphia, 1926-29; with Chevrolet Motor Division, General Motors Corporation, in Cincinnati, Charlestown W.Va., and Detroit, 1924-46; with Fleet Division, G.M. Corporation, 1946-48; with Consumers Specialty Manufacturing Company, Detroit, as sales manager, 1948-49; in present position since April, 1949.

Mrs. Pond was Margaret S. Gaillard, daughter of Judge Benjamin P. Gaillard, Jr., and Emma Whelchel Gaillard. They were married in Gainesville, Ga., on October 16, 1928, and the girls were born in Philadelphia, Iris G. on December 31, 1930, and Jennie T. on August 15, 1934. Iris attended Brenau College in Gainesville during 1948-49—the fourth generation, following her mother, grandmother and great-grandmother. After leaving Brenau, she spent a year at the University of Detroit.

HENRY HOMES PORTER. With Applied Physics Laboratory, Johns Hopkins University; business address, 8621 Georgia Avenue, Silver Spring, Md.; residence, 3107 Woodland Drive, N.W., Washington 8, D.C.

Here's a report every one should find of special interest. "My last incarnation seems to have started in July, 1940, when I was at a small fishing camp for a week's fishing in northern Michigan," Porter says. "It was during that time that France fell, and I decided that we should eventually get into the war and that I should take what steps I could to help prepare for it. The end of that month I went to Washington to find out where I could be of some use, particularly in the field of research and development. I circulated through most of the government research and development organizations and found that few of them were doing any war work and others were completely sure that all problems were in hand. So I left a long trail with everybody I knew, took Civil Service exams, and returned to Chicago to see what would happen. A month later I went back, circulated through all the same places, listened to all the same stories, except that I did get a commitment from the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics pending my Civil Service rating coming to the top of the list. About two weeks later I received a telegram from a friend of mine. He thought he had found a spot of interest. I came down and was sent over to the Department of Terrestrial Magnetism of the Carnegie Institute of Washington, where Section T of the National Defense Research Committee had just started work about ten days before.

"The N.D.R.C. had been set up in the hope of using men primarily on leaves of absence from universities, and no arrangement had been made for salaries. It was under these circumstances that I finally got into that organization on an interim basis, because I had planned to go with the N.A.C.A. when my Civil Service rating came through.

"Section T had been set up by the N.D.R.C. to examine and formulate the problems in the fields of armor and ordnance. One of the first ideas that came out was the possibility of developing a fuze that would sense an airplane in flight and detonate the projectile as it passed. Formulating work was immediately started and a considerable number of possibilities tried.

Feasibility was rapidly demonstrated, and the Bureau of Ordnance of the Navy sponsored the request and provided the funds. My job in this work originally was the development of radio tubes sufficiently rugged to withstand the acceleration of firing from guns. By the spring of 1941 tubes adequate for experiment were available and development of shell fuzes soon was taken seriously, bomb and rocket fuze work being turned over to the National Bureau of Standards whose VT fuze project started in the summer of 1941.

"Then followed years of intensive effort trying to isolate all the problems and produce effective fuzes. In the spring of 1942 the administration of the group was taken over by Johns Hopkins University, since Dr. Bush, who was chairman of the N.D.R.C. and later of the Office of Scientific Research and Development, did not wish to spend large sums of money through the Carnegie Institute of Washington, of which he was also president. Between the spring of 1941 and the summer of 1942 I acted as executive officer to the group and from then through 1943 was in charge of the research.

"In the fall of 1942 adequate success was achieved to move into production. On January 5, 1943, the cruiser Helena, on patrol north of Guadalcanal, used them for the first time in battle and shot down both the Japanese planes that came within range. During 1943 the fuzes were improved and a number of sizes and models made so that they could be used in practically all guns of the United States and British armies and navies between the sizes of three and eight inches. The first use of these shells in the European theatre was in the Mediterranean and in the North Sea, where it was restricted to over-water use. Later they were used for defense against the V-1's, protecting London and Antwerp, where the anti-aircraft, including radar, gun directors, guns, and proximity fuzes, achieved higher than 90 per cent effectiveness against V-1's. These fuzes had also been developed for use in howitzers for anti-personnel purposes and were very effective against troops in the open or in foxholes. They were released for ground use December 19, 1944, during the battle of the Bulge, where in several instances, Artillery was able to interdict the roads and block advances even after our Infantry had been completely overrun.

"This was the first step in our efforts to solve defense against air attack. Our next step was to supply small radar-controlled gun directors, small enough so they could be provided for each gun mount so that ships could take a number of planes under fire simultaneously. We started this project in the summer of 1943, and I moved into it full time in January, 1944. In October of that year these directors were put aboard the battleship Missouri and the battle cruisers Alaska and Guam. This director, the Mark 57, was designed only as an interim solution, and every effort was made to provide it for battle use during World War II. In view of the fact that the average gun director system takes about eight years from initiation to field use, the Mark 57 is unique in that it covered the same ground in about a year and a half.

"Our experience to date indicated that gunfire would never provide adequate protection. At long range high-speed planes travel as much as three miles after the shell leaves the gun. Since the shell has to pass within some fifty feet, there are very few pilots skilled enough to fly straight enough to be hit if there is no error in the gun pointing.

"It became painfully obvious that the projectile would have to be steered, and if you go to the extent of steering them might as well go whole-hog and provide enough propulsion so that you could increase the range. This was the path we traveled in getting into the guided missile project which was initiated at the laboratory in 1945. The Bureau of Ordnance's approach to this has been unique and is a major reason why this project has gone ahead as well as it has. The Bureau of Ordnance gave us the task of finding out the information needed to build guided missiles and to provide a guided missile, the characteristics of which were to be worked out from time to time between this laboratory and the Bureau of Ordnance.

"Since June, 1947, I have been responsible to the director for the guided missile program at this laboratory. Guided missiles are the most complicated things you can imagine. They include a tremendous number of technical fields and tremendous amount of sophistication. Reduced to its essentials, the problem includes knowing accurately where the target is, providing a vehicle of adequate range and maneuverability, and providing it with mechanical brains that will control and guide it to its target. All this at supersonic speed, where human reaction is so slow as to be entirely useless.

"Unfortunately, I am afraid that we find ourselves facing the same situation we faced but did not fully recognize in 1940. I sometimes get the feeling 'this is where I came in.' "

Porter has received the Presidential Certificate of Merit and the Naval Ordnance Development Award. He is a member of the American Physical Society, the American Ordnance Association, the Philosophical Society of Washington, and the Chevy Chase and Cosmos clubs and a director of the Clearing Industrial District of Chicago. He married Mary L. Kinney, daughter of Lloyd Eugene and Mary Sweeney Kinney, of Taylorville, Ill., and has a son, Henry Homes, Jr., who was born in Chicago on November 13, 1934, and is now in the Class of 1952 at Groton.

HARDIN BONNER PRICE. Attorney, Maritime Administration, Commerce Building, Washington, D.C.; residence, 1301 15th Street, N.W., Washington.

Price graduated from the Columbia Law School in 1928, was admitted to the New York Bar the following year, and subsequently specialized in tax and corporation law and litigation. He was associated with the New York law firm of Mitchell, Capron, Angulo, Marsh & Cooney from 1928 to 1933, was with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in Washington for the next four years, and has been an attorney with the Maritime Administration since 1937, except during the period from 1942 to 1946, when he was on active duty in the Navy. At the time Price entered service he ranked as a lieutenant, and he was released with the rank of lieutenant commander. Until April, 1943, he was head of a section in the legal division of the Bureau of Ships and was subsequently assistant chief tax officer of the Navy in the office of the Judge Advocate General of the Navy.

He belongs to the University and Army and Navy Country clubs of Washington. He is still single.

JOHN JOSEPH PRINDIVILLE, JR. President, treasurer, and general manager, Lapointe Machine Tool Company, 34 Tower Street, Hudson, Mass.; residence, 848 Central Street, Framingham Center, Mass.

Since 1925 Prindiville has been employed by the Lapointe Machine Tool Company in various capacities, including works manager and vice-president. He became president, treasurer, and general manager in May, 1946, and he is also chairman and a director of the Lapointe Machine Tool Company, Ltd., of Edgware, Middlesex, England, vice-president and a director of the Framingham Trust Company, and a trustee of the Estate of John J. Prindiville. He belongs to the Framingham Country Club and the Clover Club of Boston.

"I have traveled extensively to Europe and most countries there on business for the company, both before and after World War II, going practically every year except during the war," Prindiville says. "My hobbies are fishing and hunting, particularly Atlantic salmon fishing. I have fished most of the rivers in the Maritime Provinces of Canada in search of the elusive salmon. I have also hunted for game birds and deer throughout the Maritime Provinces and Maine.

"Other than my business activities in connection with the building and selling of broaches and broaching machines, the above consists of my activities."

On January 2, 1930, his marriage to Lou J. Jacques, daughter of Joseph A. and Lou Chapdelaine Jacques, took place in Montreal. There are two boys in the family, both of whom were born in Framingham, Jacques Andre on October 28, 1932, and John Maurice on May 15, 1935. They received their preliminary education at the Fay School. Jacques, who graduated from Exeter in 1950, is now a Freshman at Yale, and Maurice is in his second year at Tabor Academy.

JOHN MILTON REAM. Chief estimator, Carmichael Construction Company, general contractors, 148 East Miller Avenue, Akron, Ohio; residence, 505 Moreley Avenue, Akron 20.

Ream is a director of the Carmichael Construction Company, with which he has been connected since 1926. He has served on the Board of Building Appeals of Akron since 1938 and as a vestryman of St. Paul's Episcopal Church since 1937. He is a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, the American Society of Professional Engineers, and of various Masonic orders, including the Commandery.

He was married in Akron on April 12, 1930, to Margaret A. Bryant, daughter of Charles E. and Margaret Hanks Bryant. Their oldest son, John M., Jr., who was born in Akron on May 16, 1931, spent two years with the Yale Class of 1952 and has since been taking the pre-dental course at the University of Akron. The other children are: Roger Fyler, born July 25, 1938, and Margaret on March 15, 1941, also in Akron.

JOSEPH PANCOAST REATH. Physician; office and residence, Crestline Road, Strafford, Pa.

Reath worked as a research chemist for the Powers-Weightman-Rosengarten Company in Philadelphia from 1926 until 1928 and in the Philadelphia sales office and specialty sales department of the General Refractories Company in Philadelphia for the next four years. A year as a graduate student at the University of Pennsylvania followed, and he then entered Jefferson Medical College, where he took his M.D. degree in 1937. Reath interned at the Lankenau Hospital in Philadelphia until 1939 and has since been engaged in the general practice of medicine—at Winter Harbor, Maine, for a year, in St. David's, Pa., from 1940 to 1946, for the next five years in Wayne, and now in Stafford. He is on the staff of the Bryn Mawr (Pa.) Hospital and has been active in the Wayne Neighborhood League, serving on the board of directors from 1945 to 1950 and also as vice-president for three years.

On November 23, 1940, he was married in Wayne to Sarah Ann Mitchell, daughter of Henry Clay and Hilda Cleveland Mitchell. There are three girls in the family, all of whom were born in Philadelphia, Rebecca Cleveland on September 13, 1941, Sheila Wood on October 18, 1943, and Alberta Pancoast on September 3, 1947.

"I haven't done much traveling except for vacations," Reath says. "Last winter we took a trip to Montego Bay, Jamaica, and ran into Bud Salt and Ray Lull. We all had lunch at Ray's house, which was lots of fun. Our tenth wedding anniversary came up last November 23. Among those present were Clark Zantzinger and Inkey (H. I.) Brown. Inkey drove all the way up from Wilmington during the hurricane to attend this party. Since last November have been busily engaged in building a new house at Strafford, Pa., with 'office in the home.' This may help to save wear and tear on 'the old man.' "

MAURICE CONRAD REINECKE. General partner, Ruby & Company, general contractors (building materials and supplies), Madisonville, Ky.; residence, 207 North Main Street, Madisonville.

Reinecke has been a general partner in Ruby & Company since February, 1949, and at present is also treasurer of the Ruby Construction Company and secretary of the Earlewood Development Company. His previous connections were as follows: field representative and analyst, Spencer Trask & Company, New York City; expeditor, War Production Board, Washington, D.C.; general partner, Berdell Brothers, New York City; member, New York Curb Exchange; general partner and cashier, Friedmann & Torney, brokers, New York City; salesman, Consolidation Coal Company, Cincinnati, Ohio.

His marriage to Harriet Walding Burket, daughter of John F. and Betty Hoege Burket, took place in Sarasota, Fla., on September 24, 1935. Mrs. Reinecke's home was formerly in New York City. They have a daughter, Rosalind, who was born on August 22, 1940.

LOUIS OSBORNE REINIG. In sales department, National Gypsum Company, building material manufacturers, 111 West Washington Street, Chicago 2, Ill.; residence, 320 North County Line Road, Hinsdale, Ill.

Reinig joined the sales department of the National Gypsum Company on January 2, 1951. He was on active duty in the Navy from 1942 to 1946; he ranked as lieutenant commander, U.S.N.R., and served as a deck officer.

Reinig is a Mason. He was married on February 7, 1931, in Tampa, Fla., to Mildred Virginia Seymour.

ROBERT LANE RIGGS. General superintendent, Solvay Process Division, Allied Chemical & Dye Corporation; business address, Drawer 61, Hopewell, Va.; residence, 200 Oakwood Avenue, Hopewell.

"I have been busy, reasonably satisfied, and generally happy in various jobs of increasing responsibility, all with the same employer," Riggs tells us. "Recreations and interests are those normal to a rather quiet small town—books, bridge, various civic projects, mediocre golf, etc. Business does not call for traveling ordinarily, although I have made business trips to the West Coast, Louisiana, the Midwest, and elsewhere on occasion.

"Having lived in Virginia over twenty-two years, I am prepared to advance quite an argument for its being the best state in the Union. Hopewell is only nine miles off U.S. 1—many of our Class must drive to Florida or other Southern points and thus pass practically right past my doorstep—remember to stop next time.”

Riggs is a member of the American Chemical Society and has held various offices in the Virginia section. He also belongs to the state and local Chambers of Commerce and to various local civic associations. His marriage to Elizabeth Tewning Casey, daughter of Jerome H. and Yancey B. Donegan Casey, took place in Williamsburg, Va., on October 24, 1931. They have had two daughters, the younger of whom, Jane Donegan, was born August 1, 1940, in Hopewell, and died on November 6, 1945, in Charlottesville, Va. The older girl, Betty Lane, born January 7, 1936, in Hopewell, is in the Class of 1953 at the Hopewell High School.

BRUCE DOUGLAS RINDLAUB. Address, Box 193, Tulsa, Okla.

EDWARD WINSLOW ROATH. General superintendent, Kennecott Wire & Cable Company, Bourne Avenue, Phillipsdale, Rumford 16, R.I.; residence, 83 Don Avenue, Rumford 16.

Until 1940 Roath was with the Chase Brass & Copper Company—as a research assistant for seven years, then a technical salesman until 1936, and subsequently assistant to the sales manager. Since 1940 he has been with the Kennecott Wire & Cable Company. He was a salesman for a year, became supervisor of priorities in 1941, was assistant general superintendent from 1944 to 1948, and has been general superintendent since July, 1948. He was a copper consultant with the War Production Board during 1942-43 and assistant director of the Copper Division the following year.

Roath took an M.S. degree at Yale in 1928. He is a member of the American Society for Metals, the Providence Engineering Society, and the Masonic order. His marriage to Lena Mary Bates, daughter of Calvin Gary and Elizabeth Mertz Bates, took place in New Haven on July 3, 1926.

JAMES WALLER ROGERS. Address, 25 East Scott Street, Chicago, Ill.

Rosenburgh has been with the Turner Construction Company since graduation, filling various positions in the field and also in the office. He has been a member of the board of directors since 1947 and chief estimating engineer for the past two years. He is a licensed professional engineer in the State of New York, a panel member of the American Arbitration Association, and belongs to the St. Andrews Golf Club at Hastings-on-Hudson and the Yale Club of New York City.

His marriage to Anna Takacs, daughter of John and Anna Kostura Takacs, took place in New York on October 31, 1930. Mrs. Rosenburgh's home was formerly in Chicago. Their son, Carleton Francis, Jr., was born in New York on July 1, 1939.

DWIGHT ASHLEY RUMERY. In purchasing department, Oxford Paper Company, pulp and paper manufacturers, 230 Park Avenue, New York 17, N.Y.; residence 97 Greenridge Avenue, White Plains, N.Y.

From 1926 to 1935 Rumery was independently engaged in the general construction business in Portland, Maine, and during the next five years was connected with the production department of the Oxford Paper Company mill at Rumford, Maine. Since then he has been in the purchasing department in New York. He is a leader in Cub Scouts and Boy Scouts and is serving as chairman of the board of deacons of the Church in the Highlands at White Plains and president of its Men's Club.

Rumery's marriage to Alice M. Sturdivant, daughter of Greely and Alice M. Parker Sturdivant, took place in New York City on August 8, 1929. Her home was formerly at Cumberland Foreside, Maine. They have two children: Mozelle, who was born June 28, 1930, and F. Ashley, born January 1, 1933. Ashley expects to graduate from the White Plains High School in 1951. Mozelle graduated there in 1948, attended Wheaton College, Norton, Mass., for the next three years, and is now in the Class of 1952 at Cornell.

FRANCIS GEORGE SALT. Treasurer, National Manufacturing Corporation (asphalt roofings, paints, and protective coatings), Tonawanda, N.Y.; residence, 884 West Ferry Street, Buffalo, N.Y.

Until 1932 Salt was assistant secretary of the Buffalo, Niagara & Eastern Power Corporation, and during the next three years he was manager of Sutro Brothers. He was in the advertising field with Baldwin & Strachan from 1935 to 1939, when he became sales promotion manager of Remington Rand, Inc. He gave up this position in 1944 to go with the National Manufacturing Company, of whose board of directors he has been a member since 1931. At the present time he is vice-president, treasurer, and a director of Hays-Taylor, Inc., of Tonawanda, secretary and a director of Thomas Products, Inc., of Buffalo, and a director of the George F. O'Neil Corporation of Binghamton, N.Y.

He was first married on June 18, 1928, in Buffalo to Grace Bass, daughter of Lyman M. Bass, Yale '97, and Grace Holland Bass. They were divorced in 1946. On September 30, 1947, he was married in Buffalo to Jane Weed Forman, daughter of Robert S. and Jane O'Neil Weed. Salt has two daughters:

Grace Holland, born on April 16, 1929, and Nancy Rae on July 29, 1931. The older girl was in the Class of 1947 at the Foxhollow School and attended Miss Childs' the following year. Nancy was in the Class of 1950 at the Masters School.

"It hardly seems possible that we will soon be celebrating our Twenty-fifth Reunion," Sargent remarks. "During the summer of 1927 I joined our classmate Wally Hoge, his brother Pierre, and 100,000 other American tourists for a fling to Europe. On graduating from the Harvard Business School, I got a job as assistant trade commissioner, thus starting a very interesting five years which took me to Toronto, Montreal, Ottawa, and Vancouver. Came the Depression, when our office in Vancouver was closed and I was given a free ticket home. Things were kind of tough for the next three years, but I managed to keep my head above water. In 1938 I became associated with Walter K. Porzer, marketing consulting, in New York City. Was later with a Chamber of Commerce, and, finally, my present position as market analyst with Charles Pfizer & Company.

"I remained a bachelor until June, 1947. I probably have the distinction of having the two youngest children in the Class, our adopted daughter being born on November 10, 1949, and our 'tiny honeybunch' on October 16, 1950. Now that we have a family, we hope to build in a year or so on a lot we have bought in Syosset, Long Island, providing that prices of building materials don't go sky-high and that I don't get pulled back into the Air Force."

A few additional facts not covered in the above: M.B.A. Harvard, 1928; sales analyst with private concerns, 1934-37; associate marketing consultant, 1938-40; manager, commercial research division, Commerce and Industry Association of New York, 1941-49; with Charles Pfizer & Company since February 1, 1949; author: "Market Analysis as a Guide to Selective Selling," in Industrial Marketing Magazine, June, 1939; member, American Marketing Association.

From October, 1942, to May, 1943, Sargent was chief of the Statistical Unit of the Army Air Force at Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio. From then until September, 1944, he was successively accountable property officer attached to the Lockheed Aircraft Corporation in Burbank, Calif., the Consolidated Vultee Corporation in San Diego, and the Government Furnished Equipment Depot in San Pedro, and from September, 1944, to January, 1946, he was assistant supply officer at the 822d Specialized Depot at Maywood, Calif.

Mrs. Sargent's maiden name was Marion Westerberg Hunicke. She is the daughter of A. Byron and Marion Westerberg Hunicke, and they were married in New York City, June 28, 1947. Their children are named Mary Susan and Alice Ann.

Savard reports: "After graduation in 1926 I went to work in the men's clothing and furnishing field with Davis & Savard of Bridgeport. I started in to learn the business from the bottom up and am now vice-president and secretary. In July of 1927 I went to Europe and stayed there three months, touring the British Isles and the Continent.

"I married my present wife in June, 1930, and returned to Europe on our honeymoon, staying over there another three months. On returning, I settled down for good and have done very little traveling since. All my time has been given over to earning a living and raising a family. Of course, I have taken time out to play golf here and there on various occasions. On the whole, I am a family man and spend most of my leisure time with my wife and two daughters, who I might add are growing up into two very charming young ladies."

Savard belongs to the Brooklawn Country Club, the University Club of Bridgeport, and the Junior-Senior Golfing Society of Connecticut. His marriage to Hilaire A. Adams, of Greens Farms, Conn., took place in Fairfield on the 2d of June, 1930. They have had three daughters, all of whom were born in Bridgeport. The oldest, Janet, who was born on March 23, 1931, died on February 23, 1934. The second girl, Hilaire A., born on July 13, 1935, is now at the Convent of the Sacred Heart in Greenwich. Brenda, the youngest, was born on February 24, 1939.

"For the past ten years most of my interest, except for my family and short periods of vacation, has been confined to building a business of which I was one of the founders," Scanlon says. "My hope is that it will continue to grow in the future as it has in the past. We do mechanical contracting work of all types, specializing in air conditioning, and have been fortunate in having been chosen to do the air conditioning in a great many of the large buildings in the eastern and southern United States. Among the most recent and important are the United Nations permanent headquarters in New York City and the Gateway Center in Pittsburgh."

Scanlon has been vice-president and treasurer and also a director of Kerby Saunders, Inc., since 1942 and has the same connection with the Thermodyne Corporation of New York. Previously he had been with the York Ice Machinery Corporation of New York as a sales engineer and branch manager. He belongs to the Metropolitan Club of New York and the New York Athletic Club.

Scanlon's marriage to Madeline E. Ryan, daughter of John P. and Elizabeth C. Otten Ryan, took place in New Haven on June 5, 1929. They have two children, both of whom were born in Yonkers, Madeline E. on January 10, 1933, and Mary Ann on October 30, 1938. Madeline (Betsy), who is in the Freshman Class at Syracuse University, had previously attended the Blessed Sacrament Academy and the Roosevelt High School in Yonkers.

OSWALD PAUL SCHELLER. Secretary, mortgage and real estate department, Connecticut General Life Insurance Company, 55 Elm Street, Hartford 15, Conn.; residence, 74 Crestwood Road, West Hartford.

Scheller reports: "Joined the investment department of the Connecticut General Life Insurance Company immediately after graduation. Resisted matrimony until 1942, when I fell hard. Left for the Air Force shortly thereafter. Assigned to Gulfport Army Air Field, Miss., for the 'duration.' After serving as squadron commander, settled down to specialty of 'on-and-off Post housing.' Acquired two daughters in Gulfport and a son just recently—potential Yale '72.

"Have done a lot of traveling, once to Europe, but mostly in North and Central America. Have been to Mexico, Guatemala, and Florida a number of times. Still following motion picture photography rather aggressively and have made some good travel films. Embraced skiing vigorously, with three trips to Sun Valley and one to Alta. The balance of my skiing has been divided between Mont Tremblant and New England. Have had a lot of fun summers studying the technique of sailboat racing in the Lightning and Comet classes.

"The job of keeping the rapidly increasing funds of a life insurance company invested in mortgages and in real estate investments keeps me far busier than I like. Would much prefer to loaf on the sands of tropical beaches or ski the deep-powder snow of the Rockies."

Scheller ranked as a first lieutenant when he went on active duty in July, 1942. He was promoted to captain in October, 1943, and was released from service in December, 1945.

Mrs. Scheller was Janice Arnold Gager, daughter of John Squire and Florence Diana Arnold Gager. They were married in Hartford on May 27, 1942. The children are: Carolyn Louise, born March 15, 1944; Gertrude Arnold, born June 17, 1945; and Richard Gager, born January 17, 1951.

RUSSELL BREWER SCOBIE. Physician; office and residence, 288 Grand Street, Newburgh, N.Y.

Scobie specializes in pediatrics. He took his M.D. at Yale in 1929, was an interne at the Rhode Island Hospital in Providence for the next two years and on the staff of the Babies Hospital in New York during 1931-32, also being an assistant in diseases of children at P. and S. He was engaged in the practice of pediatrics in New York City for the next four years and since then in Newburgh. Scobie, who was licensed by the American Board of Pediatrics in 1935, is consulting pediatrician at the Goshen Hospital, the Horton Memorial Hospital in Middletown, St. Anthony's Hospital in Warwick, and the Cornwall Hospital, civilian consultant pediatrician at the Station Hospital at West Point, and pediatrician-in-chief at St. Luke's Clinic and Hospital in Newburgh.

In 1950 he became vice-chairman of the metropolitan section of the American Academy of Pediatrics, of which he is a fellow, and secretary of the pediatrics section of the Medical Society of the State of New York. He is also a fellow of the American Medical Association and belongs to the Newburgh Rotary Club (president, 1943-44). Scobie is secretary of his Medical School Class, was the founder of the Yale Club of the Mid-Hudson Valley in 1948, serving as its first president, and is chairman of the local Committee on Enrollment and Scholarships. He contributed an article to the American Journal of Diseases of Children for August, 1934.

"I'm eking out a very ordinary existence," he says. "Chief traveling has been throughout the United States and Mexico to medical meetings. Otherwise have enjoyed summer vacation relaxing with the natives on Cape Cod. The picture has changed in twenty-five years from being actively engaged in sports to one of being actively engaged in watching."

Scobie was married October 5, 1935, in Hartford, Conn., to Katherine Wolcott Peck, daughter of Hubert Perry and Mabel Ella Wolcott Peck. They have twin children: Barbara Wolcott and Robert Peck, who were born November 13, 1936.

WILL SHECUT SEASE. Address, Box 1146, Dallas, Texas.

During 1926-27 Sehm was connected with the Ingersol Steel & Disc Company of Newcastle, Ind., as production manager and has since been with the R. Herschel Manufacturing Company, of which he became vice-president and factory manager in 1944. He has been a director of the Peoria Association of Commerce for the past three years and was on the board of the Peoria Manufacturing Association from 1945 to 1948 and of the Community Chest from 1946 to 1948. He belongs to the National Association of Cost Accountants, the American Society for Metals, the Peoria Country Club, and the Creve Coeur Club.

Sehm's marriage to Josephine C. Macy, daughter of John Bernard and Plutella Chaffer Cooney, took place on January 12, 1929, in Peoria, where their daughter, Marsha Macy, was born on October 1, 1930. She graduated from Ferry Hall at Lake Forest, Ill., in 1948 and from Ogontz Junior College in 1950 and has since been at Colorado College.

Selchow, who remained at Yale until 1928, was an assistant instructor in the Mineralogy Department during this period; he took his M.S. in mining in 1927 and that summer was a research assistant under Dean Warren in the Geology Department, continuing in that department until the following April. From 1928 to 1931, while a field geologist in Northern Rhodesia for the Anglo-American Corporation, he accomplished the stupendous task of completing 12,000 linear miles of mapping on foot seeking copper. Selchow's next job—field representative for the Photo Reflex Corporation from 1931 to 1936—sounds a bit less strenuous. Since establishing his own commercial photographic concern in 1936, he has specialized in making photographs for artists from which they draw magazine illustrations. He had an article on African fauna in the December, 1935, issue of Natural History Magazine.

He has been a member of the U.S. Power Squadrons for some years—he passed the junior navigator test, taught the sailing course for three years, and acted as official photographer for the ensign for six years. During the war he was a chief boatswain's mate in the Coast Guard Temporary Reserve. Selchow is an active resident member of the Explorers Club of New York.

He was married in Media, Pa., August 26, 1933, to Hildegard Catherine Nida Dowling, of Northern Rhodesia, daughter of Stanley Lawrence and Rose-Marie Forman Nida, of New York City. He has two children: Patricia Nida Dowling (his wife's daughter by her former marriage), born March 17, 1929, in Northern Rhodesia, and Donald Hoffman Selchow, Jr., born November 17, 1945, in Newark, N.J.

"The best years of my life since leaving Yale were undoubtedly the three I spent in Africa," Selchow says. "The trip there and back in itself was terrific I drew salary while traveling and visited the following countries: England, Belgium, Germany, Madeira, Canary Islands, Gold Coast, Nigeria, Angola, Southwest Africa, Southern Rhodesia, Northern Rhodesia, Belgian Congo, and Mosambique. In Northern Rhodesia I spent nearly all the three years surveying in the bush in little known territory. Hunting for food was part of the job, and during that time I shot over 200 head of so-called big game (including elephant and leopard)—only saw one lion. In criss-crossing a far away place like Rhodesia, I found many unusual things and put in all my spare time collecting and taking photographs. I sent Peabody Museum about two hundred specimens of birds, mammals, and reptiles. These include an aard vark, leopard, African wild dog—which are now on exhibition there—and many more which may be set up later. I learned preparation of specimens from two typewritten sheets given me by Dr. Ball. It is not as difficult as it may seem, and I can recommend it as a very interesting hobby for those in far-off places and a fine way to serve the interests of Peabody Museum. I went to Africa too early to be able to photograph it in color. I would sure like to get back there with a trunkful of Kodachrome.

“After settling down just outside of New York City, I took up boating and then boat building to keep myself amused in spare time. After trying to rebuild a fifty-year-old 25-foot cat boat, for two, I decided it was better to start with all new material. A friend and I built an 18-foot dory in the cellar—and we got it out! The completion of this project gave me courage, and after months of studying various plans I decided to build a 27-foot auxiliary ketch designed by John Hanna. Had some misgivings when I saw $500 worth of heavy timbers and lumber piled in front of me in the yard where I built the ketch, but once some joints were made on the main keel piece, things went along satisfactorily and three years later the N'Daba, with champagne on her stern and a nervous Selchow on the deck, slid down the ways to float evenly on her lines without any leaks.

“In 1944 we bought a home on Northport Harbor, where I am able to moor my boats in the backyard. Have since built one rowboat, one 12-foot trolling boat of my own design, and one duck boat. Having fairly well covered the field of boat building, I have in recent years taken to smaller wood-working projects. Took three blue ribbons and one red in the National Decoy Contest two years ago. My small son shows great interest in his father's hobbies of boating, fishing, and hunting.

“My ambition—to be able to enjoy good health—make enough to live on, and perhaps a little more leisure time at Northport. Still would like to go back to Africa for a trip.”

JUSTIN SAUL SEUBERT. Business address, 801 Polk Street, San Francisco, Calif.; residence, 36 Beach Road, Belvedere, Calif.

Seubert, who was a fireman 1/c in the Navy during World War II, received a medical discharge in 1943. He was married some years ago and has two daughters: Virginia, born on November 27, 1931, and Susan on November 18, 1933, both in Los Angeles. The older girl is at the Orange Coast College in California, where she is an honor student and editor-in-chief of the year book. Susan is a Senior at the Newport Union High School.

JOHN McCORMICK SHANLEY. Hydraulic engineer, The Pitometer Company, consulting engineers, 50 Church Street, New York 7, N.Y.; residence, 1812 West Alabama Avenue, Houston 6, Texas.

"I have been on this job in Houston for about two and a half years, which is the longest I have been in one place since graduation," says Shanley, obviously one of our more peripatetic classmates. "My work has taken me into about half the states in the Union, also Canada, Mexico, and South America. My hobby is golf (they raise the flag when I break 100), but I haven't had a chance to indulge since January, 1950, when I was in Bogota, Colombia, and went native by working a straight five-day week, with no extra time for reports, etc. This doesn't conflict with the statement above as to living in Houston for two and a half years. We maintained our home here while I went to Bogota for a month to check our design for a complete new water system for the city.

"Was in service from 1941 to 1945 in the Corps of Engineers, including over three years overseas in the European theatre. Went over with the 1st Armored Division. Was in the North African and Italian campaigns. Assigned to training and planning of amphibious operations, was area director of the Invasion Training Center concerned with several amphibious landings. Went in with the first boat on one of them. On V-E day was executive officer of the Engineer School in Italy. Then sweated out transportation back to the U.S. As to decorations, received the usual number which were passed out with the rations. Rank was major, C.E."

Shanley, who has been a hydraulic engineer with The Pitometer Company since 1937, was also with the company during the period from 1930 to 1932. Other connections have been with Ernest W. Wiggin, a consulting engineer in New Haven, and the engineering firm of Taylor & Knight, Inc., in Newark and Passaic, N.J. During 1933-34 he served as town engineer of Denville, N.J. Shanley's marriage to Mary Adeline Kanick, daughter of Martin and Anna Pisklak Kanick, took place in Richmond, Va., on November 15, 1945. She had previously lived in New York City.

STEPHEN MATHESON SHELTON. Regional director, Region II, Bureau of Mines; residence, 1140 West 12th Avenue, Albany, Ore.

Until 1935 Shelton was a metallurgist with the Bureau of Standards in Washington, D.C. He has been associated with the Bureau of Mines since 1939, serving as a metallurgist for ten years and as regional director of Region II since September, 1949. Shelton, who has had some thirty technical articles in the field of metallurgy published by the Bureau of Standards, the Bureau of Mines, and technical societies, received the degree of M.A. at George Washington University in 1931. He is a member of the American Institute of Metallurgical Engineers.

From February, 1942, until his discharge in December, 1945, he was on active duty in the Air Force. He ranked as a captain at the time he entered service and was promoted to major in November, 1944. He served in the European theatre with the 9th Engineer Command, 9th Air Force, from October, 1943, until September, 1945, and was awarded the Bronze Star Medal.

Shelton's marriage to Sarah Margaret Hamer, daughter of Elden and Annie H. Hamer, took place in Bennettsville, S.C., on October 21, 1928. There are three boys in the family: Stephen M., Jr., born October 24, 1936, in Reno, Nev., Walter H. on August 8, 1942, at St. Louis, and James O. on September 19, 1943, also in St. Louis.

WILLIAM WAKEMAN SHERWOOD. Executive engineer, apparatus division, Sangamo Electric Company, Springfield, Ill.; residence, Washington Park Gardens, R.R. 6, Springfield.

After a year as a cadet engineer with the Brooklyn Edison Company, Sherwood returned to Yale in 1927 as an instructor and graduate student in electrical engineering. He took his M.S. in 1929, was promoted to assistant professor in 1931, and served in that capacity for five years. In 1936 he went with the Sangamo Electric Company, manufacturers of watt-hour meters, time switches, control devices, capacitors, and Sonar equipment, as a development engineer. He became senior design engineer in 1941 and since 1948 has had the position of executive engineer. Sherwood was supervisor of the war training courses at the University of Illinois from 1940 to 1945 and an instructor in the professional engineers' refresher courses from 1948 to 1950. He is serving on the executive committee of the Illinois Valley section of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers (formerly chairman of the committee), is also a member of the Institute of Radio Engineers, and since 1940 has been a deacon, elder, and chairman of the board of Christian education of the First Presbyterian Church. He is section chairman of the Community Fund and takes part in other civic activities.

On August 8, 1926, he was married in Rye, N.Y., to Ellen C. Cressey, daughter of Charles E. and Mary Cressey. Her home was formerly in Fairfield, Conn. They were divorced in 1928. His second marriage, to H. Yvonne Yonick, daughter of Ernest W. and Faye C. Perry Yonick, took place in Cheyenne, Wyo., June 12, 1938. Sherwood has three children: Patricia E., born December 8, 1928, in New Haven, David W. on August 8, 1943 in Springfield, and Cynthia Jane on January 30, 1946, also in Springfield. Patricia, who graduated from the Hartford High School in 1947, has been at the University of Connecticut for the past three years.

"Since leaving New Haven in 1936, encounters with classmates have been nil, except for visits with Stan Tucker in New York every few years," Sherwood says. "To be sure, there are a few Yale men in this capital city of Illinois and among the closer friends are Bill Downing, '24 S., Chick Lanphier, '31 S., and Bob Lanphier, '27 S. Last year Bishop Charles Clough, '26 Ac, was transferred to Springfield, but we have not yet gotten together. To those of us, isolated from Yale activities as we are, an event like the glorious Yale-Wisconsin game two years ago, is something to leave a deep impression.

"There are probably not many of my Class who can boast of a wife who is also a Yale graduate. She received the degree in nursing in 1936, did a stint as educational director for the School of Nursing in the local hospital, and now puts in a bit of her spare time on the board of directors as adviser to the Nursing School.

"Since 1940 much of my activity has been with the development of anti-submarine equipment for surface vessels and anti-surface vessel equipment for submarines. This Jekyll and Hyde existence has been extremely interesting and has led to a fair amount of travel above and below the surface of the oceans. Occasional whiffs of salty air become quite a tonic to one brought up on the shore and now surrounded by fields of waving corn and a diet of channel cat-fish."

ROBERT SIMKINS. Director of sales research and planning, Elgin National Watch Company, 107 National Street, Elgin, Ill.; residence, Brinker Road, Barrington, Ill.

During the first two years after graduation Simkins worked for Spencer Trask & Company as a trader. He was branch manager for A. O. Slaughter, Anderson & Fox from 1929 to 1933 and was connected with the sales department of the Continental Baking Company for the next four years. He did market research work for Fuller, Smith & Ross from 1938 to 1940, was with the O.P.A. the following year, and then for five years was vice-president of the Trundle Engineering Company. Since January 1, 1950, he has been director of sales research and planning for the Elgin National Watch Company. Simkins belongs to the Barrington Hills Country Club and the Yale Club.

His marriage to Ruth Elizabeth Busby Murphy, daughter of Alfred H. and Celia Kaber Busby, took place in Cleveland on December 31, 1945. They have two daughters, both of whom were born in Lake Forest, Ill., Sarah Reed on July 2, 1947, and Susan Elizabeth on February 11, 1950.

Simkins covers other things with the following: "Travels: nothing spectacular, but sufficiently extensive, including one-night stands, to prefer the home fireside; recreations: curtailed by age and the ever-loving wife, but appetites unchanged; hobbies: new putters and hopes they will work—Brooks Brothers bats—a source of wonderment in the Midwest; special interests: my two daughters and evasion of Uncle Sam's Internal Revenue agents; aversions: canasta—Benton & Bowles, BOWLES and Benton.

"Otherwise life is busy, interesting, and well worth while."

ALBERT ALONZO SMITH, JR. Superintendent of research, American Smelting & Refining Company, Barber, N.J.; residence, 59 Elm Avenue, Metuchen, N.J.

Smith spent two years as a graduate student at Yale and in 1928 received an M.S. degree. He then took a position as research metallurgist with the Metropolitan Engineering Company in Brooklyn, N.Y., remaining with them until 1935, when he went with the American Smelting & Refining Company in Barber. He has been superintendent of research for the company since 1945. Smith is the author or co-author of a number of articles on technical subjects which have appeared in various publications, including Metals Technology, Metals and Alloys, Iron Age, and the Journal of the Electrochemical Society. The Encyclopedia of Chemical Technology, published in 1951, contains an article by him entitled, "Indium." He is a member of the Society of Automotive Engineers, the American Society for Metals, the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers (chairman of the Institute of Metals Division, A.I.M.E., 1948-49), and the Metals Science Club. His marriage to Katherine Shull, daughter of Chauncy E. and Katherine Sherlock Shull, took place in Lewiston, Pa., on June 20, 1931.

Smith writes: "I have traveled to Tacoma, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Houston, Salt Lake, Oak Ridge, Grand Cañon in Colorado, Denver, Chicago, Cleveland, Washington, D.C.—in other words, practically all of the high lights of the United States. Recreations are: playing at golf, growing roses, listening to good music, connoisseur and chef of charcoal-broiled steaks, browning the body beautiful (under 'ole Sol'), and photography (specializing in night-blooming cirrus and snowball fights)."

CLARENCE WARNER SMITH. Chief engineer, chemical engineering division, Philco Corporation, Tioga and C Streets, Philadelphia 34, Pa.; residence, 221 Lafayette Avenue, Oreland, Pa.

Smith has been with Philco since February, 1927, at first as an analytical chemist on storage batteries, etc., as chief chemist from 1928 to 1945, and as chief engineer of the chemical engineering division since then. He is also consulting engineer to all divisions of the company. Keeping up to date on all technical subjects relating to engineering and chemical subjects applicable to his business takes a lot of his spare time. What there is left is devoted to the raising of fruits and berries, photography, and traveling by automobile. Smith is a member of the American Chemical Society, the Electrochemical Society, the American Society for Metals, the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the American Electroplaters Society, and the Franklin Institute and has contributed to numerous technical journals, such as Iron Age, Metal Finishing, and Organic Finishing.

His marriage to Anna B. Gillespie took place in Philadelphia on December 10, 1930. Their older son, Paul Clarence, who was born in Philadelphia in 1934, is a Junior in the Abington High School. The younger boy, Michael Warner, was born in Abington in 1945.

Smith, who has been independently engaged in business for some time, still has an office in New York, although he is now living in Palm Beach. From 1930 to 1938 he was senior partner in the investment banking firm of Paige, Smith & Remick. From January, 1941, to January, 1942, he had a $1-a-year Presidential appointment as a consultant with the Office of Production Management of the War Production Board. During the war he was a lieutenant colonel, A.U.S., and served two years in the European-African-Middle Eastern theatres. He was awarded two Bronze Stars.

Smith is a third degree Mason. He was first married on January 7, 1926, in New York City, to Consuelo Vanderbilt, daughter of W. K. and Virginia Fair Vanderbilt. They were divorced in February, 1935. His marriage to Florence Pritchett, daughter of Samuel and Mary Pritchett, took place in Santa Barbara, Calif., on July 12, 1948. Her home was formerly in New York. Smith has two daughters: Iris Ada, born March 7, 1927, and Virginia Consuelo, born May 18, 1930, both in New York. Iris, who attended the Greenwood School and Pine Manor Junior College, where she was in the Class of 1947, married Herbert Pratt Van Ingen and has a son, Herbert Pratt, Jr. Virginia, who went to Foxcroft and was later in the Class of 1950 at Colby Junior College, is the wife of William L. Hutton.

EDGAR HOWELL SMITH. Address, 145 Greenmount Boulevard, Dayton, Ohio.

FRIEND WILLIAM SMITH. Special representative, Pass & Seymour, Inc. (wiring devices and lighting fixtures), 71 Murray Street, New York, N.Y.; residence, 50 Park Terrace, East, New York 34.

Since May, 1950, Smith has been connected with Pass & Seymour, Inc., manufacturers of electrical wiring devices and Alabax porcelain lighting fixtures, as a special representative on specification work with housing authorities, private housing development, contacting, and writing specifications for architects and engineers on all projects. For a time after graduation he was with Lord & Taylor as a section manager. Subsequently he was a stock and bond salesman with Dillon, Read & Company, a salesman with the Spool Cotton Company, and a field service representative and salesman with the Automatic Electric Sales Corporation.

Smith was married on January 19, 1935, in Greenwich, Conn., to Lillian Doerr, daughter of William and Rae Doerr. Her home was formerly in Brooklyn, N.Y.

Covering his single public musical appearance, he submits, "On New Year's Eve, 1950, I rendered 'Lord Jeffrey Amherst' and the Whiffenpoof Song at Erin's Isle Bar and Grill, 566 West 207th Street. The house bought a drink as a prize. That's all." In reply to our final question—"There is nothing special I have to say here. I've never done anything outstanding which any one would be interested in hearing about. My one real regret is that I did not take advantage of the years in college more advantageously. I'd have been able to report a great deal if I had. I'm happier now than I ever have been, since I don't feel sorry for myself any more. My hope is, that in my present job I can prove more than satisfactory to my employers. My philosophy is: 'Don't worry about yesterday—you can't do a thing about that. Today is the important time—with about as much planning for the future as is possible under the present circumstances!'

"Hobbies? Well, I don't play tennis any more, but still am vitally interested in sports in general, with special interest in a local group of kids—the Inwood Little League, of which I am a member in an advisory capacity. I am about to plunge into the tropical fish hobby, which should keep me out of mischief in my spare time.

"My ambition is to be able to renew the wonderful friendships formed at Yale during the Twenty-fifth Reunion."

WILFRED WINTER SMITH. Manager, patent section, rayon technical division, E. I. duPont deNemours & Company, 3494 Nemours Building, Wilmington, Del.; residence, 803 River Road, Riverside Gardens, Wilmington.

Smith, who took his Ph.D. at Yale in 1929, writes: "Entered duPont employ July 1, 1929, directly from graduate school as research chemist in chemical department. Transferred to DuPont Rayon Company, Buffalo, N.Y., August 1, 1931, as a member of patent division. Have remained in same activity since then. The rayon company was absorbed by parent company in 1936. Transferred to Wilmington, 1941. Assumed direction of patent work for rayon department, 1946.

"Present hobby is Boy Scout work. Now serving as scoutmaster, having built up troop from twelve to fifty-two in less than two years. Took fourteen of them to Valley Forge Jamboree last summer for ten-day camping experience. Nothing like watching boys grow in skill and self-reliance, especially when you have a hand in helping them. Spare time hobby is model railroad-ing—I'm an HO gauge man myself, but being maintenance man for my sons' tin-plate O gauge leaves little time for own preferences. Not much of a traveler. What with the above, and serving as first aid instructor for the local Red Cross chapter, I don't have time to travel. Now also busy training others in first aid for civilian defense program.

"As first choir director in a newly organized church I had the pleasure and satisfaction of seeing the choir grow from a quartet to a twenty-eight voice group, which, as a volunteer director, I turned over to a paid director so that I could work with a Boy Scout troop, also sponsored by the same church. Yes, I like to see things grow, even though I am no good at gardening."

The church to which Smith refers is the Presbyterian Church of the Covenant in Wilmington, the first Presbyterian Church to be chartered in the state since the Nineties. He was a charter member, and, in addition to serving as choir director from 1943 to 1949, was a trustee and treasurer from 1942 to 1945. From 1946 to 1949 he was chairman of the first aid committee for the Delaware chapter of the American Red Cross. He is a member of the American Chemical Society.

He was married January 26, 1929, in New Haven to LouEtta B. Bennett, daughter of Irving K. and Dorothea Howell Bennett. Her home was formerly in Stratford, Conn. Their children are: Nancy Lou, born in 1929, Janet Elaine in 1934, Geoffrey Allen in 1941, Craig Bennett in 1943, and Dana Stephen in 1949. Janet was born in Buffalo and the others in Wilmington. Nancy Lou is a Senior at Marietta College.

ROBERT HEMPSTEAD SMYTH. Address, 187 Southwood Road, Bridgeport 4, Conn.

LOUIS ROBERT SNEIDERMAN. Electronics engineer, Civil Aeronautics Administration, Department of Commerce, Washington, D.C.; residence, 1837 M Street, N.E., Washington.

Sneiderman was engaged as a civil engineer for sixteen years after graduation—with the Connecticut Company in New Haven from 1926 to 1930 and then with the Connecticut State Highway Department. In 1942 he took a position as an electrical and industrial engineer for the War Department (Signal Corps) in Washington and after three years transferred to the Naval Research Laboratory as an electronics engineer. Since November 1, 1948, he has been associated with the Civil Aeronautics Administration in the same capacity. Sneiderman has been registered as a professional engineer and land surveyor in the State of Connecticut since March, 1936.

He was married on August 25, 1940, in New Haven to Mildred Sternschuss, daughter of Joseph and Bertha Lowenbaum Sternschuss. Their son, Charles Alan, was born on May 8, 1947.

MOSES SOROLA. Principal, Ralph R. McKee Vocational and Technical High School, St. Mark's Place and Wall Street, Staten Island, N.Y.; residence, 50 Park Terrace, West, New York 34, N.Y.

Sorola, who has been principal of the above school since March, 1944, sends the following summary covering the previous years: "Dropped out of Yale in 1924 to work at custom tailoring; returned to Yale in 1926 to graduate with 1928 S.; worked in the men's clothing industry; teacher of men's clothing manufacturing at the Central High School of Needle Trades, New York City, 1931-44."

In 1934 Sorola took an M.A. at New York University. He is serving at present as president of the Vocational High School Principals Association of New York City and is a member also of the New York Academy of Public Education and the Rotary Club of Staten Island. His marriage to Laura Marchitto took place in New Haven on September 15, 1928. Their daughter, Susan Linda, was born in New York on March 20, 1942.

JAMES VINCENT STANFORD. Superintendent, Andaray Gold Mines Company, Casilla 1825, Lima, Peru.

Stanford has been out of the country ever since he took his M.S. in mining at Yale in 1927. His first position was that of engineer with the Northern Peru Mining & Smelting Company, and he later had a similar connection with the Willow Creek Mines in Alaska. He has been superintendent of the Andaray Gold Mines Company of Lima since 1940. He is a member of the American Institute of Mining Engineers.

He was married on March 19, 1938, in West Haven, Conn., to Charlotte Williams, daughter of David J. and Sarah Owens Williams. They have two children: John David, who was born in New Haven on September 13, 1944, and Margaret Anne, born at Montour Falls, N.Y., on March 12, 1947.

WYLLYS GANNETT STANTON. Assistant to president, Oran Company, manufacturers of floor furnaces and other metal goods, 222 South 3d Street, Columbus 7, Ohio; residence 2631 Chester Road, North, Columbus 12.

Stanton was engaged in accounting, selling, as a plant engineer, etc., from 1926 to 1933 and was then chief of the planning division of the St. Louis Farm Credit Administration until 1941. The next year he was chief of the planning division of the Ralston Purina Company of St. Louis, this work being interrupted by a call to active duty in the Army. He had kept up his Reserve commission since 1926, with various tours of active duty. He gives additional details: "On extended duty starting April, 1941, and ending March, 1946—first year in charge of branch offices of the St. Louis Ordnance District, first at Kansas City and then at Houston as Army inspector of ordnance. Among other things, selected site for and started the Dixon Gun Plant. Went to England, June, 1942; had various assignments at general depots and commanding ordnance depots. Also established statistical division of E.T.O. Ordnance Headquarters. Was ammunition officer of 5th Corps. Finished overseas service as C.O., 142d Ordnance Battalion. Returned to states, January, 1945, to 5th Service Command; transferred to General Staff Corps. Promoted to lieutenant colonel, May, 1944."

From 1945 to 1950 Stanton was associate professor of industrial engineering at Ohio State University and a member of the executive committee of the Ohio State Personnel Research Board. Since August, 1950, he has been assistant to the president of the Oran Company. In 1936 he received the degree of M.S. in business administration at Washington University, St. Louis, and was elected simultaneously to Artus and Beta Gamma Sigma (honor societies) and offered a position as instructor. He has finished the residence and language requirements for his Ph.D. in psychology, but still has to do his thesis. Since 1946 Stanton has been a registered professional engineer in Ohio. In 1948 he organized the American Institute of Industrial Engineers and has since served as its national executive secretary. He is a director of the Franklin County chapter of the National Society of Professional Engineers and treasurer of the state society and was formerly a national director of the Society for the Advancement of Management. He belongs also to the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the American Association of University Professors, the American Society for Engineering Education, the Industrial Relations Research Association, the National Sojourners, the Reserve Officers Association, the Central Ohio Personnel Association, the American Psychology Association, and the Faculty Club at Ohio State. In 1949 he became a charter member of the honorary engineering society of Alpha Pi Mu. That year he made an address before the annual convention of the Ohio Society of Professional Engineers on "Coöperation Between Technical and Professional Societies." He has contributed articles to the the American Foundryman and the Engineering Experiment Station News and has done confidential editorial work for various large publishing houses on books in the field of industrial engineering. His thesis for his master's degree on the subject, "Federal Land Bank Loan Experience," was distributed by the Farm Credit Administration. From 1939 to 1941 he served on the Maplewood-Richmond Heights School Board.

Stanton married Evelyn Richards, daughter of Richard H. and Susannah Powell Richards, in St. Charles, Mo., July 7, 1927. She formerly lived in Elwood, Ind. Their son, Wyllys Gannett, Jr., born in Peoria, Ill., May 23, 1930, is taking his degree in industrial management at Ohio State in June, 1951.

"My current ambition is to live in Florida, as I am completely fed up with these Northern winters and have just returned from my first vacation in that balmy state," says Stanton. "At the moment, I have that feeling that 'this is where I came in.' I mean that in a few months my only son will be in the Army or working for some munificent corporation and starting a home of his own, and there will be just my wife and me to amuse ourselves as best we can. There is this difference, at the beginning I used to worry about trying to get rich, or at least to lay up a modest competence, but now I realize the futility of any such endeavor with the great White Father in Washington determined to take care of all of us whether we want such care or not. Moreover, I see that with continuing inflation and confiscatory taxes anything that one has laid up will be taken away, therefore, I am content that with my profession, I will be able to make enough to indulge our modest tastes and let it go at that.

"Hobbies which interest me are travel, photography, writing, and the advancement of professional engineering, especially the industrial branch. I have motored through all states east of the Mississippi and eastern Canada, but I estimate that it will take another ten ten years to see the West and parts of the East that have been missed. I taught my son photography, but my personal efforts in this direction are eclipsed since he started winning prizes and got $65 for a single negative. Perhaps when I am on my own again someday, I will take it up again for documentary purposes if no more.

"During the time that I was active as a college professor I did a great deal of professional writing of a type that does not get published, and I have notes on two or three books that I believe would be great contributions to the literature of the field. If I ever get time to write them, say when I retire, it will be interesting to see what the publishing houses think about them. I have also dabbled with a novel and some short stories to pass the time when I was in England, but I am not very serious about these.

"The biggest regret that I have is that I have a tendency to get too many irons in the fire at once. When a nominating committee approaches me to run for an office, I underestimate the time and work required and soon find myself saddled with more than I can handle. Like the rest of our Class, I regret the fact that we were graduated in time to be getting started in the business world when the Depression pulled the rug from under our feet.

"When I am teaching, I think longingly, as I burn midnight electricity grading papers, reading theses, or preparing lectures, about the fine freedom of a business executive and the difference in earnings too. When, as at present, I am in business trying to buy non-existent steel sheets and copper tubing, trying to hire competent help, trying to train chuckleheads, and contemplating an 'In Basket' whose contents never diminish, I think longingly of the life on the campus."

MCCORMICK STEELE. Address, Ringling Brothers & Barnum & Bailey, Sarasota, Fla.

MARK WHEELER STEVENS. Address, 120 South Swan Street, Albany, N.Y.

WILLIAM SHERMAN STEVENSON. Supervisor, power plant department, Westinghouse Electric International Company, 40 Wall Street, New York, N.Y.; residence, "Glacial Rock," Old Bedford Road, R.F.D. 3, Greenwich, Conn.

During the first two years after graduation Stevenson was a salesman with the Consolidation Coal Company and was then a sales engineer with the Babcock & Wilcox Company until 1943. He has been connected with the Westinghouse Electric International Company since 1946 and has had the position of supervisor of the power plant department since 1947. In 1939 he studied structural engineering under the auspices of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers and that year was licensed as a professional engineer in New York State. From 1940 to 1943 he served as vice-president of the New York chapter of Tau Beta Pi. Stevenson was active in the Community Chest drives in Larchmont from 1940 to 1945.

He was married in June, 1928, in New York to Ruth Brewster Noyes, daughter of Walter Chadwick and Luella Armstrong Noyes, of Old Lyme, Conn. They were divorced in 1947. In May, 1948, he married, in Riverside, Calif., Marion Cordelia Hirleman, daughter of William and Minnie Cole Hirleman. Her home was formerly in Hillside, N.J. Stevenson's oldest son, William Noyes, was born in June, 1929, and died on December 11, 1936, in New Rochelle, N.Y. He has four other children: Ruth Armstrong, who was born in May, 1931, and who is a Sophomore at Connecticut College for Women, Barbara McKelvy, born in August, 1936, Robert Chadwick in April, 1939, and Dwight Cole in January, 1949.

"My hobby has been building homes, woodworking, and boating," Stevenson says—but it would appear that 'hobby' is a definite understatement. He goes on, "I completely designed and built our present home, from the foundations up. It took me from 1941 to 1943 (then in Navy two and a half years), and I finished it in 1948. I have a ten-acre farm, on which I raise mostly weeds. Our present home is also filled with homemade furniture which I designed and then built. Before getting into the house-building spree, I used to own a power cruiser and small sailboat (the latter I built and sold to Dave Gregg, '26 S., and I understand he got some ten years' fun out of this small sloop (14').

"I have traveled to South America three times in the last few years on business and have covered practically all of that continent. My present work is to sell complete steam electric power plants in foreign countries.

"During the war (1943-46), as assistant machinery superintendent of the New York Navy Yard, I repaired anything from a D.E. to a battleship and was in two collisions at sea, one of which permanently injured my back; however, I still get around O.K. I'm now a two-and-a-half striper in the U.S. Naval Reserve. I hope to stay out of the next war."

Stevenson held a second lieutenant's commission in the 353d Engineers until 1936. When he entered the Navy in World War II, he ranked as lieutenant and at the time of his release was a lieutenant commander.

DWIGHT LATHROP STOCKER. President and general manager, Michigan Paper Company, Plainwell, Mich.; residence, 1757 Hillshire Drive, Kalamazoo, Mich.

Stocker spent the first year after graduation as head chainman with the Portland (Ore.) Water Department and during the next five years was with the Bryant Paper Company, at first in the engineering department, then as manager of the coating department, and ultimately as assistant secretary of the company. He then became assistant to the president of the Hawley Pulp & Paper Company, but gave this up after a year to go with the Sulphate Pulp & Paper Company as vice-president in charge of production. Since December, 1935, he has been president and general manager of the Michigan Paper Company, which makes book, writing, and newsprint papers. He is a director of the American National Bank of Kalamazoo and a member of the Park and Torch clubs and the Masons. During World War II Stocker was a dollar-a-year consultant to the War Production Board and also served on several advisory committees for both W.P.B. and O.P.A. relating to the paper industry.

He was married August 2, 1930, in Kalamazoo to Leola Woodruff, daughter of Guy B. and Grace Marsaw Woodruff. Their son, Dwight Lathrop, Jr., who was born September 2, 1931, prepared for college at the State High School in Kalamazoo and at The Taft School, where he was in the Class of 1950. He is now at Washington and Lee.

"Manufacturing is time consuming, but in Kalamazoo we are able to do quite a little duck hunting and other small game hunting," Stocker says. "Jim Wise has been my partner in this for many years. Also see Max Bardeen quite often. We are all three in the paper business but with different firms. During the spring, summer, and early fall I spend much of my free time trying to have continual flowers in a rather small garden. The hobby seems to counteract an expanding waistline.

"Currently much of my time is absorbed in helping a new course established at Western Michigan College and in assisting with a convocation and later with a drive at Kalamazoo College. Also expect to start commuting to Washington soon—the inquiries are under way.

"I married a wonderful girl twenty years ago, who has always provided a good home. She encourages me when I am down and pulls me off the porch when it is too high. Young Dwight has become Big Dwight since he is both taller and heavier than his father."

JOHN HERBERT STONE. Regional forester, U.S. Forest Service, 7th and Peachtree Streets, Atlanta, Ga.; residence, 2374 Montview Drive, Atlanta.

Stone, who has been in the Forest Service since leaving the Yale Forest School in 1927, has served in various capacities in the organization from forest ranger to his present assignment as regional forester, to which he was appointed in May, 1946. In this connection he is in charge of Forest Service activities in eleven Southern states. Stone has made a number of speeches and written a few articles. He attended the third World Forestry Congress at Helsinki in July, 1949, and that summer also visited the forests of Finland, Sweden, Denmark, Germany, and France. He is a member of the Society of American Foresters and the Masonic order and has been active in Boy Scout work.

His marriage to Alberta Beam, daughter of Calvin Michaux and Carol Shelton Beam, took place in Asheville, N.C., on June 8, 1932. They have two children: Coral Anne, who was born in Asheville on September 16, 1934, and Richard Herbert, born in Milwaukee, on November 5, 1941. Coral is a Junior at the Northside High School in Atlanta.

EDMUND CURTISS STONER. With International Telephone & Telegraph Corporation, 67 Broad Street, New York 4, N.Y.; residence, Indian Head Road, Riverside, Conn.

The above listing is somewhat misleading as Stoner is currently employed as consulting engineer to the Government of Turkey, having his headquarters in Istanbul (since 1949) and specializing in the field of wire and radio communications, military and civil. He has certainly had a most interesting and varied career.

"After graduation," he writes, "I acquired a wife, completed flying school, and went on active duty with the Army Air Service. However, my added responsibilities, plus the atmosphere of the bull market of the Twenties, influenced me to leave the Army and take on a civilian job with increased remuneration and reportedly vastly improved future prospects. The new job sent us to Cuba and then to South America, where I acquired a small airplane with which I proceeded to annoy the Sunday golfers. Hid out there during the Depression years, traveling pretty much all over the place, including the upper Amazon jungles, the Andes, and the Argentine pampas. When things began to look better in 1935, we went on a trip around the world, making the regular ports of call in Hawaii, Asia, Europe, and America, and visiting Japan, China, Malaya, and India.

"By 1939 we were moved to Cuba, and then in 1940 I was sent alone to Spain, where I unhappily considered the prospects of Hitler crossing the Pyrenees, and how far and in what direction I could run if he did. After Pearl Harbor, I joined up with the refugees in Lisbon, where for a somewhat astronomical price I obtained the rights to one third of a two-berth cabin on a ship, loaded like a rush hour subway train, bound for Mexico via North Africa. The ship ran out of coal on the way across the Atlantic, so I was able to disembark in a cloud of coal dust off the coaling pier at Newport News. Was immediately picked up by the Air Force, who put me in uniform and shipped me back across the Atlantic to Africa again. Finished up the war along with Tom Logan in Italy.

"Back in 1941 we built ourselves a house in Riverside (Greenwich), Conn., and ever since have been conniving to find some formula whereby we can live there for more than occasional short intervals. Our latest plot was upset by the Marshall Plan, which landed us in Turkey, where we are now, and from where we expect to return in time for the Twenty-fifth Reunion.

"My chief hobbies are yachting (in my baliwick anything over ten feet long is known as a yacht), photography, and aviation. Can't think of any special regrets, outside of the fact that I have less hair than I used to. My ambition is to live in Riverside nine months and travel three months of every year, which I admit is rank heresy for a native son of California and certainly doesn't harmonize with a beer income."

Stoner's first civilian job was that of sales engineer with the International Standard Electric Corporation of New York. From 1928 to 1930 he was traffic manager of the Chile Telephone Company in Santiago and during the next nine years was in Lima with the Peruvian Telephone Company, successively as equipment engineer, chief engineer, and director and general manager. While in Havana in 1940, he was chief engineer of the Cuban Telephone Company. He went to Madrid as director and chief engineer of the Spanish National Telephone Company the following year and from 1945 to 1948 was assistant vice-president of the Federal Telephone & Radio Corporation of Clifton, N.J. Stoner has been registered as a professional engineer in Connecticut since 1936. He is a member of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, the Aircraft Owners and Pilots Association, the American Legion, the Army and Navy Club of Washington, the New York Yale Club, and the Riverside Yacht Club.

Stoner, who held a commission as second lieutenant in the Air Reserve from 1926 to 1931, had taken summer courses at Naval Reserve Flying Schools from 1924 to 1926 while a member of the Yale R.O.T.C. In 1942 he went on active duty at the Army Air Force Headquarters in Washington, with the rank of captain, A.U.S. He was promoted to major in the Air Force within a short time and served for about a year with the Air Transport Command at La Guardia Field. In 1943 he served successively as staff officer at the Headquarters of the 12th Air Force in Algiers and La Marsa, Tunis, and with the 12th Bomber Command at La Marsa and Bari, Italy. He was then assigned to the 15th Air Force in Italy and during 1944-45 was attached to the Headquarters of the Mediterranean Allied Air Forces at Caserta. He was promoted to lieutenant colonel during this period and since 1947 has ranked as colonel in the Air Force Reserve. He has battle stars for the Naples-Foggia and Rome-Arno campaigns and also the Bronze Star Medal. He had the rating of military pilot (two-engine) and had short TD assignments at Goose Bay, Labrador, with the movement of the 8th Air Force to England in 1942 and in Mexico City with arrangements for the A.T.C. Ferry Route in 1943. In 1948 he was commander of the 163d Reserve Squadron at Stewart Field.

His marriage to Margaret Dorman Hamilton, daughter of Oscar Warren and Margaret Dorman Hamilton, took place in Brooklyn, N.Y., June 23, 1926. Their daughter, Margaret Hamilton, who was born in Lima, January 25, 1936, is at present at St. George's School in Switzerland. Their son, James Curtiss, who was born December 11, 1938, in Stamford, Conn., died May 20, 1939, in Summit, N.J.

HENRY BENTON SUHR. President, Red Valley Oil Company, Oil City Trust Company Building, Oil City, Pa. (P.O. Box 604); residence, 103 West 2d Street, Oil City.

From 1927 to 1935 Suhr was occupied as a private secretary. Since December, 1935, he has been in the oil production business as president of the Red Valley Oil Company. He is a director of the Pennzoil Company of Oil City, as well as of the Oil City Hospital, the local chapter of the American Red Cross, the Y.M.C.A., and the Venango County Blind Association. During the period from November, 1942, to August, 1945, Suhr was a major in the Quartermaster Corps, attached to the Planning Division of the Army-Navy Petroleum Board.

He was married on February 15, 1930, in Oil City to Elizabeth Peters, daughter of Cearing Van and Sarah Elizabeth McCracken Peters. Their sons, Charles Edward, born February 17, 1931, and Henry Benton, Jr., on August 23, 1932, both in Oil City, are in the Senior Class at The Hill School.

"This is the toughest part of this questionnaire," said Suhr, when he came to our item 21. "I'm afraid I have nothing out of the ordinary to offer, or else it might better be left unwritten. At any rate, this can wait until the Reunion."

EDWARD AUGUST SWANSON. Highway architectural engineer, Connecticut State Highway Department, State Office Building, Hartford, Conn.; residence, 310 Silas Deane Highway, Rocky Hill, Conn.

Swanson writes: "Since graduation I have been engaged in the field of building construction in New York City, Philadelphia, and New Haven and Hartford, Conn. Had considerable responsibility in the erection of the Savoy-Plaza Hotel, the Lee Higginson Building, the G. A. Fuller Building, all in New York City, the Bamberger Building in Newark, N.J., the Aetna Life Insurance Building in Hartford, and the Yale buildings in New Haven. [He probably saw a lot of Clifford McGrail during this latter period.]

"The Depression was a setback, and I wound up in the Connecticut State Highway Department. My work here consists of the responsibility for the maintenance and erection of their buildings and equipment. In 1943 I married a very lovely lady and regret I delayed so long. My hobbies are golf, shooting somewhere around 90, and photography."

Swanson's first job was with the George A. Fuller Company as resident engineer, his connection with the Yale Landscape Department was that of engineer and surveyor and later, before going with the Connecticut State Public Works Department, he was a senior engineer with the Connecticut Geodetic Survey. He has done quite a bit of work towards his master's degree—at Columbia during 1927-28, in the Yale Department of Education during 1936-37, and also at Connecticut State Teachers College. He is registered as a professional engineer and land surveyor and is a member of the Connecticut Society of Civil Engineers, the Connecticut State Employees Association, and the Masonic order, being a senior warden back in 1936. His marriage to Mollie E. Jendoch, daughter of A. W. and A. S. Stein Jendoch, took place in Waterbury, Conn., on April 24, 1943.

GEORGE SINKS TATMAN. Secretary-treasurer, News-Examiner Company, 404 Central Avenue, Connersville, Ind.; residence, 1007 Lincoln Avenue, Connersville.

In October, 1926, Tatman became secretary-treasurer and a director of the News-Examiner Company and publisher of the Connersville News-Examiner. He has also been general manager of the News-Examiner Printing Company since December, 1932, and of radio station WCNB and WCNB-FM since March, 1946, and he is president and a director of the Winchester (Ky.) Sun Company (printing and publishing), general manager, secretary-treasurer, and a director of Tatman, Inc. (a real estate holding company in Connersville), and a director of the Fayette Federal Savings & Loan Association of Connersville. He has served as chairman of the Fayette County Republican Publicity Committee for a number of years, is a trustee of the Connersville American Legion home, a trustee and director of the Y.M.C.A., president and a trustee of the Dale Cemetery Association, and a director of the Chamber of Commerce and of the Hoosier State Press Association of Indianapolis. He was on the board of the Fayette County chapter of the Red Cross from 1936 to 1950 and a vestryman of Trinity Episcopal Church from 1930 to 1950 and also a warden for ten years. Tatman is active in Masonry, being an officer of the Grand Commandery, Knights Templar, State of Indiana, past commander of Commandery No. 6 in Connersville, and a member of Warren Lodge, No. 15, F. and A.M., Maxwell Chapter, No. 18, Fayette Council, No. 6, R. and S.M. He was formerly president of the Rotary Club and belongs to the Connersville Country Club (vice-president and a director), the Indianapolis Athletic Club, the National Press Club of Washington, the American Legion, the 40 and 8, the Eagles, and the Elks.

Tatman was in the Army Reserve (Combat Engineers) from 1926 to 1938, his final rank being that of captain. During World War II he served as a first lieutenant in the 601st Anti-Aircraft Artillery Regiment, being stationed at various posts in the Eastern Defense Command.

He was married September 16, 1933, in Indianapolis to Cornelia Stewart Dowling, daughter of Henry McCabe and Florence Stewart Scott Dowling. The children were both born in Connersville, George Sinks, Jr., on May 4, 1935, and Jane Stewart on July 9, 1938. The boy is in the fourth form at Choate, and Jane is in junior high.

"My special hobby or interest after college was fast super-charged motor cars, and I became quite interested in automobile racing," Tatman tells us. "Later I became interested in golf and for years was golf chairman at the Connersville Country Club. At present that is still my number one hobby. I play every day that weather permits, enter a few amateur tournaments, and actually own nineteen putters. In between golfing activities I became interested in fishing, and for the past fifteen years I have maintained a hunting and fishing camp near Gaylord, Mich. My special ambition is to get Gill, Eustis, and Peters in a 'steep' golf match sometime. Also hope that George, Jr., can attend 'Old Eli' and that any classmates whenever they are near Connersville, will give me a ring—580 or 71."

ROBERT NELSON TAYLOR. Address, 159 State Street, New London, Conn.

ROBERT TENNANT. Pathologist, Hartford Hospital, 80 Seymour Street, Hartford, Conn., and associate clinical professor of pathology, Yale Medical School; residence, 156 Walden Street, West Hartford.

Tennant graduated from the Yale Medical School in 1929 and for the next five years was an interne and resident in pathology at New Haven Hospital. He spent the year 1934-35 at Western Reserve as a National Research Council fellow in physiology. He has since been a member of the faculty of the Yale Medical School—as assistant professor of pathology until 1941 and associate clinical professor since then. Since 1941 he has also been pathologist at the Hartford Hospital and at present has the same connection with the Day Kimball Hospital in Putnam, Conn., and the Windham Memorial Hospital in Willimantic. He became a diplomate of the American Board of Pathology in 1940 and is a member of the American College of Pathologists, the American Association of Clinical Pathologists, the American Association of Pathologists and Bacteriologists, the New England Pathological Society, the American Medical Association, the Connecticut State Medical Society, the New England Cancer Society, and the Alpha Omega Alpha medical society. Tennant has contributed several articles to medical journals.

His marriage to Dorothy Davis, daughter of Charles C. Davis (M.D. Yale 1907) and Catharine D. Born Davis, took place in Essex, Conn., April 7, 1934. They have two daughters, both of whom were born in New Haven, Mary A. on November 25, 1935, and Barbara D. on December 31, 1937. Mary is a Sophomore at the Northfield School and Barbara a student at the Sedgwick Junior High School.

SYDNEY FREDERIC THOMAS. Public accountant, 625 Market Street, San Francisco 5, Calif.; residence, 177 Hazel Avenue, Mill Valley, Calif.

Thomas was an engineer and statistician with the International Telephone & Telegraph Corporation in Havana and New York City from 1926 to 1929. He then became a member of the staff of Meech, Harmon, Lytle & Blackmore, certified public accountants, and during the next twelve years worked for them in Buffalo, N.Y., and New York City. From 1942 to 1946 he was on active duty as a lieutenant commander in the Supply Corps of the Naval Reserve, with service in Washington and in Guam.

Following his release from service, Thomas took a position with another firm of certified public accountants, Barrow, Wade, Guthrie & Company, in San Francisco. He gave up this connection in December, 1948, to establish his own office for the general practice of public accounting, specializing in income taxes and in cost accounting. He was admitted as a certified public accountant in New York State in 1937 and in California in 1946 and is a member of the California Society of Certified Public Accountants, the National Association of Cost Accountants, the American Institute of Accountants, and the Society of Industrial Engineers.

EDWARD DILLON TOOLE. Customers' broker, Spencer Trask & Company, brokers, 25 Broad Street, New York 4, N.Y.; residence, 8 Montrose Road, Scarsdale, N.Y.

Toole first became connected with the New York Stock Exchange firm of Spencer Trask & Company in 1926. He remained with them until 1934, was a customers' broker with Craigmyle, Pinney & Company for the next nine years, and then returned to Spencer Trask. A member of the non-partisan committee for the town of Scarsdale, he has served on the Town Club (for recreation, Boy and Girl Scouts, etc.) He belongs to the Scarsdale Golf Club and the Pine Orchard (Conn.) Club. From 1941 to 1946 he was a member of the New York State Guard. He was at first a second lieutenant in Company B, 7th Regiment, and later a first lieutenant in the Corps of Engineers, attached to that regiment. Toole has done yeoman service for '26 S., as chairman of the Reunion Committees in 1932, 1936, and 1941, as Class treasurer for the past ten years, and also as a member of the Class Executive Committee.

His marriage to Alice Minor Curley, daughter of James F. and Margaret Minor Curley, took place in New Haven on September 22, 1928. They have four children, all of whom were born in New Haven, Edward D., Jr., on June 14, 1930, Allan L. on November 11, 1931, Louise M. in July, 1933, and David R. on August 2, 1939. Ed graduated from Exeter in 1949 and Allan from Andover the following year; they are now at Yale—Classes of 1953 and 1954, respectively. Louise, who will graduate from the Scarsdale High School in 1951, plans to go to Smith.

FREDERICK ERWIN TRACY. Physician, 164 Court Street, Middletown, Conn.; residence, 202 Old Mill Road, Middletown.

Tracy writes: "My ambitions are to have my boys graduate from Yale. Frederick should be ready to enter in 1952 and hopes to make the basketball team, as that is his favorite sport. He is now six feet, two, so should be tall enough. Bill's favorite sport is baseball. He hasn't set his heart on playing on any particular team at Yale, but might go out for track. Mrs. Tracy is very active in various organizations in Middletown and in our state. She is the president-elect of the Connecticut State Woman's Medical Auxiliary and for the past two years has been the county president. We have not had a real vacation in ten years, and, if possible, we are going to try and take a motor trip out to the West Coast with our boys in the summer of 1952.

"Os Scheller and I get together frequently, and I occasionally have met a few of the men who were '26 S. and '29 Med; but I haven't attended any of our Class meetings, picnics, etc., as I would like to do. I have just had too many obligations here to get away. I don't keep my nose on the grindstone all the time, as I always get to at least two medical meetings a year and try to get away for one or two weeks post-graduate courses, which to me are a vacation.

"I will be anxious to see you all this June. The most recent statistical studies conducted by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company show that one's normal weight should be whatever you weighed at age twenty-five years provided you were in good health at that age. I doubt if there will be many of us that will meet those standards."

Tracy remained in New Haven for three years after taking his M.D. in 1929, serving his internship and assistant residency and residency at the New Haven Hospital and also being an instructor at the Medical School during 1930-31. For six months during our Senior year, when he was already enrolled in the Medical School, he spent six months at the Butler Hospital, Providence, R.I., and in 1932 was at the Manhattan Maternity Hospital for three months. At various periods since starting his medical practice in Middletown he has taken courses at Harvard, Columbia, Pennsylvania, Johns Hopkins, New York University, and Yale and has also been at the Mayo Foundation and the Post-Graduate Hospital in New York. He was certified by the American Board of Internal Medicine in 1940. Since 1945 he has been a consultant to the Connecticut State Hospital in Middletown and the Veterans Hospital at Rocky Hill, Conn. He has had various connections with the Middlesex Hospital, being senior attending physician on the medical service and lecturer in medicine at its School of Nursing since 1935 (also chief physician at the school, 1935-40), president of the hospital's medical board and chairman of its medical advisory council from 1948 to 1950, and chairman of the interne committee and of post-graduate education during 1950-51.

Tracy was president of the Middlesex County Medical Society during 1949-50 and is currently serving a two-year term as councillor from the organization to the Connecticut State Medical Society. He was chairman of the Community Chest drive for the professional group during 1949-50 and of the diabetes detection drive for Middlesex County for 1950. During the war he was on the Medical Advisory Board for Hartford and Middlesex counties. He is a charter member of the Allied Medical Organization, a fellow of the American College of Physicians and the American Medical Association, and belongs to the Central Medical Society of Middletown, the Connecticut State Diabetes Mellitus Association, and the Connecticut State Heart Association. He has had articles in Biometrika and Radiology and has contributed case reports to the Connecticut State Medical Journal, as well as two to the Yale Journal of Biology and Medicine. Since 1948 he has been a trustee of the First Church of Christ (Congregational) in Middletown.

His marriage to Sarah Edna Myers, daughter of Mordecai and Eliza Bell Henry Myers, took place in New Haven, May 30, 1931. She had previously lived in Lexington, Ky., as well as in New Haven. The boys were both born in New Haven, Frederick Myers (now in the fifth form at Choate) on February 20, 1935, and William Arthur on March 2, 1940.

RAYMOND EVERETT TRACY. Address, Grand Avenue, Waterbury, Conn.

EDWARD GEORGE TRASEL, JR. Sales engineer, Aluminum Company of America, 1515 Fidelity-Philadelphia Trust Building, Philadelphia 9, Pa.; residence, 1830 Rittenhouse Square, Philadelphia 3.

Trasel has held his present position with the Aluminum Company of America since December, 1928. He is a director of the Sims Construction Company of Philadelphia and a member of the Philadelphia Art Alliance and the Merion Cricket Club. During the war he was a lieutenant commander in the Naval Reserve and as beachmaster of the U.S.S. Audrain (APA 59) participated in the invasions of Lingayen Gulf and Okinawa.

Trasel says that he has tried some sketching without too much success and adds, "Our travels have been largely to Bermuda and Florida, with summers spent in Longport and Bay Head, N.J., during which I manage to get in a bit of deep-sea fishing. Our ambition is one of these days to get to an island—probably in the Caribbean—where we can live reasonably—after taxes—away from the bustle of cities and the threat of extinction by atomic devices."

He was first married on April 29, 1931, in Springfield, Mo., to Louise Holston Martin, daughter of Charles Gold Martin. They were divorced in 1938. His second marriage, to Helen Levering Deighton Pettit, daughter of Albert Alphonso and Mary Russell Levering Deighton, took place in Philadelphia on June 24, 1949.

STANLEY ALLISON TUCKER. Publications manager, American Society of Mechanical Engineers, 29 West 39th Street, New York 18, N.Y.; residence, 49 Remsen Street, Brooklyn, 2, N.Y.

Tucker lists his connections as follows: 1926-37, Brooklyn Edison Company (Consolidated Edison Company of New York)—division engineer, mechanical engineering department; 1937-47, McGraw-Hill Publishing Company—associate editor of Power, 1937-45; European correspondent, McGraw-Hill World News, 1945-46; manager editor, Electrical World, 1946-48; 1948—, American Society of Mechanical Engineers—standards manager, 1948-49; publications manager since January, 1950.

He supplements this summary with the following: "After joining Brooklyn

Edison for a two-year stretch of cadet engineer training, I landed in the M.E. department to work on the design and construction of the Hudson Avenue Generating Station, still the world's largest steam power plant. During this hitch it fell to my lot to do a great deal of report writing, including the final published report, which filled a complete issue of Power. This led to my being invited to turn editor.

"Ten years of technical editing led up to being tapped for the beginnings of a world news (technical) organization. I was actually in Switzerland when the Jap ambassador delivered the surrender to Averell Harriman and forthwith shot himself. The Swiss really celebrated.

"The war over, I roamed the Continent and the British Isles for about a year, welcome in every research and development laboratory, a most interesting experience. Back in this country, I served a pinch hitter's spot on Electrical World as managing editor during a reorganization of the staff. This included a side task of technical liaison with the Atomic Energy Commission. This latter still continues, but directly for the commission, as adviser concerning declassification of mechanical and electrical technology.

"In 1948 saw the end of the EW need for me. I joined A.S.M.E. in their standards department and had a hand in the unification of British and American screw threads, as well as the general post-war remaking of many of the existing standards and power test codes in which A.S.M.E. takes a most active part. Back to the publishing business in early 1950, I now handle the society's extensive publishing department, and am enjoying same thoroughly.

"Hobbies? I have always had a sailboat of some sort and now own the smallest, slowest, pigtailed auxiliary sloop of the Long Island Sound fleet. It bears the criptic name of 'T 'n t' derived from the family initial."

Tucker has been registered as a professional engineer in New York State since 1933. In addition to the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, he belongs to the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, the Engineers Club of New York, and the Yale Engineering Association, of which he was secretary about 1940. His marriage to Rose Clarke took place in Middletown, Conn., September 14, 1927. They were divorced in 1947. Tucker has two sons: Donald Clarke, born October 11, 1928, in Middletown, who is taking courses in journalism at Oklahoma A. and M., and David Lawrence, born April 20, 1932, in Brooklyn.

HARLOW ELLSWORTH TURCK. Head, Mathematics Department, Wilbur Cross High School, New Haven, Conn.; residence, 49 Paramount Avenue, Hamden, Conn.

Turck has been teaching continuously since 1926—at high schools in Rutland, Vt., and Honolulu, at the Pharmacy College of the University of Connecticut, and at the Wilbur L. Cross High School in New Haven, where he has been head of the Mathematics Department since 1949. Describing himself as just an ordinary mortal, untouched by fame or fortune, he goes on. "But what do you expect to find in a school teacher? There are some that claim we are not normal—or even human. Mine has been the ordinary routine existence. Thoreau would have tolerated me at Walden. To wit:

"Travel: relatively nil except for teaching in Hawaii and having some of Uncle Sam's all-expense-paid tours; recreation: bowl, putter around the house, listen to music; hobbies: gardening, navigation; special interests: whatever Homo sapiens does—not why he does it nor what he says—the attitude of an unconverted introvert; hopes: that the next twenty-five years are as kind as those since 1926—life has not been bad; ambitions: chiefly to keep young in spirit—to date, fortunately, the youngsters I deal with have not applied 'old' to some of their (endearing?) epithets; satisfactions: life has been good—teaching does have it rewards. One can get a kick out of knowing that he might have been instrumental in pushing or pulling a lad so that the boy becomes a better and more useful citizen—no quarrel with the world or my family—that because I was exposed to an education at Yale, and it took to some extent, I am never bored: there is always something I can turn to to keep occupied; regrets: no gripes—any that could be mentioned would not stand up under introspection."

Turck, who took his M.S. degree at Yale in 1936, is a member of various professional educational organizations. He was on active duty in the Naval Reserve from 1942 to 1945 and is now on an inactive status as lieutenant commander. After indoctrination and training, he served as a communications officer with the Gulf Coast Commissioning Detail.

His marriage to Mary Gertrude Stetson, daughter of Paul Russell Stetson (M.D. Yale 1901) and Clara Louise Kusterer Stetson, took place in New Haven on June 28, 1928. Their son, David Stetson, who was born December 26, 1933, and who looks just like Turck did in 1926, aspires to be Yale 1955. He is graduating from the Hamden High School in June, 1951.

Since July, 1948, Vance has been at New York University as professor of chemistry, chairman of the Chemistry Department in Washington Square College, and head of the department in the Graduate School. He is also serving at present as a consultant to the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission. He took his Ph.D. at Yale in 1929, after three years of graduate work, and from September, 1930, to June, 1931, studied on a Sterling Fellowship from Yale at the University of Copenhagen under Professor J. N. Bronsted. He joined the Yale faculty in June, 1929, as an instructor in chemistry and returned following his year abroad. He was promoted to assistant professor in June, 1935, and to associate professor five years later.

Vance had held a second lieutenant's commission in the Ordnance Reserve from graduation until June, 1931. He went on active duty as captain in the Chemical Corps in July, 1942, was promoted to major the following February, and in November was transferred to the Engineer Corps. A promotion to lieutenant colonel followed in November, 1945; he still has this rank in the Army Reserve. His duty while in the Chemical Corps was primarily in troop training, particularly technical units. While with the Engineer Corps, he served with the Manhattan District on atomic energy development and during this period his assignments were in research and production contract supervision. He served in Africa, Europe, and the Southern Hemisphere for short periods of time and was awarded the Legion of Merit and the Army Commendation Ribbon.

In September, 1946, Vance returned to Yale, but resigned in June, 1948, to go to New York University. From April to September, 1947, he was a member of the U.S. delegation to the United Nations Atomic Energy Commission. He has contributed approximately thirty papers, the subjects of which are about equally divided in the fields of inorganic, analytical, and physical chemistry, to various scientific publications, including the Journal of the American Chemical Society, the Physical Review, the Journal of Chemical Physics, and Analytical Chemistry. He is a member of the American Chemical Society, the Chemists Club of New York, and the New York Yale Club.

Vance was married in Denmark, July 3, 1931, to Esther Christensen, daughter of Ville and Henrietta Matilda Nielsen Christensen, of Copenhagen. Their daughter, Joan, who was born in New Haven on February 6, 1934, is in the Class of 1951 at the Brearley School in New York, and Philip, born December 9, 1936, also in New Haven, is at the Trinity School.

"There is little to add," Vance says, "except that during the war years I had the opportunity to visit several places, particularly in Africa, not often seen by college professors or even the general traveler. Apart from those occasions and one year in Denmark, the past twenty-five years have been spent in New Haven or more recently, New York. After so long a time in university work one gains a rather good impression of different American universities through their graduates and acquaintances on their faculties; I am more than ever convinced (and can say so since I am no longer at Yale) that the quality of undergraduate teaching at Yale is quite unusual and is rarely equalled in other universities. Few of those who taught us are still active, but the standards are no lower; I find this a source of considerable comfort in a world as flighty as this one."

FRANCIS CLAY VIGUERIE, JR. Address, 335 Main Street, Bay St. Louis, Miss.

CLARENCE ARTHUR WARDEN, JR. President, Superior Tube Company, 910 Witherspoon Building, Philadelphia 7, Pa.; residence, "Cottesmore," Haverford, Pa.

Since 1947 Warden has been president of the Superior Tube Company and of its subsidiary, the Pacific Tube Company of Los Angeles, which are engaged in the manufacture and sale of seamless and welded tubing in steel, nickel, and other metals and alloys. He was one of the several founders of the company and formerly held the positions of treasurer, secretary, and executive vice-president. After leaving Yale, he was enrolled in the bond school of the National City Company for a time and was then with Brown Brothers & Company as a clerk, accountant, and salesman. Warden was a director of the Germantown Trust Company from 1936 until its merger with the Pennsylvania Company for Banking & Trusts in 1947 and at present is on the boards of the United Gas Improvement Company, the Big Brother Association of Philadelphia (since 1939), and the Legal Aid Society (since 1948). He belongs to the American Iron and Steel Institute.

On April 24, 1930, he was married in Radnor, Pa., to Katharine Borden Chase, daughter of Edward Berwind and Jane Malone Chase. Their children were both born in Philadelphia, William Gray, 3d, on April 28, 1932, and Sally Minot on December 4, 1934. William graduated from the Haverford School in 1950 and then entered the Freshman Class at Williams. Sally attended the Agnes Irwin School until 1949 and is now at the Madeira School.

"No informal statement of my last twenty-five years would be complete," Warden says, "unless it said that, with the exception of the time spent being educated and for a year in New York with the National City Company, my entire time has been spent in and around the City of Brotherly Love. With the exception of a six weeks' wedding trip to England and Ireland, my world-wandering has been limited to times during our children's Easter vacations when we have taken short trips to Bermuda, Nassau, Jamaica, and other fairly close-by spots.

"I have been fortunate in having several hobbies which I hope will keep me from going stale, as soon as otherwise would be the case. Tennis is my favorite form of athletics, and I still play all I can, though I've found I don't seem to play as often during the week as I used to. I also like to work with my hands and have a nice shop, where I try my luck at model building and miscellaneous messing about. My favorite recreation is sailing. I would rather be on a sailboat under any weather conditions than doing any other single thing I can think of. In 1937 we built Tar Baby, in which we made a number of cruises from the Chesapeake to Maine. We also did fairly well in racing, if we don't have to include all the races entered. Tar Baby was sold in 1948, and I am now working on plans for a new boat. If lucky, I will be sailing it in the spring of '51, but it won't keep me from our reunion."

JOHN CAIRNS WATSON. Partner, Hazlett, Burt & Watson, members of the New York Stock Exchange, 616 National Exchange Bank Building, Steubenville, Ohio; residence, 1712 Hamilton Place, Steubenville.

Watson writes: "Since graduating from Yale, I have lived and worked in Steubenville and hope to continue to do so, although this view is not shared by another and important member of my household. In the belief that we should all strive to improve the community in which we live, I serve on various boards and participate in their fund raising activities. In the summer-time I play golf. For some years I played handball, but this became a little too strenuous so I gave it up a few years ago. I play all sorts of card games and improve my friends' financial standing considerably through this pastime.

"I have two wonderful children and a loving wife who lets me make all the important decisions for the family. As you all know, there hasn't been a problem important enough for my consideration."

From September, 1926, to February, 1929, Watson was a foreman with the Weirton Steel Company, and during the next nine and a half years he was manager of the Steubenville office of Hazlett & Burt. The firm was succeeded by Hazlett, Burt & Watson in October 1, 1938, upon his admission to the partnership. Watson is a director of the National Exchange Bank & Trust Company of Steubenville. His civic activities have included the following: member, Board of Education (January, 1944-January, 1948; president, January, 1947-January, 1948), Recreation Board (January, 1944-January, 1948; president, 1946), and Ohio Valley Hospital Association (president, 1949); trustee or board member of the Y.M.C.A., the American Red Cross, the American Cancer Society, and the Community Chest. He belongs to the Elks.

Mrs. Watson was Mary Cecilia Owesney, daughter of Frederick William and Agnes Griesinger Owesney. They were married in Cumberland, Md., on November 4, 1930. Her home was formerly in Steubenville, and the children were both born there, Mary Louise on June 10, 1932, and John Deering on July 5, 1934. They both attended the Steubenville High School. Mary Louise is now in her first year at Harcum Junior College in Bryn Mawr, Pa., while Deering is in the Andover Class of 1953.

FRANK ALBERT WEDBERG. Section head, materials laboratory, North American Aviation, Inc., Columbus, Ohio; residence, 921 Francis Avenue, Columbus 9.

Wedberg writes: "Two days after graduation I reported for work as a draftsman in the engineering department of the Curtiss Aeroplane & Motor Company at Garden City, N.Y. A couple of years later I was assigned as project engineer on a twin-engined feeder line airplane, the production version of which was used on Eastern Airlines and later in Colombia and Turkey.

"A trouble-shooting job on the same airplane resulted in a flight from Miami to the Argentine in 1930, using Pan American Airways to Panama and Pan American Grace from there down the west coast of South America, crossing the Andes at Santiago, Chile. The Andean 'hump' crossing was made in a single engined ship without benefit of radio, winding around through the passes, past 23,000-foot Aconcagua and lots of other peaks sticking up well over 20,000 feet.

"The next assignment was as project engineer on an Air Force observation type airplane. During this project Curtiss operations were transferred to Buffalo, N.Y., in 1931, continuing through the World War II period. Other work during fifteen years in Buffalo included project engineering on U.S. Navy dive bombers and a fighter airplane, engineering staff assignments, and a year as quality manager of the Buffalo plants of Curtiss-Wright.

"Late in 1945, in line with the general retrenchment of the aircraft industry, Curtiss-Wright concentrated its airplane division activities in Columbus, so we went along with them. This time the assignment was as section head of the materials and photographic laboratories, as well as considerable national aircraft committee activity. The latter service included the vice-chairmanship of the Eastern division of the National Aircraft Standards Commission in 1949 and, the chairmanship of the Eastern Region Aircraft Research and Testing Commission in 1948.

"Aircraft industry activities and vacation travels have covered most of the U.S.A. and the provinces of Ontario and Quebec, as well as the South American trip noted above.

"On November 27, 1950, I switched to North American Aviation, Inc., when they took over the Columbus plant of Curtiss-Wright upon the termination of the CW airplane division."

Wedberg had a magazine article on airframe tolerances published about 1944. He is an associate fellow of the Institute of the Aeronautical Sciences and for the past fifteen years has been an elder in the United Presbyterian churches at Buffalo and Columbus. His marriage to Donalda Catherine Calder, daughter of Donald J. Calder, took place in Beaverton, Ontario, March 26, 1932. Mrs. Wedberg lived in Kenmore, N.Y., before she was married. Their daughter, Lois Anne, who is now a Sophomore in high school, was born in Buffalo, April 24, 1935.

LOWELL PALMER WEICKER. President, E. R. Squibb & Sons, pharmaceutical manufacturers, 745 5th Avenue, New York 22, N.Y.; residence, 895 Park Avenue, New York 21.

Weicker reports: "I was a salesman with the General Plastics Corporation, North Tonawanda, N.Y., from 1926 to October, 1927. In October, 1927, I went to Europe as managing director of the perfume house, Lenthéric, S.A., Paris, France. In 1928 I organized the perfume company, Lentheric, GmbH of Berlin, occupying the position of managing director. In 1930 was elected president and a director of Lentheric, Inc., New York, as well as retaining the positions mentioned above. In 1932, while retaining positions with Lentheric, I was elected a director of E. R. Squibb & Sons and in 1935 was elected a vice-president of that company. In May, 1936, was elected vice-president in charge of sales and advertising and on January 1, 1941, president."

In June, 1942, Weicker joined the Army Air Force and was commissioned a major. He went overseas to the European theatre immediately, as assistant A-5 of the 8th Air Force. He was appointed executive A-2 of the group the following December and acting A-2 in October, 1943. As of January, 1944, he was appointed deputy director of intelligence, U.S. Strategic Forces in Europe, and served in that capacity until his return to this country on July 1, 1945, when he went on terminal leave. He was honorably discharged on September 25. Weicker, who had been promoted to lieutenant colonel in September, 1943, and to full colonel the following February, was awarded the Legion of Merit, the Bronze Star, the Army Commendation Ribbon, the Order of the British Empire, the French Legion of Honor, and the French Croix de Guerre with palm. He is a director of the New York Heart Association and a member of the corporation of the Presbyterian Hospital of New York and of the board of trustees of the U.S. council of the International Chamber of Commerce.

He was married October 22, 1927, in Buffalo, N.Y., to Mary Hastings Bickford, daughter of General Harold C. Bickford and Mary Davidson Bickford. They were divorced in May, 1951. Weicker has four children: Theodore Martin, born September 14, 1928, in Paris, Lowell P., Jr., on May 16, 1931, also in Paris, Harold on September 24, 1934, in New York, and Mary Audrey on July 2, 1933, in Paris. Theodore, who graduated from Yale in 1950 and who held a commission as second lieutenant in the Marine Corps Reserve, resumed active duty at Quantico, Va., in March, 1951. His marriage to Jane Palmer Chisholm, daughter of William Chisholm, 2d, Yale '24, and sister of William Chisholm, 3d, '50, took place in Cleveland, December 23, 1950. Lowell, Jr., is a Sophomore at Yale, Harold graduated from Lawrenceville in 1950, and Mary is at St. Timothy's.

GEORGE WILLIAM WELZ. Analytical research chemist, Behr-Manning Corporation, manufacturers of coated abrasives, Troy, N.Y.; residence, 7 Hillcrest Road, Latham, N.Y.

Welz writes: "After graduating from Yale, which seems a long, long time ago, I joined the research staff of the Atmospheric Nitrogen Corporation in Syracuse, N.Y., which was largely composed of college men of my age and headed by a group of Ph.D.'s who had been connected with the old Fixed Nitrogen Laboratory at Washington. Syracuse was to be my home for some sixteen years. I first roomed at the Y.M.C.A., where there was a gang of several of us laboratory men. Later I shared an apartment with a Syracuse man who was going to medical school. My work was largely on ammonia and related gases and catalysts, so it was very interesting. During my first year I was sent on special work to Louisville, Detroit, Newark, and, of all places, New Haven, at the Winchester Arms!

"In 1930 I left the A.N.C. and Syracuse and went to Columbia to take graduate work in chemistry. I took my M.A. [1932] and then became connected with the Lawrence Experiment Station of the Massachusetts Department of Public Health. In 1933 I returned to Syracuse and the A.N.C., which was by then the Nitrogen Division of the Solvay Process Company. In 1935 I married Ruth E. Morrison, of Ottumwa, Iowa. Ruth is an Iowa State graduate, 1929. She majored in home economics. In 1940 Mary Louise came along and has kept both of us pretty busy ever since. She is now ten and adores television and Hopalong Cassidy.

"During the war years I work largely on butadiene, which was developed as a source material for synthetic rubber. In 1945 we left Syracuse and went to Stamford, Conn., where I joined the Air Reduction Company. We enjoyed life in Connecticut, and I was near enough to New Haven to go over to see a few football games. In 1948 I became connected with the research department of Behr-Manning in Watervliet (across the Hudson from Troy). We now live in Latham, own our home, and just bought a new Dodge.

"So, in all, I feel life has been good to me. I've enjoyed good health, have a fine family, and like my work. My main hobbies seem to be gardening in the summer and, of late, T.V. in the winter. I look back on my Yale days with many fine memories and wish to give my regards to all my friends while at Yale."

Welz says that at present he is working on abrasives, adhesives, and resins. He is a member of the American Chemical Society. The date of his marriage to Ruth Elizabeth Morrison (daughter of Joseph S. and Sophia Schott Morrison) was April 26, 1935 (in Syracuse). Mary Louise was born in Auburn, N.Y., on April 14, 1940.

RAY GLENNON WETSTINE. President and treasurer, Ray G. Wetstine, Inc. (general insurance and real estate), 242 Trumbull Street, Hartford, Conn.; residence, 13 Gracewell Road, Wethersfield, Conn.

Wetstine was an insurance adjuster until 1928 and a special agent for an insurance company in Connecticut during the next six years. Since then he has had his own insurance agency, which was incorporated in 1937. Wetstine is a member of the Hartford Real Estate Board, the Hartford County Purchasing Agents Association, the Connecticut State Agents Association, the National Association of Insurance Agents, the National Board of Real Estate Brokers, the Insurance Board of Hartford, the Casualty and Surety Association of Connecticut, and a number of social organizations, including the City Club of Hartford and the Elks. "My hobbies," he says, "are camera; Florida during the training season; major league baseball. Am interested, like many others, in attending sporting events—baseball, football, ice hockey (basketball, to some extent)."

He was married in New York City in 1940 to Meredith M. Nichols, daughter of Catherine Hafey Nichols. Mrs. Wetstine's home was formerly in Hartford.

LOUIS GUSTAVE WIENECKE. Staff director, engineering division, natural gasoline and gas department, Phillips Petroleum Company, Bartlesville, Okla.; residence, 1515 Osage Street, Bartlesville.

"My No. 1 item," Wienecke says, "is to regret that I have been out of contact with those classmates and friends who formed such a big part of my life for four years. Oklahoma is a long way from New Haven and the East. Since I can't get back, maybe I can look for a visit or a call from those going through Oklahoma.

"I am mighty proud of my family and particularly want to call attention to my daughter, Gretchen, who'll be opening with Ray Bolger's show, 'Where's Charlie,' Monday, January 29. If you have a chance go see her or call her. She's in the chorus now, but I have hopes for bigger things. The twelve-year-old boys goes in for all sports, and I believe will be big enough to play football and take the wear and tear. Maybe he can go to Yale and do a better job than his old man. Oh! yes, I go in for fishing and can't seem to get my fill of it. For my livelihood I have charge of all construction of natural gasoline and special products for the Phillips Petroleum Company, in which field we are tops. Also natural gas sales, for we again are the largest producer. Very interesting work, even though the pay won't make me independent."

During 1926-27 Wienecke was a sales representative for the Firestone Tire & Rubber Company in various locations and the following year had a similar connection with the Industrial Construction Company of Tulsa, Okla. Since May, 1928, he has been engaged in various phases of engineering work with the Phillips Petroleum Company and since 1940 has held his present position. He is a registered professional engineer in Oklahoma and belongs to the Engineers and Technical clubs of Bartlesville.

Wienecke was married in Oklahoma City, February 18, 1927, to Peggy Highley, daughter of Mont F. and Lois Liegerot Highley. The children were all born in Oklahoma City, Peggy Louise on March 15, 1928, Gretchen Patricia on February 16, 1932, and Louis Gustave on February 27, 1939. Peggy, who was in the Class of 1950 at Oklahoma University, was married on January 27, 1951, to William E. Hanson, a graduate of Oklahoma University in 1947. After her high school course, and following a professional career as a dancer, Gretchen did not wish a college education. She was with the St. Louis Municipal Opera Company during the summer of 1950 and before joining the cast of "Where's Charlie," was on the Kate Smith television show in New York.

HARRY NYE WIETING, JR. Manager, Prudential Insurance Company of America, 405 Madison Avenue, Toledo 4, Ohio; residence, 2330 Parkwood Avenue, Toledo 10.

Wieting writes: "Special interests have been my children primarily. My son attended Andover for three years, Country Day School one year, had nearly three years of military service, graduated from Michigan, February, 1950; now married. Georgia (who is the Class girl) graduated from Smith in 1946, after one year at Abbot and two years at Maumee Valley Country Day School—now married and living in Florida (with husband and one child). Marian had six years at Maumee Valley Country Day School before going to Pine Manor; to be married December 23, 1950. Ruth had eight years at Maumee Valley Country Day School before going to Stephens; now at Michigan.

"Have worked for Prudential since graduation—am fascinated by the life insurance business. Have had summer home in Michigan for the last seven years. Family stuck pretty close together growing up. Very proud of them all.

"Hobbies: fishing, bridge. Have traveled throughout United States—not abroad. Have had an extremely happy twenty-five years. Hope to make the next twenty-five years more leisurely, and yet hope to progress steadily in business and enjoy my grandchildren! It looks as though there may be quite a few of them."

Wieting became manager for Prudential in Toledo in July, 1939. He obtained the degree of Chartered Life Underwriter in 1940 and in 1944 served as president of the Toledo chapter of the American Society of Chartered Life Underwriters. He served on the board of his church for two years and during the war was chairman of the Lucas County War Savings staff and industrial division chairman in the War Bond drives.

His marriage to Marion Stoddard Cluff, daughter of Walter F. and Laura Libbey Cluff, took place in West Haven, Conn., March 7, 1923. Her home was formerly in New Haven. The following covers some data about the children which Wieting did not give above—dates of birth: Georgia B., February 3, 1924, Harry N., 2d, October 26, 1925, Marian Stoddard, July 6, 1928, and Ruth Alice, June 15, 1930. The two oldest were born in New Haven and the others in Lakewood, Ohio. Georgia's marriage to Robert T. Kingbeil took place September 8, 1947, and their daughter, Anne Taylor, was born August 30, 1949. Harry, who was in flight training at the time he was released from the Naval Air Force, was married April 23, 1949, to Jean Wykoff. Marian's husband is Daniel H. Jamieson.

SIGMUND LOUIS WILENS. Address, 5 Tudor City Place, New York, N.Y.

JOHN HART WILSON. Address, 633 Ohio River Boulevard, Sewickley, Pa.

THOMAS COOPER WILSON. President and manager, Blue Ridge Pressure Castings, Inc., manufacturers of brass and aluminum die castings, Lehighton, Pa.; residence, R.D. 1, Palmerton, Pa.

From 1926 to 1929 Wilson was a salesman with James L. Wilson & Company (later the Rosemary Sales Corporation) and during the next five years was in the sales and purchasing department of the General Foods Corporation (later Best Foods, Inc.). He then returned to Yale for graduate work in physics and after taking his Ph.D. in 1939, became connected with the New Jersey Zinc Company, where his work was in connection with physical metallurgy. He was on leave for Navy service from 1941 to 1945 and in October, 1946, after another year with the company, left to become president and manager of Blue Ridge Pressure Castings, Inc.

Wilson ranked as lieutenant when he first went on active duty in the Navy and as commander at the time of his release from service. He was stationed in the Office of the Coördinator of Research and Development at the Navy Department in Washington from 1941 to 1944 and then for a time was assigned to the Office of Naval Intelligence on bombing studies. He continued this work in the European theatre for three months of 1944 and in the Pacific for the remainder of the time.

Wilson, who is a member of the American Physical Society and the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers, has written three technical papers and taken out one patent. In 1946 he was chairman of the Palmerton Red Cross campaign. His marriage to Margaret E. Woodruff, daughter of Lorande L. and Margaret Mitchell Woodruff, took place in New Haven on June 6, 1936. They have two sons: Thomas Woodruff, born December 2, 1942, and Peter Bryson on October 28, 1947. With a physicist for father and the director of Osborn Lab for grandfather, a scientific trend would seem indicated.

"We have been living in Palmerton for the last ten years, off and on," Wilson says, "and find life in the country much to our liking. We came in second best with the rabbits about living off the land, but enjoy the attempt. The children are thriving on the mountain air. The new business is still in the high mortality age group. but we have hopes for its eventual growth."

JAMES ARNOLD WISE. Vice-president, Kalamazoo Paper Company, Kalamazoo, Mich.; residence, 575 Barney Road, Kalamazoo 84.

"After today at the mill it seems like years since I've had a vacation, and my wife says it is," said Wise, when he relaxed long enough to fill out our Class Record questionnaire. "Don't belong to a labor union, but am somewhat experienced bargaining with two of them," he added.

Wise started the long grind in 1926, when he began working in the engineering department of the Bryant Paper Company in Kalamazoo. He was subsequently assistant superintendent and then assistant to the general superintendent. In 1930 he went to the Kalamazoo Paper Company as assistant general superintendent and eight years later was made general superintendent. He has been vice-president and a director of the company since 1941. He served as chairman of the Michigan division of the American Pulp and Papermill Superintendents Association during 1933-34 and was on the executive committee of the Technical Association of the Pulp and Paper Industry from 1944 to 1947. He belongs to the Torch Club.

His marriage to Mary Janet Robertson, daughter of Peter D. and Margaret Helen Cousin Robertson, took place in Kalamazoo on April 9, 1932. They have three children: Anne, born February 9, 1935, Alfred James on January 31, 1937, and Mary on May 24, 1941. The older girl is a high school Junior.

CHARLES DANIEL WOLVERTON. Address, Noank, Conn.

CAMPBELL WRIGHT. Vice-president, Reed Manufacturing Company (vises and pipe tools), Erie, Pa.; residence, 156 West 5th Street, Erie.

Wright reports: "I went to Europe after graduation and, outside of one trip to the Caribbean and several fishing trips up in Canada, our traveling has all been in the East. As for hobbies and recreation, cards, bowling, sailing, and a few parties now and then about covers it. All my business life has been spent with family concerns, having shifted from one to the other when necessary. We remodeled a house in 1934 and are now in the throes of trying to build another one, which seems to be quite a job.

"My ambitions and wants are very modest. However, I would like once again to vote for a President who won the election. I've only done it once since college."

After a course at the Babson Institute, which he completed in 1927, Wright became vice-president of the Reed Manufacturing Company and has held that position right along since then except for two years (1933 and 1934), when he was in Buffalo with the R. G. Wright Company. He is currently a partner in the Wright Manufacturing Company. He does his best to help bring about the election of his choice for President by collecting for the Republican campaign funds. Wright belongs to the Erie, Erie Yacht, Kahkwa, and Aviation Country clubs.

His marriage to Eleanor Blakely, daughter of Sidney R. and Martha Grimm Blakely, took place in Boston on June 22, 1929. Their son, Gridley Lorimer, who was born in Buffalo on January 19, 1934, is in the Class of 1952 at the Westminster School.

FRANKLYN BENJAMIN YATES. District manager, industrial-automotive divisions, Timken Roller Bearing Company, 150 Broadway, New York 38, N.Y.; residence, 8 4th Road, Great Neck, N.Y.

Yates has been with Timken since July, 1926, his position being that of sales engineer until he was appointed district manager of the industrial-automotive divisions in March, 1936. He writes: "Since this has been a mechanical age since 1926, during which the growth of the use of anti-friction (ball and roller bearings) has occurred, most of my life has been taken up by this. I am the only Yale man in the Timken Roller Bearing Company, so just have to keep active for the prestige of old Eli! We go to Massachusetts for our relaxation, as we built a summer cabin in South Egremont which was finished in July, 1941."

Yates belongs to the Society of Automotive Engineers, the Society of Bridgeport Tool Engineers, and the Yale Club and is serving on the board of elders of the Community Church at Great Neck. His marriage to Gene Orr McClure took place in Youngstown, Ohio, on November 30, 1928. Their son, Robert Strong, who was born in Flushing, N.Y., on October 11, 1931, graduated from the Great Neck High School in 1949 and is now a Sophomore at Dartmouth.

GORDON FOLLETTE YORK. Address, Hotel Duncan, New Haven, Conn.

DANA YOUNG. Professor of applied mechanics, University of Minnesota; residence, 4908 Garfield Avenue, South, Minneapolis.

Young was a field engineer with the Marland Oil Company of McCamoy, Texas, during 1926-27 and an assistant engineer with the Shell Petroleum Corporation at Pyote, Texas, the following year. He spent the next two years at Yale as an instructor in engineering mechanics and student in the Graduate School. Upon taking his M.S. degree in 1930, he went with the United Engineers & Constructors, Inc., of Philadelphia, as structural engineer, continuing in this connection until 1934. He was then professor of civil engineering at the University of Connecticut until 1942 and professor of engineering mechanics at the University of Texas for the next eight years. Since September, 1950, he has held a professorship of applied mechanics at the University of Minnesota.

Young is consultant for the Sandia Corporation of Albuquerque, N.Mex., the Applied Physics Laboratory at Silver Springs, Md., and the Defense Research Laboratory at Austin, Texas. He is a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, and the Institute of the Aeronautical Sciences and has had some twenty technical research papers published in the transactions of various engineering societies. In 1940 he took his Ph.D. at the University of Michigan.

Young was married on June 9, 1930, in Washington, D.C., to Louise Morgan Bannerman, daughter of Robert Candlish and Eloise Drake Bannerman. They have two daughters: Nina Louise, born on April 10, 1939, in Willimantic, Conn., and Candace Bannerman, born June 3, 1946, in Austin.

Ac Biographies

ALAN GEORGE ADAMS. President, Adams Press, Inc., and editor, Lexington Minute-man, 7 Oakland Street, Lexington 73, Mass.; residence, 15 Somerset Road, Lexington 73.

Adams writes: "Through an odd change of circumstances, I entered the local newspaper business in 1929 and ended up by owning the local weekly newspaper, the Lexington Minute-man, in 1931. The business has grown through the rapid development of Lexington, and I now have a relatively active newspaper and printing business. It has been an interesting career which, while not 'big business' in any sense, has been most enjoyable. It has given a pretty good view of life, both social and political, through a microscope. Many of the world problems are present in miniature in a small town, and as a result informal education has been continuous. The only drawback to Lexington has been that it is thoroughly a Harvard town and a Yale man here is like a voice crying in the wilderness."

Adams attended Cambridge University for two terms in 1926-27. He is a member of the Massachusetts Press Association and served as a director for a year. He has been a member of the Lexington Town Meeting since 1932 and of the Planning Board since 1944—currently chairman, as well as serving on various special committees. He was on the Board of Fire Engineers for seven years, served as chairman of the Lexington Long Range Planning Committee and the Republican Town Committee for two years each, and has been chairman of the Intertown Route 128 Committee and a member of the public relations division of the Massachusetts Civilian Defense Department. Other activities have included work in connection with the local drives for the Red Cross, Community Fund, etc.

He was married in Lexington on September 7, 1935, to Rebecca Willard Smith, daughter of James W. and Cleora Russell Smith.

PIERPONT ADAMS. Address, Redding Ridge, Conn.

DANIEL GOULD ALBERT. Lawyer, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York 20, N.Y.; residence, 85 Stratford Road, Rockville Centre, N.Y.

Albert, who specializes in federal practice, is serving on the recodification committee of the American Bar Association. He belongs also to the New York County Lawyers Association, the New York State and Nassau County Bar associations, the Unity Club of Nassau County, Rocklyn Lodge of B'nai B'rith, the Foreign Policy Association, and the Cold Spring Country Club. He is a member of the state board of overseers of the Central Islip State Hospital and of the board of directors of the South Nassau Communities Hospital at Rockville Centre, associate chairman of the New York chapter of the American Association for Jewish Education, and chairman of the board of trustees and of the board of education of Temple B'nai Sholom at Rockville Centre.

His marriage to Sally Koondel, daughter of Barnett and Esther Lenevitch Koondel, took place in New York City on July 3, 1927. She had previously lived in Brooklyn. Their older daughter, Sheila Ellen, who was born on November 12, 1930, in New York City, is a member of the Class of 1951 at Connecticut College for Women. Charlotte Patricia, the younger girl, born September 7, 1937, in New York, is a high school Freshman.

PUTNAM ALDRICH. Associate professor of music, Stanford University, Stanford, Calif.; residence, 409 California Avenue, South Palo Alto, Calif.

Aldrich, whose field of specialization is the performance of music of the Renaissance and Baroque periods, studied piano with Tobias Matthay in London during the first two years after graduation and the harpsichord with Wanda Landowska in Paris from 1929 to 1931. During 1939-40 he did research in various European libraries. He took his M.A. at Harvard in 1936 and his Ph.D. in 1942. Aldrich has been teaching since 1942, first as an assistant professor at the University of Texas, then as associate professor at Western Reserve until 1948. He was at Mills College (same rank) for the next two years and has been at Stanford since then. He was a soloist with the Boston Symphony from 1935 to 1940 and with the San Francisco Symphony in 1949, and during the period from 1935 to 1942 he also gave a number of concerts (harpsichord-soloist and in chamber music) in New England and New York. His Ornamentation in Bach's Organ Works was published by Coleman-Ross in 1950, and he contributed articles on ornamentation to the Harvard Dictionary of Music (Harvard University Press, 1944) and one, entitled "Bach's Technique of Transcription," to the Music Quarterly for January, 1949. Aldrich has been a member of the Société Française de Musicologie since 1931, and he belongs also to the American Musicological Society and the American Society for Aesthetics.

In June, 1931, he was married in Paris to Madeleine Jeanne Suzanne Eugénie Momot, daughter of Auguste Georges François and Anne Catherine Andrée Vuillemain Momot. Their daughter, Allegra, was born in Providence, R.I., in 1932.

Aldrich writes: "Travels (in England, France, Italy, Morocco, Mexico, and Yucatan) have taught me that the American Way of Life, with its automobiles, radios, television, movies, canasta, golf, and other forms of synthetic entertainment is vastly overrated—if, indeed, it can be called life at all. My hobbies are painting, sailing, and meditation, but it would take too much space to explain what I mean by the latter.

"I am trying to live my own life—not entirely successfully, due to the continual necessity of bucking pressures towards standardization. This probably accounts for my moving around so much. I certainly don't mean to imply that Stanford is worse (or better) in this respect than other academic centers. At any rate, I have no hankering for permanence, or security. The more unpredictable the future the better, as far as I am concerned. Of course, how I shall feel about these things in another twenty-five years remains to be seen.

"In regard to ambitions: I happen to have acquired a certain amount of knowledge—perhaps even understanding—of the music of past periods. As long as there remain any people who are interested, even peripherally, in that sort of thing I am willing to impart what I can through playing the harpsichord and teaching."

JOHN HEALD ALEXANDER. Member, Mudge, Stern, Williams & Tucker, lawyers, 40 Wall Street, New York 5, N.Y.; residence, 266 East Dudley Avenue, Westfield, N.J.

Alexander received his LL.B. degree, cum laude, at Yale in 1928; while in the Law School he became a member of the Order of the Coif. Except for the period from 1939 to 1945, when he was a member of the firm of Baldwin, Todd & Lefferts in New York, he has been with Mudge, Stern, Williams & Tucker. He was admitted to membership in the firm in 1946 and for some time has also had an office at 66 Elm Street, Westfield, N.J. He specializes in tax law and has had a number of articles published in law reviews and professional publications. Alexander has served on the taxation committee of the Bar Association of the City of New York and on various committees of the American Bar Association. He belongs also to the New York State Bar Association, the Tax Forum, the Down Town Association, and the Yale Club of New York. At present he is serving as chairman of the Yale Law School Alumni Placement Committee for New York.

Alexander's marriage to Edna Perkins, daughter of C. Byron and Myrtle Brooks Perkins, took place in Westfield on August 28, 1926. Their son, John H., Jr., who was born in New Haven, January 25, 1928, is a member of the Yale Class of 1951. He prepared for college at Exeter. There are also two girls in the family: Judith, born February 26, 1931, and Anne, born January 23, 1939, both in Westfield. The older girl graduated from the Baldwin School in Bryn Mawr and is now in the Smith Class of 1952.

DANIEL ALLEN. Northern California distributor, Sets in Order, 1475 Haight Street, San Francisco, Calif.; residence, 215 West Baltimore Avenue, Larkspur, Calif.

Allen says: "After helping coach the Freshman football team in 1926, I came to San Francisco on sudden notice to play in the second East-West Shrine football game. They were not too particular in those days, as I was not in too good condition after my coaching berth. Started work with the Shell Oil Company and continued with them until 1930, when I left to go to the Stanford Graduate School of Business. Left there for trip to Europe in 1931 for a belated honeymoon. Then to Stanford Law School for one quarter and left when the dough ran out. Depression, remember? Then miscellaneous jobs, including vacuum cleaner vending, real estate, hearing aids, etc. World War II took me into the shipyards as a shipfitter and marine electrician from 1942 to 1945 and then with the Army Engineers in the real estate section, first acquiring property and leases and later getting rid of same until 1948. During that period lived in a federal war housing project where 5,000 or more war workers transplanted from all over the country had to get along. Special problems were created, and I helped organize a Tenants' Council and was a member for most of the period there and chairman for two years.

"Fortunate investments of many years ago finally enabled purchase of home here in Larkspur, in beautiful Marin County across Golden Gate Bridge from San Francisco and only thirty minutes away. I have been enjoying partial retirement, but recently was made northern California distributor for Sets in Order, the National Square Dance Magazine, with an office in San Francisco. A great deal of time is spent in civic work, including assisting the civilian defense director and the encouragement of square dancing in the whole San Francisco Bay area. Am treasurer of the Square Dance Callers Association of Northern California and have three classes of my own, one for 7th and 8th grade kids. It is not for profit but for the benefit of my soul and figure and for all those who take it up. It is spreading like wildfire over the country, and it would be a good thing for some of you who are getting a swivel chair spread trying to make more and more so that you can give more and more to Uncle Sam."

Allen belongs to the Larkspur-Corte Madera Lions' Club. His marriage to Madeline Frick, daughter of Robert N. and Maud Tufts Frick, took place in Inverness, Calif., on March 15, 1930. She formerly lived in Pasadena and Berkeley. The Allens have two children: Craig Winthrop, born June 6, 1938, and Coralie on January 11, 1946, both in San Francisco.

CHARLES HERMAN ALTSCHULER. Instructor in American history and economics, A. B. Davis High School, Mt. Vernon, N.Y.; residence, 630 Gramatan Avenue, Mt. Vernon.

Here's an enthusiast about his chosen profession and life in general. "I have no regrets," says Altschuler. "I have had a good and satisfying life thus far. I have a nice family, live and work in a good community, like my work, and look forward to years of continued usefulness. Yes, I could use more money in these inflationary days of high taxes and living costs, and who couldn't? But we manage to get along on what we have.

"I love the hum and activity of my classroom. The late Professor Billy Phelps once said: 'I love to teach as a painter loves to paint, as a singer loves to sing, and as a strong man rejoices to run a race. It is not merely a life work. It is a passion with me.' I have taught for twenty-three years. Teaching has in it high courage. It is a continuous adventure. What can be nobler and more satisfying than to walk, talk, laugh, and think with young people and to feel that you have had a little to do with making them smarter, nicer, and happier persons. A teacher is a father, guide, and counselor to his youngsters. He gets to understand their desires, interests, and hopes. He becomes a builder of character, a moulder of personalities, and a trainer of minds. These youngsters are the hope of our future. We can help them to determine the kind of society we shall have. Education is the vital power of life. The real teacher tries to get his students to comprehend and interpret contemporary life, think clearly, act intelligently, and cultivate loyalty to our own way of life.

"Democracy and education are inseparable. Our schools are the bulwark of our democracy. They give expression to the American principles of freedom, justice, and equality. We can turn out young people to take an active part in our communities with confidence and enthusiasm.

"A teacher never stops learning along with his pupils. He should have a real liking and a deep interest in young people, be able to laugh with them, and possess these humane qualities: kindness, patience, open-mindedness, a sense of humility, and enthusiasm for his work. Measured in terms of usefulness and service to society, teaching is priceless. I have worked with many fine and magnanimous people—unsung heroes in the work of educating the young. The only reward they want is these simple words—well done!"

Before joining the faculty of the Davis High School in 1930, Altschuler was headmaster of the Colonial School in New Haven for three years. He took his M.A. at Columbia in 1944 and has continued his graduate work in educational administration there. He was elected to the educational honor fraternity of Phi Delta Kappa and at present is also a member of the National Education Association, the New York State and Mt. Vernon Teachers associations, the Columbia Scholastic Press Association Advisers Association, Quill and Scroll (international honorary society for high school journalists—faculty member), and the Junior Town Meeting League. He is the author of French Idiomatic Constructions and Subjunctive and the French Drill Book, both published in 1928 by the Tuttle, Morehouse & Taylor Company of New Haven, and is at present working on a textbook on American history which he expects to complete before long. He has delivered many talks before church, youth, and other community groups on educational matters and world events and problems. He mentions that the theatre, bowling, and ping pong are his recreations and that he usually travels throughout the United States during the summer.

He was married in New Haven, August 22, 1937, to Ethel Singer, daughter of Peter and Rose Singer, of Seymour, Conn. They have a daughter, Priscilla, born March 16, 1943—Altschuler's hobby, "a precocious little red-head, who keeps me on my toes. She is my pride and joy and an excellent tonic for my nerves after school hours."

EDWARD AMRON. Lawyer, New York, N.Y.; residence, 175 Riverside Drive, New York 24.

In 1932 Amron received the degree of Doctor of Jurisprudence at New York University and was admitted to the New York Bar. He is a trial lawyer, specializing in corporate and surrogate law, and in addition to his private practice, is attorney for Jack Dempsey's restaurant. As a summary of his occupations prior to taking up the study of law he listed, in a way we find a trifle obscure: "Hollywood restaurant; Paramount Pictures; Alice Fay; Marion Martin; Arthur Tracy; Iris Adrien." The West Virginia State Board of Architects Magazine published a legal treatise of Amron's. He belongs to the Chess Club of New York and describes himself as a chessmaster, bridge expert, and violinist.

Amron, who married Rochelle Kraston, daughter of Pierre and Rose Kraston, of Philadelphia, has three children, Norma, Roland, and Michael. "My wife," he says, "is quite a woman. Before our marriage she was secretary (confidential) to the Arabian delegate to the United Nations. She was born in Philadelphia, but speaks Arabic, Spanish, and French. She's terrific at piano and an accomplished artist. I've taught her to play chess."

He adds: "My hopes and ambitions? None, except to have health and happy moments. We can strive for happiness, which is always unattainable, but fortunate indeed is he who has an abundance of happy moments. Our greatest evils? Pursuit of money and power. Our greatest good? Love and sharing best food—Yogurt for health, and I'm not fooling. My wife is a nutrition expert."

OTTO ANSELM ANDERSON. Accountant, Pan American World Airways, 28-19 Bridge Plaza, North, Long Island City 1, N.Y.; residence, 31 Oakwood Avenue Upper Montclair, N.J.

From 1926 to 1936 Anderson was connected with the credit department of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York. Since July, 1946, he has been an accountant with Pan American World Airways.

His marriage to Florence Sparks, daughter of Henry L. and Charlotte Woodbury Sparks, took place in Brooklyn, N.Y., on January 3, 1931. Their daughter, Cecily Charlotte, who was born in New York City on November 19, 1931, is a member of the Class of 1953 at Ohio Wesleyan University.

PETER ARNO. Cartoonist, New Yorker Magazine, 25 West 43d Street, New York, N.Y.; residence, Sky Meadow Farm, Portchester, N.Y.

Cartoonist for the New Yorker since 1925, Arno has probably provided more laughs for '26 and the world at large than any other member of the Class. He has contributed to most of the other major United States magazines and also to the London Sketch and Tatler and many other foreign publications and since 1930 has published ten albums of collected cartoons (Simon & Schuster, publisher), the latest being Peter Arno's Sizzling Platter. Arno has had fifteen one-man exhibitions in major galleries and museums throughout the United States and in London, Paris, Sweden, Switzerland, and Hungary. He has produced and designed settings for three New York musical shows and contributed material and settings for numerous others, for a number of years was designer and consultant to Paramount Studios, and has created many advertising campaigns for major agencies and firms. During the period from 1942 to 1944, as a special consultant to the Secretary of War, he designed safety posters, etc., for the Air Force Training Program. He has made something of a career of public office, including: "Special detective, Atlantic City, 1935—; deputy marshal, Tombstone, Ariz. (in charge of creating public disturbances), 1944—."

Arno's first marriage, to Lois Long, of Stamford and New York, daughter of Dr. Brian Long, took place in Stamford in 1927. They were divorced in 1931. In 1935 he married Mary Lansing, daughter of Cleveland Coxe Lansing, in Salisbury, Conn. They were divorced in 1939. His daughter, Patricia, who was born in New York in 1929, was married on March 30, 1951, in New York, to Roy B. Moriarty.

Arno's concluding remark: "Sorry I never became a Buddhist."

EDWIN GUSTAF ARNOLD. Deputy director, Korea Division, Economic Coöperation Administration, Washington, D.C.; residence address, Box 234, R.F.D. 2, Fairfax, Va.

Arnold received an M.A. in international relations at Yale in 1932; while in the Graduate School he held two fellowships. The following is his summary of his work since 1934: Member, Presidential Mission to the Far East, 1934; faculty member, Princeton School of Public Affairs, 1934-35; assistant to the administrator, F.S.A., 1936-42; member, Latin American Mission, 1942; director, Relocation Division, War Relocation Authority, 1943-44; director, Far Eastern Division, UNRRA, 1944-45; director, Territories and Island Possessions, Department of the Interior, 1945-47 (also administrator, Puerto Rico Reconstruction Administration, managing director, Virgin Islands Company, and president, Alaska Rural Rehabilitation Corporation; member, U.S. Delegation to the West Indian Conference, 1946); special assistant to the Secretary of the Interior, 1947-48; deputy chief, Marshall Plan Mission to Sweden, 1948-50; deputy director, Korea Division, Economic Coöperation Administration, since April, 1950.

Arnold is the author of several magazine articles, including one in Foreign Affairs for July, 1947, entitled, "Self-Government in United States Territories." He belongs to the Foreign Policy Association and the Academy of Political Science.

He was married June 4, 1935, in Branford, Conn., to Sara Louise Hitchcock, daughter of William Edwin and Sarah Louise Wilford Hitchcock. They have two children: William Edwin, born August 13, 1938, in Charleston, S.C., and Sara Louise, born September 26, 1941, in Richmond, Va.

JACK SAMUEL ASTRAN. Industrial commodities analyst, Containers and Packaging Division, National Production Authority, C-104 Old G.A.O. Building, 5th and G Streets, Washington, D.C.; residence, 7213 15th Avenue, Takoma Park, Md.

Astran, who has spent in all twenty years in government service, has held his present position with N.P.A. since March, 1951. He had one year of experience as a set designer with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in California, was in private business for four years, and at present is devoting some time to his architectural and engineering interests. Astran is a member of the Benjamin Franklin Masonic Lodge in Washington.

His marriage to Frances Mae Becker, daughter of Samuel and Esther Becker, took place in Washington in October, 1938. Their children were both born there, Stuart Ira on November 2, 1939, and Margo Helene on October 5, 1944.

Austin studied law at Columbia for three years, received his LL.B. and was admitted to the bar in 1929, and worked for two years as a law clerk for Laughlin, Gerard, Bowers & Halpin in New York—then decided "the hell with it, it's time to make some money." The chosen field was drugs and cosmetics. He has been first vice-president of both Thomas Leeming & Company and Pacquin, Inc., since about 1936 and is, in addition, vice-president and a director of another pharmaceutical concern, the Amend Laboratories, Inc. He served as president of the Pharmaceutical Advertising Directors Club in 1940 and has held various other offices in the organization "prior and since."

In February, 1943, Austin was commissioned a lieutenant in the Naval Reserve and was sent to the Office of Naval Procurement at Miami, being assigned to the same duty in Jacksonville the following June. He was transferred to the Naval Air Operational Training Command in May, 1944, and during the next year and a half was stationed at Mayport, Fla., where his duty was largely air-sea rescue, boat maintenance, and the design and building of towed targets. At the time of his release from service he ranked as lieutenant commander.

His marriage to Georgette McClellan, daughter of George R. and Marie Maguire McClellan, took place in New York, February 12, 1932.

In conclusion, Austin touches on:

"Travel, recreation, and hobbies: Mostly running around in circles with occasional side trips for duck-shooting (Long Island and Arkansas), skiing (Canada), Starboat racing (Long Island and Chicago), golf (England, 1949), or fishing (Florida mostly). Always try to work a business angle in order to allow Uncle to pay his fair share of the expense. Hobbies include carpentry, at which I have a natural lack of aptitude which contributes to the fascination and feeling of accomplishment when something turns out right.

"Hopes and Ambitions: Some day to live again under a Republican Administration, if only to see whether it really was so much better than what we have had for the last twenty years.

"Regrets: 1. That the Kinsey report was not published in 1922.
2. That twenty-five years have gone by so quickly.
3. That I wasted five valuable years studying and practicing law because Successful and Influential Men said it was 'wonderful training.' Most of these lads had made a potful of dough in an era of low taxes by making or selling something.

"Satisfactions: 1. That I can still break 80 with some regularity.
2. That in other fields of le sport, while the batting average is not that of a Cobb or a Musial (or an Errol Flynn), I can still keep swinging and don't just 'take three with the bat on my shoulder.'
3. That so much fun and enjoyment of life have been packed into twenty-five years that included the worst Depression, the most fraudulent politicians, and the worst war in history."

LOUIS LOEWENSTEIN BAER. Address, 609 North Rodeo Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif.

HYMAN BAKST. Address, 71-21 Austin Street, Forest Hills, N.Y.

LUCIUS HILLIARD BARBOUR. Technician, Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution, Woods Hole, Mass.; home address, 2 Woodside Circle, Hartford 5, Conn.

Confessing that our request to tell all had him buffaloed at first, Barbour finally came through with the following: "On leaving college, I was fired with ambition to work like hell, be thrifty, moderate, etc., for ten years or so and gracefully retire on my income. IT DIDN'T WORK. Struggled through in the woolen business until with the help of a dam-busting hurricane and uncoöperative help, we saw the light and liquidated.

"While waiting for a Draft Board decision on my usefulness to Uncle Sam, I spent a year or so in A.R.P. trying to coördinate the various town activities in Connecticut for mutual aid in the event of an air raid.

"Had a 'phone call from an old Harvard friend in Woods Hole who wanted to know whether I was still interested in boating. Answer was yes. Did I know anything about electricity? Told him I had successfully fixed a doorbell—years ago. Came down to Woods Hole [1943] and have been working on various projects in navigation and underwater sound transmission ever since.

"Bought a Hinckley Sou'wester (named her 'Bobwhite') at the close of the war and am sitting pretty. Week-end cruising in interesting waters and a swell bunch of friends interested and working on advanced research of what was once my hobby make work a continual paid vacation. If you or any of the rest of the gang get down to the Cape, look me up!"

The company with which Barbour was connected until 1942 was the E. E. Hilliard Company, of which he was assistant treasurer and director. In addition to his A.R.P. work during the war, he was a chief boatswain's mate (T) in the Coast Guard Reserve. He had taught a "navigator" course in Hartford for the United States Power Squadrons from 1939 to 1943. He is the co-author of a Bureau of Ships publication, Sofar Triangulation Methods, published in 1949. Barbour belongs to the American Geophysical Union, the Hartford Golf Club, the Dauntless Club, and the Yale Club. He is not married.

MAXWELL DICKERMAN BARDEEN. President and general manager, Lee Paper Company, Vicksburg, Mich.; residence, 2340 Springhill Drive, Kalamazoo, Mich.

During the first year after graduation Bardeen was employed briefly by American Tel. & Tel. and Procter & Gamble. He has been with the Lee Paper Company ever since, becoming general manager of the company in 1936 and president the following year. He has served as a village councilman and belongs to the usual luncheon and country clubs.

He was first married September 17, 1927, in Kalamazoo, to Kathryn Bennett, daughter of L. T. Bennett and Helen Timmerman Bennett; her death occurred on August 8, 1935. His second marriage, to Virginia Pratt, daughter of Arthur and Evelyn Hull Pratt, of Kalamazoo, took place in New York City on May 1, 1937. Bardeen has five children: Helen Bennett, born October 3, 1928, Charles William on June 4, 1931, Evelyn Hull on July 17, 1938, Maxwell D., Jr., on May 17, 1949, and Norman, 2d, on August 17, 1950. The older girl graduated from the Putney School in 1946 and from Smith in 1950. The oldest boy, who prepared for college at Hotchkiss and at Stowe School in England, is in the Yale Class of 1954.

Bardeen's travels have consisted of "the usual trip abroad," also Mexico, South America, and, he thinks, all of the United States. As to recreations, he says, "Family, flying (commercial pilot, etc.), and wood chopping. The last has been the most hazardous since I succeeded last winter in knocking out seven otherwise sound teeth with a flying steel wedge. It provides wood for the fireplace and a living for the dentists."

He adds, "I have lived in Vicksburg, a small village where the mill is situated, and in Kalamazoo since I left college, except for the brief period in New York and on Staten Island at the beginning. We make paper—the base paper for blue printing, photography, drafting, tracing, etc., what are known as 'industrial technical papers,' as well as advertising and business papers. I spent substantial amounts of my time during World War II in Washington as consultant to W.P.B., O.P.A., etc. I fly for fun and for business and find it relaxing and a good way to get around. It has let me see a great many places on the North American continent that I would not otherwise have seen and to encounter many friends and classmates I would otherwise have missed. My family has and will keep me in touch with school and college for some time to come. That's about it—it really hasn't been as dull as it sounds."

CHARLES ALBRO BARKER. Professor of American history, Johns Hopkins University; residence, 403 Cedarcroft Road, Baltimore 12, Md.

American intellectual history is Barker's field of specialization. He took his Ph.D. at Yale in 1932, following three years of teaching at Smith and a year of graduate work in New Haven. During 1932-33 he was assistant professor of history at Mills College and for the next twelve years was on the Stanford University faculty, first as instructor, then as assistant professor, and subsequently as associate professor. Since then he has been professor of American history at Johns Hopkins. During 1939-40 he was a visiting professor at New York State College and in 1944 spent six months as research fellow at the Huntington Library in San Marino, Calif. In 1941 he was awarded the A. J. Beveridge Prize of the American Historical Society, of which he is a member. He belongs also to the Mississippi Valley Historical Association, the Society of American Historians, the Maryland Historical Society, the American Association of University Professors, and the Hamilton Street Club of Baltimore. Barker has contributed articles and reviews to various historical journals, and he edited Memoirs of Elisha Oscar Crosby (San Marino, 1945). His Background of the Revolution in Maryland was published in 1940 (New Haven), and he now has in process a biography of Henry George.

Married on July 23, 1932, in Bristol, Conn., to Louise Chase Cottle, daughter of Henry Edmund and Ella Louise Chase Cottle, he has two children: John Gaylord, born May 18, 1936, in Palo Alto, Calif., and Louise Albro, born July 1, 1942, in San Francisco. The boy is in the Class of 1953 at the Gilman Country School in Baltimore.

"Life has been evenly divided for me since 1926, between years on the Atlantic seaboard and on the Pacific Coast," Barker says. "With a son and daughter of the West, and the son now entranced with Dartmouth because we go summers to that region, the family is uncommonly distributed in its local loyalties. In all places the main effort with me has been work and thought in a new field of history. The talents of other members of the family give us a variety of side interests, mainly musical."

MILTON FABER BARLOW. Executive vice-president, Johnson County National Bank & Trust Company, Prairie Village, Mission, Kansas; residence, 651 West 58th Street, Kansas City 2, Mo.

"The professional banking life which caught me in its toils around Christmas time the year of our graduation has proved to be at least as confining and certainly more fascinating than I anticipated while a carefree character on the campus," Barlow writes. "The quarter century has been exciting in a cloistered sort of way. My chief regret is that the limitations of time and geography have prevented my seeing more of the friends of undergraduate years."

Before becoming executive vice-president and a director of the Johnson County National Bank & Trust Company in March, 1948, Barlow had various trust and commercial banking official positions—with the U.S. National Bank of Omaha, the National Citizens Bank of Mankato, Minn., and the First Trust Company of Lincoln, Nebr. He is a graduate of the Omaha Municipal University Law School and was admitted to practice in Nebraska in 1931. He is an active member of the Nebraska Integrated Bar Association, but is not engaged in practice. Barlow is a director of Luziers, Inc., and since 1948 has been a lay reader at St. Andrew's Episcopal Church in Kansas City (and previously at St. John's in Mankato—of which he was also a vestryman and chairman of the finance committee—and at Holy Trinity in Lincoln, of which he was treasurer for seven years). He belongs to various social clubs, including the Kansas City Country Club, and is also a member of the Elks and the Masonic order, including the Scottish Rite and Shrine. During 1938-39, while national president of the American Institute of Banking, the educational section of the American Bankers Association, he contributed articles to various banking magazines.

On July 2, 1936, he was married in Omaha to Georgette French Johnston, daughter of George W. and Isabelle French Johnston. Their children are: Milton McClintock, born January 28, 1937, in Minneapolis; John French, born May 9, 1939, also in Minneapolis; and Sarah Johnston, born January 21, 1942, in Omaha.

CLARKSON SETH BARNES. City editor, Bristol Press, 99 Main Street, Bristol, Conn.; residence, 139 Stearns Street, Bristol.

Barnes reports: "I worked for two years after graduation at the Boston Globe, where I was a member of the city staff. Returned to home town of Bristol in the spring of 1928. Worked on the business end of the paper for some years, then gradually worked into the editorial end. Was assistant A.P. and telegraph editor before taking over the city desk in 1940. Am also employed by the Associated Press as a correspondent or 'stringer' for Bristol and vicinity.

"Although I've spent most of my time since college back here in the old home town, I've managed to do some traveling. Took in the Chicago World's Fair in 1933, which is the farthest west I've been. My principal recreation, or sport I enjoy the most, is skiing. Despite the fact that I weigh over 250 (I only weighed 150 while in college), I still manage a trip of about a week's duration every February. The last few years I've headed north to Stowe, Vt. In the summer I used to play considerable golf and tennis, but not lately. We generally (the whole family, that is) go to the shore for a week or two every summer. I also manage to take in the Eli football games—generally three or four each fall. (That was some trimming we took from Princeton last November!) Another hobby I have is train excursions. I always try to make the 'Canal Line' excursion which is run each fall between New Haven and Northampton. But as a railroad enthusiast I can't go for the new diesel locomotives. But I'm afraid they are here to stay.

"Did considerable amateur acting with the Bristol Community Players for some years. In 1935, when Bristol celebrated its Sesquicentennial, I took the part of the British general in the play Nathan Hale, and I had the ignominious duty of sentencing Hale to be hanged."

Barnes was a member of the official board of the Prospect Methodist Church in Bristol for ten years and during the war aided in blood donor work. He is a member of the Odd Fellows and Masons (thirty-second degree) and has served at various times as Worshipful Master of Franklin Lodge and Illustrious Master of Ionic Council.

He was married September 16, 1935, at Burtt's Corner, New Brunswick, to Pauline Bird Hagerman, daughter of William David and Katherine Bird

Hagerman. They have three children, all of whom were born in Bristol, William Seth on July 4, 1936, James Clarkson on February 25, 1938, and Kathryn Hope on September 24, 1946. Bill goes to the Bristol High School, where he was on the honor roll in Freshman year.

IRSTON ROBERTS BARNES. Economist, Federal Trade Commission, Washington, D.C.; residence, 401 Ridge Road, Hamden 14, Conn.

Barnes took his Ph.D. in economics at Yale in 1928 and was on the University faculty for the next thirteen years as instructor and assistant professor of economics. He served as consulting economist for the Anti-trust Division of the Department of Justice from 1941 to 1944, when he became associated with the Civil Aeronautics Board. He was director of its Economic Bureau for a year and subsequently economic adviser to the board. Since February, 1949, Barnes has been with the Federal Trade Commission. That year he was appointed by Governor Bowles to the Connecticut Public Utilities Commission, the appointment being confirmed by the Senate but not by the House. For some years prior to 1941 he served as president and a director of the Consumers League of Connecticut.

Barnes was visiting lecturer at the Columbia University School of Business during 1949-50. He has contributed articles to various journals and is the author of three books: Public Utility Control in Massachusetts (Yale University Press, 1930), Case on Public Utility Regulation (F.S. Crofts & Company, 1938), and The Economics of Public Utility Regulation (Crofts, 1942). He belongs to the American Economic Association. "I have long had an interest in natural history and conservation," he says. "This has led to my serving as president of the Audubon Society of the District of Columbia since 1947."

On June 30, 1936, he was married in Springfield, Mass., to Lidorra Holt Putney, daughter of Frank and Mabel Lidorra Holt Putney. Their son, Chaplin Bradford, was born in New Haven on April 7, 1941.

JESSE EDWARD BARNES. Owner, Barnes & Barnes (interior decorating, upholstering, etc.), 14215 Fenkell Avenue, Detroit, Mich.; residence, 19319 Meyers Road, Detroit.

Barnes, who has been the owner of the above business since 1939, says, "We now serve the masses in hope of eating with the classes. Interior decorating's a hobby, upholstering a vocation. My recreations are walking, reading, and watching television." "I am always on the losing side of any political scrap," he adds.

Barnes is a director of the Furniture Arts Company and the Century Upholstering Company. He took graduate work in political economics at Wayne University in 1924. His first marriage, to Charlotte Lewis, daughter of A. Lewis, took place in Memphis, Tenn., in 1938. They were divorced in 1940. In 1941 he was married in Michigan to Ina Itzkoff, daughter of Morris and Minnie Beck Itzkoff. He has a daughter, Marian Ida, born in Detroit on August 3, 1944.

JOSEPH BARRELL. Professor of philosophy, Beloit College, Beloit, Wis.; residence, 905 Church Street, Beloit.

All that Barrell tells us about himself is that he took his Ph.D. at Yale in 1946, is the author of Shelley and the Thought of His Time: A Study in the History of Ideas, published by the Yale University Press in 1947, became professor of philosophy at Beloit in September, 1950, and belongs to the Appalachian Mountain and Randolph Mountain clubs.

His marriage to Beth Doremus Hawkey, daughter of Mrs. Newton F. Tolman, of Nelson, N.H., took place in Dublin, N.H., on January 1, 1938. They have two daughters: Elizabeth born October 7, 1939, and Sarah Webb, born April 5, 1944, both in Providence, R.I.

JOHN DAVID BARRETT, JR. Vice-president, Bollingen Foundation, Inc. (charitable and educational foundation), 140 East 62d Street, New York 21, N.Y.; residence, Jack's Island, Bellehaven, Greenwich, Conn.

Barrett reports that he became vice-president of the Bollingen Foundation in 1948, belongs to the Union Club of New York, and is still a bachelor. And that's all, except his comment to Item 21—"To be concise, to say the right thing at the right time and in the right way, has always been for the rare genius in each age. There is naught for me but to remain with the common man."

RENSSELAER WARDWELL BARTRAM, JR. Partner, Stevenson & Bartram, stock brokers, 120 Broadway, New York, N.Y.; residence, Stonington, Conn.

Before joining the firm of Stevenson & Bartram, Bartram was with the Chase National Bank. He served as a chief boatswain's mate (T) in the U.S. Coast Guard Reserve from June to December, 1942, assigned to the Port of New York Security Force. During the next three years he was an air navigator in the Navy, with the rank of lieutenant commander. His service was all in the American theatre.

Bartram was first married April 16, 1928, in South Bend, Ind., to Elizabeth Mayr, daughter of Frank and Elizabeth Swartz Mayr. They were divorced in 1937. On July 1, 1939, he was married in Greenwich to Jane Kirkland Jackson.

His son, Rensselaer Wardwell, 3d, who was born in New York on December 22, 1930, graduated from St. Paul's in 1948 and is now a member of the Yale Class of 1952.

HERMAN DAVID BASKIND. President, H. D. Baskind & Company, Inc., manufacturers of men's shirts, 1220 Broadway, New York 1, N.Y.; residence, Bellevue Avenue, Rye, N.Y.

Baskind says that he has always been in the above business, although he was associated with his father under the firm name of Louis Baskind & Company, Inc., before becoming president of H. D. Baskind & Company, Inc., in February, 1939.

His marriage to Helene S. Schiller, daughter of Dr. A. Noah Schiller and Jennie Schweitzer Schiller, took place in New York in May, 1936. They have three children, all of whom were born in New York, Doris Elaine on July 17, 1938, Louise Lee on June 25, 1942, and Alan Neal on November 26, 1945.

"I've been sticking pretty much to the grindstone, so haven't had much time to travel for pleasure—plenty for business, however," Baskind tells us. "Would like to take things a little easier, move out to the suburbs (Westchester or Connecticut), and be able to relax generally. Could then enjoy traveling, do more reading, spend more time with my growing crew."

ROGER WOLCOTT BATES. Candidate for degree of Docteur d'Université, Faculté des Lettres, Université de Paris, Sorbonne, Paris, France; residence, 24 Rue Barbet De Jouy, Paris.

Bates writes: "We resumed residence here at the end of August, 1946, in the same apartment building which we left November 3, 1940—making our absence due to the war as short as possible. The plan calls for returning in a year to teach French at—needless to say, for I have kept up with competitive rowing whenever practicable—a wet-bob institution.

"Conditions have vastly improved since we got back, but I am continually reminded of the comment sent to his Class secretary by my wife's uncle, John Arnold Amundson, Yale '80, who divided his corporation law practice between New York City and Paris over a long period of time and who is buried at St. Germain-en-Laye: 'I am becoming a well-fed pessimist.' "

Bates has spent a good deal of time studying since graduation. He was at the Columbia Law School during 1926-27 and at the Boston University School of Law from 1929 to 1932, when he received the degree of LL.B.; in 1946, following two years of graduate work at Yale, he took his M.A. in French. He was admitted to the New York Bar in 1934 and was in the law office of Budd, Coffey & Bertine in Mt. Vernon, N.Y., that year.

His military record is quite varied: "Two weeks' active duty as a second lieutenant, Field Artillery Reserve, 1927; thirteen months' active duty with 7th U.S. Cavalry, 1928-29; promoted to first lieutenant, Field Artillery Reserve, 1929 (commission resigned, 1933); on January 31, 1941, commissioned first lieutenant, N.G.U.S., with Federalized National Guard, Motorized Corps of Artillery; on active duty in U.S. until August, 1946; promotion to captain, February, 1943; graduate, Battery Officers' Course, Fort Sill; transfer to Artillery Division, 106th Infantry Division, December, 1943; transfer to Field Artillery Replacement Training Center, April, 1944."

Bates' interest in rowing has resulted in his current appointment as European correspondent of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen. He contributed an article, "Sculls to Sweeps," to the Sportsman for June, 1936. He is a life member of the Union Boat Club of Boston and belong also to the New York Athletic Club, the New Rochelle Rowing Club, the Cambridge (Mass.) Boat Club, the Société Nautique de la Basse Seine, Paris, the Thames Rowing Club of London, and the Leander Club of Henley (honorary membership "when in England"). He is also a member of the Stewards' Enclosure at the Henley Royal Regatta.

His marriage to Louisa C. Amundson, daughter of Henry Olaus and Martha O. Hansen Amundson, of Alexandria, Minn., took place on December 22, 1938, appropriately enough at Henley-on-Thames.

CHARLES KENNETH BAXTER. President, The Donner Corporation, investment advisers, 1710 Fidelity-Philadelphia Trust Building, 123 South Broad Street, Philadelphia 9, Pa.; residence, 450 Garden Lane, Bryn Mawr, Pa.

From 1927 to 1931 Baxter was with the New York Stock Exchange firm of Eastman, Dillon & Company, and since then he has been with The Donner Corporation, serving as vice-president and treasurer prior to assuming the presidency of the concern on January 1, 1950. He is chairman of the board of the Deep Rock Oil Corporation of Tulsa, Okla., and of the Manufacturers Capital Corporation of New York, president and a director of the Hillsboro Plantation, Inc., of Belle Glade, Fla., vice-president, treasurer, and a director of General Computing Machines of New York and also a director of the following: the Associated Development & Research Corporation, the Empire Trust Company, the Forty Wall Street Building, and the New York Water Service Corporation, all of New York City, the Air Associates, Inc., of Teterboro, N.J., the American Fruit Growers, Inc., of Los Angeles, the Cinecolor Corporation of Burbank, Calif., the Cuno Engineering Corporation and the International Silver Company, both of Meriden, Conn., the Mayflower Hotel Corporation of Washington, the Penn Valley Crude Oil Corporation of Olean, N.Y., the Pittsburgh (Pa.) Hotels, Inc., and the Savannah (Ga.)

Electric & Power Company. In 1947 Baxter served as director of the Institute for Cancer Research in Philadelphia and is at present on its board of trustees.

From July, 1942, to September, 1944, he was a lieutenant colonel in the Army, assigned to the Budget Division, War Department General Staff. He belongs to the Wall Street Club of New York, the Merion Golf and Cricket clubs of Philadelphia, and the Yale clubs of Philadelphia and New York.

He was married in Wilmington, Del., on July 15, 1946, to Laura Bacon Hopkins, daughter of Delmar and Mary Vile Hopkins, of Philadelphia.

ARTHUR JOHN BAZATA. Address, Cosmopolitan Hotel, Denver 2, Colo.

JOHN GOODHART BECKER. Vice-president, Fitch Publishing Company (rating of bonds) and Fitch Investors Service (financial analyses), 120 Wall Street, New York 5, N.Y.; residence, Yale Club, 50 Vanderbilt Avenue, New York 17; home address, 18 North 9th Street, Lebanon, Pa.

Becker leads a double life, but not in the usual sense, for the section not covered above is devoted to religious interests. He is president of Bible Magazine, Inc., of Philadelphia, chancellor of the Pennsylvania Chautauqua (Mt. Gretna, Pa.), and a director and member of the finance committee of the American Tract Society of New York. In 1928 he became a minister of the Evangelical United Brethren Church and has since been active in several divisions of its general finances and projects, and in 1942 was appointed secretary of the World Relief Commission of the National Association of Evangelicals.

Becker's connection with the two Fitch organizations dates from 1937. In addition to his position as vice-president, he is chairman of the rating committee, and he is also manager-trustee of the F. S. Becker Estate of Lebanon. He was a buyer for B. Altman & Company, New York, from 1926 to 1930 and from 1933 to 1935 was associated with the Economic Forum in a business capacity. He took his M.A. in economics at Columbia in 1933. That year he was a contributor to The Banking Situation, published by the Columbia University Press, and in 1934 contributed to the magazine, Today. He has also contributed to Revelation, a religious magazine, of which he became president in 1949. Becker is a member of the Hajji Baba Society, a group interested in Persian art.

"Writing what went before wasn't too painful until my eye fell on the line to be filled out with the names of grandchildren," he says in conclusion. "I haven't a wife or child and regard myself as an aggravated case of delayed adolescence on that account. Certainly I'm no woman-hater and think I've missed something, just one of those fortunes of life, or misfortunes.

"About 1928 I spent six months in Persia and have kept alive for twenty-two years a lively interest in Persian rugs, finances, and archeology. I even lecture on those topics. Otherwise my life is neatly divided into two camps—the ministry, which occupies half my time and energy and yields no pelf, and banking, which is an absorbing mental adventure and moderately compensating. I came by this division naturally. My grandfather was a bishop and my father a banker. So their mantles fell on my lesser shoulders and I've been hauling them around ever since, or trying to. Of course, I'm too respectable to be interesting even to myself, so this sketch isn't sprightly any more than I am. Living at the Yale Club most of the time, I see a lot of classmates all along and couldn't make like Errol Flynn if I tried to shoot the breeze."

LUCIUS BEEBE. Address, Virginia City, Nevada.

Disclaiming business connections of any sort, our most unique classmate describes himself as "historian of the American West, specializing in the field of transportation, railroads, Nevada, staging, mining, and the bonanza era," and amplifies as follows: "After graduating from Harvard in the Class of 1927, I worked for two years in the Graduate School, in the field of American poetry, and was bounced out for a physical encounter within the Yard limits of the University, an expulsion offense at Harvard, without a graduate degree. Went to work on the city staff of the New York Herald Tribune in 1929 and variously served as city reporter, ships news reporter, feature writer, contributor to and editor of 'op-ed' essay page on Sundays, contributor to editorial page, assistant in drama, and for ten years conductor of syndicated column, 'This New York.' Resigned from the Tribune in April, 1950, to purchase the home of John Piper of Western opera house management fame in Virginia City, Nevada, on the Comstock Lode, an almost ghost town in the last free state, where I am quit of state income and inheritance taxes, Sullivan laws, closing hours, anti-gambling statutes, and all the devices with which inferior people protect themselves in other parts of the land. I intend to live in Nevada forever, visiting San Francisco when I can afford it and New York when my editors want to see me. I left New York in no huff, but full of good will and appreciation of the world's greatest free market for individual enterprise and talent. Simply I had seen the show. During the time I had worked for the paper I had been made a Knight of France, had been profiled in The New Yorker, had sold a film to Hollywood (Café Society—Paramount), had served as technical adviser to Cecil B. De Mille in the filming of Union Pacific, had my picture on the cover of Life, had written and photographed four books that appeared on the best-seller lists, been three times voted the best dressed man in America, made more money, attended more public dinners, became acquainted with more of the great of the world, and had had more of what passes in bed for love than most. To ask for or expect anything else would be greedy.

"My physical assets include the last private railroad car in operating condition in the United States, one functioning kidney, and a fine Victorian home filled with rococo objects of vertu, drunken house guests, the only bidet in Nevada, and a closet filled with Jack Daniel's whisky. What more could you want?"

Beebe's books include: Boston and the Boston Legend; High Iron, A Book of Trains; Highliners, A Railroad Album; Trains in Transition; Highball, A Railroad Pageant; Snoot if You Must; The Stork Club Bar Book, The Ritz Idea; and, in collaboration with Charles Clegg, Mixed Train Daily, A Book of Short Line Railroads; U.S. West, The Saga of Wells Fargo; Virginia & Truckee, A Story of Virginia City and Comstock Times; Legends of the Comstock Lode; and Cable Car Carnival. Among the periodicals to which he has contributed are: Holiday, Cosmopolitan, American Mercury, the Saturday Review of Literature, Town and Country, Esquire, and Coronet. He is a member of the national committee of the Wine and Food Society of America, the Railway and Locomotive Historical Society of Cambridge, Mass., and the Confrérie des Chevaliers du Tastevin. He is not married.

ROGER WINTHROP BELL. Address, 60 Post Road, West, Noroton, Conn.

WILLIAM HENRY BENNETHUM. Partner, Morford, Bennethum, Marvel & Cooch, lawyers, Delaware Trust Building, Wilmington, Del.; residence, Capitol Trail, R.F.D., Marshallton, Del.

Bennethum, who was admitted to the Delaware Bar in 1930, specializes in insurance, corporate practice, and general trial work. From 1929 to 1933 he was in the legal department of the Corporation Service Company in Wilmington and has since been associated with his present firm, being admitted to partnership in 1947. Bennethum edited Marvel on Delaware Corporations and Receiverships. During the period from 1941 to 1950 he served as deputy attorney general of the State Tax Department, and since 1935 he has been secretary of the New Castle County Bar Association.

He was married on October 4, 1930, in Valley Forge, Pa., to Anne Lou Bennett, daughter of Fred W. and Annie Clawson Bennett. Her home was formerly in Trenton, N.J. They have two children: William H., 4th, born November 17, 1933, and Elizabeth Stuart, born August 24, 1939, both in Wilmington. Bill has just been admitted to next year's Freshman Class at Yale. He is at present a Senior at the Tower Hill School, where he has been president of the Student Council, co-captain of the football team, and received the Coaches' Award.

LOUIS BELL BERMINGHAM. Address, 50 Vanderbilt Avenue, New York 17, N.Y.

CLARENCE BERNSTEIN. Physician, 740 North Magnolia Avenue, Orlando, Fla.; residence, 3004 Sherwood Avenue, Orlando.

After taking his M.D. at Johns Hopkins in 1931, Bernstein had further training there in pathology and then in medicine at Harvard. He taught and did research at the University of Chicago from 1933 to 1937 and was subsequently on the faculty of the Northwestern University Medical School. He practiced and taught in Chicago until 1940 and since 1942 has been in Orlando, where he was placed by the Bureau of Procurement and Assignment and decided to remain following the war. He served as medical adviser with the U.S. Selective Service System, being awarded the Selective Service and Certificate of Merit medals, and has been activated again.

Bernstein's practise is limited to internal medicine and allergy; he has been certified by the American Boards in both fields. He is a fellow of the American Medical Association, the American Academy of Allergy, the American College of Allergists, and the Institute of Medicine in Chicago and belongs to the Central Society of Clinical Research, the American Federation of Clinical Research, the Chicago Society of Allergy, the Chicago Society of Internal Medicine, the Southeast Allergy Society, the Florida Allergy Society (president), the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and the Florida Academy of Science. He was elected to Alpha Omega Alpha while at Johns Hopkins and to Sigma Xi at the University of Chicago. His publications have been in the field of pathology and research, tuberculosis, Addison's disease, internal medicine, and allergy. During 1948-49 he helped to organize the Congregation of Liberal Judaism of Orlando and is at present serving as its president.

On March 12, 1940, he was married in Philadelphia to Babette Natalie Friedmann, daughter of Lionel and Natalie Schuldenfrei Friedmann. They have two daughters: Jill, born September 23, 1943, and Toni, on June 27, 1945.

"With Mrs. Bernstein, I am a director (board member) of the Central Florida Symphony," he says. "I am perennial committee on arrangements of the Central Florida Yale Club. We average two affairs per year.

"My family—World Peace—medicine—human relations: these are my continuing interests. In the practice of clinical medicine and some clinical research and teaching, in both giving to and serving the United World Federalists [he was state treasurer of the Florida branch during 1948-49 and a delegate to the national assembly in Cleveland in 1949 and in Washington in 1950], in furthering organized liberal religion, in promoting thereby a living world brotherhood, in nurturing of old friendships and the cultivation of new—in all these things the 'middle span' offers some fulfillment, excitement, rewards, challenges, gratifications—and too, on occasion tensions, fatigue, and frustrations. These first twenty-five years since 1926 have sped rapidly over the hill—the next?—isn't it good that we do not know!"

MAURICE JACOB BERSTEIN. Address, 21 Gralynn Road, Newton 1, Mass.

PHILIP BERNSTEIN. Chicago district manager, Universal Match Corporation of St. Louis, 608 South Dearborn Street, Chicago 5, Ill.; residence, 5025 South Woodlawn Avenue, Chicago 15.

Bernstein's extra-curricular activities have a lot in common with those of his twin brother, the doctor. "My interests are pretty general," he says, "and my hobbies which are left (those which require no physical exertion) have mostly to do with people and with trying to exert an influence for good. The range is from Cub Scouting to Rotary, from promoting greater interest in and a greater following for selling as a career, from medical research to religion and to world government." Until recently he was vice-president and is still a director of the Weissman Medical Foundation of the Hektoen Institute of Cook County Hospital, Chicago, and he has for some time been a member of the board of trustees of the Chicago Sinai Congregation.

From June to November, 1926, Bernstein was a sales representative in Nashville, Tenn., for Magnus & Company of Cincinnati. During the next fifteen years he was with the Meyer Both Company, also of Chicago, first as a general sales assistant, then as sales manager, and subsequently as vice-president and general manager. From October, 1941, to September, 1942, he was an account executive and vice-president of Bozell & Jacobs, Inc., of Chicago and from then until June, 1943, was assistant to Clarence Bernstein (real estate and property management) in Nashville. He has since been Chicago district manager of the Universal Match Corporation and at present is also a director of the Phoenix Printing Company of Chicago. He is active in the Chicago Sales Executive Club, of which he was a charter member and formerly a board member, and served two terms as president of the Chicago Book and Play Club.

His marriage to Mary Elizabeth Frank, daughter of Dr. Mortimer Frank and Donie Katz Frank, of Chicago, took place in Nashville, June 27, 1929. They have three children, all of whom were born in Chicago, Ann Frank, on October 13, 1931, Philip, Jr., on October 2, 1933, and Frank on March 23, 1939. Ann is in the Class of 1953 at Wellesley, and Phil, Jr., after some preparatory work at The Hill School, is planning to enroll in the Class of 1955 at the University of Illinois.

COURTNEY CRAIG BISHOP. Surgeon, 33 Whitney Avenue, New Haven 10, Conn.; residence, 9 Austin Street, New Haven 15.

After graduating from the Yale Medical School in 1930, Bishop went to the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital in Boston as an interne and continued there as assistant resident surgeon until 1932. He was at the New York Hospital for the next six years, first as assistant resident and then as resident surgeon. He was admitted to practice in 1937 and became a member of the American Board of Surgery two years later. In addition to carrying on his private practice of surgery in New Haven, he has been successively clinical instructor, assistant clinical professor, and associate clinical professor of surgery at the Yale Medical School. He is also attending surgeon on the University and general services of the Grace-New Haven Community Hospital, assisting surgeon at the Yale Department of University Health, and consultant in surgery at the Veterans Administration Hospital in Newington, Conn.

Bishop belongs to the Society of University Surgeons, the New England Surgical Society, and the American Medical Association. He contributed an article, "Employees Receive Practical Instruction in First Aid," to the U.I. News in 1941, and another, "Thrombophlebitis of the Deep Venous System of the Leg: Treatment by Ligation," to the New Zealand Medical Journal, Supplementary Issue, Auckland Post-graduate Conference, in April 1943. He is also the co-author of articles which have appeared in the Journal of Pharmacological and Experimental Therapy, the Annals of Surgery, and Surgery, Gynecology, and Obstetrics.

In May, 1942, he was commissioned a major in the Medical Corps and was on active duty from July of that year until January, 1946. He served in the South Pacific theatre from November, 1942, to November, 1945, assigned to the 39th General Hospital (Yale Unit), successively as chief of the general surgical section, executive officer, and chief of the surgical service. In 1944 he was awarded the Bronze Star and that year was promoted to the rank of lieutenant colonel.

Bishop was married June 20, 1930, in New Haven to Eleanor Louise Alcorn, daughter of William Francis and Winifred Smith Alcorn. They have two daughters: Ellen Alcorn, born June 16, 1938, and Caroline Craig on April 15, 1941, both in New Haven.

ROBERT ELIAS BITTNER. Address, 1036 Hamilton Street, Allentown, Pa.

BRUCE McDONALD BLACK. Address, 10 Linwood Apartments, Olean, N.Y.

GEORGE STEBBINS BLACKBURN. Instructor, St. Paul's School and City College Evening High School, Baltimore, Md.; residence, 118 Hawthorn Road, Roland Park, Baltimore 10.

Blackburn, who has taught in independent and public schools from New Haven to Birmingham, has been since September, 1949, an instructor in English, dramatics, French, and German at St. Paul's School and an instructor in English at the City College Evening High School (adult education). He studied and taught in France during 1930-31 and in 1933 received an M.A. at the Middlebury French Summer School.

His marriage to Elizabeth Tucker Brooke, daughter of Charles Frederick and Grace Drakeford Tucker Brooke, took place in New Haven on December 26, 1932. They have three children: Alfred Brooke, born October 1, 1934, in Charles Town, W.Va.; Elizabeth Tucker, born July 6, 1936, also in Charles Town; and George Stebbins, Jr., born January 5, 1943, in Birmingham. Brooke has been at Exeter on a Duncan Ford Scholarship since 1948 and is a high honor student. Elizabeth is in the Class of 1954 at the Bryn Mawr School in Baltimore.

As to other things, Blackburn says, "Travels: in France and Italy, by train and bicycle, 1930-31; hobby: coaching plays; special interest: learning how to teach German! (no German read from 1926 to 1949).

"Mrs. Blackburn received an M.A. in creative writing at Hopkins in 1950. She hopes to publish a novel this year. She plans to study for a Ph.D. at Hopkins, beginning next fall, if possible.

"My satisfactions are more with my family's accomplishments than with my own!"

FRANK WALCOTT BOGARDUS, JR. Investment officer, trust department, Chase National Bank, 11 Broad Street, New York 15, N.Y.; residence, High Ridge Road, R.D. 2, Stamford, Conn.

Bogardus, who started with the Chase National Bank in 1926, has been an investment officer of the trust department for some time. He was on the Darien (Conn.) Republican Town Committee around the period from 1936 to 1939 and has been a member of the Stamford Board of Education since 1945—"God knows how long I'll last!" he says—serving as president of the board during 1947-48 and again since 1950. He has been a member of the board of stewards of the High Ridge Methodist Church in Stamford since 1944 and became financial secretary in 1951.

Bogardus was married in Stamford, August 20, 1927, to Eleanor Gray Thompson, daughter of Walter Lee and Marion Hodgson Thompson. Their daughter, Ann, completed two years as a member of the Class of 1952 at the University of Connecticut. She was married on September 9, 1950, to John West, Connecticut '50. Donald Carleton Bogardus is a Senior at the Stamford High School—his future uncertain because of the draft situation.

"My autobiography would never make the 'Best Seller' grade," says Bogardus. "To me, my life has been most interesting, but interest in it would be confined to my best friends. The average amount of satisfaction and disappointments, no particular spectacular achievements or experiences that would be of general interest—in short, the life of a banking (trust department) career and family man, with some smattering of fascinating activities in civic life and its attendant problems and satisfactions. In retrospect, there is the regret of not maintaining close relationships with Yale friends but the satisfaction of having a circle of friends with wide diversification of interests and talents. Hobby outside of School Board work and occasional ham acting is in the field of woodcraft—sort of a combination cabinet-maker and wood-butcher. Lesson from Life: One can never attribute successes wholly to one's own ability, nor blame failures on some one or something else. This sounds corny, but I believe there is some kind of satisfaction to be gained out of such a realization."

RICHARD MARSHALL BOND. Regional biologist, Soil Conservation Service, Swan Island, Portland 18, Oregon; residence, 3322 S.W. Fairmount Boulevard, Portland 1.

Bond—probably our only falconer, frustrated or otherwise—was a student-assistant at the American School of Prehistoric Studies during the summer of 1926 and at Yale (in biology) from 1928 to 1930. He took his Ph.D. in zoology and anatomy at Yale in 1932, in the meantime having held a Bernice P. Bishop Museum Fellowship for a year. He was an instructor in biology at Yale in 1932, during 1933-34 was a fellow of the National Research Council, and in 1934 had a summer fellowship at the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution. He taught "practically everything" at the Santa Barbara School in Carpinteria, Calif., during 1934-35 and for the next few years was a wildlife technician with the National Park Service in the western United States. Since then he has been associated with the Soil Conservation Service.

Bond sent us a long list of his writings which have appeared in various journals, including Science, the Journal of Experimental Biology, the Bulletin of the Bingham Oceanographic Collection, Nature (London), the Memoirs of the Connecticut Academy of Arts and Sciences, Auk, the Biological Bulletin, Condor, the Wilson Bulletin, Soil Conservation, the Journal of Wildlife Management, the Journal of Mammology, the Scientific Monthly, the American Falconer, the American Bee Journal, the Transactions of the National Association of Wildlife Conference, and the American Primrose Society Quarterly, as well as in several foreign journals. He belongs to the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the American Ornithologists Union, the American Society of Mammalogists, the Cooper Ornithological Club (vice-president, Northern division, 1939-40), the Wilson Ornithological Club, the Wildlife Society, the Wilderness Society, the Western Society of Naturalists, and the Western Bird Banding Association.

He married Jacqueline Anne Valentine, daughter of John J. and Jacqueline Anne Moore Valentine, in Piedmont, Calif., on December 5, 1931. Their daughter, Jacqueline Anne, born in New Haven, June 9, 1933, graduated from the Catlin School in Portland in 1950 and is now a Freshman at Scripps College.

"For the past fifteen years my travels have practically all been on official business, and I spend about a third of my time on the road, mostly in Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Nevada, and California," Bond says. "As a result, the attractiveness of travel has worn somewhat thin, and among my ambitions is that of staying home for a while.

"My main hobby shortly after I left Yale was falconry. Unfortunately, as I began to spend more and more time traveling over a larger and larger area, this became impractical. United Air Lines, the Southern Pacific Railroad, and the Greyhound Bus Company all resent falcons, and so does my wife. When I got to where I could neither take the birds with me nor leave them home, I gave them up.

"In recent years I have gone into gardening, with particular attention to primroses, alpine plants, and orchids, all of the more unusual kinds. Some of them are also among the most beautiful, but this is mere coincidence. These little creatures have the advantages of being silent, even when in full health, and of not smelling bad when they die. These are important points that I had to learn the hard way. I feel that the Botany Department at Yale was remiss in not pointing this out to us budding zoologists when we took courses in plant life.

"Seriously, I have a delightful life in a beautiful and pleasant part of the world, a happy marriage, and an interesting, and I think useful job. I seem to have no problems that could not be solved by a little more money and a lot more sleep."

JOHN WILLIAM BOWMAN. Secretary and director of purchases, Northwestern Steel & Wire Company, Avenue B and Wallace Street, Sterling, Ill.; residence, 705 West 3d Street, Sterling.

Bowman reports: "I moved my family, four horses, and a wrangler from Montana to Sterling, Ill., in the fall of 1935, after we sold our banks to the Northwest Bancorporation. Our steel company here, which is family owned, was in the process of building a steel mill in 1935 to supply its present wire mill facilities. Since that time both my family and the mill have expanded, leaving old man Bowman a rather dejected looking individual, but not in spirit, as I love them both. Incidentally, how far down the list am I on the grandfather status?"

Bowman is a director of the Central National Bank of Sterling and also of the local Y.M.C.A. and is serving on the metallic coatings committee of the American Iron and Steel Institute. His clubs are the Union League and University of Chicago and the Yale of New York.

He was married on June 21, 1928, in Sterling, to Crete Dillon, daughter of Paul W. and Crete Blackman Dillon. Their older daughter, Crete Dillon, who was born on July 10, 1929, in Butte, Mont., attended the Madeira School for three years; her marriage to Douglas G. Harvey took place on January 3, 1949, and they have a daughter, Crete, born the following November 10. Jon Galt Bowman, born June 17, 1931, at Anaconda, Mont., graduated from the Shattuck School in 1949 and is now in the Class of 1953 at Menlo College. The younger children were both born in Sterling, Timothy Dillon on June 22, 1937, and Diana on May 3, 1943.

WILLIAM BARCLAY BOYD, JR. Clerk, Station A, New Haven Post Office, 118 Grand Avenue, New Haven, Conn.; residence, 260 East Grand Avenue, New Haven.

Boyd, who has been in the Postal Service since March, 1929, has been at the Station A branch in New Haven for the past ten years. His marriage to Irene A. Anderson, daughter of Axel and Augusta Rissell Anderson, of New Haven, took place in Naugatuck, Conn., on February 1, 1932. They have had three children, all of whom were born in New Haven, Bruce Barclay on October 26, 1933, Stuart William on May 27, 1937, and Linda Augusta on September 23, 1938. The latter died in New Haven on June 22, 1946. Bruce is a Senior at the Wilbur Cross High School in New Haven, while Stuart is in junior high.

CLARENCE EMMANUEL BOYER. Pastor, Emmanuel Presbyterian Church, 737 East 6th Street, New York 9, N.Y.

Boyer graduated from Union Theological Seminary with the degree of B.D. in 1928, was pastor of the Broughton Presbyterian Church in Bloomfield, N.J., for the next eight years, and from 1937 to 1948 was pastor and director of the Madison Square Church House in New York City. He was assistant pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in New York during the following year and has since had the pastorate of Emmanuel Presbyterian Church. Boyer is vice-president and a director of the Consumer-Farmer Milk Co-operative, Inc.

His marriage to Anne Caroline Conway, daughter of Thomas and Alma Hagberg Conway, took place in New York on May 25, 1929. They have three sons. The oldest, Thomas Conway, who was born July 19, 1930, will receive his B.A. degree at Rutgers in June, 1951, and expects to enter the Air Force as a second lieutenant at that time. The second boy, David Edwin, born April 21, 1934, is a Junior at Friends Seminary in New York. The youngest, Keith Emerson, was born October 7, 1941.

JOHN WALTER BRACKEN, JR. Address, care Thomas E. Bracken, 1455 Martha Custis Drive, Alexandria, Va.

FRANCIS BRADLEY. Volunteer worker, Moral Re-Armament Program; residence, 741 Canton Avenue, Milton 86, Mass.

"A quarter of a century sounds like a long time, but looking back to our years at New Haven it seems incredible that so much should have happened since then," Bradley says. "Photographs and occasional contacts tell a vivid personal story of advancing years. We have changed a lot and the world has changed a lot since the days when Republicans used to occupy the White House!

"During a brief sojourn at college I had spent what time I could spare from the neglect of my courses upon a study of the lighter side of life. In 1929 a minor encounter with the Bears of Wall Street failed to dim wholly the aura of self-centered optimism with which the future, in my mind, was clothed. The birth of the Ideological Age was an event which, in my case, may be said to have passed unnoticed. My meeting with Moral Re-Armament, coinciding as it did with marriage and the loss of a job (in the order named), came at a point when circumstances were conducive to a view of life in every sense soberer than the one I had previously entertained.

"Moral Re-Armament gave me a clearer perspective on the situation in the world and the situation in myself, and the relation of the two to each other. It showed me the fundamental relevance of teamwork, on a basis of absolute moral standards and the guidance of God, to national strength and international security. It has illumined for me our American heritage and revealed how the convictions of the men who founded and preserved America can, with our own, become again a force to save our country and bring hope to mankind. Most important, I have found how to be, with my family, a part of this force.

"For the past twelve years I have been much of the time traveling with the ideological program of Moral Re-Armament. During the war I visited many cities in the U.S. and Canada, working with Civilian Defense and Labor-Management committees, and have helped direct a national training center at Mackinac Island. For three years I have been a good deal in Europe, helping with the administration of the Moral Re-Armament World Assembly at Caux-sur-Montreux. In this enterprise of Moral Re-Armament I have been privileged to see a procession of broken lives mended, broken homes remade, men of goodwill finding hope and direction, and, in the wider field, unity created between management and labor, black and white, young and old. I have seen Frenchmen hold out the hand of friendship to German, Catholic to Protestant, Moslem, Hindu, and Buddhist to Christian.

I have known Communist leaders who declared that 'class war was out of date' and turned, at great cost to themselves, to become fighters for the democratic ideas."

Bradley, who has been a trustee and lecturer at the College of the Good Road (California and Switzerland), collaborated in producing the book, You Can Defend America, and other pamphlets, news articles, and radio programs during the war. He has also collaborated in producing a number of ideological training courses and in writing and producing patriotic and other Moral Re-Armament publications. He belongs to the Society of the Cincinnati. During the period from 1924 to 1931 he was connected successively with Belding-Hemenway (textiles), Stone & Webster (finance and construction), and Murray & Flood and the George B. H. Macomber Company (both construction).

Mrs. Bradley, whose maiden name was Katherine Ann Howe, is the daughter of Dudley Rogers and Ellen Mercer Atterbury Howe. They were married in Brookline, January 30, 1932, and the children were born in Boston, Francis, Jr., on September 25, 1934, Ellen on December 7, 1935, and Henry Saltonstall on December 22, 1939.

CHARLES ARTHUR BRECK. Physician in group practice; office and residence, 176 North Main Street, Wallingford, Conn.

Breck writes: "After graduation in 1926 I entered the Yale Medical School instead of Western Reserve as had been my intention. I have not regretted the change, and because of that switch my home has been continuously in Connecticut ever since. My medical practice began in Wallingford in 1932, when I took over an established practice from Dr. P. J. Vivier, a Yale graduate, who returned to his native South Africa to practice surgery. At that time my plan was to organize a small group of physicians interested in good general practice to try to give the public specialized treatment at a reasonable price and similar to that which they received in some of the larger clinics. The war interfered somewhat, but prior to 1940 I had the help of Dr. Edward Cutter of the Harvard Medical School and Dr. J. F. Ferguson of the Yale School of Medicine.

"During the war I served with the Yale Hospital Unit (39th General), but had to return after one year in the South Pacific because of rheumatoid arthritis. This put me on the shelf until 1946, but a part of that time I spent in Hot Springs, Ark., where I had the opportunity of studying arthritis, as well as receiving treatments. Resumed practice in 1946 and acquired two new members in our group, Dr. Robert Boyd of Tufts Medical and Dr. Richard Breck from the Yale sphere of influence. The arthritis prevents me from doing anything except office practice and, fortunately, wheels can take the place of legs, so our group is functioning quite efficiently. There is a division of work, and each member has become a member of the Yale Medical School staff, working in the outpatient department. We do not attempt to specialize to the fine degree that is necessary in university requirements, but in certain fields we try to know more than any one of us could if we were in practice alone. It seems to be working well, and I think the public appreciates our efforts. We are also doing some special work in the field of arthritis and joint diseases. Industrial medicine is also being handled, in one chemical industry and several silver manufacturers, the leading ones the International Silver Company and the American Cyanamid Company."

Breck interned at the New Haven Hospital during 1930-31 and at the New York Hospital the following year. He was an instructor at the Yale Medical School from 1932 to 1936 and has since been an assistant clinical professor of medicine. He is also on the staff of the New Haven Hospital and attending physician at the Meriden Hospital, and he is on the medical board of the Rheumatism and Arthritis Foundation of Connecticut and since 1946 has served as president of the Wallingford Cancer Society and as a member of the executive committee of the Wallingford-Meriden Cancer Society. He has been president of the Wallingford Community Concert Association since 1945 and is a member of the American Medical Association, the Meriden and New Haven Medical societies, the Association of Military Surgeons, the Graduates Club of New Haven, the New Haven Lawn Club, the Home Club of Meriden, and the American Legion.

At the time Breck was on active duty in the Medical Corps in 1942, he ranked as a major, and he was released to the Honorary Reserve with the rank of lieutenant colonel. While with the Yale Unit, he served in New Zealand and Saipan.

He was married in West Hartford, Conn., June 24, 1932, to Alicia Hadfield, daughter of Seth and Mae Peters Hadfield. They have two daughters, both of whom were born in New Haven, Mary Alicia on May 24, 1934, and Susan Hadfield on March 23, 1937. The older girl attended the Prospect Hill School in New Haven and is now at Wellesley. Susan will enter Prospect Hill this fall.

JAMES DAVIS BRONSON. President, Cascade Lumber Company, Yakima, Wash.; residence, 2706 Barge Street, Yakima.

Bronson attended the Yale School of Forestry during 1927-28. He did not remain to complete the course, although his election to Sigma Xi obviously indicates a good standing. He doesn't give us any details of the period covering the next ten years, but tells us that he was treasurer of the Cascade Lumber Company from 1937 to 1945, its secretary-treasurer the following year, and president since November, 1946. He is also president of the Naches (Wash.) Box Company, vice-president of the Consolidated Lumber Company of Stillwater, Minn., secretary of the Ellensberg Lumber Company, and a director of the Klickitat Pine Box Company of Goldendale, the Kennewick Lumber Yards, Inc., the Tri City Lumber Yards, Inc., of Pasco, and the Home Federal Savings and Loan Association of Yakima.

Bronson was a vestryman of St. Michael's Episcopal Church, Yakima, from 1931 to 1939 and again from 1947 to 1950, during the intervening period being senior warden, and since 1938 he has been lay reader in the Missionary District of Spokane. He is on the board of directors of the Yakima Country Club and a member of the Gyro Club, of which he was formerly president. He is 'way up in Masonry, having been made a 33d degree Scottish Rite Mason in 1947. He has served as master of Mt. Adams Lodge, the Rose Croix Chapter, and the Lodge of Perfection.

He was married in Spokane, April 22, 1930, to Elsie Titia Prins, daughter of Albertus J. and Marie Antoinette Müller Prins. Their children were both born in Yakima, James Davis, Jr., on June 16, 1931, and Mary Eleanor on November 30, 1933. The boy is in the Class of 1953 at Yale after preparing at the Shattuck School. Mary is a Senior at St. Mary's Hall, Faribault, Minn.

"I really don't know why you ask me to write about myself," said Bronson, clearly exhausted when he reached page 4 of our questionnaire. "I never belonged to the News staff, the Record, or the Lit. So why should I try at this late time in life to join the ranks of those illustrious classmates who were able to express themselves so ably in an informal manner.

"Since I am isolated in a community in the West where Yale men are few and far between, my contacts with classmates have been very few indeed. Tony Michel and his wife came West about twelve years ago and came to our home for a visit. Dick Bond called me one night on the telephone when he was in Yakima on some government business, and I went down to visit him that evening. John Ellsworth and his wife drove through Yakima, and I had a nice time seeing John and meeting his wife. Occasionally when I get over to Seattle I see a very bald guy named Wally Collins, and one trip to California Wally and his wife were aboard the train so that we had a couple of drinks together for the Class of '26. Incidentally, Wally thinks he has more hair than I, which is really far from the truth. I have at least ten more hairs than he.

"I have occasionally seen Tony when I have been to Chicago and have visited with Paul Raymond in his home along the North Shore. I also had a wonderful time with Tony and his wife visiting Chaloner McNair of 1926 S. and his wife in their summer home at Lakeside, Mich.

"In the fall of 1949 I met Tony at Billings, Mont., and drove him back to northern Minnesota, where we fished for four days. Tony caught one perch. I continued on East to New Haven to enroll my son in the Class of 1953 and saw Os Lord, Charlie Willard, Allison Choate, and Bill Stage for a few minutes. So much for travels,

"As to hobbies, I play golf and hunt ducks. I have hopes to see you all at Reunion, come June, 1951. There are too d--n many special interests in the New Deal so that I don't go for such at all. Satisfaction, regrets, and recreations require more time than I have to devote to this questionnaire. Who invented these things anyway? I hope the rest of you like them better than I, or they probably won't be answered until Squidge has sent you several urgent appeals."

HENRY INGERSOLL BROWN, JR. Business administrator and teacher, Tower Hill School, Wilmington, Del.; residence, 812 Blackshire Road, Wilmington.

Brown writes briefly: "After twenty-five years of the business world—New York, London, and primarily Philadelphia—and of the Navy, I have finally ended up in a secondary school, both as a teacher and business administrator, in which field I almost decided to start my career in 1926. I'll report further on teaching and school work at our Fiftieth."

From 1926 to 1942 Brown was with Henry W. Brown & Company of Philadelphia, of which he became vice-president. He was in Naval Intelligence for the next three years, stationed mostly in the 6th Naval District, and was retired with the rank of lieutenant. Following his release from service, he spent three years doing sales work for the Superior Tube Company of Collegeville, Pa., and was then actively associated with the Delta Manufacturing Company until 1950. He is still vice-president of the latter company, as well as of the Colonial Assurance Company of Philadelphia and the Tolethorpe Corporation of Philadelphia, although since September, 1950, he has been at the Tower Hill School. In 1950 he did graduate work at the School of Education at the University of Pennsylvania Summer School.

Brown was a vestryman of the Memorial Church of the Good Shepherd in Germantown from 1928 to 1940 and of St. Paul's Church, Chestnut Hill, from 1948 to 1950. He belongs to the Philadelphia Cricket Club and to four other Philadelphia clubs—the Racquet, Rittenhouse, Sunnybrook Golf, and Fourth Street.

On February 25, 1933, he was married in Philadelphia to Clementina Mackenzie, daughter of William Percival and Clementina Cissell Mackenzie. They have three children: Clementina Mackenzie, born December 19, 1933, Marian Harris on August 2, 1935, and Henry Ingersoll, 3d, on August 16, 1938. Clementina is a Junior at Milton Academy, and the two younger children go to the Tower Hill School.

HOWARD HAINES BROWN. Assistant educational director, Aetna Insurance Company, 650 Main Street, Hartford, Conn.; residence, 270 Bloomfield Avenue, Bloomfield, Conn.

Brown was an instructor at the Cathedral Choir School in New York City during 1926-27 and during the next two years was a bond salesman for the Bankers Trust Company of New York. Since then he has held various positions in the insurance field. His position as assistant educational director with Aetna (fire) dates from September, 1948. Brown is a lecturer at the Hartford College of Insurance of the University of Connecticut and a member of the American Association of University Teachers of Insurance.

His marriage to Jean Flick, daughter of John and Charlotte Roush Flick, took place on June 30, 1933 in Merchantville, N.J. They have three children, all of whom were born in Syracuse, N.Y., Howard Haines, 3d, on November 22, 1935, Helen Elizabeth on April 24, 1937, and Hilda on August 24, 1939. Howard is in the Class of 1953 at the Loomis School and Helen in the Class of 1955 at the Oxford School in Hartford.

He concludes with a brief comment, "I have been luckier than I deserve."

JAMES WAYNE BROWN. Address, Box 531, Douglas, Wyo.

MOREAU DELANO BROWN. Partner, Brown Brothers, Harriman & Company, bankers, 1531 Walnut Street, Philadelphia 2, Pa.; residence, 521 North Rose Lane, Haverford, Pa.

Brown spent the period from November, 1926, to May, 1928, as a "student" with three foreign firms—A. Sarasin & Company of Basle, Switzerland, the Dresdner Bank at Hamburg, Germany, and Mendelssohn & Company in Berlin. He then started with Brown Brothers & Company in New York and has since been associated with it and its successor firm, Brown Brothers, Harriman & Company, in New York until 1934 and since then in Philadelphia. He was admitted to partnership in February, 1939. He is a director of two other Philadelphia concerns, the Beaver Coal Corporation and the Fidelity Mutual Life Insurance Company, and also of the Pennsylvania Glass Sand Corporation and Subsidiaries of Lewistown, Pa., the Smith Park Realty Corporation of St. Paul, and of Baker & Williams, the Sun Indemnity Company, the Patriotic Insurance Company of America, and the Sun Underwriters, all of New York City.

Brown is a trustee of the Philadelphia-Baltimore Stock Exchange Gratuity Fund, a trustee and chairman of the finance committee of the American College for Girls at Istanbul, a trustee of the Moore Institute of Art, Science, and Industry of Philadelphia and a member of its finance committee, a member of the citizens' committee of Temple University, treasurer and a director of the Children's Aid Society of Pennsylvania, a director, vice-chairman of the finance committee, and chairman of the advanced gifts 1951 campaign of the Community Chest of Philadelphia and vicinity, chairman of the selected prospects 1951 campaign of the United Fund of Philadelphia, vice-president, trustee, and finance committee chairman of the Presbyterian Hospital a member of the committee on accounting and statistics of the Philadelphia Hospital Council, a director of the Haverford Civic Association, an elder of the Bryn Mawr Presbyterian Church, a board member and chairman of the finance and actuarial committees of the Board of Pensions of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A., a director and member of the finance committee of the Grenfell Association of America (treasurer, Philadelphia branch), and vice-commandore and treasurer of the Edgartown (Mass.) Yacht Club. In spite of all this, he has found time for a lot of work for Yale. He was treasurer of the Philadelphia Yale Club from 1935 to 1939, its president in 1940, and he has served on its enrollment and scholarship and undergraduate placement committees. He has represented the organization on the Alumni Board, of which he was second vice-chairman during 1947-48 and first vice-chairman the following year.

He married Alice Cordelia Barbour, daughter of Lucius Barnes Barbour, Yale '00, and Charlotte Cordelia Hilliard Barbour, in Hartford, Conn., October 8, 1927. They have two children: Alice Cordelia, born February 27, 1929, and Moreau Delano, Jr., on March 10, 1930, both in Orange, N.J. Alice has attended the Shipley and Walker schools and is now a Senior at Smith. Moreau, Jr., Yale '52, prepared for college at the Haverford School and St. Paul's.

"The answer to question 10 indicates that I have gotten myself tied up with an awful lot of extra-curricular activities which have limited my time for travel, etc." Brown says. "However, last year I satisfied a long-time ambition and became the owner of 34' cutter. I lived on it during my vacation, making my headquarters at Edgartown, Mass., and early this fall worked my way to the Chesapeake, where I have been enjoying week-ends during September and October.

"Outside of business and pleasure, the work I enjoyed as much as anything always has been in connection with various Yale activities, particularly the National Yale Placement Service, following the war, and my years on the Alumni Board, where I have had a chance to serve in a number of different capacities and on some very interesting committees."

NEIL WAGNER BROWN. Real estate appraiser and assistant, mortgage department, Union & New Haven Trust Company, 205 Church Street, New Haven, Conn.; residence, 241 Ridgewood Avenue, Hamden, Conn.

Brown went to work for the Union & New Haven Trust Company in July, 1926, and has been with them ever since, except during the period from February, 1938, to December, 1940, when he was a salesman for the Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance Company. In November, 1942, he enlisted in the Navy as storekeeper 2/c. After a period at the Newport Training Station, he was assigned to the Naval Aviation Cadet Selection Board in New York City and later to the U.S.S. Quincy. While serving on that ship, he participated in the Normandy and Southern France invasions. He was subsequently stationed at the Treasure Island Distribution Center in San Francisco and at the Naval Hospital at Shoemaker, Calif. He was discharged in May, 1945, as storekeeper disbursing 1/c.

Brown's marriage to Frances Magoon, daughter of Carl Stuart and Susan Adams Fowler Magoon, took place in Manchester, N.H., on June 20, 1942. They have had two children: Jonathan Neil, who was born on January 7, 1944, in Manchester, and Susan Frances, born July 11, 1947, in New Haven, who died the following October 20 in Waterbury, Conn.

GEORGE EUGENE BUCHANAN. Member, Mudge, Stern, Williams & Tucker, lawyers, 40 Wall Street, New York 5, N.Y.; residence, 240 Sylvania Place, Westfield, N.J.

Buchanan, who has been engaged in the practice of law with the above firm (formerly Rushmore, Bisbee & Stern) since his graduation from the Yale Law School in 1928, became a member of the firm in 1943. During his final year in law school he was editor-in-chief of the Law Journal. He was admitted to practice in New York in 1930 and is now specializing in tax law. He is a member of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York, the Yale and Lawyers clubs of New York, and the Westfield Tennis Club. He has taken part in various local fund raising activities in Westfield.

His marriage to Sarah Wood, daughter of James Longacre and Margaret Milner Wood, took place in Wynnewood, Pa., September 5, 1933. Mrs. Buchanan's home was in Philadelphia before she was married. Their daughter, Sarah Lindsay, who was born on July 1, 1934, in Bryn Mawr, Pa., is scheduled to enter college in the fall of 1951, following the completion of her Senior year at St. Mary's-in-the-Mountains, Littleton, N.H. George Eugene Buchanan, Jr., born May 4, 1937, in Westfield, is in junior high school.

"As to recreation, hobbies, etc." says Buchanan, "I have only recently had to give up tennis and turn to golf as more suitable to my advanced age. Am also taking up skiing in a mild way and haven't broken anything yet. Not much in the way of travel, which has been limited principally to vacation trips to the Adirondacks and Maine and an occasional drive through New England in the spring and fall, but still hope to get around to Switzerland and a couple of other spots before I am too old to enjoy them. I have a few power tools in the basement and from time to time turn out a piece of furniture. I still read a few books, enjoy listening to so-called good music on FM broadcasts and LP recordings, go to the theatre fairly often, the opera occasionally, and Gilbert and Sullivan whenever the D'Oyly Carte Company is in New York, and generally live the life of a suburban commuter."

WILLIAM JAY BUCKLEY. Address, 111 North Walnut Street, East Orange, N.J.

HENRY MILTON BULLARD, JR. Address, Colonial Road, Sachem's Head, Guilford, Conn.

EDWARD LATHROP BURKE, JR. Secretary-treasurer and general manager, Kent & Burke Company (livestock and farming), Genoa, Nebr.; residence, Genoa.

From Burke: "Oh 'Lord,' I would not write this if you did not insist, but anyway it fell to my lot, after my father's death in July, 1926, to come out to the small town of Genoa, Nebr., to try to learn and operate the livestock and ranching business, which had been his principal endeavor and to which I had not paid enough attention. I have been here ever since, but I am free to admit that there have been a good many times that I would have liked to be somewhere else. I soon found that there were even worse chefs in Genoa than those employed in Commons by our old enemy, Kellog, that the cattle market in those days seem to go down a lot more than it went up, that it was possible to have a seven-year drought in a country where the oldtimers boasted they had never seen a crop failure. Somehow our business survived those miserable Thirties when the grass dried up, the corn burned up, the grasshoppers moved in, and a great many people moved out to California or Oregon. Of course, it rained again, and times changed, and we have to worry about floods again in the summer and blizzards in the winter.

"Now I find myself wondering how twenty-five years could have passed with only one reunion to my credit—that is one of my regrets. Another is that we can't move our land to Texas, where they have oil and everything is much bigger and better. My ambition—I guess to have more time to hunt and fish where there are plenty of ducks and quail and lots of trout—what more could a man ask except larger limits?"

Burke was made secretary-treasurer and general manager of the Kent & Burke Company in 1928. He is also president of the Genoa Farm Equipment Company and executive vice-president of the Genoa National Bank.

His marriage to Eloise Grossnicklaus, daughter of Albert G. and Emma Abegglin Grossnicklaus, of Columbus, Nebr., took place on April 4, 1936, in Fullerton, Nebr. There are two boys in the family, both of whom were born in Omaha, Edward L., 3d, on February 24, 1937, and John Albert on November 30, 1946.

STILES BURPEE. Address, Southbury, Conn.

BENJAMIN BUTTERWORTH. Residence, 1300 31st Street Place, Moline, Ill.

Butterworth was with the John Deere Harvester Works at East Moline from 1927 to 1929, and again during 1934-35. From 1929 to 1934 he was with the Union Malleable Iron Works at East Moline and resumed his connection with them in 1935. He was associated with the John Deere Plow Works at Moline from 1942 to 1950. We assume that he is now retired, although he doesn't say so specifically. Until 1950 he was a director of Deere & Company.

Butterworth's marriage to Kathleen Wyckoff, daughter of C. R. and Emma McGee Wyckoff, took place in Buffalo, N.Y., on June 4, 1927. Their daughter, Kathleen, attended St. Katharine's School in Davenport, Iowa, and is now a member of the Class of 1952 at Mills College. Their son, William, born on September 23, 1935, goes to the Brooks School in North Andover, Mass.

WILLIAM BRINTON BUTZ. Address, 1411 Hamilton Street, Allentown, Pa.

NICHOLAS GUYOT CAMERON. Assistant director, research and statistical division, Licensed Beverage Industries, Inc. (public relations for alcoholic beverage industry), 155 East 44th Street, New York 17, N.Y.; residence, 103 Mercer Street, Princeton, N.J.

From 1926 to 1933 Cameron was with the New York Telephone Company, his work being in connection with central office management and traffic engineering. He studied at the Wharton Business School at the University of Pennsylvania during 1934 and for the next seven years was with Stevenson, Jordan & Harrison (trade association management) in New York and Philadelphia. He then became assistant to the general manager of the Glass Container Manufacturers Institute in New York and continued in that position through 1950. Since last February he has been with Licensed Beverage Industries, Inc.

Cameron, who was an R.O.T.C. graduate back in 1926 (second lieutenant, Field Artillery), had active duty training for several years. In July, 1942, he was ordered to active duty as a captain in the Army Air Force and went overseas the following month. He was with the 8th Air Force in England until January, 1944, and was then assigned to the 9th Air Force, with which he served in England and France for six months. He was subsequently assigned to the Troop Carrier Command in France until May, 1945, serving as provost marshal, defense officer, on courts martial, liaison officer, bomb officer, training officer primarily, accounting C.O., executive intelligence and supply—"generally all-around what-not." Cameron returned to the States in June, 1945. He has kept his commission in the Reserve and until May, 1951, was in charge of the Air Force filter center at Trenton, N.J.

He is a deacon of the First Presbyterian Church in Princeton and a member of the Pretty Brook Tennis Club of Princeton. A Republican county committeeman since last April, he says that his first ambition is to be a Senator and his second—not to be President. He adds that his hobby is keeping the garden in shape and that he has made and written speeches here and there for business purposes.

Cameron was married September 12, 1935, in New York to Katherine M. Rogers, daughter of Allen M. Rogers, Yale '98 S., and Marie K. Tobey Rogers. They have had four children: Katherine Rogers, who was born in Philadelphia August 14, 1936, and died in Ardmore the following September 22; Nicholas Allen, born in Philadelphia, January 6, 1939; Mary Anne, born in Philadelphia, September 13, 1940, who died in Sayre, Pa., July 19, 1945; and Gerard Guyot, who was born in Princeton, November 25, 1947.

TRUMAN WILDES CAMP. Professor of English, Texas Technological College, Lubbock, Texas; residence, 2611 25th Street, Lubbock.

"The fact that I have become a Connecticut Yankee transplanted in Texas for some twenty years has probably made a major change in the life of an otherwise typical conservative New Englander, for in Texas I found the 'gal' and later on our 'Texas-cowboy' son," says Camp. "True, we manage to return to the East Coast nearly every year for our summer vacation, and twice I got over to Europe to look around for a few weeks and have toured about this country a good deal. We live close enough to New Mexico to do a little skiing and roaming about the Indian country, but otherwise we are content to enjoy our wonderful West Texas climate—except the dust in the spring—and the friendly informality of college life at Texas Tech.

"I may have lowered our Class average in those statistics which demonstrate that the average Yale man earns X thousand dollars a year, is a director of Y corporations, has written Z books, and owns N yachts or homes, etc.; but I have been successful in following the career I dreamed about in the '26 Class Book and have had a happy—though probably uneventful—twenty-five years: no ulcers, no nervous breakdowns, one wife and son, most of my original hair and teeth, and a good deal of hard—and interesting—work.

"Right now most of my energy is directed to the development of a typical Texas institution—'the fastest growing college in West Texas with the largest campus in the world.' This year we are celebrating Tech's Silver Anniversary—Yale's 250th—so we have a long time to try to equal Yale's glorious record. But under the leadership of a Yale man as our president and with a member of '26 at the helm of the English Department, who knows—"

Camp did graduate work at Yale from 1926 to 1928, and again from 1931 to 1933 and during 1934-35; he took his Ph.D. in 1935. During the first period he taught at the Collegiate School in New Haven, and during 1934-35 he was an instructor in English at the Connecticut College of Commerce. The rest of the time has been spent in Texas, first as instructor in English at the University of Texas (1928-31—when he also took some graduate courses; 1933-34) and since 1935 at Texas Technological College, where he started as instructor and and is now head of the English Department. In 1950 he was elected vice-president of the Texas Conference of College Teachers of English. He is also a member of the South Central Modern Language Association, the American Association of University Professors (local chapter president, 1941-42), and the Questers and the After Dinner Forum of Lubbock. From 1937 to 1940 he served on the executive committee of the Tech College Y.M.C.A.

From July, 1942, to January, 1946, Camp was on active duty in the Army Air Force. He entered service with the rank of second lieutenant, graduated from O.T.S. at Miami Beach in August, 1942, and during the next four months was an instructor at the Ground School at Lubbock Army Air Field. He had a similar assignment at the Pampa Army Field from then until June, 1945, when he became information and education officer there. He subsequently served in the same capacity at Morris Field, Fla., and at Fairfield Suisun Field in California. He was promoted to first lieutenant in March, 1943, and to captain a year later.

He was married in New York City, August 1, 1940, to Virginia Chapman, daughter of Samuel J. and Pearl Woodward Chapman. Mrs. Camp's home was in Herrin, Ill., before her marriage. Their son, Roger Chapman, was born in Pampa, July 27, 1943.

PETER CAPRA. Executive director, Boys' Club of New York, 287 East 10th Street, New York 3, N.Y.; residence, 126 East 35th Street, New York 16.

"New York City is my 'beat' twelve months a year, five days a week," Capra explains. "All my time is given to youth work, both as a vocation and avocation. Late Friday afternoon until Monday morning I like to get away to the country with my family where I can enjoy my hobbies—gardening, reading, and country living."

Capra became executive director of the Boys' Club of New York in January, 1939, after serving as assistant director for some time. He is a trustee of the organization and also of the Boys' Clubs of America, Inc., and a member of the New York State Citizens Committee of One Hundred (for children and youth). He has served as president of the National Boys' Club Executives Association and the Metropolitan Boys' Club Workers Association and as treasurer of the New York City Baseball Federation. He belongs to the Boy's Club Associates and also to the Yale Club of New York.

Before entering the field of youth work, Capra had been a buyer for Abraham & Strauss of Brooklyn, divisional merchandise manager for Thalheimer's Department Store in Richmond, Va., and an executive of the Frank Pepe Food Products of Waterbury, Conn.

His marriage to Rose Pepe, daughter of Frank and Michela Vastola Pepe, took place in Waterbury in September, 1931. There are three children in the family: Frank, born June 26, 1932, in New York, Peter on July 9, 1935, also in New York, and Nina on October 15, 1938, in Waterbury. The older boy is a Yale Freshman. He graduated in 1950 from Andover, where Peter is now in the Class of 1953.

D. FRANK CARDEN, JR. Agent, Southwestern Life Insurance Company, 400 Southwestern Life Building, Dallas, Texas; residence, 4222 University Boulevard, Dallas.

Carden has been in the insurance business since graduation except for the period from February, 1943, to September, 1944, when he was on active duty in the Navy. In April, 1943, after boot training at the Naval Air Station at Quonset Point, he was ordered to Corpus Christi for permanent duty, with the rank of lieutenant. He served as air maintenance officer for Squadron 18A at the Naval Air Station there until his release to inactive duty. At present he ranks as lieutenant commander in the Naval Air Service ("inactive status").

Carden has served as president of the Dallas Branch of the English-Speaking Union of the United States, and he belongs to the Newcomen Society of England. He was married in Dallas on October 14, 1932, to Beatrice Virginia Bradshaw Bertrand, daughter of Edward and Dorothy Wyatt Bradshaw.

"About all I can tell you about myself in an informal manner is that twenty-five years after graduation I am still trying to pay my debts and taxes," Carden says. "I can manage the interest on the debts if I defer the taxes; I can pay the taxes and add the interest to the corpus, but it has been some years since I have been able to get both of them paid in the same calendar year. I long since abandoned the hope of paying anything on the principal of my debts.

"I still like to play golf, and my score runs from the low 80's into astronomical figures at times. I still like to participate in yacht races, but due to the aforementioned tax and interest problem have had to confine myself to very small yachts, Sea Gulls and Lightnings, for instance. I still like to fuss with Freddie Potts and do every year, by mail of course, over whether the College Plan at New Haven is acceptable or not. I hunt whenever I am able to find the time, which is not too infrequently, and I fish when forced to do so.

(My wife likes to fish, understand?) In addition to fishing, she sews, cooks, plays the piano, and makes what I regard as a wonderful home for me and my friends; in fact, she is much more successful at her job than I am at mine, I betcha!

"Although I have no children of my own, I have one nephew, age thirty, and he and his wife have presented me with one greatnephew, age three, and one greatniece, age one, and they are matters of considerable interest to me.

"That's about all there is to tell and who under the face of the sun, except my immediate family, would be interested in all this information I cannot imagine, but you asked for it and there it is."

WALTER BUGBEE CARLETON. Vice-president, Fahey, Clark & Company, investment bankers, 1737 Union Commerce Building, Cleveland, Ohio; residence, 19615 Scottsdale Boulevard, Shaker Heights, Ohio.

Carleton comments briefly, "Up to date I like: (1) living and working in Cleveland; (2) the investment business (believe-it-or-not)."

He has been in the investment banking business right along—with the Herrick Company (1926-30); Lee Higginson & Company (1930-31); Mitchell-Herrick & Company (1931-39); and Fahey, Clark & Company since then. He joined the latter company as vice-president on June 1, 1939. Carleton served as president of the Bond Club of Cleveland in 1947, and during 1949-50 he was a member of the executive committee of the northern Ohio group of the Investment Bankers Association.

His marriage to Edna E. Lewis, daughter of Edward and Bertha Morton Lewis, took place in New Haven on August 31, 1929. They have two children: Joan Lewis, born on April 25, 1934, and Robert Frederick on May 10, 1938, both at Shaker Heights. Joan is a high school Junior.

LAWSON AVERELL CARTER. Graduate student, Yale University; residence, 64 Hall Street, Hamden, Conn.

Carter, who graduated from the Harvard Law School in 1929 and was admitted to the New York State Bar the following year, was associated with the New York law firm of Larkin, Rathbone & Perry from 1929 to 1932. He studied playwriting at the Yale Drama School from 1933 to 1935 and since the war has been doing graduate work at Yale in preparation for teaching French and has also taught some Yale undergraduate courses on a part-time basis. In 1947 he took his M.A. in Romance languages.

Carter's war service covers the period from 1942 to 1945, and he was awarded the Commendation for Meritorious Service. He entered the Army as a private and left as technical sergeant. He belongs to the New York County Lawyers Association, the Modern Languages Association, the Yale Club of New York, the Racquet and Tennis Club of New York, and the New Haven Lawn Club.

His marriage to Edmée Petit, daughter of Edmé Anséric and Madeleine Jacot Petit, took place in New York City on November 21, 1930. Mrs. Carter's home was formerly at Châtel-Gérard, Yonne, France. They have two children: Françoise Isabelle, born October 23, 1931, in New York City, and Lawson Averell, Jr., born April 5, 1936, in New Haven. Isabelle is a member of the Class of 1953 at Smith, and Averell is at St. Mark's.

JOHN BERTRAM CARVALHO. Address, Metropolitan Fire Insurance Company, 33 Lewis Street, Hartford, Conn.

JOHN SEYMOUR CHAMBERLAIN. Life underwriter, Home Life Insurance Company; 110 William Street, New York 7, N.Y.; residence, 51-11 Concord Avenue, Great Neck, N.Y.

During the period from 1927 to 1940 Chamberlain was an investment consultant with New York firms—first with Wood, Struthers & Company until 1935, with Wood, White & Company for the next four years, and then with R. W. Pressprich & Company. Since July 1, 1940, he has been a life underwriter (analyst and consultant) with the Home Life Insurance Company. He was a vestryman of All Saints' Church at Great Neck from 1944 to 1946 and during 1948 and 1949 was president of the Lakeville Parent-Teachers Association in Great Neck.

Chamberlain's marriage to Margaret Elford Golson, daughter of Wilbert P. and Martha E. Carpenter Golson, of Bessemer, Ala., took place at Clinton Corners, N.Y., on August 25, 1933. There are four girls in the family, all of whom were born in New York City, Jane Seymour on December 22, 1935, Anne on February 22, 1938, Susan on November 15, 1944, and Cynthia on March 13, 1947.

ROBERT HALLOCK CHAMPLAIN. Address, 9 West 64th Street, New York 23, N.Y.

Choate graduated from the Harvard Law School in 1930 and was admitted to the New York Bar in 1931 and to practice before the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York three years later. He has been associated with Winthrop, Stimson, Putnam & Roberts since September, 1930, and was admitted to membership in the firm in January, 1940. He specializes in corporate and financial law, with particular reference to electric utilities. He is a member of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York and the American and New York State Bar associations. Since 1940 Choate has been a member of the Rye Zoning Board of Appeals.

His marriage to Marion D. Morgan, daughter of William A. and Marion N. Davis Morgan, of Buffalo, took place in Rye on April 24, 1941. They have had two children: Thomas A., born May 14, 1942, and Peter D., who was born on April 19, 1948, and died the following December 6. Both children were born in Port Chester, N.Y.

CARMINE GENEROSO CIPRIANO. Lawyer, 111 West Main Street, Waterbury, Conn.; residence, 806 Cooke Street, Waterbury.

Cipriano graduated from the Yale Law School in 1928 and was admitted to the Connecticut Bar that summer. In addition to his practice, which is general, with emphasis on probate and real estate law, he is an associate of the Waterbury Title Company. From 1940 to 1942 and again from 1944 to 1946 he served as clerk of the Waterbury City Court, and from 1936 to 1939 he had a connection with the legal department of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. He belongs to the University Club of Waterbury.

His marriage to Anna Marie Orlando, daughter of Louis A. Orlando, took place in Waterbury on January 22, 1934. They have three children, all of whom were born in Waterbury, Paul Louis on November 11, 1934, Aldo Orlando on September 24, 1937, and David Vincent on September 23, 1943. Paul is in his third year at the Crosby High School in Waterbury.

JOHN ANDREW LLWYD CLARK. Purchasing agent and supply manager, Bloomingdale Brothers (retail drygoods), 59th Street and Lexington Avenue, New York, N.Y.; residence, 76 Waterman Avenue, Rumson, N.J.

Clark spent the first three years after graduation as a buyer with Lord & Taylor in New York and from 1930 to 1943 was with Hahne & Company, a retail concern in Newark, N.J., for which he was adjustment manager for a time and later purchasing agent. From 1943 until taking his present position with Bloomingdale Brothers on February 6, 1950, he did production control work with the American Type Founders in Elizabeth, N.J. He belongs to the American Philatelic Society.

He was married in Maplewood, N.J., on February 24, 1934, to Margaret Alderson Stone, daughter of Francis Wayland and Frances Heath Stone. They have two children: Jean Llwyd, born January 24, 1935, and David Wayland on May 21, 1943, both in Orange, N.J.

CLEMENT COBB CLARKE. Physician, 240 Bradley Street, New Haven, Conn.; residence Amity Road, Woodbridge, Conn.

"When the Alumni Secretary asked those of us who had associations with more than one Class to specify the one we wished to be permanently associated with, I of course chose 1926," Clarke says. "1926 was the Class I started with and the one I spent the most time with. Illness caused me to drop out in the middle of my Junior year. I returned the following fall and spent one year with '27. Then a chance to go around the world caused me to drop back another year and to end up with a degree in 1928. The result was that my friends, Pete Bishop, Charlie Breck, and Russ Scobee, got out of Yale Medical School a couple of years ahead of 1932, when I graduated. After my five years of hospital training in New Haven and New York City I returned, in 1937, to New Haven to practice as an ophthalmologist. Since that time I have devoted a good share of my time to the Medical School and the New Haven Eye Clinic, in addition to carrying on a private practice to satisfy the demands of the butcher, the baker, and the tax collector.

"It is rather difficult to evaluate what has happened in the past twenty-five years. Perhaps seeing my daughter ride a hunter in Madison Square Garden the past two years, and at present seeing her get a big bang out of being a Smith Freshman are the biggest and best things that have happened to me. I continue to get a fair share of satisfaction out of my work: re-attaching a retina or removing a cataract doesn't happen every day, but does occur often enough to be rewarding. Helping youngsters with their crossed eyes and helping train the hospital residents in ophthalmology are perhaps my predominant interests. My four years in the Army, three years in this country and a year in the Pacific, were interesting and frustrating in the usual percentage.

"I've still got my good health and my good wife and hope to continue with same for several more reunions."

In addition to his Yale M.D., Clarke has the degree of D.M.S. from Columbia (1938). He had hospital training at the New Haven Hospital (in surgery) and at the Institute of Ophthalmology of the Presbyterian Hospital in New York, where he was a resident in ophthalmology. He has been on the faculty of the Yale Medical School since 1937, as an instructor and assistant clinical professor of ophthalmology, and is a member of the American Board of Ophthalmology and the American Academy of Ophthalmology and Otolaryngology. Clarke has contributed occasional articles to professional journals. He was chief of the eye section in various hospitals from July, 1942, to May, 1946, among them the Station Hospital at McDill Field, Tampa, Fla., the Northington General Hospital at Tuscaloosa, Ala., and several general hospitals in the Mariannas and Hawaiian Islands. He entered service as a major and was released with the rank of lieutenant colonel.

Clarke's marriage to Clare Ferguson, daughter of William McDonald and May Deems Ferguson, took place in New York City, December 22, 1928. Her home was formerly in Wellington, Kansas. Their daughter, Judith Deems, who was born in New Haven in 1933, prepared for Smith at the Prospect Hill School in New Haven.

EDWIN CLARENCE CLEVELAND. Address, Quinebaug, Conn.

ARTHUR HENRY CLIFT. Address, 136 Waverly Place, New York, N.Y.

CHARLES ASA CLOUGH. Address, 821 South 2d Street, Springfield, Ill.

JAMES BEACH CLOW. Vice-president, James B. Clow & Sons, manufacturers of cast iron pipe and fittings, etc., and wholesale dealers in plumbing and heating supplies, 201-299 North Talmon Avenue, Chicago 80, Ill.; residence, 1550 North Green Bay Road, Lake Forest, Ill.

Clow, who has been with James B. Clow & Sons since graduation, has been a director of the company since September, 1928, and vice-president since February, 1940. He has been on the board of the Eddy Valve Company of Waterford, N.Y., and of the Iowa Valve Company of Oskaloosa, Iowa, since 1949 and president of both concerns since May 1950. At the present time he is first vice-president and a trustee of St. Luke's Hospital, Chicago, and a director of the Welfare Council of Metropolitan Chicago. He was formerly president of the North Side Boys' Clubs and the Council of Social Agencies and vice-chairman of the Lower North Community Council. He served as president of the Yale Club of Chicago during 1942-43, is at present on the board of governors of the Casino Club, and belongs also to the Racquet and Chicago clubs and to the Onwentsia and Shoreacres clubs in Lake Forest.

In October, 1942, Clow was commissioned a lieutenant in the Naval Reserve and from then until May, 1944, served as assistant officer in charge of the outgoing unit at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station. He spent the following year at the Receiving Station at Pearl Harbor as officer in charge of the enlisted personnel for transfers to and from the Pacific area, and from July to October, 1945, was assistant in the Internal Trade Branch, Trade and Commerce Division, U.S. Group Control Council, in Berlin. He was then released to inactive duty with the rank of lieutenant commander, to which he had been promoted the previous July.

On February 15, 1930, he was married in Chicago to Edith Louise Newcomet, daughter of Horace Edgar and Ella Louise Worthington Newcomet. Mrs. Clow lived in Cleveland before her marriage. They have two children, both of whom were born in Chicago, Nancy Newcomet on June 28, 1932, and James Culbertson on September 17, 1935. Nancy, who graduated from Farmington in 1950, is a Freshman at Vassar. Jim is in the Class of 1953 at St. Paul's.

HARRY WILLIAM COFRANCES. With Barnes, Bodell & Goodwin, Inc. (investments), 257 Church Street, New Haven, Conn.; residence, 46 Starr Street, New Haven 11.

Cofrances, who received his LL.B. at Yale in 1929, returned to the Law School in 1948 to take some courses in federal taxation. He was admitted to practice in Connecticut in July, 1929, and before the U.S. District Court in the District of Connecticut in 1949. He was in the law office of Alling, Webb & Morehouse in New Haven during 1929 and then became connected with the Security Insurance Company of New Haven in the administrative, claims, and financial end. He remained with them until 1941 and the following year was with Chas. W. Scranton & Company, an investment banking firm in New Haven.

In November, 1942, Cofrances was inducted into the Army as a private. After a brief stay at Fort Devens he was assigned to the San Francisco Port of Embarkation and subsequently was at Fort Mason, where his functions were in connection with the Transportation Corps and the Logistics and Statistics Section of the Control Division. He ended up as port historian, preparing an historical narrative of the port activities. At the time of his separation from service in July, 1945, he ranked as staff sergeant.

During 1948-49 he was again with Chas. W. Scranton & Company and since March, 1949, he has been associated with Barnes, Bodell & Goodwin, Inc. He also does some independent work in law, taxation, etc. He belongs to the New Haven County and Connecticut Bar associations and the Amity Club of New Haven. He is currently serving as secretary of the latter and as chairman of its scholarship committee, which to date has awarded scholarships to three Yale Seniors living in the greater New Haven area. Cofrances has been active in the work of the New Haven Community Chest.

He sends us "just a few rambling remarks: My forte seems to be traveling, which sort of comes natural when one is unattached, maritally speaking. In 1936 I made an unrehearsed trip to Europe, no hotel reservations, etc., just moving from one place to another—a few days in London, Oxford, Brighton, Stratford-on-Avon, and near-by points—a plane to Paris—on to Switzerland for a couple of days—then to Italy—Stresa, Milan, Venice, Bologna, Florence, Rome, Naples, Capri, and several small towns near Benevento—these towns being the home of ancestral spirits. Must not overlook the pilgrimage to Fano on the Adriatic made famous by Billy Phelps (and Browning's 'The Guardian Angel'), said pilgrimage being essential to membership in Billy's Fano Club (incidentally what has become of it?). Other voyages have carried me from Halifax to Victoria and Vancouver. My three years' stay in San Francisco during the war made me a 'native son' by adoption, and this relationship continues by annual treks to San Francisco, usually around Christmas time. If you don't find me in New Haven, please check in at 36 Ventura Avenue (Forest Hills Section), San Francisco. Though not married, I've acquired three godchildren in San Francisco (including one who will be formally sponsored on my forthcoming visit this coming Christmas). See what the war did for me. In connection with my military duties in S.F., unofficial activities usually included attending the monthly luncheon meetings of the Yale alumni at the University Club.

"Other hobbies: Yale football. I've missed few home games since 1920 and have seen our team in action from Cambridge to Baltimore and Chicago and part of our team in the East-West Game, January 1, 1948, when Odell coached the East team.

"Also music—concerts, symphonies and opera, the latter of which especially, I absorbed a good deal at the S.F. Opera during the war years. (P.S. These were important extra-curricular functions during the memorable days at Fort Mason.)

"Wonder if others get the kick out of our annual party at the Westchester-Biltmore that I do, adding a bit each year to the knowledge of classmates. Why not a get-together in New Haven during the winter time—say on Alumni Day, February 22.

"Regrets, hopes, ambitions—we all have them. One of my greatest satisfactions is in just being one of Yale's sons. It's a source of great personal pleasure being close to Yale, crossing the Old Campus day in and day out, sharing the many activities that the University provides or is responsible for bringing here, browsing in the Library, etc. One of my keenest regrets—not having lived on campus during undergraduate days."

WILLIAM WARREN COGAN. Secretary and general manager, Edward Williams Lumber Company, Canton, Ohio; residence, 3726 Darlington Road, Canton.

Cogan, who has been a partner in the Edward Williams Lumber Company for some time, has served in the capacity of secretary and general manager since 1946. He had previously been sales manager for the Dura Products Manufacturing Company, assistant to the president of the Shanafelt Manufacturing Company, superintendent of the cold drawn steel division of the Rotary Electric Steel Company of Detroit, and foreman of the cold drawn steel division of the Western Automatic Company of Elyria, Ohio. At the present time he is president of the Priest River Lumber Company of Priest River, Idaho, and Grants Pass, Oregon.

Cogan's marriage to Eva Louise Reemsnyder, daughter of John Reemsnyder, took place in Canton on June 9, 1934.

LOUIS HAROLD COHEN. Physician, 40 Trumbull Street, New Haven, Conn.; residence, 121 Hartford Turnpike, Hamden, Conn.

Cohen, whose practice is limited to psychiatry and neurology, took an M.A. at Yale in 1927, a Ph.D. in 1929, and an M.D. in 1931. He was at the New Haven Hospital from 1931 to 1933, first as an interne and then as assistant resident psychiatrist, and the following year was a National Research Council fellow in neurology. He then went to London to work for a year as clinical assistant at Guy's Hospital. From 1935 to 1939 he was senior research psychiatrist at the Worcester (Mass.) State Hospital, and he was subsequently clinical director of the Manteno (Ill.) State Hospital (1939-40); assistant professor of psychiatry at the University of Illinois College of Medicine (1939-40); clinical director of the Norwich (Conn.) State Hospital (1940-45); associate professor of psychology at the University of Connecticut (1941-45) and at Wesleyan (1941-43). He was also an assistant clinical professor of psychiatry at Yale from 1942-47 and associate clinical professor the following year.

Cohen has had some sixty-five articles published in various professional journals. He is a member of the American Medical Association, the American Psychiatric Association, the American Academy of Neurology, the New England Society of Psychiatry, the Connecticut Society of Psychiatry and Neurology, and the Connecticut State Psychological Society. In 1938 he became a diplomate of the American Board of Psychiatry and Neurology.

He was married in New Haven, November 26, 1930, to Sylvia Dante Nathanson, daughter of Samuel Jacob Nathanson (LL.B. Yale 1902) and Lillian Dante Nathanson. Their older son, Jonathan Samuel, who was born in Worcester, October 9, 1936, is preparing for college at Hopkins Grammar School in New Haven. The other children are: James Nathaniel, born September 29, 1941, in Norwich, and Elizabeth Lillian Dante, born May 9, 1945, in New Haven.

HENRY CONNICK COKE, JR. Partner, Coke & Coke, lawyers, 1405 First National Bank Building, Dallas, Texas; residence, 5526 De Loache Avenue, Dallas.

Coke has been with the above firm since graduating from the Yale Law School in 1929, except for three months in the early part of 1942, when he was in the General Counsel's Office of Lend-Lease in Washington and later while on active duty as a major in the Air Force. He was overseas for two years. He served as intelligence officer with the 7th Bombardment Group (H) in the C.B.I. theatre and was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross, the Bronze Star Medal, and the Air Medal; he has two campaign stars for Pacific theatre duty.

Coke, who carries on a general civil practice, was admitted to practice some years ago before the Supreme Court of Texas, the Supreme Court of the United States, and the Tax Court. He is a director of the First National Bank in Dallas and during 1941-42 served as president of the Dallas Symphony Society. He belongs to the Texas and American Bar associations.

He was first married on June 21, 1927, in Dallas, to Ethel Townsend, daughter of Murphy W. and Ethel Randall Townsend. They were divorced in 1947. His second marriage, to Agnes Pyne, daughter of M. Taylor and Agnes Landon Pyne, of Dallas, took place in Alexandria, Va., May 18, 1948. His son, Henry C., 3d, who was born in New Haven on September 6, 1928, graduated from Yale in 1950 and is now at the Michigan Law School. His daughter, Nancy Townsend, born December 24, 1930, in Dallas, is at Southern Methodist University.

"Doing better every day," Coke announces. "Am working hard, giving off a great deal of heat and practically no light, and making no money. My only ambition is to live a long time under existing conditions. Prospects at present are good, unless I am suddenly drowned while operating a small cruiser on Lake Texoma, not far from here."

HORACE WELLINGTON COLE. Secretary, Boston Safe Deposit & Trust Company, 100 Franklin Street, Boston, Mass.; residence, 171 Church Street, Weston 93, Mass.

"Following graduation I took a job I swore I never would and tramped the streets of Boston selling bonds until 1929," Cole says. "The principle of investment counseling intrigued me very much, and I left the bond business and entered investment counseling the day after, believe it or not, Labor Day, 1929. Although the firm I was with survived the Great Depression, the situation was so grim in the summer of 1932 that many of us were relieved of our responsibilities in that office and sought other means of livelihood. Plushy jobs were not plentiful those days, if your recollection of mid-1932 is as keen as mine. In the autumn I joined the real estate department of the Boston Safe Deposit & Trust Company, starting at the bottom. The bank has been my business home ever since. I have had sundry responsibilities and at present am in charge of our custodian department and at the same time am secretary [since April, 1948] of the company.

"A brief family history would include my marriage October 21, 1927, to Charlotte Fawcett, and the birth of our daughter, Deborah, in 1930 and our son, Herbert, in 1935. We are a happy family, and I am exceedingly proud of all members and consider myself fortunate indeed. As a family we have been active in church and community affairs—often we thought too active. A recent move to Weston, a little further into the country, has cut this back to a large extent, and I confess to enjoying the freedom. From time to time we have spent the summer at a simple North Shore summer place called Annisquam, where we have found congenial friends, plenty to do, particularly on the water, and which is conveniently close enough to Boston for daily commuting. Until last fall I have played tennis and golf only occasionally, but hope to sharpen up the latter materially from now on and aim to play a respectable middle-age game.

“Ordinarily a reasonable facsimile of an optimist, I am too pessimistic about the national and international situation to wish to comment further than to say I am fearful that the infection of inflation, a lack of integrity of men in high office, and the ever broadening and now widespread greedy attitude of getting something for nothing, if you can get away with it, will eventually run this country into socialism or worse, unless some crusader, not yet apparent on the horizon, comes forward to set the masses on fire, bringing this country out of its present sorrowful state to a place of real world leadership, where it should be. Sorry to be so dismal, and I sincerely hope I am very wrong.”

The security concerns with which Cole was connected from 1926 to 1929 were Coffin & Burr, Inc., Graham Parsons & Company—and the investment counsel firm, Eaton & Howard, Inc. He is a member of the corporation and a trustee of the Institution for Savings in Roxbury, Mass., has been a vestryman of Grace Episcopal Church, Newton, since 1940, and for five and a half years, beginning in February, 1941, served in the Massachusetts State Guard.

Mrs. Cole is the daughter of Frederick John and Henrietta S. Moody Fawcett. Their marriage took place in Newton, and both children were born there, Charlotte Deborah on August 15, 1930, and Herbert M. on April 15, 1935. Deborah, who graduated from the Beaver Country Day School in 1948 and from Briarcliff Junior College in 1950, is now teaching the first grade at the Brooks School, a small private school in Concord. Cole mentioned that she was to be married on June 23, 1951, to John B. French, Williams '51. Herbert is in his first year at Andover and enjoying it immensely.

ROSWELL STRONG COLES. Director, Staten Island Institute of Arts and Sciences, 146 Stuyvestant Place, Staten Island 1, N.Y.; residence, 37 Ellicott Place, Staten Island 1.

Coles' first sentence strikes a familiar note. "It doesn't seem possible to have achieved the hoary old-grad age, but here it is." He goes on, "The most important physical change seems to have been the conversion of a head of hair into—well, what's left isn't gray anyhow. Also I am buying longer belts, probably from muscular development, it couldn't be the beer could it?"

"The past twenty years have been spent doing educational work in Staten Island, which is one of the boroughs of New York City and about as much like the rest of the city as East Rock is to downtown New Haven. In a sense it has been sort of pioneering (don't tell any one around here that) and has about as many difficulties and rewards as any other sort of pioneering. And if it isn't getting anywhere or isn't worth it, this is a hell of a time to find it out. I had better remain in ignorance.

"At any rate, I haven't much to complain about and a good many things to be thankful for. This sort of work never did make any one rich, but I've managed to stay out of jail, so far, which is more than some of my friends have done. We've done quite a lot of traveling around the country and seen a good deal, and my wife made the mistake one year of giving me one of those 35 mm. cameras that take colored slides. Whether it's a hobby or luxury is another question.

"Right now I am in the process of doing research on older adults (that's me—and thee, too!), which I hope will be useful not only for the community but will finish up a doctor's degree which has been in abeyance for nearly fifteen years. After that I am going to get caught up on some Wild West reading I have been neglecting for too long and see a few shows before my eyes grow too dim to tell the girls from the scenery and vice versa."

The museum of which Coles has been director since 1941 carries on community activities to further an interest in the arts and sciences, particularly as they relate to Staten Island. He had been curator there during the previous two years and before that was for ten years head of the Social Sciences Department at the Staten Island Academy. He received a certificate at the American Academy in Rome in 1930 and an M.A. at Teachers College, Columbia University, in 1932. Coles has been editor of the Staten Island Historian since 1939, and he edited the Proceedings of the Staten Island Institute of Arts and Sciences from 1939 to 1949 and the Museum Bulletin from 1941 to 1948. To date he has contributed sixteen articles to these publications.

He is chairman of the education committee of the Staten Island Chamber of Commerce, a member of the board of directors of the Community Welfare Council, and during 1949-50 served as chairman of the Borough President's Committee for Community Development. He belongs to the Rotary Club of Staten Island (president, 1947 and 1948), the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the American Association of Museums, and the Classical Society of the American Academy. During World War II he was a first lieutenant in the 9th Regiment, New York National Guard.

On January 18, 1930, he was married in Ardmore, Pa., to Pearl Darelus Lewis, daughter of John J. and Alice Lewis, of Eugene, Oregon. Their children were both born in Staten Island, Roswell Strong, Jr., on October 7, 1933, and Janet Lewis on December 31, 1937. They go to the Staten Island Day School.

RODERIC GREENE COLLINS. Partner, Seeley & Lindley, brokers, 61 Broadway, New York, N.Y.; residence, Woodside Avenue, Westport, Conn.

Collins, who is a member of the New York Stock Exchange, has been a partner in Seeley & Lindley for some time. For a while after graduation he was engaged in accounting. He belongs to the Zeta Psi Club of New York.

His marriage to Jessie Owen, daughter of Raymond M. and Jessie Carson Owen, took place in Pelham, N.Y., on May 15, 1929. Their son, Roderic G., Jr., was born on February 24, 1935, and their daughter, Sally Elizabeth, on February 21, 1939, both in New York City.

WALLACE GREEN COLLINS. Engaged in managing his own investments; residence, 1551 Shenandoah Drive, Seattle 2, Wash.

"I'll start off by saying that after twenty years of married life, I am still very much in love with my wife, and my only regret is that I don't have a pair of good healthy sons to send to Yale, but one can't have everything"—thus Collins.

"As for trips," he says, "we went to Honolulu on our honeymoon for three weeks; October, 1934, San Francisco to New York on the Grace Line S.S. Santa Rosa, saw Yale take Princeton, 7-0, with odds 5 to one against the Bulldogs—sat in front of Matt Plum; November, 1937-April, 1938, in Europe—France, Italy, Switzerland, three months' skiing in Austrian Tyrol; 1938-40, skiing at Sun Valley two to three weeks in February—saw Phil Hardy in 1939; 1948, La Jolla, Calif., in May to middle of June at the Beach Club; 1949, La Jolla in March.

"As for hobbies, played squash racquets and tennis until 1946—also skiing and golf, along with swimming and some salmon fishing. Present interests are golf, swimming, and salmon fishing.

"Built a house in 1940 in a nice district, and expect we will stay in same until the great day comes. Same is still free of mortgage, etc. Bought a place on Sandy Point, located on Whidbey Island, in 1946 which we remodeled and which is now our summer place for June, July, and August. This is where I do my salmon fishing with the aid of a sixteen-foot boat and an inboard motor.

"My regrets: that I live so far away from Yale, and I would like to have stayed in the brokerage business, but Franklin fixed that up for me. My main ambition is to make our 1951 Reunion, and I hope there will be no all-out war to prevent this."

From 1929 to 1932 Collins was a local trader and order clerk with E. A. Pierce & Company in New York and the following year a margin clerk with Logan & Bryan. In 1935 he became a partner in the International Fur Exchange

Company, and during 1936-37 he was a partner in the Klickitat Sales Corporation, distributors of a natural mineral water. From 1939 to 1941 he was a partner and also production manager of Addisplay, Inc., manufacturers of mats for use in food advertisements, and from 1942 to 1945 was a general inspector for the Renton Division of the Boeing Aircraft Company—and at this time was, “not through choice but force of circumstances,” a member of the International Machinists Union, Local No. 751. Collins served as president of the Seattle Squash Racquets Club from 1935 to 1940. He is also a member of the Quarterbacks Club of the University of Washington, the Seattle Tennis and Golf clubs, the University Club, and the Washington Athletic Club.

His marriage to Meda Hulbert, daughter of William Marion and Armeda Lyons Hulbert, took place in Everett, Wash., on April 23, 1930.

EDWIN TRUMAN COMAN, JR. Librarian, University of California, Riverside, Calif.; residence address, Box 527, Route 4, Riverside.

Coman reports as follows: “After graduation I followed the family tradition and lent my talents to the commercial banking field, starting at the bottom with the American Trust Company. Despite the fact that I came from a long-lived family, my progress in this field after two and a half years indicated that I probably would not live long enough to become president of the bank. After leaving this job, my wife and I set out to see the world on a delayed honeymoon. We spent ten months going around the world. During this trip we acquired a first-hand acquaintance with Shigason, Bangkok, Sokoebomi, and other out-of-the-way spots, in addition to the principal cities of the Orient and Europe.

“Upon my return to the United States, I spent another two and a half years in investment banking. Strangely enough, this business was somewhat effected by conditions in the early 1930’s and I turned to other ways of gaining a livelihood. I had always been interested in books and research and decided to train for library work. A brief interlude [1933-35] at the Claremont Colleges Library was followed by fifteen years as director of the Graduate School of Business Library at Stanford University. This library was built up from scratch to the second best library of its kind in the country. In 1951 I am undertaking a new adventure in building the University of California Library at Riverside, literally from the ground up—planning the building, selecting the book stock, and hiring my staff.

“My time during the past fifteen years has been well occupied in writing and developing my library. In addition to two books, I have published a number of short articles. At present I am working on the second edition of my first book. I have managed to work in the teaching of two courses each year along with my library administration. My occupation-avocation has been delving into the history of business in California. I have been collecting histories of business firms and biographies of business men. I have also collected the original records of early California business firms for the library.

"Other hobbies have been ornithology and gardening—I have maintained a strictly amateur standing in both."

Coman's second banking connection was with Dean Witter & Company in San Francisco. During the latter part of the time that he was at Stanford he had an appointment as assistant professor of business history. He has served as first vice-president and president of the California Library Association, as president of its Golden Gate district, and as a member of the library standards committee and chairman of the constitutional revision committee. He has also been president and a member of several committees of the San Francisco Bay region chapter of the Special Libraries Association, was a member of the library advisory committee of the American Library Association in 1947, and chairman of the Far Western regional planning committee during 1948-49. He belongs to the Economic History Association, the Pacific Coast Economic Association, the American Association of University Professors, and the Business Historical Society, and he served on the Diocesan Commission on College Work (Diocese of California) from 1947 to 1950 and on the board of the Church Society for College Work from 1947 to 1949. Coman received a certificate in librarianship at the University of California in 1933 and an M.A. at Claremont in 1934. His book, Sources of Business Information (Prentice-Hall, 1949), won the 1949 Special Libraries Association Award for the most outstanding contribution to special librarianship in that year. Time, Tide and Timber: A Century of Pope and Talbot was published by the Stanford University Press in 1949.

He entered the Army Air Force as a first lieutenant in 1943 and was released in 1945 with the rank of captain. He was stationed at Las Vegas Army Air Field in Nevada, serving first as base classification officer and then as base personnel officer, in which capacity he was responsible for the assignment, promotion, shipment, and all personnel matters affecting the 13,000 officers, enlisted men and women, and civilians on the base.

He was married February 23, 1928, in Stanford to Evelyn Buckingham Brownell, daughter of William Baldwin and Lallie Buckingham Brownell.

HARRY STANTON CONNABLE. Address, Box 280, China Lake, Calif.

MARCELLUS JOSEPH CONNOR. President, Ashawog River Mills, Inc. (woolen piece goods—wholesale and retail), Groton, Conn.; residence, 4 Prospect Street, Mystic, Conn.

Connor writes: "For fifteen years, while working for the treasury department of Warner Brothers Theatres, we never lived more than two years in any one place—these places all in the Middle West, South, and Southwest. By the time that Michael, the older boy, had reached the ripe age of six he had already attended six schools in five different states.

"It was time to anchor some place, so an interest was purchased in a woolen mill, later to a full purchase—then the Depression (probably limited to woolen mills only) immediately following the end of the war, with its decision to sell the machinery while prices were still high. The corporation sells some of its goods now, as well as those of other corporations.

"General health, good, condition good, about two years before the middle-age spread."

Before going with Warner Brothers, Connor worked for the Western Union Telegraph Company for a time. He has been president of the Ashawog River Mills, Inc., since January, 1947. He is an amateur artist, but hasn't won any prizes as yet, he says.

His marriage to Elma M. Rooms, daughter of Theodore M. and Hortense M. Boyle Rooms, of Chicago, took place at Spring Valley, N.Y., on June 10, 1937. Michael, their oldest son, was born in New Jersey on October 12, 1938, and Paul in Ohio on February 3, 1943.

PHILIP CONNORS. Raising horses and short horns; address, Bolinvar Farm, Middleburg, Va.

Connors, in addition to raising race horses, hunters, and registered milking Shorthorns on his farm in Middleburg, is running several trusts and has been a director of the Middleburg National Bank for the past three years. From 1923 to 1934 he was assistant vice-president of the Prudence Bonds Corporation, and he was subsequently associated with James H. Oliphant & Company. In 1924 he graduated from Babson Institute. He has served for five years on the Loudoun County Zoning Board of Appeals and was a director of the Middleburg Community Center in 1949 and of the Middleburg Milking Shorthorn Association during 1949-50. During World War II Connors was a first sergeant in the Virginia State Guard and aircraft recognition officer for the county. He has been secretary-treasurer and a governor of the Middleburg Hunt for seven years, and he belongs to the Boone and Crockett Club and the Yale Club.

He was married on September 12, 1939, in Old Westbury, Long Island, to Constance S. Regan, daughter of Thomas J. and Aurora Sala Regan. Her home before her marriage was in New York City. They have two children: Philip Regan, born on August 17, 1940, in New York City, and Patricia Sala, born on April 19, 1943, in Washington, D.C.

"My wife and I have made two big game trips to British Columbia," Connors says. "Last summer we took the children to England, Scotland, and France. Shot grouse at Tulcahn, Grantown-on-Spey, Scotland. Eight guns killed 1,300 grouse in six days. The best horse we have raised so far was 'War Date,' who won about $150,000 for Main Chance Stable (Elizabeth Arden), who bought her from us at the Keenland, Ky., spring sales.

"I killed two black bear in Arizona in 1949 with bow and arrow, hunting with the Lee brothers and their famous pack of hounds. William West, Jr., of Middleburg, killed another."

CHARLES PARSONS COOLEY, JR. Senior partner, Cooley & Company, security brokers and underwriters, 100 Pearl Street, Hartford 4, Conn.; residence, 18 Westwood Road, West Hartford 5.

Cooley worked for the Hartford National Bank & Trust Company during 1926-27, was with Thomson, Fenn & Company, brokers, for the next three years, and with Francis R. Cooley & Company from 1930 until 1934. Since then he has held his present position. He is a director of the Connecticut General Life Insurance Company, Aetna Insurance, the Century Indemnity Company, the Standard Fire Insurance Company of New York, and the World Fire & Marine Insurance Company.

"I have served in many positions with a number of the community of Hartford philanthropic and social institutions," Cooley says. "This includes work on the vestry of my church, Community Chest, relief agencies, as president of the Family Service Society and the Connecticut Children's Aid Society, and in an advisory capacity to many other of the social and relief agencies, including the Hartford Hospital. To enumerate them would take too long, but to evaluate them I wish there were more hours in the day."

He belongs to the Hartford Club, the Hartford Golf Club (has been a director and chairman of the house committee of both), the Yale Club of New York, and several hunting, fishing, or social clubs.

He married Adelaide Frances Eberts, daughter of Edmund Melchior and Muriel Beatrice Howard Eberts, in Montreal on June 25, 1930. They have four boys, all of whom were born in Hartford, Samuel Porter on July 7, 1931, Timothy Cooley on October 7, 1934, David Eberts on December 14, 1937, and Robert Howard on April 23, 1945. Timothy is in the Class of 1952 at St. Paul's. Samuel, who graduated there in 1949, is now a Sophomore at Yale.

In answering our question 21, Cooley said, "Having come this far, one hope, at least, has been realized—that I am reaching the end of this questionnaire, but the one which I have always cherished and still remains an ambition—namely to retire at the early age of fifty while in the prime of life—seems as far away as it did twenty-five years ago.

"Having lived in Hartford all my life and at one time right next to the early beginnings of the United Aircraft Corporation, I often wonder why, when I see the size to which that corporation has grown, I should have selected the brokerage business in which to make a career. Being too dumb to get out,

I have remained with it and all the questionable blessings which it has received from the New Deal and the presently rampant Fair Deal. Some of these blessings are not uncounted, as they have provided periods of enforced quiet and relaxation in business, and this has given me a chance to indulge in some of the things that I like to do, especially hunting, fishing, and being outdoors and enjoying most sports.

"Never having had a flair for exploring much, other than Paris bars and night clubs in the late Twenties when most of us went to see such things in Europe, my travels have been unspectacular. All of them have been most enjoyable and, particularly so recently, as they have been in connection with either visits to friends or participating in various hunting and fishing trips which have led from the marshes of North Carolina to the prairies of the Dakotas and hills of Wyoming, the banks of many Canadian fishing streams, and the Atlantic Coast, where I enjoy casting for striped bass, taking pictures, and interesting my children in growing up to be Yale men.

"Having elected to be registered as a Republican, my regrets have been numerous during the past twenty-five years and, in particular, that I did not try to be a Democrat. If I had, I would, at least, have had much more fun voting.

"The only other regret I can think of is that I have not seen more of so many of you for so long. Reunions come too seldom, and it is my greatest hope that our paths will cross more often in the future than they have in the past. If you come to Hartford, I would love to hear from you and have a reunion of our own."

FORD HILLIARD COOPER. Architect, 69 Newbury Street, Boston, Mass.; residence, 82 Pinckney Street, Boston.

"If it weren't for the war, I suppose I would still be in Connecticut," Cooper says. "At any rate, it resulted in my not knowing what to do when my discharge came in 1946, and after a brief interlude in New York in the real estate business, I came to Boston for almost the first time in my life, was charmed by the scenery at least, and bought an old house on the Hill. Gradually I've settled in, and now own, besides a house in town, a place in Manchester within sound of the ocean surf, and see no immediate prospect of leaving the vicinity. Oddly enough, I still think I like Hartford best, but for some reason I stay on. Perhaps it's still the novelty of a different city and new faces.

"I am practicing architecture when clients give me the opportunity of so doing, and in general leading an uneventful life. I have never married, and having reached this stage of life single, I have not great expectations of changing that condition."

Cooper graduated from the Yale School of Architecture in 1930 with the degree of B.F.A. and was employed by James Gamble Rogers, Inc., in New York City until 1934, when he opened his own office in Hartford. In January, 1942, he was asked to help as architect in the expansion program of the U.S. Submarine Base at New London. The following September he was drafted into the Army and, after basic training at Atlantic City and at Goldsboro and Greensboro, N.C., attended the Officers' Candidate School at Miami Beach, where he graduated in June 1943. He was stationed at the Army Air Field at San Bernardino, Calif., until January, 1946, when he was discharged with the rank of captain. He served the entire time in the Post Engineer's Office, with the usual extra duties.

Cooper, who belongs to the American Institute of Architects, was awarded its medal some years ago. He is also a member of the Boston Society of Architects, and he served as a director of the Hartford County Y.M.C.A. in 1934 and as its treasurer from 1936 to 1945. He illustrated and helped edit Old Inns of Connecticut, published in 1940 by the Colonial Dames of America.

JAMES WAYNE COOPER. Partner, Gumbart, Corbin, Tyler & Cooper, lawyers, 205 Church Street, New Haven 9, Conn.; residence, Clarke Road, Woodbridge, New Haven 15.

Cooper graduated from the Yale Law School in 1929 and, after a year as law clerk with the Honorable Learned Hand and Thomas W. Swan, was an instructor at the Law School until 1932. He then joined his present firm as a law clerk and on July 1, 1935, was admitted to partnership. He says that his practice is a general one, although he knows more about and does more with corporation and business law, wills, estates, and taxation. He served as vice-president of the New Haven County Bar Association during 1946-48 and as president the following year, and he has been assistant secretary-treasurer and secretary-treasurer of the State Bar Association, counsel or adviser for a number of charitable organizations, such as the Visiting Nurse Association and the Family Service of New Haven, and a grand juror and justice of the peace in Woodbridge. Cooper is at present secretary of the New Haven Foundation, counsel to the Anna Fuller Fund, and a director of the New Haven Community Chest and the local chapter of the American Red Cross, as well as of the Stanley Works (New Britain), the Second National Bank of New Haven, the New Haven Savings Bank, and the Whitney Blake Company of Hamden. He is secretary of the last named and also of the Greist Manufacturing Company of New Haven. During the war he was a member of the Woodbridge Ration Board and active in other civilian war work.

He was married June 26, 1929, in Hartford, Conn., to Louise Bancroft Field, daughter of Francis Elliott and Anna Dunning Field. Their daughter, Field, who was born in New Haven on April 14, 1931, is a Junior at Radcliffe, and the older boy, James Nicholl, born October 5, 1935, in New Haven, is in the Class of 1952 at Westminster. The younger boy, Peter Brintnal, was born February 4, 1939, in New Haven.

"Nothing has appeared so far about foster children," Cooper says (referring to our questionnaire listings). "We've had three—two English girls during the war, 1940-49, Ruth and Anne Hunt, who came to us in the group of Oxford Faculty children who arrived in New Haven, July, 1940—and a Chinese boy, Fu Jen Kwei, or Jacky Fu, who lives with us now and has since early 1949. He's at Westminster with my son Nic, and very much a part of our family. His father is a distinguished Chinese educator, now president of the University of Formosa, from which his politics can readily be deduced.

"In the summer of 1948 we took our three children and our old Ford station wagon to England and traveled about, part of the time with Ruth and Anne Hunt, and met their family for the first time, after eight years of intimate correspondence. It was a strange feeling, having to unscramble the parents as you thought you had known them through the medium of pen and paper. This summer we repeated the European trip with the same old station wagon and all five Coopers, this time to France and Switzerland and then back to England. After three days visiting friends in various places, I had to come home, leaving my wife and children on the left hand side of the road.

"My wife is an author [and a very good one, too. Ed.]. Her short stories have appeared in the Yale Review and mainly in The New Yorker. She has written four novels—the last, The Boys from Sharon, was a Book of the Month selection for April, 1950. Besides this she's done a damn good job with six young, as above. I enjoy and make a living practicing law."

ALBERT WILLIAM COOTE. Address, Windham Road, R.F.D., Easthampton, Conn.

HERBERT HALE CORBIN. Attorney, New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company, 54 Meadow Street, New Haven 6, Conn.; residence, 253 St. Ronan Street, New Haven 11.

Corbin took his LL.B. at Yale in 1929. While in the Law School, he became a member of Phi Delta Phi (Corbey Court) and served on the Yale Law Journal board. He was with the firm of Winthrop, Stimson, Putnam & Roberts in New York from 1929 to 1932 and has since been with the New Haven Road, serving as assistant counsel until about 1940 and since then as attorney. As his field of specialization he listed the New Haven Road's reorganization (1935-47) and its financing (and that of its subsidiaries) since 1941. Corbin was admitted to the New York State Bar in 1930 and to the Connecticut Bar in 1933. He contributed an article, "400 Miles in a Day Sailor" to the June, 1950, issue of Yachting. He is secretary and a director of the Wadawanuck Club, Inc., of Stonington, Conn.

On October 10, 1930, he was married in New York City to Jane Branton Kellogg, daughter of Charles Wetmore and Clara Howard Davis Kellogg. They have three daughters: Joan Lee, born February 4, 1932, in New York City; Diana Stonington, born February 20, 1936, in New Haven; and Nancy Howard, born November 13, 1942, also in New Haven. Joan, who graduated from the Concord (Mass.) Academy in 1949, is a member of the Bryn Mawr Class of 1953. Diana attended the Gunston School, Centerville, Md., during 1949-50 and is now at the Day School in New Haven.

Corbin appends the following summary:

"Travels: Bermuda (1930); France and England (1933). Wish I had the time and wherewithal for more, but employment by the New Haven Railroad and private school education for three daughters supply the absolute veto.

"Recreations: Sailing and yacht racing around Stonington; working on 1770 summer house in Stonington; tennis (occasional); hunting (bagged 265 lb., 10-point buck near Moose River in northern Maine on October 27, 1950); duck shooting; skiing (1938-47—bad back since—for sale: 1 skiing outfit 'chip'); occasional writing; occasionally cruise and race with Bill Gaines on his 'Off Soundings' yawl, but now it looks as if he's been bit by the farming bug again.

"Interests: Trying to keep up on international, national, state, city, town, and borough affairs. Less bureaucracy and more domestic economy and efficiency in governmental affairs."

RICHARD FRANCIS CORKEY. Address, 302 State Street, New London, Conn.

ERNEST FRANCIS COWLES. Customers' broker, Francis I. duPont & Company (investment securities), 1 Wall Street, New York 5, N.Y.; residence, Owenoke Way, Riverside, Conn.

From 1926 until August 1, 1939, Cowles was a customers' broker with Tate & Hays. Since then he has been with Francis I. duPont & Company.

He was first married on June 12, 1925, in Greenwich, Conn., to Katharine L. DeVoe, daughter of John M. and Carolyn Bailey DeVoe. Her death occurred in 1937. His second marriage, to Nedine Marble, daughter of William E. and Florence Bemis Marble, took place in Greenwich on June 5, 1937. He has three children: Louise, born June 20, 1927, in New York; Edward R., born September 29, 1939, in Greenwich; and Stephen A., born July 5, 1942, also in Greenwich.

FREDERIC MORGAN COWLES, JR. With Putnam & Company, investment bankers, 6 Central Row, Hartford, Conn.; residences, 34 Thomson Road, West Hartford (winter), and Barbertown Road, Canton, Conn. (summer).

Cowles has been with Putnam & Company since September 13, 1926. His marriage to Dorothy Curtis Smith, daughter of Franklin S. and Winifred C. Curtis Smith, took place in Montclair, N.J., on September 15, 1928. Frederic Morgan Cowles, 3d, who was born on July 21, 1932, in Hartford, is in the Class of 1951 at the Loomis School. The younger boy Robert Sprague, was born on March 11, 1937, also in Hartford.

ORIN KELSEY COX. Address not available.

WILLIAM FOTTERAL POTTER COXE. Acting director of purchases, American Enka Corporation, Enka, N.C.; residence, 1 Park Road, Biltmore Forest, Biltmore, N.C.

From 1927 to 1930 Coxe was secretary and treasurer of both the Biltmore and Asheville Industrial banks. He was a customers' man with Fenner & Beane from 1931 to 1935, a branch office manager for Thompson & McKinnon during the next six years, and since 1941 has been with the American Enka Corporation in various capacities. His present job dates from 1950. Somewhere along the line Coxe studied law and in 1944 was admitted to the North Carolina Bar. "I'm taking less interest in golf and more interest in the yard and garden," he says. "In fact, I think I'd enjoy running a nursery—must be getting old."

He was married in Asheville in 1926 to Mary Beecher, daughter of Lyman and May Steele Beecher. They have two children: William F. P., Jr., born in April, 1927, and Mary S., born just a year later. The latter, who is a member of the Vassar Class of 1951, prepared for college at the Baldwin School. The boy attended the Asheville School and the University of North Carolina (Class of 1950) and is now in the Navy.

EDWARD TAYLOR CRAM. Partner, Platt, Henderson, Cram & Dickinson, lawyers, 1115 U.S. National Bank Building, Portland 4, Oregon; residence, 3937 N.E. Laddington Court, Portland 13.

Cram writes: "Since graduating from the Harvard Law School in 1930, I have been engaged in the same work, in the same office. We are attorneys for, among other clients, the U.S. National Bank of Portland; and the major portion of my time is taken up in advising the bank and its state-wide branches." He was admitted to practice law in the Oregon state courts and the Federal Court in 1931. Cram is a member of the Oregon State Bar, the Multnomah Bar Association, the American Bar Association, and the University Club of Portland. He is still a bachelor.

KENNEDY CREEVEY. Surgeon, 62 2d Street, Troy, N.Y.; residence, 38 Belle Avenue, Troy.

"I'm engrossed in my work," says Creevey. "Aside from keeping patients alive, I am interested in the development of Blue Shield medical care insurance. Hobbies include playing the piano very poorly and a couple of highballs before dinner. Never had it so easy as the three years' active duty in the Navy, but hope not to repeat it. Have been in downtown New Haven twice since graduation—once to pick up an ambulance patient (for St. Luke's in New York) and once to take surgical board exams. Troy is not as bad as people think, but disappointing because the 'vice' has been eliminated."

While in medical school (he doesn't say where, but we rather imagine it was Columbia), he became a member of Nu Sigma Nu and Alpha Omega Alpha. He served his internships at the Presbyterian Hospital in New York (1930-32), the Boston City Hospital (1932-34), and Bellevue Hospital in New York (1935). In addition to his private practice, Creevey has been attending surgeon at the Samaritan Hospital in Troy since 1946 and at present is also an associate surgeon on the staff of the Mary McClellan Hospital in Cambridge, N.Y. He became a member of the American College of Surgeons in 1937, a diplomate of the National Board of Surgery in 1947, and he is a member of the American Medical Association and the Rensselaer County Medical Society. Creevey is the author of a couple of "very minor medical articles;" his political activities have been limited to "vociferously objecting to F.D.R. and Truman."

From 1928 to 1930 he was a member of Squadron A. In August, 1942, he went on active duty as a lieutenant commander, U.S.N.R., and was released from service with the rank of commander in August, 1945. He served in the United States through 1943 and in the Pacific for the remainder of the time, attached to various hospitals (one battle star, "for beating MacArthur to Leyte").

He was married at West Falls Church, Va., on May 31, 1938, to Margaret Germaine Brundage, daughter of Edward Jackson Brundage. They have three daughters: Kathleen Gray, born on April 28, 1939, Lucy Ellsworth on July 2, 1940, and Carlotta Sinclair on September 16, 1946.

CHARLES CROCKER. Address, Pebble Beach, Calif.

HENRY STETSON CROSBY. Vice-president in charge of plant engineering, General Mills, Inc., 400 2d Avenue, South, Minneapolis, Minn.; residence, Long Lake, Minn.

Crosby writes: "After finishing mechanical engineering at M.I.T. [B.S. 1929], I went to work for General Mills in the summer of 1929 as a draftsman and junior engineer. Twenty-two years later I am still working for the same firm and still doing engineering work and am now one of many vice-presidents. The work is interesting to me and varied. It concerns principally the design and construction of new manufacturing plants or the modernization of existing plants. Fortunately for me, the milling industry has been very backward in technological improvement, so there is a frequent opportunity of making what seem like startling innovations by simply applying techniques or equipment well known in other industries. The work requires a good deal of travel, since the company has plants from San Francisco to Buffalo and from Great Falls to Louisville. Being an unsociable character, I have seen surprisingly little of my classmates during the course of many business trips.

"Having spent three years in the Air Force in a non-flying status, I learned to fly shortly after my discharge. For the past four years I have operated my own airplane—a Navion—using it extensively on business trips. Aside from being very useful, flying has proved extremely interesting and probably rates as my principal hobby.

"In retrospect, the 'rash decision' to get married in 1928, with one year still left at M.I.T., appears to have been a justifiable risk. Some twenty-three years later, Marjorie and I have four children and one grandchild. We are still living at Long Lake, a small town some sixteen miles west of Minneapolis.

"In the field of travel there hasn't been anything very startling. A few vacation trips to the Canadian Rockies, including a little mountain climbing, plus scattered winter vacations with or without the family, have been typical. A little winter skiing has been thrown in in the past, but seems to be decreasing for grandparents. Last spring Marjorie and I were in Europe on a combination business and pleasure trip. My business excuse was to visit European engineers in the field of flour milling equipment. Our itinerary included England, France, west Germany, Switzerland, Italy, and a strictly pleasure jaunt to Greece to visit my older sister who is a practicing archeologist in Athens."

Crosby has been a vice-president of his company since January, 1947. He has been a member of the board of trustees of the Dunwoody Industrial Institute since 1933 and president of the board for the past three years. This is a privately operated, non-profit vocational school, supported partly by endowment and partly by current contributions. He gives the following details of his military service: "Entered the Army Air Force, April, 1942, as a captain; left in March, 1945, as a major. All work was in this country in connection with aircraft production. Time was roughly, six months in Washington, six months at Wright Field, and a year and a half at Los Angeles. All assignments were with the Matériel Command and concerned with engineering or other problems of aircraft production."

Mrs. Crosby was Marjorie Riggs, daughter of Dr. Austen F. Riggs and Alice McBurney Riggs. They were married in Stockbridge, Mass., August 15, 1928. Their oldest daughter, Marjorie, who was born June 15, 1929, in Boston, spent two years at Vassar, followed by a year at the University of Minnesota. She was married March 18, 1950, to C. Walter Brantingham and has a son, Charles Arthur, 2d, born January 19, 1951. Alice, the second girl, born December 27, 1930, in Minneapolis, attended Skidmore College for a year. The other children are: Carolyn K., born May 15, 1935, and Henry S., Jr., born May 7, 1937, both in Minneapolis.

BENJAMIN CRAWFORD CUTLER. Owner, Ben Cutler Music (music and entertainment for private engagements), 341 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y.; residence, 316 Mansfield Avenue, Darien, Conn.

Writing in January, 1951, Cutler said, "Things are going very well for me now, and I consider myself a very lucky man! I am making a reasonably comfortable living in a field of endeavor which I love—music; I am married to a very attractive woman who is an actress, and we pursue our separate careers; we live in the country with our two children, a boy and a girl, both normal, swell kids; we have a utility car and a shiny convertible 1947 which we love because we have both wanted one for so long; we belong to a nice club and enjoy tennis and swimming during the summer right in our own town; best of all, we live in a free country, where we are our own masters. For these great blessings I am very grateful!

"There have been many lean years, and during some of them I lost touch to quite a degree with Yale affairs. In the last three or four years I have stabilized my life enough to pick up contacts again, and it has been great fun to participate in the planning of our Class outings and now of our Twenty-fifth Reunion.

"During the years since graduation I have been an unsuccessful movie extra in Hollywood, a Shubert chorus boy, a choir soloist, a semi-big-name band leader, a musical comedy leading man, a minor opera singer, a fair concert recitalist, a night club entertainer, a saxophonist, and finally a successful society orchestra leader.

"My driving ambition is to sing as a member of the Metropolitan Opera Company. I am able now to take opera coaching and vocal lessons with the best available teachers, and I have learned many rôles as the years have gone by, so that with my stage experience I will be pretty well prepared if a break comes along. It is not impossible for me to realize my ambition, though there are not many years left to do so.

"I hope my classmates find me a more friendly and warm person than I used to be as an undergraduate, and I find to my deep satisfaction that the passing years have mellowed us all. I look forward with genuine pleasure to our Twenty-fifth. (Well—you asked for it!)"

Since 1941 Cutler has been doing a wonderful job as an American Theatre Wing entertainer—giving 500 shows in the wards of all military hospitals in the New York City area. He was a blood donor seven times during the war. He is a member of the activities committee of the Yale Club of New York and belongs to the Tokeneke Club of Darien.

The following is a more detailed summary covering the plays he has been in and his other work: 1937—"The Voice of God"; Max Reinhardt's "The Eternal Road"; 1938—lead in "The Fireman's Flame," American Music Hall, New York City; 1938-41—"Rainbow Room" Rockefeller Center—own dance band broadcasting on N.B.C. chain; 1944—lead in New York musical, "One Touch of Venus"; 1945—"Don Alfonso" in Mozart's "Cosi Fan Tutte," Montreal Opera Guild; 1946-50—six solo song recitals, Gardner Museum, Boston, Mass.; 1946—Ben Cutler Music—society orchestras.

Cutler was first married in 1931 to Frances Babcock, daughter of Austin S. Babcock, of Bronxville, N.Y. They were divorced in 1935. His second marriage, to Flora Campbell, daughter of Thomas Bernard and Isis Justice Campbell, of New York, took place at La Fontaine, Kansas, August 24, 1939. Their son, Thomas McKeen, was born on June 16, 1940, and their daughter, Creel Campbell on June 29, 1949.

HOWARD McKEEN CUTLER. Account executive and art director, John W. Odlin Company (advertising), 44 Portland Street, Worcester 8, Mass.; residence, 40 Whitman Road, Worcester 5.

Cutler writes: "Even in pre-1926 days, I was afflicted with an irresistible disease, the dire results of which are thousands of advertising layouts of no intrinsic value, paid for (thank God) by a small group of unsuspecting advertisers of various and sundry products.

"My 'doodling,' while productive of a very limited supply of what is vulgarly known as wealth, nevertheless manages to support a wife and two children, enables me to play an occasional round of very bad golf, and affords me, personally, a great deal of innocent (to me) pleasure.

"It would seem that 'doodling' is to remain my lot in life, and from present indications my daughter is doomed to a like fate. If the market for 'doodles' holds up, my son will go to Andover and will then try to learn twice as much and have half as much fun at Yale as did his old man."

Cutler was with Erwin Wasey & Company in New York City for a time after leaving college, was later with the Underwood & Underwood Illustration Studios, also in New York, and subsequently with Harold Cabot &

Company of Boston. In January, 1951, he became account executive and art director of the John W. Odlin Company. He is a director of the Worcester Engraving Company, Inc., and belongs to the Worcester Country Club, the University Club of Worcester, and Quinsigamond Lodge, F. and A.M.

His marriage to Pauline Henry, daughter of Arnold Watson and Elsie Gertrude Brown Henry, took place in Gardner, Mass., November 18, 1939. Their daughter, Janet McKeen, was born in 1944 and their son, Richard Harlan, in 1947, both in Worcester.

THEODORE JEROME CUTTING. Address, 91 Walker Street, Newtonville, Mass.

GEORGE HENRY DANFORTH. Residence, 943 Lexington Avenue, New York 21, N.Y.

"Dozens of classmates must have entered family businesses," was Danforth's initial comment. He went on, "It was expected that my interests would lead me to a career in the American Bank Note Company, which was founded by my grandfather. Actually, my going into the company made me the fourth generation, for my great-grandfather was the president of an older bank note company that was merged with the present one. But nepotism had little attraction for me—its grooves were too steep and narrow. After a year in the family business my resignation made the air seem freer. There were more fascinating things to try.

"Newspaper work and some advertising experience led me to a job with Robert Macbeth, whose gallery on 57th Street was a rendezvous for the American collector, one of the most important of whom at that time was Mr. Thomas Cochran, who liked to be called 'Uncle Tom' by Andover graduates; he was then making his collection for the Addison Gallery at his old school. At that time of great prosperity it was a pleasure to assist in the formation of the Andover and other collections.

"But that day of spending and collecting was short-lived. Contrasting with that experience was the enervating task of caring for some of the destitute of New York City during some of the worst months of the Depression. [This was while he was with the Department of Public Welfare in New York.] This new departure was an education in itself—full of grief and trouble, but completely absorbing and often rewarding.

"My secret desire for years had been to enter academic life, and kind fortune brought me to some excellent schools—Gilman in Baltimore, Allendale in Rochester, and, most recently, teaching in the veterans department at Hopkins in New Haven. The last was particularly stimulating; the vets were out to learn. Though my academic training and my master's [Yale, 1946] were taken in history, my largest number of classroom hours was spent on teaching mathematics, which is, of course, just a training in how to think as scientist or historian. Mathematics is fun to teach; it is like doing puzzles. If it were not for bridge or canasta, people would give mathematics problems to their guests for post-prandial entertainment.

"On a number of occasions the opportunity to travel was too tempting for me to resist. A lifelong passion for music and an appreciation for pictorial art that came in the days of being a 'picture broker' made the concert halls and art galleries of Europe particularly inviting. There was the usual pleasure in traveling with an expert, Joseph Downs, who, besides being the curator of the American Wing of the Metropolitan Museum, was an ideal guide for a number of my American trips. Don Gifford, at home or abroad, is always knowledgeable and the best of company. Other classmates that I have been abroad with for wonderful times are Dave Gregg, Marty Daniell, and Ed Guthrie.

"Besides the more orthodox travel, my curiosity has driven me from moose hunting in Alaska and salmon fishing in Newfoundland to a grand tour of South America. One summer found me in Russia, and most of a year was spent circling the globe when Japan, China, and India were peaceful states (1936-37). Bali, Java, and Ceylon in those years had about them more than a touch of the earthly paradise.

"But people occasionally prevaricate. On the way to Rio I posed as a clergyman. The deceit did not work. Just because most people do not understand what a pleasure it is to teach, the profession of the pedagogue is looked upon as dull. During my voyages my occupation was not advertised. The assumption on the part of inquiring women that I was a broker or diplomatic attaché satisfied the curious to a better degree and was more conducive to having a good time. Anonymity has its distinct advantages! In Japan they thought I was a spy. In Russia only God knows what they supposed. Nobody anywhere under any circumstances thought I was really a New England school teacher."

From 1942 to 1945 Danforth was an Army Air Force Special Service officer, in charge of propaganda, recreation, and education at several continental posts. He is a member of the American and New York Historical societies, the Washington Association of New Jersey, the American Geographical Society, and the Amateur Comedy Club of New York. He is unmarried.

MERVIN DANZIG. Lawyer, 7 East 42d Street, New York, N.Y.; residence, 201 West 74th Street, New York.

Danzig graduated from the Yale Law School in 1928 and was admitted to the New York State Bar in December of that year. In addition to practicing law, he is a partner in Samuel Danzig & Company, the American representative of the Cathay Company of Manila, P.I., distributor for the American Tobacco Company (Lucky Strike), the Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corporation (Kool and Avalon cigarettes), and Merck (North America), Inc. (drugs and chemicals). In World War II Danzig was a private in the Army, stationed at Fort Ontario, Oswego, N.Y., until his discharge in March, 1943.

His marriage to Estelle Wahl took place in New York City on July 2, 1939.

ROBERT ENSIGN DARLING. President, Ensign-Bickford Company, manufacturers of safety fuse and detonating fuse for mining and blasting, Simsbury, Conn.; residence, Simsbury.

Darling, who has been with the Ensign-Bickford Company since graduation, has been a director since 1936 and president since March 31, 1951. He is a director and chairman of the trust committee of the Simsbury Bank & Trust Company and is also on the boards of the Simsbury Development Company, the Hartford National Bank & Trust Company, the National Fire Insurance Company, the United National Indemnity Company, Darworth, Inc., the Canadian Safety Fuse Company, and the Westminster School. He is a trustee of the Hartford Hospital, treasurer, trustee, and chairman of the Simsbury Methodist Church, and in 1946 was appointed a member of the Simsbury Board of Finance. Darling belongs to the Hartford Club, the Hartford Golf Club, the East Haddam Fishing and Game Club, the Farmington Polo Club, and the Seignior Club.

He was married July 2, 1935, in Simsbury, to Virginia Kusterer, daughter of Arthur Emil and Emma King Foss Kusterer. Mrs. Darling's home was in Hartford before her marriage, and the children were all born there, Robert Ensign, Jr., on May 31, 1937, Elizabeth Conant on April 18, 1939, and Julia Whiting on February 9, 1943. Robert, Jr., is at present at the Kingswood School in West Hartford. Darling says that he expects to send him away next year, but hasn't picked the school yet.

As to hobbies—"the two which have meant the most to me in terms of fun and relaxation are fishing—trout and salmon, and fooling around with oil paints. As to the former, I have been fortunate on both the Restigouche and the Upsalquitch and have made two trips to the Mirrimachi. I also had a wonderful trip to the Rogue River in Oregon for steelhead trout. Other trout fishing expeditions have included the Kennebec region in Maine and the fishing provided at the Seignior Club in Quebec. As to the painting, the results are spotty, but the hobby is most absorbing. I am starting to develop a new medium in casein.

"I am also collecting anything I can lay my hands on relating to transatlantic shipping between the years 1870 to 1939. So many old friends were sunk in the last war that I haven't had the heart to take up the post-war ships. They haven't the personality as yet anyway."

BASIL DAVENPORT. Editor, Book-of-the-Month Club, 100 6th Avenue, New York, N.Y.; residence, 132 East 19th Street, New York 3.

"After graduation I spent two carefree years at Oxford, basking in the assurance of the Yale Economics Department that we were on a permanently high plateau of prosperity," Davenport says. "I spent one year teaching at Rutgers, took another summer abroad (why not?), and came to New York to seek my fortune about a month before the bottom fell out. I have lived in New York ever since and regard it as a wonderful place and that the most wonderful thing about it is the number of railroads, air lines, bus lines, boat lines, and highroads that lead out of it, thanks to which I manage to get away most week-ends, doing a lot of skiing in the winter and canoeing in the spring and fall. In the last war I had such an enjoyable time that I was honestly ashamed of it, but I don't expect the next war to be so pleasant. The Army spent six weeks teaching me to be a weather observer and then turned me into a counter-spy. Now my friends expect me to be able to tell whether it will rain tomorrow, and to tell about how I took the plans out of Mata Hari's bosom, and I can't do either. I work for the Book-of-the-Month Club, acting as a coarse sieve for the judges, like the farm hand who was set to sorting potatoes into large, small, and medium, and who was found groaning, 'Decisions, decisions, decisions, all day!' I have done a number of literary odd jobs, enough to make it astonishing that I still can't type decently. I have brought out an anthology of ghost stories, Ghostly Tales to be Told, for which I negotiated with Ed Dodd of Dodd Mead and Yale '28. I am under contract to produce a couple of other books and am hoping to heaven they get finished. I have been fortunate in having good friends on the Yale faculty, so that I get to New Haven often, and the new New Haven isn't so strange to me as to my contemporaries from farther away. I am looking forward to renewing old friendships at reunion."

Davenport received a B.A. at Oxford in 1928 and an M.A. in absentia some years later ("I qualified for it in 1933, but didn't actually get it until later"). His first published work was a translation of Rostand's L'Aiglon (Yale University Press). [We wonder if this was the one used for the Dramat production back in 1925?] He edited the Selected Works of Stephen Vincent Benét (Farrar & Rhinehart, 1942) and has prepared numerous titles in the Great Illustrated Classics series, published by Dodd Mead, providing preface and background material. The two books which he is writing at the present are Roman Reader, an anthology for Viking, and History in Words for Random. He has been with the Book-of-the-Month Club as editor since January, 1936, and is also a director of Foto-Flite, Inc. He is a life member of the Oxford Union and belongs also to the Century Club of New York, the New York Yale Club, the New York Athletic Club, the Arts Club of Louisville, and the Appalachian Mountain Club. He is not married.

He appended the following about his W.W. II service: "I succeeded in getting myself drafted on March 5, 1943, two days before I would have been over-age, thus evading the nasty problem of whether to volunteer on the last day. Being a counter-spy is not so thrilling as the movies make it, but was a lot more interesting than most Army jobs. Besides the U.S., I served in England, France, and Germany. I have the Good Conduct Medal and the E.A.M.E. Theatre Ribbon with four battle stars—a dazzling array. (I thought it was the E.T.O. ribbon, but it says E.A.M.E. on my discharge—I just looked.) I was discharged in August, 1945. For some time when asked my rank I said (truthfully) that I was a special agent of the War Department, but I am now admitting that I made a meteoric rise to buck sergeant."

JOHN DAVENPORT. Editor, Barron's Weekly, 40 New Street, New York 4, N.Y.; residence, 1 East 87th Street, New York 28.

"Most of the time since leaving Yale has been concerned with writing of one kind or another," Davenport says. "My first break came with a job on the old New York World in the late Twenties, which took a look at some of my college writing efforts and sent me promptly to police headquarters to learn something. After I left the World, there followed some rather dreary years of job shifting and a long visit to Saranac Lake. While there Professor Filmer Northrup of Yale's Philosophy Department did me about the best turn any man could do by offering to re-teach me philosophy at long distance and to correct and criticize papers I sent him every month. If I owed nothing else to Yale, Professor Northrop's kindness would amount to a big debt. I got back on my feet by returning to the Yale Graduate School during 1936 where I shifted from philosophy to economics under Richard Bissell, Yale '33, now deputy chief of E.C.A. From Yale I went to Fortune magazine. I wrote mostly corporation stories for a number of years. The work took me to most parts of the country and into a good many industries—aviation, oil, etc.

"In the summer of 1943 I went to England to do two pieces on the British war and hopes for post-war economy. Had the good fortune to come home on the same ship as Lord Keynes, who was on his way to this country to negotiate the first American-British settlements. It proved a rewarding acquaintance. I returned to Europe (Greece and Germany) in 1946 and again in 1948 (Germany and Britain) on special assignment. Due to the generosity of Time, Inc., I was also able to work on the Harriman Commission on E.C.A. and on the Hoover Commission. My work on Fortune gradually changed to editorial writing. During these years there was always much talk as to whether a magazine could not be developed in the U.S. along the lines of the Economist in London. In the fall of 1950 I was offered the job of editor of Barron's Financial Weekly, which with The Wall Street Journal, is owned by the Dow Jones Company. After more hesitation than I like to recall, I accepted the opportunity and have been here since. We have broadened the magazine—a little. We don't seem to have killed it—yet. The experiment goes on. My wife and I live in New York. Our main hobby to date has been sailing—in the Sound, to the Cape, and down to the Chesapeake. That is getting a little expensive, what with four daughters. This spring we had a son. His name is John. He will go to Yale."

Before going with the New York World, Davenport had taught for a year (1926-27) at the Santa Barbara School in California; another connection was with the Century Company during 1931-32. He was turned down by the Navy early in 1942 on the basis of having had tuberculosis (1933-37). That summer he worked as a civilian for General Somervell in the Services of Supply and in the fall served with the Coast Guard, which was then organizing off-shore sailboat patrol. Davenport belongs to the Foreign Policy Association, the Broad Street Club of New York, and the Metropolitan Club of Washington. In collaboration with Charles J. V. Murphy of Life, he wrote Lives of Winston Churchill, which was published by Scribner in 1945. In the fall of 1949 he received the Freedom Foundation Award—third prize—for his essay, "Socialism by Default," and in 1950 was given the Freedom Foundation Medal for his editorial, "Bread and Circuses."

He was first married in October, 1930, in Ogunquit, Maine, to Eleanor Kemp Hoysradt, daughter of Warren J. Hoysradt, Yale '01, of Bronxville, N.Y. They were divorced in 1934. Davenport's second marriage, to Marie Von Vechter Hayes, daughter of Frank A. Hayes, Yale '07, and Effie Knox Huntington Hayes, took place in Middletown, N.J., October 11, 1941. Her home was formerly in New York City, and their children were all born there, Ann Van Vechten on August 3, 1942, Glorianna Whipple on July 16, 1944, Susan Wheeler on March 9, 1946, Amy Marie on August 20, 1947, and John on March 30, 1951. The two oldest girls are at the Brearley School in New York.

JAMES BROWN DAVIS. Vice-president, Peoples First National Bank & Trust Company, 5th Avenue and Wood Street, Pittsburgh, Pa.; residence, Sycamore Road, Edgeworth, Sewickley, Pa.

Davis graduated from the Harvard Business School with the degree of M.B.A. in 1928 and continued there as an instructor for a year. He was a representative of Goldman Sachs & Company in 1929 and assistant vice-president of the Chemical Bank & Trust Company from 1930 until 1942, when he went on active duty in the Army Air Force. He entered service as a lieutenant and was discharged with the rank of major in 1945. His service was all in the American theatre.

Since June, 1945, Davis has been vice-president of the Peoples First National Bank & Trust Company of Pittsburgh. He is a director and officer of the Duquesne Inclined Plane Company, the South Texas Gas System, Inc., and the Richvein Coal Company and formerly had a similar connection with the National Can Corporation. He became a trustee of the Sewickley Fresh Air Home last year.

His marriage to Elizabeth Stout, daughter of Arthur Lindley and Elizabeth Wilson Stout, took place on November 14, 1931, in New York City. Their daughter, Elizabeth Jane, was born in New York, December 16, 1937.

THOMAS POTTER DAVIS. Branch manager, National City Bank of New York, 74-A Yamashita-cho, Naka-ku, Yokohama, Japan; residence, 991 4-chome, Shimo-Meguro, Meguro-ku, Tokyo, Japan.

The following report came from Davis in April. "Joining the National City Bank of New York after Commencement, I came out to Japan at the end of the year, with an appointment to the staff of the bank's branch at Osaka. With the exception of periodic leaves of absence, usually spent in junketing around the Far East, Europe, and the United States—and of course with the exception of the war years—I have been in Japan ever since, attached alternately to the bank's branches in Tokyo, Osaka, Kobe, and Yokohama.

"On December 8, 1941, I was clapped unceremoniously into solitary at the Kanagawa Prefectural Jail under suspicion of espionage. After some seven months of my own company and that of the Japanese Military Police came 'parole' and repatriation aboard the Gripsholm.

"In November, 1942, I joined the Army. Army life took me to assignments [G-2 Section] in Washington, Minnesota, and California and, eventually, immediately after the Japanese surrender, back to Tokyo, where I spent two years in the Civil Intelligence Section of General MacArthur's SCAP Headquarters. I left the Army in September, 1947, to resume my connection with the National City Bank of New York in Tokyo and in October, 1948, reopened the branch of the bank of Yokohama. Come and see me sometime."

Davis was awarded the Army Commendation Ribbon and the Legion of Merit for his service in World War II. He ranked as a first lieutenant at the time he went on active duty and as a lieutenant colonel at the time of his separation from service. He is a director of the Nippon Kinsen Torokuki K. K. (Japan National Cash Register Company, Ltd.) of Tokyo, vice-chairman of the international division of the Yokohama Chamber of Commerce, and since December, 1948, has been chairman of the general committee of Bluff Hospital in Yokohama. He belongs to the United, Colonial, and Rotary clubs of Yokohama, the American and Union clubs of Tokyo, and the America Japan Society. He is still a bachelor.

SIDNEY WALTER DEAN, JR. Vice-president in charge of marketing services, McCann-Erickson, Inc. (advertising), 50 Rockefeller Plaza, New York 20, N.Y.; residences, 94 MacDougal Street, New York, and "Sandbox," Wainscott, N.Y.

"If the last ten years have been more fun than the first thirty-five, the credit belongs to the free enterprise system and Hitler." This first comment of Dean's gave us a bit of a jolt. Then he went on, "The latter jarred me out of nearly fifteen years of a corporate career into war agency organization and then three years in the Air Force. The F.E. System seemed so inviting after three years as a G.I. that it launched me into five years of post-war independence as a marketing consultant, new business operator, chain store developer, and extra-curricular sociologist. I've finally returned to advertising agency work for two reasons: first, because agencies have a unique rôle as general business as well as marketing and sales counselors; secondly, I had the opportunity to join one of the largest international advertising agencies, McCann-Erickson, in a new post as head of the marketing division, coördinating all research, sales promotion, merchandising, and media services.

"Thanks to this post-war laissez-faire, there's been more time for the non-economic world. Lucy and I have planed or motored into most of the U.S.; we've been able to combine our favorite leisure living—beachcombing—with our chosen permanent home as close to the middle of Manhattan Island as we can live in a real house in a real community. We discovered, twenty years late, but not too late to do something about it, that grass roots political activity is deeply rewarding.

"Freedom of choice of satisfying work also leads to challenging social extensions of the work. Several bulging file stacks are loaded with projects for middle, old, and very old age; a basic project that probably won't ever peter out is the development of a comprehensive bibliographical system for business and economics . . . basic classifications, indices, abstracts.

"Like many others a quarter century out, I'm convinced that the biggest and most vital business of us all, potentially the noblest job of all, is the task of good democratic government and honest, efficient public administration. To my deep regret, I'm not free to do much about it, and I see few younger men preparing themselves for this honorable career. Our mid-Manhattan state senator and classmate, Mac Mitchell, is one of the few outstanding careerists. And, President Griswold, I humbly submit that Yale has much to do to provide leaders in 'the civil state.' It can come only through systematic undergraduate indoctrination in the political attitude as well as skills; it is increasingly in the political arena that our entire ways of life will be moulded, whether we elect government, business, the professions, or labor as our careers. Just as Yale must organize itself to train future leaders for government, so we must find ways to recruit good men, indoctrinate ourselves as well as our fellows, and unhesitatingly move in ourselves, whether prepared or not, whenever the collective welfare is at stake."

Dean has been vice-president in charge of marketing services for McCann-Erickson since October, 1950. He is still independently engaged as a consultant in marketing and management and is a director of the Knickerbocker Federal Savings and Loan Association, Permetallics, Inc., and Fashionpak, Inc. He was vice-president of the J. Walter Thompson Company from 1936 to 1941 and executive vice-president in charge of the Launderette System of the Telecoin Corporation during 1946-47. The government job that he had in 1942 was that of consultant to the Office of Strategic Services and the Lend-Lease Administration. He enlisted as a private in the Air Force later that year and after O.C.S. training in Air Intelligence, had two years in combat intelligence work with the heavy bombardment group (B-17) of the 8th Air Force in Europe, assigned to the Group, Wing, and Division Headquarters. Dean received the Bronze Star Medal for special visual and radar targets methods and three Presidential Citations, as well as seven campaign ribbons. He is now a captain in the Air Force Reserve.

He has been active in Americans for Democratic Action, serving on the New York State executive board and as chairman of the commerce, industry, and employment committee and vice-chairman of the Greenwich Village branch. He has also been on the executive board of the Civil Service Reform Association and housing chairman of the Greenwich Village Association. He is, by the way, co-owner with Henry M. Silver, '26, of the apartment house in which they live—one of twenty others sharing a unique central private block in Greenwich Village, two blocks south of Washington Square.

Dean is an advisory director of the Children's Aid Society, a member of the executive committee of the Washington Square Post of the American Legion, the American Veterans Committee, treasurer and a founding director of Controlled Circulation Audit, Inc., secretary of the New York chapter of the National Industrial Advertisers Association, chairman of the media committee of the American Association of Advertising Agencies, a member of the markets committee of the Advertising Research Foundation, and belongs to the American Management, Marketing, Economics and Statistical associations and the New York Yale Club. He has had various articles on business and marketing subjects in professional journals and is currently engaged in a research projects on the economics of television and a book on the integration of communications.

He was married May 29, 1930, in New York, to Lucile Weeks Satterthwaite, daughter of Thomas Wilkinson and Lucile Carnes Weeks Satterthwaite. Her home was formerly in Short Hills, N.J.

FRANK WILLIAM DELANEY. Address, 16 Dalton Street, Hartford 6, Conn.

ALFRED DE LIAGRE, JR. Owner, Alfred de Liagre, Jr. Productions, 55 West 42d Street, New York, N.Y.; residence, 322 East 57th Street, New York.

It's a safe assumption that de Liagre's success as a producer is known to practically every member of the Class. He sent us the following "theatrical biographical data": "1930—Summer Playhouse, Woodstock, N.Y.; 1931—assistant stage manager for Jane Cowl's production of 'Twelfth Night'; 1931—manager of Cape May (N.J.) Playhouse; 1932—stage manager for 'Spring-time for Henry' and director for Edward Everitt Horton's production of this play on the West Coast; 1933—(Broadway debut as director and co-producer)—'Three-Cornered Moon'; 1934—director and co-producer of 'By Your Leave' and 'The Pure in Heart'; 1935—director and co-producer of 'Petticoat Fever'; 1936—director and co-producer of 'Fresh Fields'; 1937—director and producer of 'Yes, My Darling Daughter' and director and co-producer of the London production; 1938—director and producer of 'I Am My Youth'; 1940—director and producer of 'The Walrus and the Carpenter'; 1941—director and producer of 'Mr. and Mrs. North'; 1943—producer of 'The Voice of the Turtle'; 1945—co-producer of the London production of 'The Voice of the Turtle' and of the film version (Warner Brothers); 1946—producer of 'The Mermaids Singing'; 1947—producer of 'The Druid Circle'; 1948—producer and director of 'The Madwoman of Chaillot' (New York Drama Critics Prize Play); 1950—producer and director of 'Second Threshold.' " de Liagre has contributed articles on the theatre to the New York Times and Herald Tribune, as well as to various books and magazines, including Theatre Arts, The Stage, Town and Country, and Vogue. Back in 1926 he was with the firm of Hollowell, Jones & Donald (textiles) in Boston and the next year was in the brokerage business in New York with S. B. Chapin & Company. In 1928 he was a co-founder of the Aviation Country Club at Hicksville, Long Island, and in 1930 was associate editor of the Sportsman Pilot. During the war he was active in civilian defense, the United Service Organization, and the Stage Door Canteen, and from 1945 to 1950 he was chairman of the theatre division of the Salvation Army. He is a governor of the League of New York Theatres, a member of the Committee of Theatrical Producers and of the board of management of the Century Association, and for the last few years has given largely of his time and talents to Yale as chairman of the Committee on the Division of Drama of the University Council. He was made a Chevalier of the French Legion of Honor some time ago. de Liagre has taken an active interest in the Stage Relief Society and the Actors Fund, and he belongs to the Maidstone Club of East Hampton and the Woodstock Country Club.

He was married July 25, 1945, in Woodstock, N.Y., to Mary Marjorie Howard, daughter of Samuel and Florence Wilson Howard. Her home before her marriage was in Tulsa, Okla. They have two children: Nicolas Maximilian, born September 14, 1947, and Christina, born October 20, 1948, both in New York—and he was naturally appalled by our query about grandchildren.

We overlooked including a question about the physical status of our classmates, but de Liagre came through with: "Liver—soft and pliable! Prostate—magnificent!"—"and what else do you want to know?" says he.

JOHN RUSSELL DEMING. Lawyer, Smith Building, Greenwich, Conn.; residence, 169 Mason Street, Greenwich.

Deming received an LL.B. at Yale in 1929 and was admitted to the Connecticut Bar in July of that year. He was then employed by Wright, Hirschberg & Pettengill and on January 1, 1937, was admitted to the firm of Hirschberg, Pettengill, Strong & Deming. He is secretary of the New Canaan Water Company, the New Canaan Company, the Greenwich Home Providers, Inc., and the Greenwich Veterans Housing, Inc., a member of the Greenwich Housing Authority, and a director of the Greenwich Center for Child and Family Service. Deming belongs to the American, Connecticut, and Greenwich Bar associations and the New York County Lawyers Association.

On August 12, 1942, he was commissioned a captain, A.U.S., and assigned to the 1st Service Command. In April, 1943, he was promoted to major and transferred to the P.M.G. School of Military Government at Fort Custer, Mich. For three months, beginning in October, 1943, he attended the Civil Affairs Training School at Yale and then left for the E.T.O. He subsequently served as legal officer of the G5 Section, E.T.O., and the 1st Base Section in England and later commanded the Military Government Unit in France and Germany under the 3d, 7th, and 15th Armies. He was en route to Manila when the war ended and was discharged from service in January, 1946.

He was first married, August 24, 1929, in Hamden, Conn., to Marian Sherry, daughter of Benjamin L. and Gladys D. Sherry. They were divorced in 1944. His second marriage, to Doris Valerie Miller, daughter of Charles and Ida Carlson Miller, took place in Easton, Pa., September 14, 1946. Mrs. Deming's home was formerly in Greenwich. Their son, John Russell, Jr., was born in Greenwich on July, 1947.

STERLING CLAYTON DENISON. Partner, J. F. Denison, paint and wallpaper dealers, 7 Howard Street, New London, Conn.; residence, 116 Federal Street, New London.

Denison's company, in addition to dealing in paint and wallpaper, is a distributor for the Keystone Varnish Company. While doing graduate work at Teachers College, Columbia University, some time ago, he had an evening job as house manager at the New Playwrights Theatre at Columbia. Before becoming associated with his present firm, he was a salesman for the Parrott Varnish Company of Bridgeport, Conn. Denison, who is a member of All Souls' Church (Unitarian-Universalist) in New London, has an agreement with the Christian Leader, a Universalist publication, to write for it, and he has contributed to "The Lighter Side" of the Hartford Courant. He is still a bachelor.

"I am interested in the arts—painting, sculpture, music, etc.," Denison says, "and am a member of the Lyman Allen Museum of Art, New London, and of the Friends of Music at Connecticut College. Of the products that J. F. Denison sells, I like wallpaper better than paint, for wallpaper has not only color, but also design, and, therefore, is associated more with the fine arts."

FREDERICK BYXBEE DE PEYSTER. Residence, 330 Main Street, Portland, Conn.

De Peyster writes as follows: "At various times since 1926 I have been in the insurance, brokerage, and real estate business. I am a bachelor. At present I am staying at home taking care of my mother. We are enjoying a quiet life insofar as that is possible in these times.

"I served three years in the Army during World War II, entering service September 30, 1942. I spent twenty-seven months in the M.T.O., first with the Medical Detachment of an A.A. Battalion and later with a service unit composed of Italian soldiers with American supervisory personnel. I attained the rank of staff sergeant. I also received a Good Conduct Medal."

DONATO ANTHONY D'ESOPO. Vibration technician, Hamilton Standard Division, United Aircraft Corporation, East Hartford, Conn.; residence, 57½ Barbour Street, Hartford.

D'Esopo writes: "The year following graduation I spent in Europe, mainly in Italy, studying their banking methods and systems. After my return from abroad I held the position of vice-president in the P. M. D'Esopo Bank until 1930, when we closed our doors following the stock market debacle. Later in 1932 I entered the cigar manufacturing field and conducted this business until 1941. I then became associated with Hamilton Propeller, a division of United Aircraft. Perhaps I would have gone farther in this organization if I had gone to Sheff and studied engineering—at least, that's what I was told. However, I did go into a technical field about two years ago, when I organized the building of D'Esopo & Silvester, and am doing reasonably well in this additional field. Of course, my hope is to be able to expand this business, and, as for my special interests, I have three of them; my wife and two lovely daughters. I might add that I consider my wife lovely also."

Mrs. D'Esopo was Edith Evelyn Orefice, daughter of Giacomo and Marie Theresa Forte Orefice. They were married on June 15, 1936, in Hartford, and both girls were born there, Diane Marie on September 9, 1937, and Carol Ann on November 27, 1940.

EDWARD ENGEL DI BELLA. Executive director, Community Chest and Planning Council of Prince Georges County, Md.; office, 3723 34th Street, Mt. Rainier, Md.; residence, 7715 Colesville Road, University Hills, Hyattsville, Md.

Di Bella, who has been engaged in social work, teaching, and business since 1926, became executive director of the Community Chest and Planning Council of Prince Georges County in July, 1949. He is also an instructor in sociology at the University of Maryland. He has taken graduate courses in social work at Washington University and is a member of the American Association of Social Workers, the Family Service Association of America, the American Public Welfare Association, the Maryland State Conference of Social Welfare (at present chairman of the Southern Maryland Region), the Rotary Club of College Park, and the Torch Club of Washington. He has served both in the New York National Guard (7th Regiment—later 107th) and the Minnesota State Guard.

Di Bella's marriage to Francis Josephine Williston, daughter of Carlos Arthur and May Amarilla Hosley Williston, took place on March 30, 1933, in Bay City, Mich. The oldest son, Peter Williston, was born and died in Bay City in 1938. The others are: Carlos Arthur Williston, born in 1940, Geoffrey Angelo Williston in 1941, Christopher Mark Williston in 1943, Terence Fraser Williston in 1947, and Nicolas Michael Williston in 1949. Carlos, Geoffrey, and Christopher were born in St. Paul, Minn., and Terence and Nicolas in Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

Di Bella describes himself as just a worried voter—and responds with a "Whew" to page four of our questionnaire.

RICHARD HENRY DIGGS. Director of radio and television, Robert W. Orr & Associates, Inc. (advertising), 9130 Sunset Boulevard, Los Angeles 46, Calif.; residence, 10456 Holman Avenue, West Los Angeles 24.

Diggs' summary of the situation:

"1927: Mistaken for a spy in Albania and almost shot.

"1928: Explored Russia from the White Sea to the Black Sea.

"1929: With other Yale men crashed Hollywood to a symphony of crashing stocks and empty gin bottles. Our gin bottles. The natives were staggered, nicknamed our bachelor household the Yale 'Bowl.' Paramount gaped, gulped, and hired me. Week-ends in Laguna, California's Greenwich Village by the sea, where I outraged the local bohemians—and incidentally started a fashion—by sporting the first flowered shirts seen in America. A Tahitian girl made them for me. Lovely. She also taught me to catch octopus in my bare hands and spear sea bass twenty feet down. The Pacific Ocean became my god.

"1930: Paramount's top brass cleaved apart like angry cymbals, then clashed, shattered, and destroyed itself. I fled for two fabulous years to 20th Century-Fox, where anything could happen and frequently did, like the time I went to the men's room and found it being used by a chimpanzee.

"1938: Fired, busted, and in love. With threadbare tires and a geranium behind my ear, I troub-aded her from Yuma to Guymas to Mazatlan to Guadalajara to Acapulco to New York.

"1939: New York. My family burgeoning, I put on the uniform of a radio producer for an advertising agency—dark suits, sincere ties, black shoes, and a discrete show of ulcers.

"1942: War! . . . Tokyo Rose gloomed over the Yukon. The Office of War Information whisked me to Alaska to blanket it with our first American domestic radio, smothering La Rose from Ketchikan to Kiska. Repeats: Hawaii, Australia, New Zealand.

"1945: Peace—The Reader's Digest smiled from Pleasantville and beckoned me to spread over our American air-waves its roseate blanket of information, inspiration, and up-lift . . . a sort of Pleasantville Rose, selling anew the perennial hit, 'You Can Be Better Off Than You Are.'

"1948: But me, I preferred to swing on a star. Back at long last to the rich, warm glamour of Hollywood, producing radio with its brightest luminaries, those in the glittering galaxy of the Louella Parsons show. These are the stuff that screen and radio dreams are made of, and now, the beginnings of television.

"Thoughts? I like to think of show business as 'the aspirin of the people' and hope I may have helped relieve some of the headaches of daily living. About the present—a staunch epistemological attitude towards everything. About the future—I can hardly wait, for with the single exception of today, tomorrow has always been the most exciting day of my life."

The family data: Married September 9, 1939, in Yuma, Ariz., to Virginia Warren, daughter of Benjamin and Gaydene Warren, of Beverly Hills, Calif.; two sons: Richard Henry Dana, born September 16, 1942, in San Francisco; Nicholas Warren David, born September 19, 1946, in Los Angeles.

JOHN EUFEMIO DOCKENDORFF. Address, 39 Broadway, New York, N.Y.

WALTON PORTER DOGETT. Address, Mountainside Hospital, Montclair, N.J.

WILLIAM HENRY DONAHUE, 2D. Sales representative, T. J. Crane, Inc., importers and distributors of wines and liqueurs, 218 Summer Street, Worcester, Mass.; residence, 58 Elm Street, Worcester.

Donahue, who has been a sales representative for T. J. Crane, Inc., for some time, was formerly in the investment banking and food brokerage business. During 1944 and 1945 he was with the U.S. Engineers, building an air base in the Azores. He is a member of the Yale Club of New York.

His first marriage, to Mabel Mariner Fullerton, daughter of George Gordon and Mabel Mariner Fullerton, took place in Minneapolis on October 27, 1927. They were divorced in 1932. On August 27, 1949, he was married in New Haven to Rochelle Marie Jollette Clifford, of Shrewsbury, Mass., daughter of Joseph Adolph and Lucie Evangeline La Pointe Jollette. Donahue has twin sons, William Henry, 3d, and James Gordon Fullerton, born July 14, 1928, in New York City, and a daughter, Mary Patricia, born December 30, 1931, in Minneapolis. Both boys were called into the service last December, James being a Senior at Harvard at the time and William at the University of Virginia. They prepared for college at the Kent School. Mary graduated from Miss Chapin's School in New York in 1950.

"I really have nothing of color to relate," Donahue says. "I have traveled extensively, mostly at the expense of Uncle Sam. My special interest is the amassing of a capital fund permitting retirement. My regret is I ever heard of Wall Street and did not enter the advertising field. I miss the Yale teams of 1923 and 1924; and I fondly hope we shall see similar teams in the future, but I still follow the team around."

JONATHAN EDISON DOOLITTLE. Comptroller, Southern New England Telephone Company, 227 Church Street, New Haven, Conn.; residence, 47 Commodore Place, Milford, Conn.

Since March, 1947, Doolittle has been comptroller of the Southern New England Telephone Company, with which he became connected upon graduating from Yale. He is a director of the New Haven Tax Payers Research Council, a member of the taxation committee of the Connecticut Chamber of Commerce, and belongs to the Controllers Institute of America. He takes an active part in local affairs in Milford, serving on the Board of Education from 1942 to 1948, on the Pension and Retirement Board from 1947 to 1950, as fund campaign chairman for the Red Cross in 1948, and as a member of the Republican Town Committee and trustee of the Church of Christ (Congregational) since 1948. He is on the board of governors of the Milford Yacht Club, of which he was secretary-treasurer from 1938 to 1942 and vice-commodore in 1942, and belongs to the Quinnipiack Club of New Haven.

Doolittle's marriage to Catherine Arnott Lochhead, daughter of Robert and Catherine Cranston Steel Arnott Lochhead, took place in Brooklyn, N.Y., on July 21, 1928. There are two boys in the family: Jonathan E., Jr., born April 13, 1931, and Robert L. on May 12, 1934, both in New Haven. Jon is a Sophomore at Yale and Robert a Junior at the Milford Preparatory School.

ARCHIBALD DOUGLAS, JR. Partner, Pershing & Company, brokers, 120 Broadway, New York 5, N.Y.; residence, 455 East 57th Street, New York.

Douglas, who has been a partner in Pershing & Company since September, 1939, is vice-president of the Stadacona Company and a member of the board of the Republic Foil & Metal Company and of the Memorial Hospital. Since 1945 he has been a member of the New York County Republican Committee and of the New York State Assembly and for the past four years has served as vice-commissioner of the New York State Legislative Commission on Rents.

He was first married in 1927 in New York to Constance Miller, daughter of Dr. A. Miller and Marion Hunt Miller. They were divorced in 1939. His second marriage, to Eleanor S. Reed, of Ardsley, N.Y., daughter of Robert R. Reed, took place in New York on April 5, 1940. He has four children: Archibald, 3d, born on July 18, 1929, James A. M. on November 29, 1933, Geoffrey R. on July 1, 1944, and Eleanor S. on April 18, 1948, all in New York. James is in the Class of 1952 at St. Paul's. Archibald graduated there in 1948 and is now a Junior at Yale.

DONALD CHASE DOWNES. Address not available.

KENNETH GOODYEAR DOWNEY. Sales representative, American Brass Company, 419 Continental Building, Washington, D.C.; residence, 4114 North Henderson Road, Arlington, Va.

Downey was an instructor at Kiskiminetas Springs School at Saltsburg, Pa., from 1927 to 1936 and since June, 1937, has been with the American Brass Company as a sales representative. From August, 1942, to December, 1945, he was chief of the Copper Section of the Office of Naval Matériel in Washington, with the rank of lieutenant commander, U.S.N.R.

On April 18, 1942, he was married in Waterbury, Conn., to Josephine Marie Pepe, daughter of Frank and Michele Pepe. Their children were both born in Waterbury, Christopher Francis on February 27, 1943, and Michele on August 1, 1946.

From 1926 to 1933 Drayton was a partner in the New York Stock Exchange firm of Drayton, Pennington & Colket and during the following year was president of the Nassau Camera Company. He then became connected with the Dictaphone Corporation as a salesman and continued with them until 1947, when he went into business on his own as a manufacturers' representative for various types of office equipment. He has served as vice-chairman for Port Washington, Northwest District, Nassau County, Boy Scouts of America.

Drayton's marriage to Phyllis S. Povah Shields, of New York City, daughter of Alfred E. and Ida Anne Roberta Godard Povah, took place in Elkins Park, Pa., August 2, 1930. Their son, Henry E., Jr., who was born at Port Washington on July 1, 1932, graduated from St. Paul's in 1950 and is now at Yale as a member of the Class of 1954.

STANLEY TURENNE DREW. In U.S. Army; home address, Merion Gardens, Merion, Pa.

Drew, who is an accountant by profession, reported in a somewhat staccato fashion last May: "Happily married. Stuck at moment, since was recalled to active duty last August. Suspect headed for Europe. At least a change, as had two years' Pacific last time. Ended on MacArthur's staff and found Japan not too bad."

Drew's service in World War II covered the period from 1942 to 1946. Mrs. Drew was Betts Allan, daughter of Thomas G. and Adelaide H. Allan. Their marriage took place in Philadelphia in 1941.

ELDRIDGE DURBROW. Chief, Division of Foreign Service Personnel, Department of State, Washington 25, D.C.; residence, 3505 Porter Street, N.W., Washington.

Durbrow did graduate work at Stanford University in 1927 and then entered l'École Libres des Sciences Politiques, where he graduated in 1929. He had another year of graduate work (economics) at the University of Chicago during 1939-40. He has been in the U.S. Foreign Service since 1930 and has served in Poland, Rumania, the Soviet Union, Italy, and Portugal, as well as in the Department of State. He received his appointment as chief of the Division of Foreign Service Personnel in July, 1950.

Durbrow was married in London, on July 23, 1938, to Emily M. Moore, daughter of Dr. Meade Moore and Laverne Bruce Moore. Her home before her marriage was in Washington, and their sons were both born there, Bruce Chandler on May 20, 1940, and Chandler Wolcot on September 8, 1946.

NATHAN BARRY DURFEE. Vice-president, Lonsdale Company, manufacturers and converters of textile fabrics, 50 South Main Street, Providence 3, R.I.; residence, 238 Arlington Avenue, Providence 6.

Durfee became vice-president of the Lonsdale Company in September, 1946. He was manager and vice-president of the American Printing Company of Fall River, Mass., until June, 1935, and during the next eleven years was manager and assistant treasurer of the Cranston (R.I.) Print Works. He belongs to the Agawam Hunt and Hope clubs of Providence and to the Yale and Merchants clubs of New York.

Durfee was married in Fall River on October 4, 1930, to Ruth S. Brayton, daughter of W. L. S. and Mary Ashley Brayton. They have three children, all of whom were born in Fall River, Nathan Barry, Jr., on December 23, 1932, Sherman Brayton on June 21, 1935, and Allison Brown on July 17, 1938. They have all attended the Moses Brown School in Providence (Allison will be there for a few years more). Nathan, Jr., is a Senior at Hotchkiss and Sherman a member of the Class of 1953 at the Westminster School.

OLIVER EDWARDS. Manager, Yorkville branch, National City Bank of New York, 123 East 86th Street, New York 28, N.Y.; residence, 114 East 90th Street, New York 28.

Edwards reports as follows: "Travels—a trip around Europe after college with Pierson and Ford Cooper, liberally dotted with appearances by Nettleton. Started with the bank that fall, thereby limiting recreation and hobbies, as well as travel. Most of my time has been spent here in New York after a picturesque year in the Belgian branch. I have been in the domestic branch for twenty years, with a suitable interval for a sideshow of the U.S. Naval Reserve from 1941 to 1945. Finally got married when given up for lost as an old bachelor and have been rapidly catching up on those of us who started earlier, though I have only my son's nursery school to match with the college and draft problems of many of us. There seems to be more satisfaction and regrets than hopes and ambitions in this unhappy state of world affairs that marks our middle age."

Since April, 1946, Edwards' position with the National City Bank has been that of manager of the Yorkville branch. At the time he was released from active duty in the Navy in August, 1945, he ranked as lieutenant commander. His service was all in this country. He had "fifteen years as a chorus man with an amateur Gilbert and Sullivan organization in New York known as the Blue Hill Troupe. Have sung in all the Gilbert and Sullivan operas except 'Utopia' and have been at appropriate times, treasurer, vice-president, and president of the organization."

It was on January 24, 1942, that he married (in New York) Isabella M. Lefferts, daughter of Barent and Isabella M. Wetherill Lefferts. They have two children: Isabella M., born December 14, 1942, and Oliver on February 13, 1946, both in New York.

WILLIAM ROQUEMORE EDWARDS. Address, Crawford Street, Dawson, Ga.

ALVIN MICHAEL EHRET, JR. Address, Orchard Lane, Ithaca, Pa.

ADOLF KARL EITNER. Sales manager, Blyth & Company, Inc. (investments), 215 West 6th Street, Los Angeles 14, Calif.; residence, 449 South Alexandria Street, Los Angeles 5.

Eitner was with the National City Company from July, 1926, to May, 1933—in the New York office until December, 1927, and again from 1930 to May, 1931, and in San Francisco the rest of the time. He became sales manager in Blyth & Company's Los Angeles office in January, 1942.

He was first married on April 9, 1932, in San Francisco, to Irma Giuntini, daughter of Angelo and Mary Zaro Giuntini. They were divorced in 1948. On June 3, 1949, he was married in Los Angeles to Louise Yehling Eberly, of Charleston, W.Va., daughter of Henry P. and Emma Mann Yehling. Eitner has three sons: Adolf Karl, Jr., born June 20, 1933, in San Francisco; Donald B., born November 29, 1934, in Pasadena; and Paul, born October 22, 1950, in Los Angeles. The two oldest attend the Loyola High School.

JOHN EDWARDS ELLSWORTH. Vice-president and treasurer, Ensign-Bickford Company, and president and treasurer, Darworth, Inc., Hopmeadow Street, Simsbury, Conn.; residence, Tanager Hill, Simsbury.

Ellsworth is a director of both of the above companies, with which he has been associated since graduation. The Ensign-Bickford Company, of which he became vice-president and treasurer in October, 1942, makes safety and detonating fuses, jute yarns, blasting accessories, and pyrotechnical devices, and Darworth, Inc., of which he has been president and treasurer since May, 1947, manufactures wood and fabric preservatives and insecticides—so a nice balance has been established between potentialities of destruction and preservation. Ellsworth is president and a director of the Village Water Company, a director of the Simsbury Bank & Trust Company and also of Cia. Mexicana de Mecha para Minas, S.A. He served as chairman of the Simsbury Town Plan Commission in 1936, became secretary of the Town Republican Policy Committee in 1950, and for the past twenty-one years has been a director and historian of the Simsbury Historical Society. Prior to 1934 he was a director of the Hartford County Y.M.C.A., and until recently he has been on the boards of the Connecticut Opera Association and the Hartford Symphony Society. Ellsworth is a fellow of the American Geographical Society and a member of the Controllers Institute of America, the Public Relations Society of America, the American Management Association, and the Hartford, Wampanoag Country, and New York Yale clubs. He wrote the History of Simsbury, published in 1935 by the Simsbury Committee for the Tercentenary, 1635-1935, and is also the author of 100 Years—The Ensign-Bickford Company and The Safety Fuse Industry in America—1836-1936, published by the Ensign-Bickford Company.

Married in Hartford on May 5, 1939, to Grace Walker White, daughter of John Holbrook and Elinor Walker White, he has four children: Elinor Walker, born January 21, 1941, Starr on November 4, 1942, Ann Toy on June 11, 1947, and Timothy Edwards on May 12, 1949, all in Hartford.

"Compared with many of my friends and classmates, I married somewhat later and in consequence am only now deep in the problems of raising a large family, with all the attendant responsibilities, including a growing educational load," Ellsworth says. "Much of this is old stuff for most of my classmates, so I shall not supply details.

"Currently my summer interest is gardening and the care of our place, which has about seventy-five acres of abandoned pasture and woodland on which our contemporary style house is located, overlooking Simsbury to the west. Just now we are building a separate annex or guest house which we hope visiting classmates will find comfortable. The family is at the shore near Niantic in the summer, and I commute on week-ends only.

"In the winter our first interest is skiing, which my wife and I do with increasing caution. Before too long we expect our children to outstrip us completely at this sport. We both enjoy fishing, including trout, salmon, and surf-casting for striped bass. We play indifferent 'social' tennis, and I occasionally play golf, but not as frequently as years ago.

"Fundamentally our life is centered on our home and family as it revolves around small town life and my business is an old family concern. That really leaves very little to write about. I wouldn't care to match salaries with the 'big shots' of the Class, but also I wouldn't trade places with them either. My wife and I would be very happy to have classmates passing through Simsbury look us up."

SEWALL EMERSON. Rector, St. Paul's Church, Norwalk, Conn.; residence,
1 St. Paul's Place, Norwalk.

Describing himself as "just a comfortable suburban parson trying to do the job at hand—which generally seems to need three or four more hands than the two I was born with," Emerson says: "My lot has been cast mostly with ecclesiastical rather than academic colleagues, so outside of the crime files [now just what does he mean by that?], I haven't seen much of the Class of '26. Had a couple of chances to move, but they came at moments when something seemed too important here to quit. Now the kids are getting bigger—Samuel B. heading for Class of 1965, exactly one hundred years after his grandfather got a degree from Amherst—maybe it's time to think of a move, maybe not. What with atom bombs and such, suburban life gets bigger and better—and maybe they'll bury me in the old graveyard around this church. Long summers in our ancestral camp in Maine make up for a 24-hour schedule the rest of the year. Hobbies? A parson's job is such fun and so totally unpredictable he has no time nor need for them. But give me the tiller and a good northwester on Penobscot Bay and watch me go places. By the way, Norwalk Green isn't far off the Merritt Parkway, and I don't mind sharing that Christmas Scotch with any of you."

During 1927-28 Emerson was secretary of the New England Student Y.M.C.A. and also studied in the Harvard Graduate School for one semester. He was at Cambridge University from 1928 to 1930, taking his B.A. with honors, graduated from the General Theological Seminary in New York in 1931, and subsequently did graduate work there (1932, 1949, and 1950). He also took special courses in the Yale Divinity School in 1935. He was curate of St. Luke's Chapel, Trinity Parish, New York, during 1931-32 and spent the year 1933 as a novice of the Society of St. John the Evangelist in Cambridge, Mass., and then returned to Trinity Church as curate. He was a curate at Christ Church, New Haven, during 1935-36 and since June of the latter year has been rector of St. Paul's in Norwalk. He has been a delegate to the New England Synod of the Episcopal Church, a member of the board of examining chaplains of the Diocese of Connecticut, and from 1946 to 1948 was president of the Connecticut Priests' Fellowship. He volunteered as a chaplain in 1942, but was "refused by the bishop because too aged." From 1942 to 1945 Emerson served on the Norwalk Ration Board and as an adviser to the Draft Board. He was a member of the board of the Red Cross from 1938 to 1941, of the Community Chest in 1940, and of the Family Service Bureau from 1942 to 1950 and served as president of the Norwalk Cancer Foundation in 1942

Emerson's marriage to Marjorie Van Schaick, daughter of Arthur Patton and Helen Boulton Van Schaick, took place in Southport, Conn., April 8, 1937. Their children are: Elizabeth Van Schaick, born June 26, 1938, Josephine Sewall on December 27, 1940, and Samuel on May 17, 1943, all in Norwalk.

WILLIAM SWADLEY ERWIN. Address, 1104 Euclid Avenue, Bristol, Va.

WALLACE SEELY ESPY. Salesman, Fuller Brush Company; business and residence, 535 Garfield Avenue, Milford, Ohio.

Espy writes: "I was connected with the Southern Ohio Savings Bank & Trust Company for fourteen years in various capacities, including vice-president and treasurer, after studying for a year and a half in England [at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge], France, and Germany. After my discharge from the Army, I joined the State Department Foreign Service Auxiliary and spent a year in Kassel and Berlin, Germany, where I worked on German's Foreign Office documents. It was a fascinating experience and but for my rather large healthy, growing family I would like to return there. Politics has always interested me, and I have been elected twice to the Ohio State Senate and run a third time unsuccessfully. Upon my return from Germany I entered the real estate business as a salesman, then opened up my own office. In the spring of 1950 I moved to Milford, a small town fifty miles out from Cincinnati. Gardening, tennis, and swimming are my hobbies."

Espy went on active duty as a captain in the Army Medical Administration Corps in 1942. He served as adjutant of the 25th General Hospital and of the 4th Auxiliary Surgical Group and then for a time before his discharge as interrogation officer for German prisoners of war. He has been treasurer of the Cincinnati Musical Festival Association since 1940 and has served as superintendent of the Sunday school of St. Thomas' Church and as president of the Cincinnati Yale Club. From 1938 to 1940 he was enrolled in the Graduate School of Banking at Rutgers.

He was married October 4, 1933, in Cincinnati to Ruth Amanda Mitchell, daughter of Frederick B. and Bessie Eva Schmid Mitchell. There are four children in the family, all of whom were born in Cincinnati, Phoebe Ireland on November 3, 1934, Frederick Mitchell on October 1, 1937, James Josiah on February 16, 1939, and Andrew Seely on September 25, 1944. Phoebe attended Miss Porter's School and is at Hillsdale in Cincinnati. Fred and Josh are at the Cincinnati County Day School; Fred will enter St. Paul's in the fall.

STEPHEN MORGAN ETNIER. Artist; address, Welch Gallery, 55 East 57th Street, New York, N.Y.; residence, Old Cove, South Harpswell, Maine.

Etnier is represented by paintings in the Metropolitan Museum, the Boston Museum, the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, the Wadsworth Museum, the Phillips Memorial, the Toledo Museum, the Farnsworth Museum, and the New Britain Museum. He was on active duty in the Navy from 1942 to 1944, serving as commanding officer of U.S.S. Mizpah from November, 1942, to January, 1944, and of the U.S.S. Tourmaline for the next four months and then for three months as navigator of an AKA.

He has been married four times and has four daughters, two of whom are married.

GIFFORD COCHRAN EWING. Assistant oceanographer, Scripps Institution of Oceanography, La Jolla, Calif.; residence, 1205 Muirlands Drive, La Jolla.

From Ewing last May: "Well, I can't make it back to reunion, partly because I have to go to Stanford to see my stepson graduate, partly because I won't leave California, but mostly because of the blue card asking about my weight and collar size. Those last data are top secret, so I won't divulge them either in writing or in photograph or in person. From the length of time it has taken for me to return this form, you will infer that I have not climbed the administrative ladder very far. I'm in no danger of falling. I'm not the head of anything. It's very safe where I sit, and I have a bully time. The trick to getting here is the practice of 'dynamic incompetence,' a discipline I am working out as I go along. The next twenty-five years should put on the finishing touches, and I hope then to get back to a reunion and explain it to all of you. Until then, as Sherm Kent would say, Adios."

Ewing entered active duty as lieutenant (j.g.), U.S.N.R., in September, 1940. For two years he was commanding officer of U.S.S. PC 456, based at Balboa, and was then transferred to PC 576 as commanding officer and was assigned as escort of convoy (Guantanamo, Trinidad, and Recife, Brazil). In 1943 he went to Miami as an instructor at the Anti-Submarine Training Center and the following year became commanding officer of the U.S.S. Frybarger (DE 705), subsequently being on convoy duty in the Atlantic and Mediterranean. Ewing's final assignment prior to his release from active duty with the rank of commander in September, 1945, was at San Diego as tactical officer at the Fleet Sonar School—and California presumably first cast its spell over him then.

Since the war he has been a member of the Volunteer Naval Reserve and has acted as commanding officer of Electronics Unit 11-15 and now is commanding officer of Research Unit 11-5. In 1946 he was at Bikini as an oceanographic observer with the radiological safety section, Operation Crossroads. He is the co-author of "Diffusion in Bikini Lagoon," published in the Transactions of the American Geophysical Union in 1949, and the author of an article, "Relation Between Band Slicks at the Surface and Internal Waves in the Sea," which appeared in Science in 1950, and of "Slicks, Surface Films, and Internal Waves" in the Journal of Marine Research in 1950. Ewing is a member of the American Geophysical Union, the American Society of Limnologists and Oceanographers, and the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

He remained in New Haven from 1926 until 1932, as a graduate student in zoology for three years and then as a member of the staff of the Bingham Oceanographic Laboratories. From 1932 until entering the Navy, he was engaged in farming, and since his release from service he has been at the Scripps Institution of the University of California Graduate School doing research and teaching. He took his M.S. in physical oceanography in 1948 and his Ph.D. two years later. He was an associate in oceanography during 1949-50 and since last April has had an appointment as assistant oceanographer. A current non-professional connection is the vice-presidency of the La Valencia Hotel Corporation of La Jolla.

Ewing was first married June 24, 1926, in Fairfield, Conn., to Frances Leverich Riker, daughter of John L. Riker, of Greens Farms, Conn. They were divorced in 1934. On April 1, 1934, he was married in Annapolis, Md., to Alice Reed Jones Jamison, of New York City, daughter of Archer Telemachus and Annie Boyd Jones. He has four daughters: Alexandra, born December 14, 1927, Frances Riker on September 14, 1933, Jane Gifford on March 14, 1935, and Eva Cochran on February 29, 1936. The oldest girl was born in New Haven and the others in New York. Alexandra, who graduated from Foxcroft in 1946, was married at La Jolla, August 6, 1949, to Harry Payne Whitney, 2d, Yale '50, and has a son, Gifford Cochran, born at Glen Cove, N.Y., September 19, 1950. Frances has also attended Foxcroft, Jane is at the Bishop's School in La Jolla, and Eva at the Frances Parker School in San Diego.

ELLISTON FARRELL. Physician, 117 East 8th Street, Long Beach 13, Calif.; residence, 296 St. Joseph Avenue, Long Beach 3.

Farrell writes: "Life has been good to me in giving me a devoted wife and three sons in whom I take great pride. In addition, I have been privileged to share in the work of an ancient profession dedicated to the relief of human suffering. My regrets aren't very profound, as they have no present bearing. I wish I had not gone to Yale in a phase of antisocial reaction against extracurricular demands which had absorbed so much of the free time of my last two years at Lawrenceville. I wasn't clear on the value and importance of friendships to be formed at Yale—and consequently now have practically none which have withstood the weathering of a quarter century. Why didn't I force myself on Chauncey Tinker? Or the man who instilled in me a still-abiding love for Geoffrey Chaucer—Bob French? These I suppose are my regrets—but suppose I had cultivated student and faculty friendships to the detriment of my work, would I now be a doctor finding complete—and often exhausting—satisfaction in the day's work? Well—there's Oliver and Rowell and always Kent! Brek-ek-ek-ex!"

Farrell, who received his M.D. degree at Johns Hopkins in 1930 and the English degree of D.T.M. and H. in 1936, specializes in internal medicine. He is a member of the American College of Physicians and has contributed articles to professional journals. He was on active duty in the Medical Service of the Army Air Force from August, 1942, to May, 1946, serving first as major and later as lieutenant colonel. His service was in the United States and the South American and Middle East theatres. Farrell is an assistant clinical professor of medicine at U.C.L.A. and a member of the board of directors of the Long Beach Philharmonic Orchestra and the Long Beach Rotary Club.

Mrs. Farrell was Winifred Bates, daughter of Frank A. and Grace Dygert Bates. They were married in Brooklyn, N.Y., on April 27, 1940, and the two oldest boys were born there, William Elliston on February 25, 1941, and John Bradford on December 29, 1942. The youngest, David Thorpe, was born at Randolph Field, Texas, October 4, 1945.

EDWARD ANDREW FAUST, JR. Underwriter, Atlantic Mutual Insurance Company, 49 Wall Street, New York, N.Y.; residence, 138 Kelburne Avenue, North Tarrytown, N.Y.

From April, 1929, to June, 1946, Faust was with the Insurance Company of North America. Since then he has been an underwriter with the Atlantic Mutual Insurance Company (fire and marine insurance).

His marriage to Ruth Morrison, daughter of Frederick C. and Stella Lucas Morrison, took place in New York City on June 3, 1939. They have two children: Edward Andrew, 3d, born on March 24, 1940, and Janet Ruth, born August 1, 1941, both in New York.

ALFRED LUDLOW FERGUSON, JR. Investment adviser, Dominick & Dominick, investment bankers, 14 Wall Street, New York 5, N.Y.; residence, R.F.D. 180A, Atlantic Highlands, N.J.

For a year following his graduation from the Yale Law School in 1929 Ferguson was a law associate with Root, Clark, Buckner & Ballantine in New York. He then went into investment banking—first with the Guaranty Company of New York (1930-33), then with Chisholm & Chapman (1933-39) and Estabrook & Company (1939-46). Since June of the latter year he has been with Dominick & Dominick. He is vice-president, secretary, and a director of the Fishers Island Farms of Fishers Island, N.Y.

In June, 1942, Ferguson was commissioned a captain in the Army Air Force and was subsequently stationed at Mitchel Field, Long Island, and Norfolk, Va. with the 1st Fighter Command. He was assigned in 1943 to Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, as legal officer and remained there until his release in February, 1946. He was in charge of a legal unit until October, 1944, when he was put in charge of the Fiscal Branch of the Procurement Division, Matériel Command, which purchased all Air Force material. Ferguson was promoted to major in 1943 and to lieutenant colonel in 1945.

He was married on June 30, 1928, in Red Bank, N.J., to Janet Kinney, daughter of William B. and Helen Murphy Kinney. Their daughter, Joan, who was born in New York on January 10, 1931, graduated from the Ethel Walker School in 1947 and then entered Vassar as a member of the Class of 1951. Her marriage to George C. Ellis, Jr., Yale '51, took place on October 7, 1950. Alfred Ludlow Ferguson, 3d, who was born October 9, 1936, in New York, is at Hotchkiss.

SAMUEL FERGUSON, JR. Vice-president, Connecticut Power Company, 266 Pearl Street, Hartford, Conn.; residence, Bloomfield, Conn.

Ferguson didn't idle away any time after graduation, but started right in at the summer session of the Harvard Business School. He spent the year 1927-28 at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, and then went to work for Stone & Webster in Boston. In 1928 he took a position as statistician with the Engineers Public Service Company of New York and remained with them until 1931, when he went with the Connecticut Power Company as assistant to the division manager at Canaan. In 1937 he was transferred to New London as division manager and served in that capacity for eleven years. He has been in Hartford since 1948 and in 1949 was made vice-president of the company.

He is a trustee of the Salisbury (Conn.) School, from 1935 to 1937 was a member of the Salisbury Board of Finance and also treasurer of St. John's Church, and in 1943 was campaign chairman of the New London Community Chest. In 1942 he joined the U.S. Coast Guard Reserve as machinist's mate 1/c, and was assigned to a 50-foot patrol boat based in New London until receiving a medical discharge.

He was married in New York, December 28, 1934, to Marian Rand Merrill, daughter of Payson McLane Merrill, Yale '02, and Dorothy Rand Merrill. Her home was formerly on Long Island. The Fergusons have three daughters: Marian Rand, born June 20, 1945, Dorothy Merrill on June 17, 1946, and Jane Gardiner on June 26, 1949, all in New York.

MAURICE GODDARD FIELD. Residence address, Box 2281, Miami Beach 40, Fla.

Field writes: "Due to a nasty sinus condition contracted by my wife, we moved to Florida in 1937. I became a legal resident of this fast developing state when we learned Northern winters would aggravate my wife's sinus ailment. I might add the move has been a propitious one in many ways. To you 'damned Yankees' who have visited this section of the works, Florida means only one thing—Playland. Well, I can't deny it, but you may rest assured business goes on as usual, you must admit in surroundings much more attractive and conducive to work, especially during the cold winter months of the North.

"The list of recreations Florida offers is endless—fishing, hunting, golfing, bathing, racing—ad infinitum—take your pick. Yes, and don't forget during three months of the year, the most beautiful women in the world congregate in this one spot. Fishing and golfing consume most of my recreational hours. I have chased the elusive fish in all the surrounding waters, as well as Cat Cay, Walker Cay, Bimini, and, I guess, every part of the Keys. I have caught my share of practically all varieties in these waters, including blue fin tuna, blue and white marlin, tarpon, and many others. Try it sometime. It is guaranteed great sport. The golfing is superb, and many of the finest courses are located right here on the Southeastern coast. Twice during the winter months you may see your favorite 'pro' when the winter circuit of golfdom's best play here. The ambitious amateur, if he is lucky, can play with this array in the pro-amateur tournaments held at Lagorce and Seminole.

"There is a very active Yale organization, and we are fortunate to have had the crew, basketball team, and the Glee Club on various occasions. But, last but not least, the incomparable Herman Hickman honors us once each year at Christmas time, when he brings his Northern Yankees to play against the Southern Confederates (All Stars) in the famous Orange Bowl. This game is sponsored by the Shrine and, believe me, it's a must in everybody's book.

"The greatest pleasure of all is bumping into many old Yale friends who always come here often during the winter months. Our visits are a real joy and lasting satisfaction.

"All the above sounds as if I were heading a local committee for the sole purpose of boosting Florida. I assure you this is not the case, even though reading between the lines you ascertain I like the place. I admit it and trust my status doesn't change—one never knows, but for the moment, at least, everything is 'jake.' "

From 1926 to 1929 Field was with Chicago Tribune, during the next two years was connected with the Town Tidings Publishing Company, and then from 1931 to 1935 was with the brokerage firm of Doolittle, Schoelkopf & Company. Upon moving to Florida, he became interested in real estate and grazing land. He gave us the following details of his service in the war: "Commissioned lieutenant (j.g.), U.S. Coast Guard Reserve, January 18, 1942. Did anti-submarine and rescue duty off the Florida coast during the early months of the war, operating from the Coast Guard base at Fort Lauderdale. Subsequently, was assigned as Captain of the Port at West Palm Beach and served in that capacity until sea duty orders were received in September, 1943, assigning me to APA 36, otherwise known as the Cambria. We were the flagship for Admiral Harry Hill, now commandant of the Naval Academy. Pacific duty followed, and I stayed with the ship through the Marshall Islands campaigns, including Majure, Kwadjelein, and Eniwetok. Received transfer orders in June, 1944, returning me to Miami as Captain of the Port. I fought the battle of Miami, which was most rugged, until discharged December, 1945. I came out a lieutenant commander. God bless everybody."

As to writings, he says, "Nothing, except blowing off steam to several New and Fair Deal 'know-no-nothings' in Washington." Field was first married in January, 1927, in Buffalo, N.Y., to Gretchen Wettlaufer, daughter of Conrad E. and Irene Taylor Wettlaufer. They were divorced in 1936. In February, 1937, he was married in Greenwich, Conn., to Marian Atchison Meagher, daughter of Clifford Rhodes and Elizabeth Grantland Atchison and widow of Richard Hayes Meagher, Yale '21 S. He has a daughter, Joyce Taylor, born July 12, 1930, in Buffalo, and three stepchildren, Richard Hayes Meagher, Jr., Pauline, and Marianne. Richard, who is now a Junior at Yale, was an ACM 3/c in the Naval Air Reserve during the war; he married Nancy Benton, daughter of Charles Vandenberg Benton, '07 S., and has a son, Richard H., 3d, born July 31, 1950. Marianne was married to Austin L. Smithers, Jr., of Greenwich, Conn., on May 12, 1950, in New York City—"an addition is expected in April." Field's son, Maurice G., Jr., who was born in Chicago, December 2, 1928, died in Buffalo, October 8, 1940.

JAMES BOWLES MARTIN FISHER. Address, Box 900, Beverly Hills, Calif.

WILBUR JEROME FISHER. Physician, 74 Linwood Avenue, Buffalo, N.Y.; residence, 6 Tillinghast Place, Buffalo.

Fisher, who specializes in pediatrics, is assistant professor of pediatrics at the University of Buffalo and attending pediatrician at the Children's Hospital; he is a member of the American Academy of Pediatrics. He took his M.D. at Johns Hopkins in 1930. On August 14, 1942, Fisher entered the armed forces with the rank of captain. He served in the European theatre for eighteen months with the 62d General Hospital and in February, 1944, was promoted to the rank of major. He was discharged from service in May, 1946.

His marriage to Janet Adler Hart, daughter of George and Jane Adler Hart, took place in Philadelphia on March 23, 1939. Their son, Julian Hart, was born in Buffalo on June 10, 1947.

BURNHAM MORRIS FISK. Partner, Seago, Pipin, Bradley & Vetter, lawyers, 135 South LaSalle Street, Chicago 3, Ill.; residence, 1350 Hackberry Lane, Winnetka, Ill.

Fisk graduated from the Harvard Law School in 1929 and was admitted to practice in Illinois in 1930. A partner in Seago, Pipin, Bradley & Vetter since November, 1949, he is specializing in insurance and taxation. He was in England in 1950 from October 4th through the 14th doing business with underwriters at Lloyd's of London. He is a member of the board of directors of the Winnetka Community Chest, a vestryman of Christ Church, and belongs to the Indian Hill Club of Winnetka, the University and Law clubs of Chicago, and the Chicago, Illinois, and American Bar associations.

Fisk's marriage to Martha Louise Seabury, daughter of Charles Ward and Louise Lovett Seabury, took place in Oak Park, Ill., on May 7, 1932. Their older boy, Charles B., who was born in Oak Park on May 12, 1935, goes to the New Trier High School. The other children were also born in Oak Park, Richard D. on February 1, 1938, and Louise L. on February 24, 1942.

HERBERT MORTON FITZGERALD. Colonel, U.S. Army; chief, Terminal Operations Division, New York Port of Embarkation, Brooklyn, N.Y.; residence, Quarters 703-E, Fort Hamilton, Brooklyn 9.

Fitzgerald was connected with the American Export Steamship Corporation from 1925 to 1927 and with The Pennsylvania Railroad for the next fifteen years. In the fall of 1942 he was given military leave and on November 13 went on active duty as a captain in the Transportation Corps. He served in the 8th Service Command until 1944, when he was transferred to the Office of the Chief of Transportation in Washington. He remained there until 1946, served in Manila from 1947 to 1949, and has since been assigned to the New York Port of Embarkation. He has been serving as chief of the Terminal Operations Division there since January 5, 1951. He was promoted to major in 1945, to lieutenant colonel in 1949, and to the temporary rank of colonel last December; since July, 1946, he has been in the Regular Army. Some time ago Fitzgerald was awarded the Commendation Ribbon.

He belongs to the American Society of Traffic and Transportation, Inc., the Union League Club of New York, and the Masonic order. He was married February 5, 1932, in New York City, to Natalie Aspell Muse. They have two sons: John Morton, 2d, born August 16, 1934, in New York, and Preston Hodges, born October 31, 1939, in Freeport. The older boy, who will graduate from the Fort Hamilton High School in Brooklyn in June, 1951, expects to enter the U.S. Military Academy at West Point in July, 1953.

GEORGE HUBERT FRARY, JR. Address, Farmington, Maine.

JOHN THOMAS FRENYEAR. Senior salesman, Business Laboratories, Inc. (office appliances), 61 Broadway, New York 6, N.Y.; residence, 10 5th Avenue, New York 11.

Frenyear was in the book publishing business for a number of years after graduation, his last job in that field being that of sales manager of Aladdin Books in New York. Since October, 1950, he has been senior salesman with the Business Laboratories, Inc. Last year he took courses in publishing, advertising, and sales at New York University. Frenyear is a member of the Yale Club of New York. He mentions that during 1948-49 he was active in the Andover Alumni Fund drive.

His marriage to Elizabeth Redington Arrighi, daughter of Charles Thurber and Mary Pattison Redington Arrighi, took place in New York City on October 20, 1934.

FRANK FRIEDLER. Manager for the state of Louisiana, Home Life Insurance Company of New York; office, 1122 National Bank of Commerce Building, New Orleans, La.; residence, 27 Audubon Boulevard, New Orleans.

"After graduation in 1926 I moved to New Orleans (I was born and raised in Natchez, Miss.) and started out selling life insurance for Home Life," Friedler writes. "I've managed to lose most of my hair and raise a very nice family during that time. Married Frances Thalheimer, whom I met in New Haven, one of the nicest dividends of my Yale education. I've enjoyed living in New Orleans, which combines the advantages of a small Southern town and a large American city. My one regret is that I've never been back to New Haven—my only excuse is that every time I got ready to go to a reunion, an appendectomy, a tuition bill, or a new roof always kept me at home—but I'll be back in June if my plans work out, and I hope my son Frank will enter Yale next fall and I'll be up regularly. We've stuck pretty close to home the last few years, with the exception of a motor trip to Mexico this year enjoyed by the whole family."

Friedler became associate general agent in Louisiana for his company in 1935 and was promoted to manager in July, 1945. He took night courses at Loyola Law School in 1933 and the following year was awarded the degree of Chartered Life Underwriter by the American College of Life Underwriters. He served as president of the New Orleans C.L.U. chapter from 1941 to 1944 and was a director of the national chapter in 1942. From 1939 to 1941 he was president of the Life Managers Association, and he is a director of the New Orleans Life Underwriters Association and the New Orleans Life Insurance Trust Council. He became a member of the Citizens Voluntary Committee in 1939 and since that time has been active in good government elections, serving as poll commissioner. In 1946 he was appointed a member of the Citizens Committee on Parks and Playgrounds. Friedler was campaign chairman for the New Orleans Jewish Welfare Board in 1939 and 1946 and became president of the organization in 1950. He has also served as campaign vice-chairman of the New Orleans Community Chest (1941) and the American Heart Association (1950), as well as being on their boards of directors. From 1946 to 1950 he was chairman of the local chapter of the American Jewish Committee.

His wife is the daughter of Sidney J. and Hulda Dreyfous Thalheimer; they were married at Little Rock, Ark., February 11, 1929. Their daughter, Joan, who was born in New Orleans, August 16, 1931, graduated from the Newman High School in New Orleans in 1949, spent her Freshman year at Harcum Junior College in Bryn Mawr, Pa., and then transferred to the National College of Education in Evanston, Ill. Frank, Jr., now a Senior at Exeter, was born January 28, 1934, also in New Orleans.

JOSEPH X. FRIEDMAN. Address, 132 Magnolia Street, Hartford, Conn.

SAMUEL HIRAM FRIEDMAN. Lawyer, 647 Main Street, Hartford, Conn.; residence, 22 Winchester Street, Hartford.

Friedman, who is engaged in the general practice of law in association with his brother, A. R. Friedman, a graduate of the Yale Law School, is treasurer and a director of both the Wolcott Homes, Inc., and the Goodwin Homes, Inc. He is a member of the Hartford County Bar Association, the State Bar Association, the American Judicature Society, and the Harvard Club of Connecticut (which latter would appear to indicate that it was at Harvard that he studied law). Friedman has never married.

He went on active duty as a private in the Army on March 18, 1942, and was placed on an inactive status on March 2, 1946, with the rank of major. We would certainly like to have more details, but he left them all to our imagination.

THEODORE WOOD FRIEND, JR. Partner, McKelvy & Company, brokers, 1146 Union Trust Building, Pittsburgh 19, Pa.; residence, 5812 Solway Street, Pittsburgh 17.

Friend has been a partner in McKelvy & Company, members of the New York and Pittsburgh Stock exchanges, since April 1, 1939. All he tells us about his previous business connections is that they were "various," adding, "Still working on the first million, but manage two weeks in New Jersey in the summer and two trips a year to Hot Springs."

Friend's marriage to Jessica W. Holton, daughter of George E. and Jessica Williams Holton, took place in Wheeling, W.Va., on April 23, 1930. Her home was in Bethlehem, Pa., before she was married. Theodore W. Friend, 3d, who was born in Pittsburgh in 1931, is a Sophomore at Williams, and the younger boy, Charles W., born in Pittsburgh, in 1933, is a Senior at St. Paul's.

DWIGHT SHEPPART GABRIEL. Address, Route 1, Crown Point, Ind.

JAMES WORDEN GAGE. Manager, Reading office, Harriman Ripley & Company, Inc., investment bankers, 400 Colonial Trust Building, Reading, Pa.; residence, 111 Kentway, West Reading.

Gage has held the above position since 1944. His previous connections were as follows: Harris Forbes & Company, 1926-33; Paine Webber & Company, 1933-34; Butcher & Sherrerd, 1934-37, and again, 1938-44; Blyth & Company, 1937-38. He is vice-president of the Children's Aid Society of Reading, a member of the budget committee of the Community Chest, and was formerly treasurer of the Y.M.C.A.

"Voted wrong every presidential election since 1928" is his answer to our question about political activities. "No head-line material at all," he adds. "The necessity of earning a living has curtailed travel opportunities, but has left enough time for social agency affiliations, with tennis in the summer (won mixed doubles tournament at Berkshire Country Club [Reading], 1950, with my daughter Barbara as partner) and handball in winter (local Y champion, 1936-42). Service as local interviewer for Freshman candidates for Yale has provided a tie with the University which has proved most pleasant. My greatest satisfaction has been my family. My two youngsters fortunately favor their mother and give good promise of becoming citizens of real value to the community."

Mrs. Gage was Emma Wright Wyper, daughter of James and Emma Thompson Wyper. They were married in Hartford, Conn., on June 18, 1927. The children were both born in Reading, Barbara H. on October 7, 1928, and James W., Jr., on December 4, 1931. Barbara, who graduated from Vassar in 1950, is currently employed by the Educational Testing Service (College Entrance Examination Board) in Princeton, N.J.—“any one have an entrance problem?” Jim, Jr., entered the Freshman Class at Yale in the fall of 1950.

WILLIAM WELCH GAINES. Address, 56 Laurel Road, New Haven, Conn.

WILLIAM DENNISON GALLUP. Partner, Gallup, Potter & Gallup, lawyers, 500 Hooker Fulton Building, Bradford, Pa.; residence, Vista Avenue Extension, Bradford.

“To put it baldly,” says Gallup, “I developed a highly polished manner and appearance on the pate—at first mistakenly believing the cause was frequent showers in Harkness, but later attributed to Darwinian heredity. I lived in single blessedness from 1926 to June, 1931, in New York City, while selling face brick for the Hanley Company and helping to build the city’s majestic skyline. Then deciding to study law, studied in Columbia Graduate and Extension schools to rekindle the academic frame of mind in the winter of 1930-31; then cruised up the Great Lakes and matriculated in the Yale Law School in the fall of 1931. Spent three interesting years there and at Harriet Robbins’ home on St. Ronan Street. After graduating with a legal mind, took her unto me as a spouse (ux to you) in December, 1934, depriving her of a law degree after one year’s study in Yale Law School. Boys, it’s great to have a wife who can patiently, appreciatively, and intelligently listen to yourself discoursing on your legal accomplishments over the dinner table.

“Recreations include playing golf whenever possible, annual deer-hunting and penny-anteing at Clermont Rod and Gun Club, the best deer-hunting territory in Pennsylvania, an annual bathing session with the family at Atlantic City, and flower gardening, etc., around home. On May 17, 1950, we moved into our new home nestled in the hills on the outskirts of Bradford, which has all the facilities and scenic view to make staying at home with the family something to brag about—there is plenty of room there always to accommodate an itinerant classmate and his wife who may be passing through Bradford—the oil metropolis of the world—the home of 100 per cent Pennsylvania crude oil.”

Gallup began to practice in 1934 in the law office of Gallup & Potter and was admitted to partnership in the firm two years later. In 1934 he had been admitted to practice in all Pennsylvania State Courts and the Federal Court. His practice is a general one. During 1948-49 he was president of the Grant & Mohan Oil Company of Bradford. He is a vestryman of the Church of the Ascension in Bradford, in 1940 was a member of the standing and executive committees of the Episcopal Diocese of Erie, and in 1946 a deputy to the General Convention of the Episcopal Church. Gallup has been a director of the Family Welfare Association since 1935 (board president, 1943), chairman of McKean County Local Board 101 of the Selective Service and a member of the advisory board of the Salvation Army since 1945 (chairman, 1947-49), and was president of the local Kiwanis Club in 1940 and lieutenant-governor of the Pennsylvania district in 1941. He belongs also to the Bradford Club, the Pennhills Club of Bradford, all Masonic orders, including Union Lodge, No. 334, the Bradford Royal Arch Chapter, and the Coudersport Consistory, the Newcomen Society, the International Association of Insurance Counsel, the American Judicature Society, the American Bar Association, the Pennsylvania State Bar Association (member, executive committee, and regional director), and the McKean County Bar Association.

Mrs. Gallup is the daughter of Edward Densmore Robbins, Yale '74, and Charlotte Eleanor Swan Robbins. They were married in New Haven on December 8, 1934. The children were all born in Bradford, Margaret Robbins on September 26, 1935, Edward Robbins on January 22, 1940, and Frederick William on January 7, 1944. Margaret is a Sophomore at the Bradford High School.

NATHAN WILLIAM GARFIN. Address, 21 Bank Street, New York 14, N.Y.

ARTHUR GARRETT. President, Garrett Development Company, Inc., Jefferson County Telephone System, Inc., Port Townsend Southern Stages, Inc. and Quilcene Land Company, Inc.; business and residence address, 600 Rose Street, Quilcene, Wash.

Garrett managed to snatch a few moments from his multitudinous activities to write us—"Professor Stanley Williams used to teach Emerson in Freshman English, and particularly his essay on self-reliance. This has proved most uncomfortable, because like much of Professor Williams' teaching, I haven't been able to forget it. After college, I had one of the best opportunities a young man could have: a good job in Wall Street with the top man in a top industry. But it was Emerson who advised me to get out and go to law school.

"After law school, and a short interval as business manager of a Mid-Western college [Parsons College, Fairfield, Iowa] which didn't fully appreciate the hard-boiled tactics of an ex-Wall Streeter to balance the college budget—came a five-year apprenticeship with the most New Dealish of all Mr. Roosevelt's New Deal: the Farm Security Administration.

"My formal education complete, I returned to Quilcene, a small town of some 650 people in the wilderness of the Olympic Peninsula of Washington, some twelve miles south of Betty McDonald's Egg and I ranch. The Olympic Peninsula is one of the most gorgeous places in the world: high mountains, tall evergreen timber, and the deep blue sea all together. The climate is mild, and in this Garden of Eden are no poisonous snakes and few ways to make money.

"In an area of some 400 square miles in the eastern portion of the Olympic Peninsula, the most beautiful part, we are endeavoring to build up a modern telephone system; and along the eastern side of the peninsula, we are building up an 80-mile bus line. I work and sweat with the line crew of our telephone company and take my turn operating a bus over the wild curves and mountain roads, besides performing all the work of the purchasing, accounting, auditing, legal, rates and valuations, and engineering departments, with the advertising, personnel, and public relations thrown in after dinner. A friend of mine, a Southern gentleman from Mississippi, feels that surely there must be an easier and more profitable way for a Yale man to make a living. But I wouldn't want it.

"And if the Olympic Peninsula develops, and the telephone business, and the bus business, and our real estate holdings prosper, then we will have money enough to bring into being and develop Jefferson College, which we incorporated several years ago."

And how he does it we don't know, but at present Garrett is also serving as commissioner and vice-president of Jefferson County Public Utility District No. 1 and a member for Jefferson County of the Washington State Democratic Central Committee (since 1945; on the platform and resolutions committee, Washington State conventions, 1946, 1948, and 1950). In recent years he has also been secretary of the Washington Public Utility Commissioners Association, advertising chairman and a director of the Jefferson County Fair Association, president of the Quilcene Community Association and the Quilcene Music and Arts Club, treasurer and a trustee of the Quilcene Friends Church, and master of the Quilcene Grange. He is a member of the Subordinate Pomona (State and National Granges), the Port Townsend and North Olympic Chambers of Commerce, and the Phi Alpha Delta legal fraternity. He took his LL.B. at the University of Washington in 1939 and was admitted to practice (State and Federal bars) that year. Public and corporation law are his specialties; he served as prosecuting attorney for Jefferson County during 1945-46.

Garrett's Wall Street job (1926-37) was with Henry L. Doherty & Company (Cities Service Company); he was successively analyst, chief of the organization and methods division, and secretary to (and special assignments for) the chief executive. He has been president and a director of the four companies listed in the heading since 1945.

He was married in Westport, Conn., September 4, 1926, to Marguerite Wuest, daughter of Richard and Anna Oltmann Wuest. His older daughter, Nancy Anna, who was born in Norwalk, Conn., October 7, 1927, was married June 28, 1947, to Richard Brown and has two children, Carol Ann, born October 23, 1948, and Katherine, born August 27, 1950. Eleanor, born May 16, 1929, in New York City, attended the University of Washington from 1947 to 1949. Her marriage to Homer Scoville Smith, Jr., took place on March 19, 1950.

HENRY HOTCHKISS GARRISON. Lawyer, with Lord, Day & Lord, 25 Broadway, New York 4, N.Y., and Marsh & Garrison, 1 East Putnam Avenue, Greenwich, Conn.; residence, 53 Indian Field Road, Greenwich.

Garrison worked for the Union & New Haven Trust Company from 1926 to 1929 and then took up the study of law at Yale. In 1932 he received his LL.B. degree and was admitted to the Connecticut Bar. He was in the law office of Parmelee & Thompson in New Haven until 1934 and with Cummings & Lockwood in Stamford for the next two years. He was actively associated with Edson & Edson, Inc., in Greenwich from 1936 to 1940 and still has a connection with the firm, although it is apparently a side issue. He has been with Marsh & Garrison since 1940 and with Lord, Day & Lord since 1941, specializing in estates, trusts, and real estate. He is a director of Fairfield Marine Products of Stamford.

On September 3, 1937, Garrison was married in Bedford, N.Y., to Jean Curtiss Gibbons Edson, of Greenwich, daughter of Lee W. Gibbons, '02 S., and Jean B. Curtiss Gibbons. They have had two children: Jane Trowbridge, who was born and died in New York on April 3, 1938, and Helen Hotchkiss, born in Greenwich on June 11, 1942.

A good working knowledge of Alice in Wonderland provided him with just the right response (from his point of view) to good old Question 21:

I have answered a score and that's enough
Pray Sir, don't give yourself airs
Do you think I spend the whole day on such stuff?
Be off, or I'll kick you downstairs.

CHARLES MARVIN GATES. Address, History Department, University of Washington, Seattle 5, Wash.

HAROLD CARL GEYER. Artist, writer, and lecturer; business address, 237 West 14th Street, New York 11, N.Y.; residence, 200 East 66th Street, New York 21.

Geyer, who studied at the Yale School of Architecture (B.F.A. 1930) and at the Beaux Arts at Fontainebleau, divides his time between etching, demonstrations, lectures on art, France, war posters, etc., and writing. In 1945 he conducted an etching workshop at New York Town Hall—an eight-session practical course in etching where the students etched their own Christmas cards. That year he received the third Purchase Prize at the Library of Congress Pennell Exhibition. He has also exhibited with the shows of the Society of American Etchers, the National Academy, and the New Age Gallery.

One of his most recent lectures, "In the Studio of the Unconscious," is described as being "as gripping as a good detective story and as convincing as a newsreel . . . a revelation not only of artistic creation but also of psychoanalysis itself, one of the most discussed yet least understood phenomena of our time."

Both of Geyer's books, All Men Have Loved Thee, A Song of France, and the Long Way Home, A Song of France, were published by Richard R. Smith, New York, the first in 1941 and the second in 1949. "These reflect my travels, hobbies, special interests, etc., to a high degree," Geyer says. "The first of these volumes combined the letters and etchings of an art student with simulated Paris newspaper pages to set forth the political and social turmoil of France in 1933-34 against the familiar background of historic French culture. The Long Way Home, similar in treatment, continues the same theme up to the war, plus psychological delvings into the author's preoccupation with France, her formidable femmes du peuple, and her glorious cathedrals. It need hardly be pointed out that the last passion was notably shared by the 1920-30 builders of Yale. If any one is interested in the whys and wherefores of such nostalgia for the Middle Ages, I refer them to The Long Way Home." And we quote a comment of Billy Phelps on All Men Have Loved Thee: "I regard Mr. Geyer's book as a work of amazing power and beauty, and I have not seen anywhere a more dramatic expression of the tragedy of France. It deserves superlative praise."

When Geyer wrote in December, 1950, he said that he was an associate (elect) of the National Academy. He has been for some time an associate of Le Société Académique de l'Aube (Troyes) and is serving at present as treasurer of the Society of American Etchers, Gravers, Lithographers, and Woodcutters.

In July, 1944, he was married in New York to Ina Helen Doane, daughter of John Edward W. and Adelaide Knowles Doane.

HAROLD RAYMOND GIBLIN. Lawyer, 149 Broadway, New York, N.Y.; residence, 4 Winthrop Place, Maplewood, N.J.

Writing early last May, Giblin said, "I recently returned from a business trip to Europe. We flew from Boston to Paris in ten hours (with the help of a 115-mile an hour tail wind), which must be close to a record."

Giblin, who graduated from the Brooklyn Law School with the degree of LL.B. in 1938, after taking evening courses there, has been independently engaged in the practice of law in New York since his admission to the New York State Bar in 1939. He attended the Harvard Business School during 1927-28 and before World War II was a financial auditor with the A. & P. Tea Company and executive secretary and counsel of the American Lace Manufacturers Association. Since the war he has been vice-president and a director of the Mayflower Distributors and the Drum Company, vice-president of the National Safety Razor Company and the Artistic Latex Company, and president and a director of the Haden Sales Company. He is a member of the Phi Delta Phi legal fraternity.

He entered the Army in April, 1942, as a lieutenant colonel in the Quartermaster Corps and was on active duty until May, 1946. He gives the following details: "Organized and operated during the war and de-activated at close of war, a Quartermaster procurement for all overseas Post Exchanges. The Quartermaster assumed this responsibility for the duration of World War II only. Over one and a quarter billion dollars of merchandise was purchased under my supervision and responsibility and shipped to overseas bases." Giblin received a commendation for his work. A number of speeches which he made in the course of his military duties were published in newspapers and magazines on various occasions.

He was married on Christmas Day, 1936, in Cambridge, Mass., to Dorothy Frances Egan, daughter of Charles B. and Florence Atkinson Egan. They have two children: Peter Atkinson, born October 31, 1941, and Gail Kemp on December 29, 1945, both in Maplewood.

SAMUEL HATFIELD GILBERT. Traffic manager, Baldwin Locomotive Works, Eddystone, Pa.; residence, R.D. 1, Wayne, Pa.

From 1923 to 1937 Gilbert worked in the traffic department of the Reading Company and during the next six years was with the Cranberry Improvement Company (anthracite coal production). Since then he has been traffic manager of the Baldwin Locomotive Works at Eddystone. He is a director of Turkey Run Fuels, Inc., and the West Shenandoah Land Company and a trustee of West Virginia Lands.

His marriage to Nancy Drayton, daughter of William Heyward and Phoebe Voorhees Drayton, took place in Elkins Park, Pa., on June 4, 1927. Mrs. Gilbert's home was formerly in Melrose Park, Pa. They have five children, all of whom were born in Philadelphia, Samuel Hatfield, Jr., on April 13, 1928, Theodore Voorhees on June 3, 1929, Joan on July 20, 1932, William Pepper on June 21, 1934, and Allen on December 5, 1943. Theodore was married August 15, 1950, at Valley Forge, Pa., to Gloria Metzger. He and Sam, Jr., are both in training with 28th Reconnaissance Company of the 28th Pennsylvania Division at Camp Atterbury, Ind. Sam graduated from St. Paul's in 1946 and from Yale in 1950. Theodore graduated from the Cheltenham High School in 1947, Joan is now at Bryn Mawr, after attending the Ethel Walker School, and William is at the Haverford School.

JOHN THOMAS GILLESPIE, JR. Sales manager, Watson Stillman Company, manufacturers of heavy hydraulic machinery and forged steel pipe fittings, Roselle, N.J.; residence, Mt. Kemble Avenue, Morristown, N.J.

From July, 1926, to May, 1929, Gillespie was in the import and export business with L. C. Gillespie & Sons and from then until 1931 was with Charles D. Barney & Company (investment securities). In September, 1932, he became connected with the Air Reduction Company as a salesman. He was subsequently assistant sales manager (railroad sales) and assistant to the president of the Wilson Welder & Metals Division and then from October, 1940, to November, 1944, was loaned to the War Production Board in Washington on a dollar-a-year basis. Gillespie, who has been associated with the Watson Stillman Company since November, 1944, was manager of export sales until October, 1948, when he was made sales manager.

On June 18, 1927, he was married in Syracuse, N.Y., to Virginia B. Kingsbury, daughter of Edward A. and Sarah Baxter Kingsbury. Their older daughter, Sarah Eleanor, who was born in Morristown, March 28, 1928, graduated from the Holton Arms School in Washington in 1945 and from Holton Arms Junior College, cum laude, two years later. Their younger daughter, Virginia, was born in Syracuse, July 20, 1932, and died in Morristown, March 25, 1940.

"We have rocked along these past twenty-three years, having our ups and downs the same as others have," Gillespie says. "As dictated by my business activities, we have lived successively in New York, Morristown, Chicago, Morristown, Washington, New York, and now, at last, and we hope finally, back in Morristown. Living in Morristown is particularly pleasant for many reasons: 1) we have a comfortable and unusual new house on a large estate about four miles out in the country; 2) many of my immediate relatives are residents of the community, including my father ('94 Sheff) and mother (1900 Vassar), brother, Louis ('27 Ac) and wife, and two younger sisters, complete with husbands and children; 3) we have many good friends living in or near Morristown; 4) I have, at long last, an easy nineteen-mile commute over lightly traveled country roads to and from my job."

REDFIELD BYRON GILLETT. Managing partner, The Gillett Company (personal investments), Smethport, Pa.; residence, Smethport.

Back in 1929 Gillett was with the Harriman National Bank & Trust Company in New York. The following year he became connected with Schoellkopf, Hutton & Pomeroy (investment securities) in Buffalo, and he was later (1943-45) an expeditor with Sylvania Electric Products at Emporium, Pa. At the present time, in addition to his connection with The Gillett Company, he is a director of the Hamlin Bank & Trust Company of Smethport, treasurer of St. Luke's Episcopal Church, and vice-president of the Community Chest. He was formerly president of the Rotary Club, chairman of the Red Cross, and master of his Masonic lodge.

Gillett's marriage to Dorothy Margaret Pontzer, daughter of Fred J. and Clare Vollmer Pontzer, took place in St. Marys, Pa., on April 21, 1940.

"I have done quite a lot of traveling—to Europe once, South America twice, California eight times, Mexico, Central America, the Caribbean Islands, and Florida many times," he says.

DANIEL TRIMBLE GILMAN. Address, Box 550, Orlando, Fla.

JOHN MACARTHUR GLEASON. Address, 272 Ash Street, Manchester, N.H.

SHERMAN FRANCIS GLENDINING. Address, 644-D Beverly Road, Teaneck, N.J.

NATHAN GOLDBERG. Lawyer, 157 Church Street, New Haven 10, Conn.; residence, 122 Richards Street, West Haven.

Goldberg graduated from the Yale Law School in 1928 and has since been engaged in the general practice of law in New Haven, with the exception of the period from February, 1943, until September, 1945, when he was in the Army. Since July, 1949, he has been prosecutor of the West Haven Municipal Court. He served as legislative chairman of the Veterans of Foreign Wars during 1948 and 1949 and is at present co-chairman. He is on the board of control of the Exchange Club of West Haven and belongs also to the Probus Club.

His marriage to Esther Claire Singer, daughter of Morris P. and Rebecca Cypers Singer, took place in Stamford, Conn., on April 15, 1948. Mrs. Goldberg formerly lived in Ansonia, Conn. They have a son, Joel Mark, who was born in New Haven on October 6, 1950.

JULIAN CAVERLY GONZALEZ. Address, 20 Hillside Drive, Greenwich, Conn.

ERNEST FOSTER GORDON. Physician, 27 Ludlow Street, Yonkers 5, N.Y.; residence, 72 Highview Terrace, Yonkers 5.

Gordon writes: "In 1930 I was graduated from Johns Hopkins Medical School with the degree of M.D. I then served as house officer in pediatrics at the Harriet Lane Home, Johns Hopkins Hospital, during 1930-31. During 1931-32 I was a house officer at the New Haven Hospital in the department of pediatrics and during 1932-33 was assistant resident. From 1933 to 1938 I was a clinical assistant in pediatrics at New Haven Hospital and in 1938 was promoted to the rank of clinical instructor. I was in private practice from 1933 to 1939, when I moved to Yonkers, where I have been specializing in pediatrics since.

"Since graduation I have been to Europe once. This was in 1929. Studied at the University of Berlin for six months. Took a month off trying to do some mountain climbing in and around Zermatt. Didn't get too far with it. Since 1935 have done a fair amount of traveling with Flo (my wife)—to Bermuda, Havana, Canada, Texas, New Orleans, and numerous trips to Florida. There are more ambitious plans for travel to faraway places after our children have grown up.

"The move to Yonkers in 1939 was a wise one. I have been able to establish a successful practice here. It has afforded me numerous opportunities to be near the large medical centers. I have often wanted to be able to get inside a laboratory to work on some original problems in medicine, but it can't be done when one is engaged in private practice. Something has to be sacrificed if one tries to do both, and I am fully aware of the fact that I am a better clinician than a 'researcher.'

"I haven't seen too many of my former classmates from Yale. That has been my fault; perhaps I could have made that possible with more effort, but whenever I could get 'away from it all' it was usually to be away from crowds and conversation. I am looking forward to 1951 to see what I have missed."

During the war Gordon was examining physician for Local Board 731 in Yonkers. He is a member of the board of the Family Service Society in Yonkers and was formerly vice-president and a trustee of Temple Emanuel there. He is a trustee of the Israel Gordon Foundation Trust and president of Israel Gordon's Sons, Inc. Gordon, who was licensed by the American Board of Pediatrics some time ago, is a fellow of the American Academy of Pediatrics and the American Medical Association. He has had articles in the Journal of Experimental Biology and Medicine, the Journal of Pharmacology and Therapeutics, the Versammlung für Vergiftungsfällen (Berlin), the Yale Journal of Biology and Medicine, the Archives of Pediatrics, the Journal of Pediatrics, and the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Mrs. Gordon was Florence Oppenheim, daughter of Isaac and Dora Rudy Oppenheim, of Yonkers. They were married in New York City, August 16, 1931, and have three sons: Paul Edward, born July 4, 1936, in New Haven, Daniel Richard on March 31, 1939, in Yonkers, and Richard Ian on September 21, 1946, in New York City. The oldest boy is in the third form at the Horace Mann School, Riverdale, N.Y.

SAMUEL M. GORDON. Address, 280 West Rock Avenue, New Haven 15, Conn.

CHAUNCEY PORTER GOSS, 3D. Vice-president, Scovill Manufacturing Company (metal fabricating), 99 Mill Street, Waterbury, Conn.; residence, Midfield, Middlebury, Conn.

Goss, who became connected with the Scovill Manufacturing Company upon graduating from Yale, has been vice-president of the company since 1940 and a member of the board of directors since 1944. He is also a director of the Colonial Trust Company of Waterbury, the Waterbury Savings Bank, and the Mattatuck Historical Society and president, director, and a member of the executive committee of the Waterbury Hospital.

His marriage to Natalie Holbrook, daughter of Harry and Eleanore Williams Holbrook, took place in Madison, Conn., on June 2, 1928. Her home was in New York City before she was married. They have three daughters, all of whom were born in New Haven, Diana on September 1, 1929, Cassandra on June 16, 1933, and Tania on November 17, 1937. The oldest girl, who graduated from the Ethel Walker School in 1947, is a Senior at Bryn Mawr. Cassandra is in the Class of 1951 at the Garrison Forest School.

Goss writes briefly: "With the exception of an occasional shooting, fishing, or skiing trip to Canada, I have paid attention to raising my family and raising the money to pay my income tax. Both jobs become harder as the years go by, so I guess they'll take up most of my time in the future." [These and worrying about the Class Treasury. Somehow he has kept us vaguely solvent since 1926, but we are confident that this book will put an end to that. Ed.]

ERNEST HOLLAND HILBERT GRAF. General manager, Michigan Brooch Company (metal cutting tools and equipment), 10371 Northlawn Street, Detroit 4, Mich.; residence, 519 Wimbleton Street, Birmingham, Mich.

Graf says that he has had a very ordinary but pleasant life in a nice clean business, adding, "Regrets are the passing of my first very nice wife and thanks for finding another as nice. Two good girls in a lifetime are more than I deserved. The years have been plentifully dotted with some fine hunting trips and much competitive shot gun shooting; grand friends, many who have lasted all the years from college and before; good interest in Yale, probably occasioned by gratitude at having been able to go there to school by virtue of the Alumni Association of Wisconsin Scholarship. Nothing great nor inspiring accomplished, but I have two swell kids and have had two swell wives and enough to eat and good friends and a darn good business. Just a middle road guy, and I love it!"

From 1927 to 1946 Graf was district manager for the Detroit area of the Oilgear Company of Milwaukee. He then became associated with the U.S. Brooch Company and since April, 1950, has been general manager of Michigan Brooch. He belongs to the Detroit Boat Club, the Orchard Lake Country Club, and the Graduate Club Association.

His first wife was Rubyjane Burkhardt, daughter of Edward W. and Eva Brickhauer Burkhardt. They were married in Milwaukee in 1930; her death occurred in 1939. In 1941 Graf married Ruth Estelle Bentley in Detroit. Her parents are Charles Henry and Minnie K. Mondary Bentley. The children, Marnie Holland, born January 10, 1937, and Ann Burkhardt, born May 16, 1939, have attended the Brookside and Kingswood schools in Cranbrook.

CARLO HENRY GRANDE. Owner and president, Sunny Ridge Packing Company (macaroni sauce); business and residence, "Sky High," Four Rod Road, Hamden, Conn.

Grande, who did graduate work at the New York School of Social Work and New York University, was superintendent of the Boys' Club of New York from 1929 to 1936. He now combines his business (they prepare and pack macaroni sauce for consumer trade—a mail order business) with work as guidance counselor at the Hamden High School. While in New York, he was a member of the First District Republican Club and the Italian American Independent Club, and at present he belongs to Local 108, A.F. of L., the Connecticut Federation of Teachers, and the Exchange Club of Hamden, of which he was vice-president in 1948 and president the following year.

Grande was married some years ago and has two sons, Carlo Henry, 2d, born on August 3, 1936, in New York City, and George Henry, born October 9, 1946, in Hamden. The older boy is a Freshman at the Hamden High School.

Grande writes: "My travels have been limited to the good old U.S.A., thanks to a position I held as a traveling salesman for the Goodrich Rubber Company shortly after graduation. I have been able to get my recreation on my 22-acre farm 'Sky High,' in Hamden, where I have lived for the past fourteen years. There are plenty of lawn, flowers, and woodland to take care of here for my personal enjoyment.

"After all these years, as I look back, it seems that the special interest which seems to have been consistent year in and year out has been a deep interest in problem children, delinquents. Working with them in Boys' Club work in New York City and now as guidance counselor at Hamden High has been a real source of joy.

"As I look back, I feel deeply satisfied with the way I have handled my life's problems and thankful forever to Yale which gave me a wonderful start and background. My one regret has been that throughout the years I haven't been able to do for Yale in a financial way, what Yale has done for me in a spiritual way. However, there is still time left, who knows?"

DONALD STUART GRANNISS. Address, "Windrift," Middlebury, Conn.

ASHBEL GREEN, JR. Auctioneer, Kaliski & Gabay, Inc., auctioneers and appraisers, 88 University Place, New York, N.Y.; residence, 10 East 95th Street, New York 28.

Green writes: "After leaving Yale somewhat prematurely, I got together with Rockwell and Bermingham and wandered around Europe during the summer of 1925, which was a daisy time to be there on account of the exchange. I got back the following year and went to work (if it can be so termed) in Wall Street, where the livin' was easy, until that October of 1929, when, along with a couple of others, I suddenly discovered that there was a little more to the financial business than a few well-heeled friends. Stuck it out until 1931 and from then until 1940 engaged in a series of activities of varied natures, none of which did much more than feed me. In 1940 I discovered the auction business, in which I have been continuously and most happily engaged to date, in various capacities.

"I haven't swung a golf club since 1939, and such energy-expending activities as I now permit myself consist of a brisk one-block walk to a subway, bus, or taxi; I do lie on the beach a few times during the summer, but rarely tangle with the surf.

"My hobbies are those of amateur chef and collector of cook books. It is unnecessary to add that as a result of these hobbies, plus my lack of interest in exercise, I weigh a little more than when at Yale. None the less I received a fine bill of health on my most recent annual physical check-up."

Green's first job was with Dominick & Dominick—from 1927 to 1929. He was with White, Weld & Company for the next two years and was sales manager for the Lexington Foundation from 1935 to 1940. It was then that he entered the line of work about which he is so enthusiastic. He was with Silo's Auction Galleries until 1947, vice-president of the Loree-Green Corporation from then until 1950, and has since been with Kaliski & Gabay. Green served as a trustee of the Village of Mt. Kisco from 1947 to 1948. He belongs to the Yale and Zeta Psi clubs of New York.

He was married January 8, 1927, in New York, to Katherine Murchison, daughter of Kenneth and Aurelie De Mauriac Murchison. They were divorced in 1931. On January 3, 1938, he married, in Hanover, N.J., Virginia L. Hornung Redgate, of London. She is the daughter of Henri and Cora M. Watson Hornung. Ashbel Green, 3d, who was born March 15, 1928, in New York, graduated from Kent in June, 1944. He spent the next two years in the Navy, at the time of his discharge ranking as an ensign, and is at present in the active Naval Reserve. In 1946 he entered Columbia (from which his maternal grandfather was graduated); he graduated in 1950 and is now back studying for his master's degree in history.

WILLIAM BURT GREENMAN. Owner, William Burt Greenman, investment counsel, 25 Broad Street, New York 4, N.Y.; residence, 80 Bellows Lane, Manhasset, N.Y.

In 1928 Greenman received the degree of M.B.A., with distinction, at the Harvard Business School. Prior to establishing his own business in July, 1949, he was connected with the Farmers Loan & Trust Company of New York, Burco, Inc. (an investment trust), and the investment counsel firm of Van Cleef, Jordan & Wood (1932-49). Greenman is a director of the Brooklyn Builders Supply Company and is active in the Community Chest and other local civic activities.

His marriage to Hope Graham, daughter of King Robinson and Mary Louise Graham, took place in New York City on January 14, 1933. They have two daughters: Valerie Greenman, born on May 11, 1935, and Constance on January 21, 1938, both in Mineola, N.Y. The older girl has attended the Buckley County Day School at Great Neck and Friends Academy at Locust Valley.

JAMES COWAN GREENWAY, JR. Associate curator of birds, Museum of Comparative Zoology, Harvard College, Cambridge, Mass.; residence, Wellesley, Mass.

"During the past twenty years I have lived with a great many birds, beasts, fish, and people all over the world." Greenway discloses. "Maybe the most pertinent comment on all this has been attributed to an ancient pedagogue. Winding up a talk on the inheritance of acquired characteristics, he said: 'There is a certain Jewish rite which has been continued for many thousands of years. It would appear to be probable that if acquired characteristics were inherited, the result would have become apparent. The fact is that it has not become so. This fact would seem to prove Emerson's contention that "there is a destiny which shapes our ends rough hew them as we may." ' "

The contacts with people presumably outnumbered those with fish, fowl, etc., in the period from 1926 to 1928, when he was a reporter on the Brooklyn Daily Eagle. In 1929 he joined the American Museum of Natural History as a collector and since 1930 has been on the staff of the Museum of Comparative Zoology at Harvard, becoming associate curator of birds in 1933. Greenway has written many papers on the subject of natural history and is a fellow of the American Ornithologists Union.

He was on active duty in the Naval Reserve from May, 1942, to November, 1945, working on ships and at shore stations at Guadalcanal, Munda, Manus, Hollandia (New Guinea), Leyte, Manila, and Okinawa. He was awarded the Bronze Star and in 1944 was promoted to lieutenant commander.

Greenway was married in Wellesley on October 31, 1931, to Helen Livingston Scott, daughter of Hugh Davids and Helen Livingston Scott. They have three children, all of whom were born in Boston, James Cowan, 3d, in 1933, Hugh Davids Scott in 1935, and Helen Livingston Scott in 1940.

LINCOLN HAYS GRIES. Vice-president and general manager, The M. O'Neil Company (department store), Akron 8, Ohio; residence, 1964 Stockbridge Road, Akron 13.

The M. O'Neil Company, of which Gries has been vice-president and general manager since 1937, is a branch of the May Department Stores Company. Gries has been in their employ since graduation, spending one year at the May Company in Cleveland before going to Akron in 1927. He has been a director of the parent concern since 1929 and vice-president since 1945 and is also a director of the Akron, Canton & Youngstown Railroad, as well as of the Akron United Community Chest, the Akron Art Institute, the Children's Hospital, and the Boy Scouts. He was on the board of the Bellefaire-Cleveland Orphans Home during 1943-44 and on that of the Old Trail School from 1934 to 1947, being president for a time. Gries is chairman of the Akron region for the Yale Alumni Fund.

He was married June 23, 1927, in Akron, to Lillian Closse Dauby, daughter of Jerome and Pearl Closse Dauby. They have three children, all of whom were born in Akron, Jean Gries on November 4, 1928, David Dauby on May 21, 1932, and Martha Louise on March 21, 1934. Jean, who graduated from the Old Trail School in 1946 and from Connecticut College for Women in 1950, was married on December 27, 1950, in Akron, to Lieutenant Lon Williams Homeier. David, Yale '54, received his preparatory education at Hotchkiss. Martha is a Senior at the Old Trail School.

Gries' travels since graduation have taken him to Europe (summers of 1927 and 1937), Bermuda (1934), and the Caribbean (1947). As to other things, he says, "Favorite recreations: fishing, sailing, and camping, which we enjoy each summer on Lake Temagami, Ontario; home hobbies: chiefly gardening; still enjoy good books and music."

JOSEPH HOLLIS GRIFFIN. Manager, grain department, Bache & Company, security and commodity brokers, 135 South LaSalle Street, Chicago, Ill.; residence, Sunset Ridge Road, Northfield, Ill.

In addition to his connection with Bache & Company, Griffin is secretary and treasurer of the Griffin Distributing Company (television and appliance distributors) of Peoria, Ill. He is a member of the Chicago Board of Trade, of which he was a director from 1942 to 1947 and vice-president the following year.

His marriage to Martha E. Miller, daughter of Blaine H. Miller, took place in Chicago on July 8, 1932. Mrs. Griffin's home was formerly in Indianapolis. They have a daughter, Gloria Hollis, who was born in Chicago on December 19, 1937.

OTTO HARRY GRUNER, Jr. Partner, I. H. Burnside & Company, brokers, 120 Broadway, New York, N.Y.; residence, Hewlett, N.Y.

Gruner, who is a member of the New York Stock Exchange, has been a partner in I. H. Burnside & Company since May, 1936. The firm specializes in certain stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange. He was with Wellington & Company from 1926 to 1928, with G. M.-P. Murphy & Company in 1929, and then with Brown & Gruner until 1935—all stock brokers. Gruner comments that when having a snapshot taken he likes to wear a hat to conceal the distressingly few spears of hair still left after twenty-five years in Wall Street. He belongs to the St. Nicholas Society and Squadron A of New York and the Rockaway Hunt Club of Cedarhurst, Long Island.

He was married on October 30, 1926, in New York, to Harriot Hudson Coffin, daughter of John Roberts Coffin, '02 S., and Mary Belle Hudson Coffin. Mrs. Gruner lived in Greenwich before her marriage. They have two children: Otto Harry, 3d, born July 27, 1927, and Harriot Gruner, born September 6, 1931, both in New York. Harry, a member of the Yale Class of 1950, prepared for college at the Fay School and Andover. Harriot went to Lawrence Academy and then to Westover, where she graduated in 1949. Her marriage to Henry L. Ross, Jr., '50, son of Henry L. Ross, '28, took place in New York on June 13, 1950. Gruner's son and son-in-law are both ensigns in the Navy. The former is serving on the Coral Sea in the Mediterranean, and the latter is stationed off Korea on the U.S.S. Gardiner's Bay, after participating in the invasion at Inchon.

In conclusion, Gruner says, "My chief interests nowadays seem to center around my son, my son-in-law, who was Harry's roommate at Yale, and my daughter. We are counting the days until the boys get back from overseas.

"During the last few years I have been spending my vacations at Beaufort, S.C., where I get a little fishing and quail shooting. I recently acquired a small piece of land down there located on the Battery Creek—which body of water has been described by Samuel Hopkins Adams as 'the loveliest of the branches of the inland waterway.' I expect to build there some time soon.

"On Saturday noons during the fall I am usually to be found in the parking lot next to the cage in New Haven, preparatory to watching Herman Hick-man's pupils in action. I sometimes see some members of 1926 there and do wish I would see more.

"So far as satisfactions go, I will settle for the happiest married life that I know of. Incidentally, it seemed to me to be a rather sad commentary on life and times in these United States that in preparing this blank it was thought necessary to provide spaces for first and second marriages."

DAVID CASSEDAY GUILBERT. Secretary-manager, Inland Automobile Association, and secretary, Spokane County Good Roads Association; business address, W.1022 Riverside Avenue, Spokane 8, Wash.; residence, W. 528 26th Avenue, Spokane 9.

Guilbert was a reporter on the Spokane Spokesman-Review in 1926 and then spent a year as assistant secretary of the Spokane Chamber of Commerce. He has been connected with the Inland Automobile Association since 1928, first as traffic safety director and assistant manager and, since 1940, as secretary-manager. In 1940 he took on the additional duties of secretary of the Spokane County Good Roads Association, and from 1943 to 1945 he served as war transportation consultant for the City of Spokane. Guilbert is a director of the Spokane Area Safety Council and the Washington State Good Roads Association.

His marriage to Gladys Graeme Evans, daughter of George W. and Grace Barker Evans, of Yakima, Wash., took place in Spokane on June 11, 1927. Their daughter, Joan, who was born in Spokane on November 2, 1928, attended Washington State College as a member of the Class of 1950. She was married on August 19, 1950, in Spokane, to G. Stanley Fergin.

ROLAND BERGEN GUILD. Suburban area director, New York State Department of Social Welfare, 205 East 92d Street, New York, N.Y.; residence, 431 Washington Avenue, Pelham 65, N.Y.

Guild became an instructor at New York University in 1927 and the following year took the position of assistant manager at the Hotel Park Central. He was assistant to the managing director of the Hotel Roosevelt from 1930 to 1932 and has since held various professional positions in public welfare. During the period from 1942 to 1944 he held an associate professorship at the Buffalo University Graduate School of Social Work, and he has been with the New York State Department of Social Welfare as area director of the suburban area since 1946. He has served as deputy commissioner of the Nassau County Department of Public Welfare and is a member of the American and New York Public Welfare associations. In 1943 Guild was ordained an elder in the Presbyterian Church.

He was married in Mineola, N.Y., on February 20, 1932, to Evelyn Kissam

Seaman, daughter of Warren C. and Myra Kissam Seaman. Their older daughter, Carol Kissam, who was born on December 25, 1932, in Mineola, is a Freshman at Bates College. The younger girl, Myra Scoville, born March 11, 1936, in Mineola, is a Freshman at the Pelham High School.

BLANCHARD STANLEY GUMMO. Head, Art Department, Bucknell University, Lewisburg, Pa.; residence, 220 North Fairview Street, Lock Haven, Pa.

Gummo writes: "I have been painting since 1926 and exhibiting since about 1934. In the past seventeen years I have had seventeen one-man shows and taken part in over 100 national group shows (such as the Pennsylvania Academy Annuals, the Chicago Annuals, the Corcoran Biennials, the Pepsi-Cola Annuals, etc.).

"I have received the following awards: 1) medal for figure composition and portrait, 43d Annual Exhibition, Society of Washington Artists, Corcoran Gallery of Art, Washington, D.C., 1935. 2) honorable mention for oil painting, 19th Annual Exhibition, Springfield (Mass.) Art League, 1938. 3) second prize for oils, 12th Annual Exhibition, Art Association of Harrisburg, Pa., 1939. 4) first prize for oils, 14th Annual Exhibition, Art Association of Harrisburg, 1941. 5) second honorable mention for oils, 23d Annual Exhibition, Springfield Art League, 1941. 6) first prize for oils, 6th Annual Coöperative Art Exhibition, State Teachers College, Indiana, Pa., 1949. 7) third prize for water color, 23d Annual Exhibition, Harrisburg Art Association, 1951.

"In 1944 the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts in Philadelphia bought my oil painting, Ruined House, from their annual exhibition for their permanent collection."

Gummo studied at the Yale School of the Fine Arts from 1926 to 1931, when he was given the degree of B.F.A. in painting. He has been head of the Art Department at Bucknell since then. The Studio for October, 1945, contained an article by him on Hobson Pittman. He is a member of the Harrisburg and Central Pennsylvania Art associations, the Mifflin County Art League of Lewistown, Pa., the Connecticut Academy of Fine Arts, the American Association of University Professors, and Artists Equity. He is still a bachelor.

EDWARD HOSMER GUTHRIE. Division traffic engineer, New York Telephone Company, 65 Franklin Street, Buffalo, N.Y.; residence, 3 Clarendon Place, Buffalo 9.

Guthrie, who has been with the New York Telephone Company since graduation, has held the position of division traffic engineer since August, 1948.

He is treasurer of the Travelers' Aid Society in Buffalo. In February, 1941, he was inducted into service as a captain and, upon being activated in April, was assigned as battery commander of Field Artillery, 3d Armored Division. He was promoted to major two months later and assigned as headquarters commandant of the 54th Armored Field Artillery, of which he was later successively assistant division G-3 and battalion executive. When the 11th Armored Division was activated in August, 1942, Guthrie was transferred to it as battalion commander of the 491st Armored Field Artillery and later became executive of the division. From March, 1944, until his retirement for disability in May, 1945, he was a gunnery instructor at the Field Artillery School at Fort Sill.

On June 15, 1935, he was married in Buffalo to Molly C. Danforth, daughter of N. Loring and Theodora Clapp Danforth. They have three children, all of whom were born in Buffalo, Lucy L. on July 17, 1937, Ann S. on July 27, 1940, and Nicholas D. on December 27, 1942.

"There is little of interest or excitement," Guthrie laments. "The old days of the ever-ready bridge table have passed. The main interest now is sailing and boat-building. That fills so many hours that there is barely enough time left to service three bicycles, three sleds, and similar paraphernalia; school, Cub Scouts, dancing school, etc.; and to do the household chores. In other words, there is going to be a lot of free time when there are three more chauffeurs in the family to drive off in their several directions."

CHARLES SHERMAN HAIGHT. Member, Haight, Deming, Gardner, Poor & Havens, lawyers, 80 Broad Street, New York 4, N.Y.; residence, 530 East 86th Street, New York 28.

Haight started with the above firm in 1926 and was admitted to membership in 1934. "I have been engaged in admiralty law practice," he says, "and it has taken me on numerous trips abroad, especially to Scandinavia and other parts of Europe, as well as to Panama, the Virgin Islands, South America, and throughout the United States. Even a small part of that kind in world trade and commerce makes you realize in a close way the importance of relationships, national and individual, between countries and persons. I have been most fortunate both at home and in my work, and only wish that the time was not passing so quickly."

Haight took his LL.B. at Harvard in 1929 and was admitted to the New York Bar the following year. He has been a member of the board of governors of the Seamen's Church Institute of New York since 1938, is chairman of the Seaman's Welfare Committee, and has been a vestryman of the Church of the Epiphany since 1945. He belongs to India House and the University Club of New York.

He was married in Vineyard Haven, Mass., September 7, 1929, to Helen Margaret Edwards, daughter of Oliver and Marguerite Richards Edwards, of New York. Their son, Charles Sherman, Jr., who was born in New York on September 30, 1930, graduated from St. Mark's in 1948 and is now a Junior at Yale.

HENRY ALEXANDER HAINES. Address, 41 Fremont Road, North Tarrytown, N.Y.

HUGH A. L. HALFF. President, treasurer, and general manager, Southland Industries, Inc. (broadcasting and television), 1031 Navarro Street, San Antonio, Texas; residence, 1220 McCullough Avenue, San Antonio.

Halff has been president, treasurer, and general manager of Southland Industries, Inc., since 1938. Previously he had been with the Southern Equipment Company (wholesale automotive and electrical supplies) and the A. B. Frank Company (wholesale dry goods). He is currently president and a director of the Blanco Oil Company and a director of the W. K. Ewing Company, mortgage bankers.

His marriage to Catherine Harding, daughter of Robert J. and Louise Swick Harding, took place in San Antonio on November 21, 1931. Hugh Halff, Jr., who was born in San Antonio on April 26, 1935, goes to the Texas Military Institute. Their daughter, Catherine, was born on October 15, 1939, also in San Antonio.

He writes briefly: "Travels have been limited to various parts of the United States, Mexico, and Cuba. Recreations and hobbies are fishing, hunting, light card playing, and Scotch and soda."

EDWIN HOWARD HALL. Attorney for Connecticut with the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company, 54 Meadow Street, New Haven 6, Conn.; residence, 2288 Main Street, Stratford, Conn.

In June, 1929, Hall graduated from the Yale Law School and was admitted to practice in Connecticut. He then entered the law office of Taylor, Durey, Pierson & Comley in Stamford, but gave this up a year later to go with The Connecticut Company as assistant attorney. In 1938 he was made attorney for The Connecticut Company and assistant attorney for the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, and since 1945 he has been attorney in Connecticut for the latter company and its subsidiaries. From 1933 to 1937, and again from 1941 to 1949, Hall served as judge of the Stratford Town Court.

He was married in New York City on July 2, 1935, to Mary Francine

Smith, daughter of William Frederick Smith. She formerly lived in Rochester. The Halls have four children: Edwin Stephen Dickson, born October 26, 1937, Nancy Ellen on April 8, 1940, John DeWolfe on March 12, 1943, and Michael on February 12, 1945.

WILLIAM FOWNES HAMILTON. Engaged in chemical research on pharmaceuticals; office and residence, 1947 East Midwick Drive, Altadena, Calif.

Hamilton writes: "The famous Depression of the Thirties was a bit rough, but I moved to this land of bounty in 1932 and soon had two jobs—teaching chemistry and German at Pasadena City College and working for the Richfield Oil Company. Both were fun. When Sinclair took over Richfield, a transfer to San Francisco ensued, and my wife's sinus trouble grew worse. So I left Richfield, came back home, and decided to really do something about it. Soon I joined her able and enterprising physician, Dr. Turnbull, in developing new nasal medications and improving methods for treatment. This work was very fruitful, the Little Lady's chronic sinusitis got much better—and we found ourselves in business making the developments available to others.

"There is great human satisfaction in the work, for we do good in thousands of cases of suffering which we never see or hear about. We only know from the reports of our licensees that they distribute large quantities of our products. But we know that the profession does not continue to prescribe such medicaments unless they are helpful.

"And for fun, I acquired a quarter section of fine farming land near Daggett, in the center of the Mojave Desert. There we drilled a fine water well, procured Boulder electric power, and built a farm house, barns, etc., with our own hands. The Santa Fé sold us used railway ties for building and fencing. We cook, heat, air condition, irrigate, and light electrically. Refrigeration, too, is electric. It is amazing what fine substantial buildings can be constructed from 6 x 8" timbers eight feet long, by means of hard work and care. There is solid satisfaction in this, too. The 'Hidden River Ranch' now shows signs of beginning to prosper, and its motto is 'Blessed be the Tie.' "

Hamilton was a graduate student at New York University for three years, taking his Sc.M. degree in chemical engineering in 1927 and his Ph.D. in chemistry in 1929. He was associated with Charles Engelhard, Inc., in Newark, N.J., as director of research until 1932, when he went out to California. While with the Richfield Oil Company (1932-39), he had the position of manager of the product development department. From 1940 to 1944 he was chief research chemist with the Lockheed Aircraft Corporation at Burbank. Among the new products which Hamilton has developed (he works with two chemists and a pharmacist, as well as with a physician) are Sulmefrin (Squibb), Rinazine (Lederle), Thizodrin (Lilly), and Sulfamone (Parke-Davis) (Not an adv.). He has contributed a number of technical articles written with scientific collaborators, to professional journals, among them the Journal of the American Pharmaceutical Association, Clinical Medicine, and the Journal of the American Medical Association. He belongs to the American Chemical Society and to Sigma Xi, to which he was elected in 1930.

Mrs. Hamilton's maiden name was Geraldine Bethea Spill. She is the daughter of William Ambrose and Minnie Biggers Spill, of Pasadena, Calif., where they were married on June 30, 1931. They have three children to help with all that building—Jeremy Ann, born February 14, 1933, William Fownes, 2d, on June 23, 1934, and Jenifer Ellen on February 17, 1939, all in Pasadena. Jeremy is a Senior at the Anoakia School for Girls at Arcadia, Calif., while William is a Junior at the Thacher School.

ROBERT READ HANNUM. Director of vocational placement, Osborne Association, Inc. (penal surveys, penal reform, etc.), 114 East 30th Street, New York 16, N.Y.; residence, 29 Oak Street, Irvington-on-Hudson, N.Y.

Hannum was assistant superintendent of the Boys' Club of New York City from 1925 to 1929 and was in New Haven the following year as assistant to the manager of the Printing Office of the Yale University Press. He spent the period from 1930 to 1940 as vocational director of the Children's Village at Dobbs Ferry, N.Y., was co-director of the Young Men's Vocational Foundation in New York City for the next two years, and then training director with the Anaconda Wire & Cable Company at Hastings, N.Y., until 1944. Since then he has been director of vocational placement with the Osborne Association.

During the war Hannum represented the War Manpower Commission in Training in various industries around New York and helped screen many offenders so that they were safely restored to duty in industries, Merchant Marine, etc. He is a member of the National Vocational Guidance Association, including committee responsibilities and contributions to their publication, Occupations, the American Prison Congress, the National Conference of Juvenile Agencies, the Penal Industries Association, Education in the Correctional Field, the Irvington Parent Teachers' Association, and the Kiwanis Club (has been president of the two latter and a member of various committees). He is on the Welfare Service Committee (for G.I.'s from Irvington) and the Welfare Council of New York City, serving on three committees having to do with employment, vocational guidance, and the correctional field, is a director of the Goddard Neighborhood Center, the Randen Foundation, the International Prisoners' Aid Association, and the Irvington Youth Center, and since 1943 has been a ruling elder of the Session of the Irvington Presbyterian Church.

Hannum was married September 25, 1929, in Hartsdale, N.Y., to Edna Prudence McAnulty, daughter of Elmer E. and Myra Andrus McAnulty. Her home before her marriage was in Redfield, S.Dak. They have two sons: Robert Henry, born December 7, 1941, and David Read on March 24, 1943, both in Bronxville, N.Y.

"My wife and I like fishing of several kinds," Hannum says. "The small boys are now grown up enough for us to be contemplating best fishing season yet this year: salt water over around Rye, N.Y., a la flat bottom boat—and fresh water up on Lake Dummore, Vt., where we have an old cottage (and lots of room for planned or unplanned visits from '26-ers and their families, fisherman or not.)

"As far as can be determined from my end, I may be the only member of our Class who has become a social worker in the field of prisons, probation, and parole. Unfortunately, business is thriving; but fortunately, Yale men seem to have the knack of staying out of trouble (or else our Law School has been putting out some pretty shrewd legal defenders!)

"The Osborne Association is a private organization which needs the support of private citizens to do its work under our executive director, Austin H. MacCormick. I hope it will be more or less forgiven and in line with normal community expectation if I were to begin dunning classmates to help us with an important job of improving standards in the field of correction throughout the country."

WALTER ERNEST HANSON. Attorney, Connecticut General Life Insurance Company, 55 Elm Street, Hartford, Conn.; residence, West Simsbury, Conn.

Hanson received an LL.B. degree at Harvard in 1929 and was admitted to the Connecticut Bar that year. From then until 1941 he was engaged in the practice of law independently and with various firms and specialized in mortgages, real estate, and investment law. Since November, 1941, he has been attorney for the Connecticut General Life Insurance Company.

He has been "in and out" of various clubs and societies, at present being a member of the Connecticut State Bar Association, the Antique Automobile Club of America, and the Simsbury Fish and Game Club. His recreation and hobbies: hunting and fishing; old cars and foreign cars; and formerly: stamp and firearms collecting.

He was married in West Simsbury on June 18, 1937, to Barbara Andrus, daughter of Frank H. and Ethel P. Rist Andrus. Her home was in Hartford before her marriage. Their daughter, Patricia, who was born July 11, 1938, in Hartford, attends the Oxford School in that city.

PHILIP SEACREST HARDY. President, Hardy Furniture Company, 1314 O Street, Lincoln, Nebr.; residence, 1040 Crestdale Road, Lincoln.

Hardy, who has been with the Hardy Furniture Company (retailing of furniture, carpets, and appliances) since graduation, became its president in 1935. He is a director of the National Retail Furniture Association. During the period from 1941 to 1945 he served as a dollar-a-year executive with the War Production Board and the Combined Production and Resources Board.

His marriage to Jean Whitten, daughter of Frank Sanduski and Bertha Babb Whitten, took place at Council Bluffs, Iowa, on July 26, 1947. Her home was formerly in New Orleans. They have a son, Calvert Whitten, born in Lincoln on April 19, 1948.

WARD COLVIN HARLOW. Address, 26 Central Avenue, Hamburg, N.Y.

STERLING POTTER HARRINGTON. Member, Harrington & Bookhout, lawyers, 241 Main Street, Oneonta, N.Y.; residence, 73 Maple Street, Oneonta.

Harrington graduated from the Harvard Law School in 1929, was admitted to practice in New York in November of that year, and has since been associated with the firm of Harrington & Bookhout. He served as judge of the Oneonta City Court from 1936 to 1943 and since 1947 has been Otsego county attorney. He is a director of the Wilber National Bank of Oneonta, the local Community Chest, Chamber of Commerce, and Y.M.C.A. (and a member of the National Council) and is on the board of visitors of the Binghamton State Hospital.

Harrington's marriage to Dorothy E. Ward, daughter of Arthur E. and Frances Hankey Ward, took place in Gilbertsville, N.Y., on October 2, 1937.

ROBERT PLANT HATCHER. Owner and manager, Kewanee Coca-Cola Bottling Company, 401 Tenney Street, Kewanee, Ill.; residence, 409 East Prospect Street, Kewanee.

Still at heart a Georgia Cracker, although he likes the Middle West, Hatcher writes: "I have lived here in Kewanee for the last thirteen years, am very happily married, and have three fine children. I have a good, small business and, with a little golf thrown in, have managed to live this long with only one ulcer. In small towns such as Kewanee (20,000) every one has to take part in many local activities. At various times I have served on the board of practically every organization, including the Chamber of Commerce, Y, Hospital, Boy Scouts, Housing, Draft Board, Country Club, Episcopal Church, etc., etc., etc. I have had very few contacts with Yale or members of the Class of '26 since leaving Yale at the end of my Sophomore year."

Hatcher remained in his home town until 1932. He was in the production department of the Bibb Brick Company for two years and was subsequently sales manager for the Macon Gas Company. He joined the Coca-Cola Company as a salesman in New Haven in 1932, was transferred to Hartford, Conn., in 1933 as a special salesman, and to Waterbury as branch manager a year later. Going back to Georgia in 1934, he was in the merchandising department of the company in Atlanta until June, 1937. Since then he has been owner and manager of the Kewanee Coca-Cola Bottling Company. During the war Hatcher served on the Draft Board for three years.

He was married in New York City on April 5, 1934, to Josephine Shaw Stetson, daughter of Eugene W. and Iola Wise Stetson. The children were all born in Kewanee, Robert Felton on November 15, 1941, Josephine Stetson on May 17, 1943, and Eugene Stetson on April 6, 1944.

HENRY OSBORNE HAVEMEYER, JR. Vice-president, executive assistant to president, and secretary, Brooklyn Eastern District Terminal Railroad, 111 Broadway, New York 6, N.Y.; residence, Valley Road, Mahwah, N.J.

Havemeyer, who has been with the Brooklyn Eastern District Terminal Railroad since 1926, became a director in 1928, executive assistant to the president in 1942, vice-president in 1946, and secretary the following year. An inventor of some ninety-seven devices pertaining to improvements in mechanical equipment on railroads, steamships, fire fighting equipment, machine tools, etc., he has been a consultant on railroad mechanical matters since 1932. During 1930-31 he organized the railroad transportation division of the New York Museum of Science and Industry, and during the period from 1928 to 1932 he wrote articles on mechanical subjects for various magazines.

Havemeyer mentioned that he took a two-year course in mechanical engineering with the International Correspondence School. He is assistant treasurer, secretary, and a director of Havemeyers & Elder, Inc., president and a director of the Northern Steel Products Company, and a director of the West Indies Sugar Corporation. He has been a director of the Catholic Youth Organization of the Archdiocese of New York since 1932 (treasurer, 1935-36), is a member of the Greater New York Council of Boy Scouts (chairman of the transportation and communications division fund raising drives for several years), is currently serving as chairman of the railroad division of the National Infantile Paralysis and New York Cancer Committee fund drives, is a trustee of the Marquette League for Indian and Alaskan Missions and of the Catholic Elementary School for Boys in New York, and a director of the Canterbury School. He is a charter member of the American Transportation Association and belongs also to the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, the American Society of Naval Engineers (civil member), the Railroad Club of New York (chairman, program and subjects committee, since 1947), the National Freight Traffic Association (on executive committee), the Traffic Club of New York, the Newcomen Society, the Circus Saints and Sinners Club of New York (on executive committee, 1936-37), the Tuxedo Club, the British Luncheon Club, and the Sons of the Revolution (on membership committee).

Havemeyer was married January 6, 1937, in Tuxedo Park, N.Y., to Joan Blair, daughter of J. Insley Blair. They were divorced in 1947.

"I'm always glad to hear from my old Yale classmates," he says. "For them the latchstring is always out at my office or home!"

NOBLE GREGORY HAWKINS. Address, care Mrs. Ida A. Hawkins, 708 North Sherman Street, Ennis, Texas.

JAMES EARL HELLIER. Assistant vice-president, Chemical Bank & Trust Company, 165 Broadway, New York, N.Y.; residence, 15 Brook Lane, Great Neck, N.Y.

In 1926 Hellier went to work for the Pikeville National Bank in Pikeville, Ky., and within a year or so became cashier of the Bank of Hellier in Hellier, Ky. Since 1929 he has been with the Chemical Bank & Trust Company and was made assistant vice-president some time ago. Hellier is a trustee and vice-president of the Buckley Country Day School at Great Neck.

He was married on August 8, 1936, at Northport, Long Island, to Charlotte Bristow Hellier, of Pelham, N.Y. She is the daughter of Allen S. H. and Florens Brown Bristow, of New York City and Northport. Their daughter, Carlotta Moore, was born at Glen Cove, N.Y., on May 9, 1938. Hellier also has two stepsons: Samuel Burges Hellier, born January 31, 1927, and John Robert Hellier, born May 16, 1931, both in Brooklyn, N.Y. The older boy entered the Army in May, 1944, when he was a Senior at the Great Neck High School. He served in the Infantry until December, 1946, when he was discharged with the rank of sergeant. He is now a Senior at the University of Virginia, where John is in the Class of 1954. The latter prepared for college at the Westminster School.

Korday Sportswear, Inc., of which Herson has been sales and advertising manager since 1942, is engaged in manufacturing ladies active sportswear. We'd really like to know whether the distribution of their products is limited to ladies guaranteeing the active pursuit of le sport, but he didn't tell us a thing about that or, in fact, about anything else except his family.

He was married in New York City on October 15, 1939, to Ann Vine, daughter of Herman and Lena Vine. Mrs. Herson's home was in Brooklyn before her marriage. They have two sons: Steven, born on May 25, 1943, and Marshall on April 29, 1947.

ROBERT NEWTON HILKERT. Vice-president in charge of personnel, Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia, 925 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia 1, Pa.; residence, 115 President Avenue, Rutledge, Pa.

Hilkert was on the faculty of The Hill School from 1926 to 1941 and during the following year served as associate director of the Educational Records Bureau in New York City. He has been with the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia since then, becoming vice-president in charge of personnel on January 1, 1947. Since 1942 he has also been a lecturer in personnel administration at Temple University on a part-time basis, and at present he has a temporary assignment as director of personnel at the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System in Washington.

Hilkert is president of the Industrial Relations Association of Philadelphia and during 1949-50 served on the personnel committee of the Philadelphia Community Chest. He was a member of the educational advisory committee of the American Institute of Banking from 1947 to 1950, and he belongs to the Bank Officers Club of Philadelphia. He had an article in the English Journal for March, 1950, has contributed articles on personnel management to trade journals, and had various speeches published in banking journals. Hilkert took his M.A. at Columbia in 1931 and has also done graduate work at Penn State, the University of New Hampshire, and the University of Rochester.

He was married August 26, 1927, in Batavia, N.Y., to Alice Isabelle Greene, daughter of Orland W. and Blanche Anna Harvey Greene. Her home was formerly in Ohio. They have two children: Anne Harvey, born January 30, 1932, in Richmond, Va., and John Roberts, born June 4, 1934, in New York City. Anne is a Senior at the Swarthmore High School and John a Sophomore.

Hilkert writes: "Some of my classmates may remember that I worked my way through Yale by playing the cello at the Hotel Taft seven nights a week—also many weeks spent in the orchestra pit at the Shubert Theatre. Participation in University life was necessarily limited—a regret. I have kept up my playing, and I am still studying the cello—impossible instrument that it is. Ensemble playing has been one of the great joys over the years. Every Sunday finds me playing in a string quartette and, believe it or not, I am the only member who is not a practicing psychiatrist. Somebody has to be the balance wheel.

"I like to feel that music in the home has had some effect on my children. At any rate, Anne now tosses off Mozart sonatas with real skill and does some fine voice work in the school choruses, etc. John plays the clarinet, but he plays football better. Alice has been patient and long-suffering during the years of our practicing, and she has always been our mainspring of inspiration. Greater love hath no mother!

"My satisfactions have been many. Among them I list: a happy marriage, a simple but joyful family life, the joys of fifteen years of teaching at The Hill School, the never-ending satisfactions arising from an occupation which I love, personnel work; friendship resulting from the years at The Hill and at the Federal Reserve Bank, the inspiration which has come from association with a small number of really great men."

DOUGLAS GREENWOOD HILL. Address, Chemistry Department, Duke University, Durham, N.C.

JAMES JEROME HILL, 2D. Address, Cassis (Bouches du Rhône), France.

PHILIP MOORE HINCHLIFFE. President, Old Bennington Weavers, Inc., woolen textile manufacturers, 274 Madison Avenue, New York 16, N.Y.; residence, 4 Brooklands, Bronxville, N.Y.

Hinchliffe, who became connected with the Old Bennington Weavers, Inc., upon leaving college, has been president of the concern since 1939. He is a director of Greasen & Company, Inc.

His marriage to Helen M. Land, daughter of Robert and Mary Kerwin Land, took place in Bronxville on May 1, 1943.

RALPH ERWIN HIRSH. President, United Improvement Company (real estate), 3147 Prospect Avenue, Cleveland 15, Ohio; residence, 2750 Fairmont Boulevard, Cleveland Heights 6.

Hirsh, who has been president of the United Improvement Company for some years, is vice-president, a trustee, and chairman of the operating and maintenance division of the Apartment and Home Owners Association of Greater Cleveland.

He had three years' active duty in the Naval Reserve, from 1942 to 1945, spending a year and a half at the Naval Air Station in Panama and a similar period with Headquarters Squadron 9-2, based at Norfolk. He served simultaneously as communications officer, welfare officer, and historical officer for this Hedron squadron, which supported the anti-submarine patrol squadrons based in Virginia, North and South Carolina, Georgia, and Bermuda and had detachments at all of these stations. "One of the pleasant side lights," Hirsh says, "were the inspection trips to Bermuda, where you could enjoy the sub-tropical weather in mid-winter."

He adds, "Have traveled extensively through Latin America and as a hobby have studied the peoples, climate, archeology, geography, and life of these countries. Attended the University of Panama, and I have a fair command of the Spanish language. Among countries visited were Mexico, Costa Rica, Panama, Ecuador, Galapagos Islands, Cuba, and Guatemala. Spent part of last winter in Guatemala, including the highland and lake region of that country, in the Yucatan peninsula visiting the archeological ruins at Chitzan Itza, in Mexico City, and Taxco. Mexico City has an ideal climate, and the people have an intelligence approximating ours. The country is making rapid strides.

"For recreation, I belong to a skating club and a badminton group. Live with my brother, Willard Hirsh, Yale '34, who is an architectural engineer with Republic Steel. He is also a bachelor."

WARREN EUGENE HOAGLAND. Legal counsel, Standard Oil Company (N.J.) and affiliates, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York 20, N.Y.; residence, Oenoke Avenue, New Canaan, Conn.

Hoagland writes: "In 1929 I received my LL.B., cum laude, from the Harvard Law School, where I was chairman of the Board of Student Advisers. I have been a member of the New York Bar since 1930 and have also been admitted to various Federal Courts, including the U.S. Supreme Court. From 1929 to 1941 I practiced in association with Davis, Polk, Wardwell, Gardiner & Reed in New York, engaging in many varieties of practice, including much financial and corporate work. In 1940 I became active in Washington—later in New York—in special work for the National Defense Program and thereafter for the oil industry war efforts. In 1941 I became very active in the petroleum industry and its war activities, continuing in them, and have recently again become active in national defense and war preparations of the oil industry, both in the United States and abroad. Since 1941 I have been legal consultant and counsel for the Standard Oil Company (N.J.), the parent company, and for many of its affiliated companies, both in the United States and various other countries, including Canada, Venezuela, Peru, Colombia, France, and England.

"I have engaged in a good many civic, philanthropic, and relief activities from time to time, both in New York and Connecticut, but a busy professional career and family life have not permitted as much time for these as I would like, and hope for in the future—world conditions permitting. Have been active in the Episcopal Church—first in New York, later in Connecticut."

Hoagland has been legal counsel for the Church Pension Fund, the National Orchestral Association, and various charitable organizations and has written for various publications on legal, financial, and related subjects. From 1930 to 1933 he was a member of Squadron A, New York National Guard. He belongs to the University Club of New York, the Metropolitan Club of Washington, the New Canaan Country Club, the Norwalk Yacht Club, the Bar Association of the City of New York, the American Bar Association (on its international law committee), the International Law Association of Washington, and the National Foreign Trade Council.

He was married January 24, 1931, in Saginaw, Mich., to Helen K. Morley, daughter of Albert J. and Elizabeth Hicock Morley and sister of Edward W. and William R. Morley, both '28. They have two children: Edward Morley, born December 21, 1932, and Mary Elizabeth on May 30, 1943. Ted graduated, cum laude, from Deerfield in 1950 and is now a Freshman at Harvard.

In conclusion, Hoagland says, "Perhaps one reason that autobiographical questionnaires are often put aside and neglected is that, while looking backward is pleasant and can be helpful in personal reorientation, it is far less absorbing than dealing with the present and the future. At least, I still find it so; and if that is an indication of continued youth, so much the better after twenty-five years out of college. They have been strenuous and crowded years, but not too wearying.

"Helen and I both enjoy sailing and have done a good deal in Long Island Sound while at home and also on vacations in Bermuda and Nantucket. We enjoy other outdoor sports, such as golf in summer, skating and skiing in winter. My work involves a considerable amount of foreign travel; and vacations have also taken us abroad, since we still greatly enjoy the personal discovery of new scenes and even poking about among ruins at such places as Rome and the old Indian cities of Yucatan and Peru, with much related reading before and after.

"Music is another recreation—a certain amount of family music at home, in addition to my participation in the Blue Hill Troupe and University Glee Club in New York.

"Our home life has been about equally divided over the past twenty years between New York—we were primarily city dwellers until ten years ago—and Connecticut. The Lares and Penates have now become quite firmly established at our fireside in New Canaan, where we are looking forward with a great deal of enthusiasm to the coming years—tempered only by our concern over the very serious and growing crisis in world affairs. Once again we are turning more and more of our thoughts, energies, and efforts to war and defense activities and organizations."

NEWTON HOCKADAY. Address, 3517 Martha Custis Drive, Alexandria, Va.

LACY HOFIUS. Engaged in selling industrial supplies; business and residence, 1116 41st Avenue, North, Seattle 2, Wash.

Hofius reports that he was in business in Honolulu from 1945 to 1948 and is now selling industrial supplies in Seattle. His first marriage, to Ellen Messer, daughter of Harry and Agnes Connor Messer, took place in Seattle in 1923. They were divorced in 1928. In 1931 he was married in San Francisco to Ethel Morrison Martin, of Seattle, daughter of Phillips and Ethel Young Morrison. They have had two children: Daphne Ethel, who was born in Seattle in 1934 and died there five years later, and William D., born in 1936, also in Seattle.

HUNTER HOLDING. Manager of railroad securities, Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States, 393 7th Avenue, New York, N.Y.; residence, 50 Chestnut Avenue, Larchmont, N.Y.

Holding worked for the State Bank of Albany, N.Y., from 1926 to 1929 and then went with the National City Bank of New York as a credit investigator, later being transferred to the underwriting department of the National City Company. From 1933 to 1937 he was an account manager with Johnston & Lagerquist, investment counsel, and has since been with Equitable Life. He became manager of their railroad securities department in September, 1944. He is also vice-president and a director of the Wellington Albany Company, Inc., and is serving as director of communications in the civilian defense program in Larchmont.

Holding, who has been a director of the Windward School at White Plains, N.Y., since 1941, served as president of the board from 1944 to 1948. He was a trustee of Camp Dudley from 1947 to 1950 (treasurer in the latter year) and served on the board of directors of the Larchmont Community Chest from 1942 to 1948 and as its secretary in 1946. During the war he was in the U.S. Coast Guard Temporary Reserve. At some point he attended the New York University Graduate School of Business Administration. Holding belongs to the Yale Club of New York, the New York Railroad Club, and the Larchmont Yacht Club.

He was married on August 4, 1928, in Durham, N.C., to Lucile McKinney Burton, daughter of George McKinney and Margaret Allen Burton. Mrs. Holding, whose home was in Owensboro, Ky., before her marriage, died on March 13, 1950. Holding has two children: William Burton, born November 9, 1933, and Margaret Lyn on September 20, 1936, both in New York. The boy is in the Class of 1951 at the Mamaroneck Senior High School and Lyn a Senior at the Mamaroneck Junior High School.

PHILIP BATES HOPKINS. Assistant general manager, William Skinner & Sons, manufacturers of rayon, nylon, and silk woven goods, 208 Appleton Street, Holyoke, Mass.; residence, 40 Fairfield Avenue, Holyoke.

Hopkins was with the National Spun Silk Company of New Bedford, Mass., from 1926 to 1929 and for the next five years was connected with the Crompton & Knowles Loom Works, Worcester, Mass., as a sales engineer. Since then he has been with William Skinner & Sons, becoming assistant general manager in 1943. He is a director of the Crystal Water Company of Danielson, Conn., and has served on various committees of the Holyoke chapter of the American Red Cross and the Mt. Tom Council of the Boy Scouts for the past ten years; he was council president of the latter during 1945-46 and chapter chairman of the Red Cross from 1940 to 1942. In March, 1951, he was appointed a member of the local Draft Board.

On June 25, 1926, Hopkins was married in New York to Carol Louise Baker, daughter of Ellis B. and Ruth Ann Meserve Baker, of New Haven. They have four children: Barbara Cook, born June 17, 1928, in New Bedford; Carol Patricia, born August 8, 1931, in Worcester; Louise Bates, born November 15, 1934, also in Worcester; and Philip Bates, Jr., born December 5, 1937, in Holyoke. Barbara, who attended St. Catherine's School, Richmond, Va., during 1945-46 and graduated from Wheelock College with a B.S. degree in 1950, was married November 24, 1950, in Holyoke to Burnham Layton Goddard. Carol also attended St. Catherine's and is now in the Class of 1953 at Smith; her marriage to John William Schoeffler took place in New York City on October 8, 1950. Louise is in the St. Catherine's Class of 1952.

FRANCIS SEVERANCE HOWARD. Vice-president, Columbia Steel Company, 2087 East Slawson Avenue, Los Angeles, Calif.; residence, 5211 West 2d Street, Los Angeles 4.

Before becoming associated with the Columbia Steel Company, of which he has been vice-president since October 1, 1948, Howard was vice-president of the Western Pipe & Steel Company of California and the Consolidated Steel Corporation.

His marriage to Elizabeth Masson, daughter of Raymond and Lita McMillan Masson, took place in Los Angeles on June 14, 1935. Their children were both born in Los Angeles, Lita Ann on October 27, 1937, and William Masson on April 10, 1940.

HENRY FORBUSH HOWE. Physician; office and residence, 11 North Main Street, Cohasset, Mass.

Howe graduated from the Harvard Medical School in 1930 and was on the staff of the Boston City Hospital for the next three years, first as resident in pathology and then as surgical house officer. He then spent a year as resident in surgery at Phillips House of the Massachusetts General Hospital and during the period from 1935 to 1946 was an assistant in surgery at Massachusetts General, at the same time being an assistant in surgery at the Harvard Medical School. (He had been connected with the Harvard teaching service from 1931 to 1933.) In 1935 he entered practice, with offices in Boston and Cohasset, but after his return from military service in 1946 he did not re-open the Boston office. In addition to his private practice, he is plant physician for the Procter & Gamble Manufacturing Company of Quincy, Mass.

Howe's service in World War II began in September, 1942, when he went on active duty as a captain in the Medical Corps. He was on the surgical staff of the Station Hospital at Camp Kilmer, N.J., for a year and a half (also being post surgeon at the A.S.T.P. at Rutgers University) and from April, 1944, to March, 1946, was transport surgeon on various troop ships in the Atlantic and Mediterranean. He was promoted to major in March, 1943, and ranked as a lieutenant colonel at the time of his release from service. He still holds this commission in the Inactive Reserve.

He has been medical examiner for the Second District of Norfolk County (1947-50) and at present is on the staff of the South Shore Hospital at South Weymouth. Since 1937 he has been a director of the Pilgrim Coöperative Bank. He was on the board of directors of the Cohasset Community Center from 1948 to 1950, president of the Cohasset Rotary Club during 1947-48 and of the Cohasset Historical Society during 1937-38, and again at the present time, and from 1947 to 1950 was chairman of the Cohasset Committee on Town History. He has been a trustee of the Cohasset Free Public Library (1937-42) and of the Massachusetts Archeological Society (1946-50) and is a fellow of the Society of American Historians and the American Medical Association and a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society (on council), the Norfolk South District Medical Society (vice-president), the American Association of Industrial Physicians and Surgeons, the Colonial Society of Massachusetts, the Appalachian Mountain Club, and the Cohasset Yacht Club.

Howe has contributed articles to the New England Journal of Medicine and The Southern Surgeon, as well as to the Bulletins of the Massachusetts Archeological Society, and is the author of Prologue to New England (Farrar & Rinehart, 1943). He has in preparation one of the Rivers of America books for Rinehart & Company.

He was married September 8, 1931, in Beverly, Mass., to Gudrun Adele Birch, daughter of Gajus J. and Caroline Larsen Birch. They have two sons, both of whom were born in Boston, Walter Bjerke on July 26, 1937, and Oliver Hunt on August 18, 1949.

JOHN MCARTHUR HOYSRADT. Actor; business address, 468 North Camden Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif.; residence, 170 North Canyon View Drive, Los Angeles 49, Calif.

Hoysradt (alias Hoyt) writes: "My theatrical career began in 1929. Legitimate plays included Ziegfeld Follies of 1936, 'The Man who Came to Dinner,' Mercury Theatre plays with Orson Welles, a six-month tour with Cornell in 'The Barretts,' 'Romeo,' and 'Candida.' Night clubs took over in 1937-38—until 1945; major stands: Rainbow Room, Plaza, Savoy-Plaza, Versailles in New York, the Dorchester in London (winter of 1939), most of the Statler Hotels, the Palmer House and the Drake in Chicago, the Mt. Royal in Montreal, the Copley-Plaza and Somerset in Boston, the Park-Plaza, St. Louis, and the Mark Hopkins, San Francisco.

"In the autumn of 1945 I came to Hollywood, was re-named Hoyt, and have been here since. Have made about fifteen pictures. These include 'Brute Force,' 'The Great Dan Patch,' 'Winter Meeting,' 'Trapped,' 'Sealed Verdict,' 'The Unfaithful,' 'Quebec,' 'New Mexico,' 'When Worlds Collide,' 'Inside Straight,' etc.

"Hollywood seems very far from old haunts. I miss them and wish I might return oftener. Hank Potter, a next-door neighbor for four years, is a welcome refuge in sanity from the hugger-mugger of the film industry. Without Hank and Lucilla, life would have been far poorer for all the Hoysradts.

"When the right part in the right play comes along, yours truly will joyfully return to Broadway. It seems as if de Liagre might arrange that, doesn't it?

"Joe Reed was out a few weeks ago for his daughter Laurel's wedding. We had a fine long lunch at the Brown Derby and picked up many loose ends. It was great to see Joe and Permelia again, and to be really 'one of the family' at the wedding.

"This old crock seems to have become unbelievably civic-minded in his middle years. I believe he is the only P.T.A. president of his sex in the memory of Beverly Hills. It has been very rewarding work and came about through activity with the Cub Scouts and Boy Scouts as David grew along. Never did I think I would be an assistant baseball coach for the little darlings, but yes, and an outstanding umpire. Some of my decisions still cause fights when mentioned. My chief accomplishment in the P.T.A. is to get the board meetings over within an hour and a quarter, instead of the two hours of my predecessor.

"California at least keeps one young physically, and I'll take on any one—well, almost any one—in everything but golf. It just isn't my game.

"I still play the piano pretty well, imitate people pretty well, and I think my acting has come a long way. My great grief is that I never play comedy any more—but I have a suspicion that television may change all that.

"I don't think there's any more. I love dogs, kids, sunshine, and procrastination. Adios."

Hoysradt-Hoyt made an extensive U.S.O. tour of the Pacific in 1945 with Gertrude Lawrence and during the war provided countless domestic forms of entertainment for the military services. He is a member of the American Federation of Radio Artists, the Actors Equity Association, the Screen Actors' Guild, and the American Guild of Variety Artists. Before becoming president of the Parent Teacher Association at El Rodeo School in Beverly Hills, he was chairman of the ways and means committee for a year. He is currently serving on the committee of Boy Scout Troop 33 in Beverly Hills. And, oh, yes, he took his M.A. at Yale back in 1927.

Hoysradt was married April 25, 1935, in Palisades, N.Y., to Marion V. Burns, daughter of Thomas J. and Marie Belliere Burns. Her home was formerly in Englewood, N.J. Their son, David Burns, who was born in New York, December 21, 1937, went to the Eaglebrook School in Deerfield, Mass., when he was only seven. Since then he has been at the Rippowam School at Bedford Village, N.Y., and El Rodeo in Beverly Hills.

HAROLD RANDOLPH HUTCHESON. Professor of English, Lake Forest College, Lake Forest, Ill.

Hutcheson attended Swarthmore College during 1926-27, receiving his B.A. with high honors. He was an instructor in English at Hobart and William Smith Colleges, Geneva, N.Y., from 1927 to 1929 and then returned to Yale as a graduate student. He remained for five years and in 1942 received his Ph.D., after an additional year of graduate work. Hutcheson was an instructor in literature at the Juilliard School of Music in New York from 1934 to 1938, an instructor in English at Amherst from 1938 to 1940, and at the University of Connecticut the following year. He went on active duty as a private in the Air Force in October, 1942, was promoted to Pfc. the following spring, and received an honorable discharge in September, 1943. Details: "Saw action in the battle of the Mojave Desert (California). Almost killed in it (by suffocation). The dust attacked without warning, on all fronts. Our respirators were virtually useless; the enemy infiltrated within these front lines of defense. However, dust thou art, to dust returnest. My only regret was that I had but one nose to breathe for my country."

Hutcheson was employed with the American National Red Cross for six years following his discharge from service, serving in the field and at the North Atlantic Area Headquarters until 1946 and then as associate historian at the National Headquarters. He went to Lake Forest College as associate professor of English in September, 1949, and was promoted to professor in May, 1950. He belongs to the Swarthmore chapter of Phi Beta Kappa and has recently been elected secretary-treasurer of the Lake Forest chapter of the American Association of University Professors. He is the author of Musical Sonnets (privately printed in 1935; later reprinted in Musical Digest); Lord Herbert of Cherbury's De Religione Laici (Yale Studies in English, No. 98—his doctoral dissertation, for which he was awarded $600 by Yale towards its publication—Yale and Oxford University Presses, 1944); and Palomar, a sonnet, printed in the New York Times, July 13, 1948.

He was first married June 24, 1934, in Wallingford, Vt., to Mildrid Spencer, daughter of R. Chester and Frances Fulton Spencer. Her home was formerly in Swarthmore. They were divorced in 1946. On April 7, 1948, he was married in Cambridge, Mass., to Minna Margaret Adams, daughter of Albyn Lincoln and Minna Worthington Adams, of Jacksonville, Ill. He has two children: Hildegarde, born in Springfield, Mass., October 21, 1938, and David Shawme, born May 11, 1950, in Lake Forest.

Writing in December, 1950, Hutcheson said, "My father has played the piano seventy-five years (but I mean literally seventy-five years; he started at the age of three or four and now, aged seventy-nine, still plays) [Hutcheson wrote later to say that his father had died on February 9, 1951.]. He used to commute, before World War I, between Berlin, Germany, and Chautauqua, N.Y., teaching piano in Berlin in the winter and in Chautauqua in the summer. In the spring of 1914 he left Berlin, as usual, to go to Chautauqua for the summer, leaving my brother Arnold ('25 S.—but am I my brother's keeper?) and me in charge of two German aunts. Boom! We were stuck. My father, being British, couldn't get back to Germany; my mother, being German, couldn't get through the Allied ring into Germany. So my first war memory is of train delays caused by German mobilization, of school holidays when Lüttick (Liège to you) and other towns fell, of watching German soldiers swilling beer on top of the locomotive of a troop train, of visiting wounded Germans and hearing about the unspeakable atrocities committed by the bestial Allied savages, of the headline (I can still see it) 'England hat Deutschland den Krieg erklärt,' of the first and best definition of world war—'Einer schlägt den andern tot' ('every one kills every one else'; date coined, July, 1914; author, our housemaid), and finally, most vividly of all, of a nightmare in which I dreamed that one of those long-dreaded French Zeppelins was flying over the city and was dropping its first bomb just outside my bedroom window. My brother and I, luckily, had been born in America, and an American friend (Barrett Clark, the great dramatic historian and critic) was able to take us along on his way home. My brother will still swear that, when we were near the Dutch border, he could hear guns, then sixty miles away—but he went to Sheff, whereas I took Bennett's ethics. (O that marvelous Bennett! Remember how he used to detour every day on his way to class in order to walk through the as yet unchopped-up Memorial Quadrangle, because it could never sate him?) We zigzagged to Holland, to London, to Paris, then home on the S.S. Chicago, torpedoed before the war ended. First memory of America regained: a trip direct from the pier to Best & Company, where my mother stripped every single rag from us and marched us out completely redecorated.

"O my Squidge! You wanted something after 1926. Well, let it go. In some ways the summer of 1914 remains the most important post-1926 event of my life."

JOHN FRANCIS HYNES. Physician, 1100 North Jackson Street, Wilmington, Del.; residence, 4 Talley Road, Wilmington.

Hynes, who admits that he is sixty pounds heavier and beginning to gray (page Diogenes), says briefly, "My professional activities, involving chiefly the diagnosis and treatment of cancer, keep me fully occupied. Hence no golfing, fishing, gunning, sailing, etc., to brag about."

Hynes took his M.D. at Yale in 1930 and remained at the University for another year as an assistant in pathology. He interned in surgery at the Presbyterian Hospital in New York from 1931 to 1933 and then at the Boston City Hospital for a few months before returning to New York as an interne in cancer at the Memorial Hospital. He was a resident in cancer at the Nassau County Tumor Clinic at the Meadowbrook Hospital during 1934-35 and has been director of the Carpenter Memorial (cancer) Clinic at the Memorial Hospital in Wilmington since then and at present is also on the medical staff of St. Francis' Hospital. Hynes, who was certified in therapeutic radiology by the American Board of Radiology some time ago, is a fellow of the American College of Surgeons and a member of the American Medical Association, the Delaware State Medical Society, and the American Radium Society. He has contributed on cancer and allied subjects to medical journals and in 1950 went to Paris as a delegate to the International Cancer Congress.

He was married November 29, 1933, in Brooklyn, N.Y., to Martha Washington Kreer, daughter of John G. and Martha Washington Kreer. Her home was formerly in Chicago. Their children were all born in Wilmington, Robert Andrew on March 17, 1938, William Joseph on November 2, 1939, Joan Frances on March 24, 1941, David Peter on January 8, 1944, and Mary Louise on October 31, 1946.

HENRY TROY ISTAS. Director, legal aid department, City of New Haven; office, 177 Church Street, New Haven, Conn.; residence, 46 Starr Street, New Haven.

Following his graduation from the Yale Law School in 1929, Istas entered the general practice of law in New Haven. He has been director of the City's legal aid department since February, 1946. He was at one time assistant prosecuting attorney of the Municipal Court and since 1939 has been a member of the Board of Aldermen. Istas has been a member of the official board of the First Methodist Church, New Haven, since 1944 and belongs to the New Haven County and Connecticut State Bar associations and also to the Fraternal Order of Eagles.

His marriage to Hattie Alling Clark, daughter of Merritt Thomas and Hattie E. Alling Clark, took place in New Haven on September 6, 1941. Her home was formerly in Wallingford, Conn.

JOHN ALEXANDER JACKSON, JR. Engaged in handling family interests; residence, 160 East Hartsdale Road, Hartsdale, N.Y.

In the report which came from Jackson last December, he said, "Golf is my chief recreation and hobby, and I try to work in two or three rounds per week from April to November. I manage to score in the middle '70's on a warm day when the putts are dropping!

"I had made all plans to go to Europe with my wife this spring, but cancelled my reservations last week due to the war situation. By the time this is printed the outlook may have changed. At the moment, however, I expect to spend the winter in Mexico on the theory that an early vacation is better than none at all."

Jackson was manager of a departmental bureau of the Consolidated Edison Company of New York for some years, but resigned in 1937 and since then has been devoting his time to family interests, mainly real estate in Florida. Since 1940 he has been taking an active interest in security investments.

He was first married on June 8, 1929, in Muncie, Ind., to Maryellen O'Harra, daughter of Carl and Florence McNaughton O'Harra. Her death occurred on March 1, 1940. Jackson's second marriage, to Ann Evans, daughter of John C. and Martha Oster Evans, took place in New York City on October 18, 1941.

WILLIAM HENRY JACKSON. Independently engaged in the practice of architecture; office and residence, 317 Verna Hill Road, Greenfield Hill, Fairfield, Conn.

Jackson, who received his degree in architecture at Columbia, is a registered architect in the States of Connecticut and New York. He does mostly residential work, although there are some commercial angles involved. During the war he was a naval draftsman in a shipyard. Jackson belongs to the Connecticut Society of Architects and the Fairfield Rotary Club. His marriage to Theodosia Burr Hawley, daughter of William Curtis and Mary Theodosia Burr Hawley, took place in Fairfield on January 15, 1949. Her home was formerly in Bridgeport.

"Perhaps a unique record is the fact that I have not missed a Yale-Princeton or a Yale-Harvard football game in New Haven since 1910," Jackson remarks. "Many gods have I seen!

"I used to do a lot of sailing and racing in my earlier days, but now gardening and the maintenance of a one-acre estate are principal interests since domesticity overtook me in 1949. Most of my architectural work (an all-absorbing interest) in Fairfield County has been in the colonial tradition, with an occasional modern job."

DAVID NELSON JEFFRE. Assistant Eastern division manager, American Laundry Machinery Company, 40 East 34th Street, New York 16, N.Y.; residence, 122 Soundview Road, Huntington, N.Y.

On July 1, 1950, Jeffre became assistant Eastern division manager of the American Laundry Machinery Company, with which he became connected upon graduating from Yale. The company is engaged in the manufacture and sale of laundry and dry cleaning equipment.

Jeffre's marriage to Erna Marie Kanehl took place in New London, Conn., on August 20, 1934.

LAWRENCE KIRTLAND JENNINGS. Address, Box 88A, Route 4, Sarasota, Fla.

SHERWOOD FRANK JETER, JR. Architect, 25 Lewis Street, Hartford 3, Conn.; residence, 114 Brunswick Avenue, West Hartford 7.

Jeter, who received the degree of B.F.A. at the Yale Art School in 1926, reports briefly: "Traveled in Europe in summer immediately following graduation. Engaged by Hartford architectural firms from 1926 until 1938, when I opened my own office—still with it." His practice is a general one. He belongs to the Connecticut chapter of the American Institute of Architects, the Connecticut Society of Architects, the University Club of Hartford, the Hartford Canoe Club, and Wyllys Lodge of Masons and is serving as chairman of the business committee of Immanuel Congregational Church.

Jeter was married on September 14, 1935, in Washington, D.C., to Edwina E. Pabst, daughter of Edward E. and Bertha E. Burcke Pabst. They have two sons, both born in Hartford, Sherwood Edward on September 1, 1937, and Frederick Pabst on June 1, 1942.

RUSSELL CRANE JEWELL. Attorney, American Cyanamid Company, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York 20, N.Y.; residence, 23 Mt. Joy Avenue, Scarsdale, N.Y.

Jewell graduated from the Harvard Law School in 1932 and was admitted to the District of Columbia Bar the following year and to the New York Bar in 1940. Before going to law school, he had worked for two years in the freight traffic department of the Southern Railway System, starting as a student clerk and ending as chief clerk. He practiced law with C. S. Thompson and Frederick Schafer in Washington, D.C., from 1933 to 1936 and with another Washington firm, Donovan, Leisure, Newton & Lumbard, for the next four years, from 1935 to 1937 also being an instructor in law at the Washington College of Law. He moved to New York in 1940 and after a year with O'Brien & Boardman became attorney for the American Cyanamid Company. Jewell has taken part in various community activities in Scarsdale. He is a member of the Ardsley Country Club.

He writes: "Have mingled in local politics and in civil liberties work quite a bit. [He was a Republican committeeman in Washington in 1936, but doesn't mention specifically his political activities in Scarsdale.] My principal hobby has been golf, to which I try to devote a good bit of my spare time. Have won a few local tournaments in Washington and New York, such as club championships, etc. Another hobby is the study of Abraham Lincoln and the collection, in a very modest way, of a Lincoln library."

He was married March 24, 1934, in West Orange, N.J., to Ruth Cary Royes, daughter of Robert and Maude Easton Royes. They have two daughters: Barbara Cary, born August 8, 1937, and Nancy Bronson on August 12, 1940, both in Washington.

CAROL CLEMENT JOHNSON. Lawyer, 49 Wall Street, New York 5, N.Y.; residence, 600 West 111th Street, New York 25.

Johnson, who is independently engaged in the general practice of law, attended the Harvard Law School from September, 1926, to June 1929, and was subsequently admitted to the New York State Bar and to practice before the U.S. Supreme Court and other federal courts. He is a member of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York and the New York Law Institute. He has never married.

LEE SALTONSTALL JOHNSON. Executive assistant to general manager, Pratt & Whitney Aircraft Division, United Aircraft Corporation, 400 Main Street, East Hartford, Conn.; residence, 6 Sunnysdale Road, West Hartford.

Johnson's first job was in England as a machinist with the Vabest Company, Ltd., of London. Upon his return to this country in 1928, he established an importing business of his own in New York, but gave this up in 1929 to go with Pratt & Whitney Aircraft as an assembler. For eight years beginning in 1932 his position was that of estimator, and from 1940 to February, 1945, he was assistant to the factory manager. Since then he has been executive assistant to the general manager.

He was married in Hartford, September 12, 1933, to Jean Anita Mulligan, daughter of William J. Mulligan (LL.B. Yale 1904) and Kathleen Byron Keefe Mulligan. They have three children: Kathleen Grace, born September 17, 1935, Susanne Gates on May 24, 1937, and Edwin Lee on May 9, 1945, all in Hartford. The girls go to the Oxford School.

"In retrospect, I feel that the breaks have been pretty much on my side," Johnson says. "I attribute this to the relationship of my generation to national and international events during this century rather than to any unusual business acumen or farsightedness on my part.

"I am fortunate in that the family relationship of my wife and I and our three children is a happy one. Our children are healthy normal kids, with a realistic and well-balanced outlook towards the future. Although I did not marry until seven years after graduation, I married early enough to become a home owner before inflation and 'Roosevolution' taxation set in. Our children were born early enough for us to enjoy and for them to enjoy our company and yet late enough so that they were not physically or mentally hurt by the war years. I became associated with P.&W.A. because I became interested in aviation. I was employed early enough to qualify for a key position during the war years and to feel that my participation in and contribution to my company's war record did not have to take second place to the majority of those in uniform. With the international situation as it is today, I am fortunate in having a pretty intimate knowledge of, and to be associated with, a leading company in the aircraft industry.

"My hopes for the future conform pretty much, I am sure, to the hopes of most of us. Above all, I want to see a return to a free economy and a non-socialistic democracy. I want my children to have the same opportunities and the same degree of security I have had. I naturally want a peaceful world, but if we have to fight it out let's do it now while there is still time for me to again participate in some measure and share the burden that is sure to fall on my family.

"There are, naturally, many things my wife and I would liked to have done which we did not do—but this was a matter of our own choosing. We both like to travel, but outside of a trip to England in 1934 and one to Jamaica in 1940, we chose to spend most of our available funds on our home and the education of our children. We both like the theatre and an occasional 'fling,' as well as a variety of outdoor sports, but again, and for the same reason, time and the dollar have not permitted much of these. Perhaps some day we will have the freedom and the where-with-all to accomplish more of them while we are still young enough and healthy enough to enjoy them."

SIDNEY ALEXANDER JOHNSON. Judge, Court of Common Pleas; address, Fairfield County Court House, Bridgeport, Conn.; residence, Old Oaks Road, Bridgeport 4.

Johnson is conscientious, as always. He got his report in very promptly and in order to do so wrote it in bed while struggling with a strep throat. "Have lived in this locality since graduation," he says. "No regrets. Have a lovely family. Prior to my appointment to the bench, we vacationed most winters in Florida (not the entire winter). Now our vacations are limited to the summers, when we go to Maine or travel in New England, Canada, or the Middle West. Still maintain a Yale interest on the scholarship committee of our Yale Club. My wife and I are interested in antiques, and I believe we have some lovely pieces of furniture. Will be in our new home, now under construction, before reunion. Golf is my only recreation. Formerly played a bit of tournament golf in Connecticut, but no more. Was champion of Brooklawn Country Club four times, in 1934-6-9-45, I believe. Also champion of the Junior-Senior Golfing Society of Connecticut, four times, 1946-7-8-50. Was active in Republican politics in Bridgeport and the state from 1928 through 1946. That stopped on my appointment to the bench. Enjoyed immensely the practice of law and am now enjoying the judicial work. Hope that I may be allowed to continue on the bench the remainder of my life, or until retirement age, at least. Some of our classmates are successful legal practitioners in Connecticut, and often I have had them present their cases to me.

"Almost forgot. We have three dogs—two Scotties and a Cocker. Have bred Scotties."

Johnson took his LL.B. at Yale in 1928 and was admitted to practice in Connecticut that year. He was then engaged in general practice in Bridgeport and, in addition, served as assistant clerk of the Bridgeport City Court from July, 1931, to July, 1933, as prosecutor of the court from July, 1943, to January, 1947, and as a U.S. commissioner for a year and a half beginning in January, 1942. He was appointed judge of the Court of Common Pleas on January 1, 1947.

Johnson served as president of the Fifth District Republican Club from 1931 to 1933 and of the John Ericson Republican League of Connecticut from 1934 to 1940. In the latter year he was the unsuccessful candidate on the Republican ticket for the 21st Senatorial District. In 1944 he was Republican campaign manager for Bridgeport and during 1945-46 finance chairman. From July, 1941, to July, 1943, he was chief air raid warden for Bridgeport and subsequently was a member of the Connecticut and Bridgeport War councils. He is a vestryman of St. George's Episcopal Church and for the past three years has been a vice-president of Pomperaug Council of Boy Scouts. He was formerly a member of the advisory board of the Salvation Army. He belongs to the American, Connecticut, and Bridgeport Bar associations, the I.O.O.F., the Order of Vasa, and the Brooklawn Country Club (treasurer, 1946-48; secretary since 1948) and is a director of the Yale Club of Eastern Fairfield County.

He was first married on September 1, 1931, in Bridgeport, to Genevieve Hennessey, daughter of William Hennessey. Her death occurred in January, 1938. On April 28, 1939, his marriage to Lois Caldwell, daughter of Edward Baker and Martha Beatty Caldwell, took place in Bridgeport. They have a daughter, Sydney Ann, who was born in Bridgeport on June 1, 1941.

GRAHAM JOHNSTON. Address, care Secretary's Office, Yale University, New Haven, Conn.

JOHN HUBBARD JOSS. Special assistant, General Services Administration, 6106 General Services Building, 18th and F Streets, N.W., Washington, D.C.; residence, 3260 Nebraska Avenue, N.W., Washington.

"I have been playing it right down the middle," says our football captain. "Have experienced almost everything but money and divorce. I still have ambition and hopes (one is to stay under 250)."

Joss received an LL.B. at the University of Arizona in 1931 and an LL.M. at George Washington University in 1946. He was engaged in private practice in Indianapolis from 1933 to 1937 and during the next four years was associated with the Firestone Tire & Rubber Company as first assistant counsel. He has had various government jobs since January, 1942: as chief counsel for rationing enforcement for eight months; special representative for the Board of Economic Warfare in British East Africa from October, 1942, to December, 1943; associate general counsel, War Assets Administration, August, 1946, to November, 1947, and general counsel from then until December, 1949; commissioner for the Liquidation Service from January to June 30, 1950; and special assistant to the General Services Administration since November 1, 1950. For recreation, or maybe as a part of his reducing program, he turns to golf and vegetable gardening.

His marriage to Elizabeth Eleanor Taylor, daughter of William Mode and Mary Allen Taylor, took place in Indianapolis on July 1, 1931. Their son, Frederick Augustus, 2d, who was born in Mexico City in September, 1932, graduated from Taft in 1950 and is now a Freshman at Williams. The other children are: Mary Allen, born in October, 1933, in Indianapolis, who is a Senior at the Madeira School; Natalie Quarrier, who was born in April, 1938, in Akron, Ohio; and Eleanor Wendy, born in September, 1941, in Washington.

ROBERT PRATHER JOYCE. Member, Policy Planning Staff, Department of State, Washington 25, D.C.; residence, 2811 O Street, N.W., Washington 7.

Joyce writes: "I have been in government service since 1928 and have lived from periods of from one to three years in such places as Shanghai, La Paz, Washington, Belgrade, Havana, Bari, Bern, and Trieste. I have seen strange countries, strange people, and shared in strange events. I never desired any other type of life, nor do I now. As a member of the Policy Planning Staff of the State Department, I am an observer and occasionally a participant in the development of the world scene at the center which is Washington—the greatest show on earth. Next week I might be in Paris, Seoul, Belgrade, or Stockholm. This is not a quiet life or particularly ordered one—but it is consistently interesting and active. I count certain Chinese, Yugoslavs, Englishmen, Italians, and Frenchmen among my close friends, and I value them and what they have to offer.

"I would not in 1950 choose any other life—I could not be satisfied with any other after twenty-two years. The melons might be bigger and more lush in the quiet, adjoining field, but I suspect their flavor is not as pungent or subtle. I find that the Orient Express is a more interesting train than the Super-Chief between Chicago and Los Angeles."

During his first year after graduation Joyce studied at the École Libre des Sciences Politiques in Paris. From August, 1943, until June, 1946, he was out of the Foreign Service and with wartime agencies under the Joint Chiefs of Staff. He was with the Office of Strategic Services in the Mediterranean theatre from November, 1943, until the end of the war, stationed in Cairo, Bari, and Caserta, Italy. During this period he visited Yugoslavia, Rumania, Bulgaria, Greece, French North Africa, etc. He says that he hasn't published anything, although he has "made addresses which have been reproduced for restricted distribution. I have addressed the National War College, Washington; the Air War College at Maxwell Field, Ala.; the Reserve Officers Group of the Central Intelligence Agency; the Los Angeles branch of the Council on Foreign Relations, etc."

Joyce was married in Panama Canal Zone on January 22, 1935, to Jane Chase, daughter of Ralph Waldo Chase, Yale '07, and Rita Smith Chase. Her home was formerly in Farmington and Middlefield, Conn.

CARL FREDERIC JULIN. With United Corporation, Grand Central Terminal Building, 70 East 45th Street, New York, N.Y.; residence, Harbor Heights, Greenwich, Conn.

"My next incarnation," says Julin, "will probably see me taking post-graduate work in some school of journalism. However, for this life I will probably continue to worry about which is the most promising and profitable way for our stockholders' money to be invested. I feel sure that in that line, no company will hang up a better record than ours, which has already made a name for itself since it refused to lie down for the axe after the late F.D.R. labeled it a 'corporate monstrosity through which the House of Morgan hoped to control the utilities along the Atlantic Seaboard.'

"I hope that in the years to come I will find more time to exercise my hobby—writing on subjects not related to economics or finance—and perhaps go in for a large family in my old age."

Julin adds that the law still says that the United Corporation is a public utility holding company, but actually it is an investment company and its status may be established as such by the S.E.C. by the time the book reaches print. Our question about position stumped him—"For the past three years my duties have been so varied that no one, least of all myself, can label the more or less executive niche I occupy," he explained. Up to 1942 he was first in Wall Street and then with a banking house in Baltimore (Mackubin, Legg & Company). The next three years were spent in the Navy—as a lieutenant commander in the Naval Air Training Command most of the time, and he still has this rank in the Reserve. After the war he returned to securities with the United Corporation.

As to writings, he said, "The only things that have ever appeared in print so far over my name have been contributions to H. I. Phillips' 'Sun Dial,' but, if I have time, perhaps something of a more ambitious nature may be ready to set up in the next few years." He has never married, but says, "Again, granted a little more time, things may be different."

JEROME ALVIN KAUFMAN. Associate member, Momar, Inc., manufacturing chemists, and sales representative for north Georgia; address, Box 4326, Atlanta, Ga.; residence, 24 Lombardy Way, N.E., Atlanta.

Kaufman has had the above connection since 1948. He was formerly associated with B. Altman's, New York, and Rich's, Atlanta, in a merchandising capacity and then from 1940 to 1948 owned and operated the Wadell Coffee Company of Atlanta. From 1943 to 1945 Kaufman was a field director with the American Red Cross, stationed at Elkins, W.Va. (maneuver area), Daniel Field, Augusta, Ga., Fort McPherson, Atlanta, and Camp Plauche, New Orleans.

His marriage to Nancy Winston, daughter of Daniel and Celeste Steuer-man Winston, took place in New York City on January 9, 1932. Their son, Alan Vaughan, who was born on March 13, 1937, is now in the tenth grade at the Henry Grady High School in Atlanta.

RALPH FRANKLIN KEELING. Died June 12, 1951.

Mrs. Keeling was good enough to send in the data about Keeling. When she wrote last May, she said that he had been seriously ill and in the hospital for some weeks, following a major operation in the summer of 1950—and that he sent his very best wishes to all the men of 1926 and wanted them to know that only being flat on his back in a hospital would prevent his being at the reunion with all the other Nathan Hales. She mentioned that gardening had been his hobby from the first day when the ground can be worked in the spring until the last leaf flies in the fall, and that in the winter he turned to music. He had collected quite a record library and of late had been enthusiastic over the "Great Books" program.

Keeling was with Lee Higginson & Company in 1927 and with the Yale University Press for the next three years. He then returned to Lee Higginson—in Boston and Chicago—but gave up the connection in 1932 to become a partner in Watt & Keeling. From 1934 to 1937 he was a partner in Keeling, Hetzler & Company and then established the firm of R. F. Keeling & Company, broker and dealer. In recent years he had been engaged in private economic research and as a lecturer on economics, specializing in economic cost determination, and had an appointment as special lecturer in the Department of Management at DePaul University. He was editor of the American Economist from 1940 to 1946 and has been a director of the Mid-west Monetary Federation and executive secretary of the Institute of American Economics. His writings include the following: Gruesome Harvest (Institute of American Economics, Chicago, 1947); Economic View of Cost and Profit Determination (a DePaul University publication, 1949); a condensed version of the latter recently prepared in collaboration with Professor Stephen J. Mueller, chairman of the Department of Management at DePaul, and designed for publication in various periodicals; and several monographs (co-author) on cost determination, prepared as economist for Kuhn, Sunley & Company, among them How to Fortify Your Business Against Inflation and Are Corporations' Profits too High? He was a member of the American Statistical Association (both the Chicago chapter and the national organization), the American Finance Association, and the American Economic Association.

Mrs. Keeling was Grace Noerr Sherburne, daughter of Elmer David and Alice Catherine Noerr Sherburne. They were married in Melrose, Mass., on June 15, 1927, and had two children: Charles David, born April 20, 1928, in Scranton, Pa., and Lyla, born January 17, 1930, in Boston. David received a B.S. at the University of Illinois in 1948 and is now a candidate for a Ph.D. in chemistry at Northwestern. Lyla is a Junior at Lawrence College.

MILLARD ALEXANDER KELLY. Address, 3000 Poplar Terrace, Baltimore 16, Md.

PAUL WILLIAM KELLY. Address, 1501 Tolma Avenue, Dormont, Pittsburgh, Pa.

SHERMAN KENT. Deputy director, Office of National Estimates, Central Intelligence Agency, Washington 25, D.C. (on leave from position as professor of history at Yale); residences, 4550 Connecticut Avenue, Washington, and 205 Livingston Street, New Haven, Conn.

Kent, who is on leave of absence from his position as professor of history at Yale, has been deputy director of the Office of National Estimates since November 13, 1950. He has given us the following summary of his work: "From 1926 to 1928, and from 1930 to 1933, I was studying in New Haven and Paris for my Ph.D. degree in history [received at Yale in 1933]. I taught history at Yale (instructor; assistant professor) from 1928 to 1930, and again from 1933 to 1941. From 1941 to June, 1946, I was an officer of the Research and Analysis Branch of the Office of Strategic Services and of the Office of Intelligence Research in the Department of State. I was a resident civilian instructor at the National War College from September to December, 1946, and a Guggenheim Fellow from January to September, 1947. I then returned to the History Department at Yale as a full professor and stayed there until 1950, when I went back to the intelligence business in C.I.A."

He adds, "From the point of view of the gainful occupation, the thing I do best and with most pleasure is to teach. From the non-gainful occupation point of view, I like carpentry, cooking, and gardening best. I'm not very hot at any one of them.

"What I'd like to have done more of is travel and study abroad. My principal regret—like every one else's—is the lousy state of the world that has indicated giving up my university life twice. However, I've been in the .0001% of the luckiest Americans in that my war job and my current job are things for which I have had some professional training and did/do not involve getting shot at.

"The only traveling I've done since 1933 was during the war. I was in North Africa, Sicily, Corsica, Italy, the U.K. But travel under war conditions doesn't count, and it isn't much fun any way you look at it. The best fun of it was encountering about 50% of my classmates at one place or another (Charlie Poore in three successive places and Henry Rowell in two.)"

Kent is the author of three books, Electoral Procedure under Louis Philippe (New Haven, 1937), Writing History (New York, 1941), Strategic Intelligence for American World Policy (Princeton, 1948), and the following articles: "Two Official Candidates in the July Monarchy" (American Historical Review, 1937); "Prospects of National Intelligence" (Yale Review, 1947); "The Declaration of the Rights of Man" in Great Expressions of Human Rights (New York, 1950); and of one on Intelligence in The Reporter 1950.

He has also contributed book reviews to the American Historical Review, the Journal of Modern History, the Annals of Political and Social Sciences, and the Yale Review. He is a member of the editorial board of the Journal of Modern History and was appointed, but forced to resign, the chairmanship of the American Historical Association program committee for 1951. He belongs to the Lagunitas Club, the New Haven Lawn Club, the Elizabethan Club, and the New Haven Rotary Club. In 1950 he ran for the job of alderman of the 15th Ward on the Democratic ticket, but was defeated.

He was married in San Francisco, December 20, 1934, to Elizabeth Gregory Church, whose home was formerly in England and in Ithaca, N.Y. She is the daughter of Warren and Sarah Hardy Gregory. The Kents have two children: Serafina, born April 27, 1938, and Sherman Tecumseh, born November 1, 1941, both in New Haven.

WILLIS FREDERICK KERN. Residence, 6150 Wilson Boulevard, Arlington, Va.

Kern was professor of mathematics at the U.S. Naval Academy at Annapolis from 1928 until his retirement in 1947. "Since then," he says, "I have managed my Washington real estate and have helped my co-authors to keep our books up to date."

The work on his books could easily take a lot of time, for there are thirteen which he has written in collaboration, mainly with Lyman M. Kells and James R. Bland, although the first two on the following list were written with Bland only as co-author, and the eighth title with a third collaborator, Joseph B. Orleans. The list follows: Geometry with Military and Naval Applications; Solid Mensuration with Proofs (both published by John Wiley & Sons); Plane Trigonometry; Plane and Spherical Trigonometry; Spherical Trigonometry with Naval and Military Applications; Navigation; Five-place Logarithmic and Trigonometric Tables; Elements of Trigonometry (all published by McGraw-Hill); Log Log Trig Duplex Slide Rule Manual; Log Log Deci-Trig Duplex Slide Rule Manual; Trig Duplex Slide Rule Manual; Deci-Trig Slide Rule Manual; Polyplase Trig Slide Rule Manual (Keuffel & Esser).

Kern says that he did some graduate work, but has no advanced degree. He was married July 5, 1930, in Washington, D.C., to Anna Lee Hall, daughter of John William and Augusta DeTemple Hall. Their oldest son, Reed DeTemple, born March 14, 1931, attended the Severn School during 1945-46, Mercersburg Academy for the next two years, and the University of Virginia from 1948 to 1950. He then entered Hampden-Sydney College, but later in 1950 joined the Air Force. The second boy, Willis Browning, who was born May 10, 1934, is a Senior at the Washington-Lee High School in Arlington. The other children are: Alice Lee, born November 25, 1937, Hall Sheriff on December 27, 1940, and Helen Ann on October 15, 1943. The children were all born in Annapolis.

MAULSBY KIMBALL, JR. Art director, Bryn Mawr Art Center and Haverford School; residence, 746 Panmure Road, Haverford, Pa.

Kimball, who studied at the Art Students League in New York, the Buffalo School of Fine Arts, and the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts in Philadelphia, has exhibited at the Philadelphia Art Alliance, the Woodmere Art Gallery, the Contemporary Arts Association, and the Philadelphia Water Color Club (of all of which he is a member), the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, the Albright Art Gallery in Buffalo, and elsewhere. He is a member of the council of the Pennsylvania Art Education Association, of which he was president from its foundation in 1948 to 1950, and is also serving on the committee on art education of the Museum of Modern Art. In addition to the organizations already mentioned, he belongs to the Eastern Arts Association and the National Art Educators Association. He has been art director of both the Bryn Mawr Art Center and the Haverford School for some time. A speech which he delivered at the Eastern Arts Association Convention in Philadelphia in 1947 was published in the Art Education Bulletin.

Kimball was in the Signal Corps for two years, attached to the Air Force Radar Maintainance, with the rank of T/5. His service was all in this country. He has never married.

FREDERICK WILLIAM KINCAID, JR. Address, Barneveld, N.Y.

HOWARD THAYER KINGSBURY. Head, Mathematics Department, Westminster School, Simsbury, Conn.

"As a kid I wanted to be a school teacher, then a civil engineer, and changed my courses to begin to prepare for that," Kingsbury tells us. "Then I got the offer of a job in Wall Street and a chance to go to Oxford for a year. Jumped at the latter and took the former upon my return in September, 1927. Saw no real future then and looked for a job in a school. Saw Frank Ashburn, '25, and found he needed a man to teach math and joined the Brooks faculty after Christmas, 1929. Stayed there teaching math and coaching crew until I was called to duty in April, 1941, and found myself in Puerto Rico before I quite knew where I was. While at Brooks, I enjoyed a wonderful sabbatical year at Oxford.

"After eighteen months or so, the climate and life in Puerto Rico got me down to such an extent that I cracked up a bit and spent most of the time from October, 1942, to February, 1943, in the hospital. I then sat out the rest of the war in an interesting but tame job at Fort Bragg.

"What I wanted to do after the war was a problem. If I were to change my job, that was the time to do it, but as I stacked one possibility after another up against teaching, I always came back to that. So I found a job at Hebron Academy, but was not too happy there, and when Professor Milliken offered me a job here [1948] I jumped at it, and have 'lived happily ever since.' "

Queens College, Oxford, is Kingsbury's second Alma Mater; he studied there during 1926-27 and again during 1936-37. He took summer courses at Columbia during the period from 1930 until 1934, when he received his master's degree. His Wall Street connection (1927-29) was with Lee Higginson & Company. He had been a member of the Officers Reserve Corps since 1926, was a member of Squadron A, New York National Guard, from 1927 to 1929, and is currently a lieutenant colonel in the Military Intelligence Section of the U.S. Army Reserve. While at Fort Bragg during the latter part of World War II, he served as transportation and intelligence officer of the Field Artillery Reserve Training Corps and in February, 1946, was awarded the Army Commendation Ribbon. He belongs to the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the New York Society of Military and Naval Officers of World Wars, and the Sons of the Revolution.

Kingsbury was married December 17, 1931, in Boston, to Ellen Munroe Wales, daughter of Nathaniel and Ellen Lunt Wales. They have two children: Nathaniel Wales, born October 19, 1940, and Ruth Ellen, July 19, 1943.

WILLIAM BERGH KIP. Residence, Onteora Club, Tannersville, N.Y.

"On leaving Yale, I found out that I had reasonably independent means and a loafer's disposition," Kip tells us. He adds, "I promptly gave up the habit of ruthless competition acquired during my school and college days. Except for a few years during World War II, when I worked for the best of bosses, Sherman Kent, '26, in the Office of Strategic Services [as chief, research and analysis branch, New York office], I have stuck pretty steadily to loafing.

"I ride a number of hobbies, among which are photography, bird-watching, community theatre, letter-writing, and listening. My marriage and my family life have been extremely happy. My health has been good except for a serious operation a few years ago. In summer my view is circled by the Catskill Mountains. In winter I look across a lagoon to the Gulf of Mexico.

"I see Ewing and Kent once in a while, but on most of my classmates I have seldom laid an eye since graduation. I hear about their exploits and successes with admiration. The men themselves have dimmed in my memory until they seem an eternally young and faultless crew of worthies. I have let no reunion shatter this illusion, and I doubt if I ever shall.

"Yale has my loyalty. I had a good time there and near the end of Senior year I gathered that the goal of becoming an educated man might be a worthwhile one. I am still trying to approach it."

Kip returned to Yale for one year of post-graduate study in 1927, but got involved in writing the Dramat play for Monty Woolley instead of completing the courses. He has worked for many years in all phases of the amateur theatre—acting, directing, writing, managing, and viewing with alarm.

His marriage to Rita Delafield, daughter of Edward C. and Margaretta Stockton Beasley Delafield, took place in Riverdale, N.Y., on June 19, 1926. Their older daughter, Rita Delafield, who was born in New Haven on March 17, 1927, was first married to John P. Marquand, Jr., on June 19, 1947. They were divorced in April, 1950, and on the following September 21 she married William M. Robbins, Jr. Rita attended Sarah Lawrence, and the younger girl, Katrinka, is a Junior at Vassar. The latter was born February 18, 1931, in New York City.

ISRAEL E. KIRSH. Address, 603 North Cuyler Avenue, Oak Park, Ill.

EDWARD ALBERT KIRTLAN. Architect, with Kirtlan Construction Company; office and residence, 2025 Casistas Avenue, Pasadena 3, Calif.

Kirtlan spent four years at the University of Pennsylvania School of Architecture and was subsequently licensed in California. He has since been in business under the name of the Kirtlan Construction Company.

His marriage to Janet Adèle Carrington, daughter of Edward Brooks and Carolyn Elizabeth Ziebell Carrington, took place in Los Angeles on May 5, 1945. Her home was formerly in Denver. They have a daughter, Linda Carrington, who was born in Pasadena on November 2, 1950.

MAX EDWARD KLEBANOFF. Lawyer, 152 Temple Street, New Haven, Conn.; residence, 246 Colony Road, New Haven.

Klebanoff writes: "My travels have all been within the confines of the United States—Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Florida, and Virginia. My three major hobbies are my wife and two children—my only regret is that I did not marry earlier in life. I have been quite active in local and state politics in the Democratic Party, as a result of which I have held several public offices at various times, and I am currently clerk of the Probate Court by appointment of Judge Shanley, who is also a graduate of Yale and the Yale Law School."

Klebanoff was admitted to the Connecticut Bar in July, 1928, directly after his graduation from the Yale Law School, and has been practicing law in New Haven since that August. From 1931 to 1945 he was on the Democratic Town Committee. The public offices which he has held are the following: city clerk, January, 1932-June 30, 1933; assistant prosecutor of the City Court, July, 1933-June, 1943; chief clerk of the Probate Court for the District of New Haven since January, 1949. He has been a member of the New Haven Community Chest Speakers' Bureau and is active in work in connection with the Jewish Home for the Aged, the Jewish Home for Children, and the Yale Hillel Foundation. He belongs to the New Haven County Bar Association and the Masonic order.

Klebanoff's marriage to Sayre Witten, daughter of Morris and Minnie Berman Witten, took place in New Haven on November 28, 1935. The children are: Howard Michael, born May 17, 1937, and Judith Lee on October 1, 1942, both in New Haven. The boy is in junior high.

RICHARD GUY KNEEDLER, JR. With Russ & Company, Alamo Bank Building, San Antonio, Texas.

In 1930 Kneedler received the degree of LL.B. at Washington University in St. Louis. He practiced for the next two years, in association with the Legislative Reference Bureau in Springfield, Ill., specializing in constitutional law, and then embarked on a business career because of defective eyes. From 1933 to 1937 he was a salesman for the Schott Brewing Company in Highland, Ill., and the following year was secretary of Brewing Industry, Inc., in Chicago. He then went to Omaha as manager of the Falstaff Brewing Company and in 1940 became executive vice-president of the Muehlebach Brewing Company in Kansas City. In June, 1950, he became vice-president and director of the Lone Star Distributing Company of Houston, Texas, and is now in San Antonio with Russ & Company. He has been a consultant to that company for some time and has the same connection with the Texas Screw Products Company of Houston and the Continental Lithographers and the H. N. Saylor Company of St. Louis. Kneedler belongs to four Kansas City clubs: the Mission Hills Country, Kansas City, Saddle and Sirloin, and Seven-Eleven.

He was married on March 21, 1927, in St. Louis to Clarabell Cohenour, from whom he was divorced in 1933. His second marriage, to Grace Jersig, daughter of Clara Holecamp, took place in San Antonio on June 8, 1934. He has a daughter, Joan, who was born in St. Louis on November 9, 1930. She graduated from the Collinsville (Ill.) High School in 1948 and spent some time with the Class of 1950 at Colorado Women's College. She is now a Junior at the University of Wyoming.

Kneedler sums up other things as follows: "Travel—strictly intramural: Seattle to Key West, Maine to Tia Juana, and practically all whistle stops in between. Recreations, etc.: pretty catholic: The Plaza, Condon's joint, race horses, Dixieland jazz, Scott Fitzgerald, Frederick Prokosch, Ford Maddox Ford, pitch, bum tennis, and twinges of arthritis. Regrets: can't ride a horse like Pete Bostwick, play a horn like Bill Davison, or tennis well enough to beat my daughter. Satisfactions: have had, am having, and will continue to have a hell of a lot of fun."

"P.S. Writing?—Let's try this again come Fiftieth Reunion. I'll probably be a stuffy enough bore to detail my anemic efforts by that time."

LEWIS HOMER KNICKERBOCKER. Administrative assistant to vice-president and treasurer, Standard Brands, Inc., manufacturers and distributors of food products, 595 Madison Avenue, New York 22, N.Y.; residence, 174 Webster Road, Scarsdale, N.Y.

Knickerbocker writes: "Affected by exposure to the best of Yale's humanities, I spent the twelve months after graduation in Europe, sampling summer school in Grenoble, later the Sorbonne, traveling extensively in France, with side trips to Italy, Spain, and North Africa.

"During 1927-29 I attended and graduated from the Harvard Business School and never worked so hard in my life. Like many other classmates and the popular thing to do at the time, I went to work in Wall Street and became frozen up there during the Depression. Later experienced the real satisfactions of living in a small town, Meadville, Pa., when employed by Talon, Inc., the zipper makers.

"On July 1, 1951, I rounded out nine years with Standard Brands, Inc., in New York and am now administrative assistant to the vice-president and treasurer. My interests still include travel, which in my work takes me about the United States, and the theatre, which I attend regularly in season. Fortunately my wife shares my interest completely, as do my children, a son fifteen and daughter seven, all of whom provide for my spare time."

Knickerbocker's marriage to Josephine Simms, daughter of Thomas Hamilton and Daisy Golson Simms, took place in New York City on June 3, 1933. They have two children, both of whom were born in White Plains, N.Y., Lewis Homer, Jr., on November 1, 1935, and Katherine Hamilton on November 17, 1943. Lewis, Jr., is at the Scarsdale High School, but is going away to school in the fall.

JAMES LAUNCELOT KNIPE. Vice-president, economist, and general sales manager, Union Bag & Paper Corporation (kraft boxes and bags), 233 Broadway, New York 7, N.Y.; residence, Lovers Lane, Princeton, N.J.

"Working like a dog to rehabilitate myself after five years in the Navy, I do not have much time to sit back and muse on life and its problems," says Knipe. "Probably the most significant thing about my recent career is that I am bursting with eagerness to write the business cycle explanation to end all business cycle explanations, but find that the daily grind in the paper industry does not permit such luxuries.

"We live very quietly in Princeton—behind the enemy lines! Since I married the little woman as a result of a tennis courtship (!), it is only fitting that we still should devote major extra-curricular effort to this fine sport. The boss is trying to make me into a good golfer, but so far his attempts have borne no fruit at all."

Knipe went with the Union Bag & Paper Corporation as vice-president and economist in March, 1947, and has since been made general sales manager and a director of the company. He is chairman of the board of directors of the Citrus Container Institute and a director also of the National Paperboard Association, the Fibre Box Association, the Fourdrinier Kraft Board Institute, Inc., and the U.S. Pulp Producers Association, Inc. From 1926 to 1932 he was a telephone company executive in Illinois and during the next nine years was engaged as an investment counselor in New Haven. During this period he also did graduate work at Yale, taking his M.A. in 1934 and his Ph.D. in 1940; his M.A. thesis was entitled "Argentine Federal Finance," and his Ph.D. dissertation was on the "Significance of the Capital Market."

His Navy service covered the period from June, 1941, to January, 1946. He was a lieutenant at the time he went on active duty and a commander at the time of his release, having been promoted to that rank in November, 1942. Knipe had assignments in Washington, the Mediterranean, and Pearl Harbor. He remained in the islands for a year following his separation from service, being director of research for the Hawaii Employers Council during this period.

Knipe is the co-author with Alexander Calder of The Guaranteed Annual Wage, published by the National Planning Association, Washington, in 1948. He belongs to the Wall Street and Yale clubs of New York, the New Haven Lawn Club, the Pretty Brook and Springdale Golf clubs of Princeton, and the Oglethorpe Club of Savannah.

Mrs. Knipe was Danielle Rolin, daughter of Albert Constant and Lucette Paulet Rolin, of Brussels. They were married in Long Beach on June 14, 1930. Their oldest son, James Graham, who was born in LaJolla, Calif., on October 9, 1931, graduated from the George School, Bucks County, Pa., and is now a Freshman at Franklin and Marshall College. Peter Rolin Knipe, born April 9, 1938, in New Haven, is attending the Princeton Country Day School.

YALE DAVID KOSKOFF. Senior neurosurgeon and director of research and medical and surgical services, Montefiore Hospital, 3459 5th Avenue, Pittsburgh 13, Pa.; residence, 5500 Hobart Street, Pittsburgh.

Koskoff has three Yale degrees in addition to his B.A.—M.S. 1928, Ph.D. 1929, and M.D. 1931. In his Senior year in the Medical School he received honorable mention for the Keese Prize. From 1927 to 1929 he was assistant in physiology at Yale and from 1931 to 1933 an instructor in the Laboratory of Neurophysiology. He spent the next three years in Boston, being house officer of the neurological unit at the Boston City Hospital during 1933-34, resident in neurosurgery there during 1935-36, and a fellow in neurosurgery at the Lahey Clinic during 1934-35. Since 1936 he has been senior neurosurgeon at the Montefiore Hospital in Pittsburgh and last September was appointed director of research and of the medical surgical services. Other current appointments are as follows: director of the Laboratory of Electroencephalography at the Montefiore Hospital and University of Pittsburgh Psychiatric Institute and Clinic; consultant neurosurgeon, University of Pittsburgh Psychiatric Institute and Clinic, County Institution District Hospitals at Mayview and Woodville, Veterans Administration Hospital, Butler, Pa., and McKeesport (Pa.) Hospital; lecturer in psychology, Graduate School, University of Pittsburgh. Koskoff has been certified in neurology by the American Board of Psychiatry and Neurology and in neurosurgery by the American Board of Neurosurgery. He is a fellow of the American College of Surgeons, a diplomate of the National Board of Medical Examiners (Massachusetts and Pennsylvania), and a member of the American College of Surgeons, the American Society of Electroencephalography, and the Association for Research in Nervous and Mental Diseases. He is the co-author with F. Weniger of Adverse Effect Upon the Health of a Family Resulting From a Radical Change of Personality in one Member After Frontal Lobotomy (1949) and the author of Psychology in Neurological Research (University of Pittsburgh Press, 1950).

Koskoff is a clarinetist (and apparently doesn't have a minute for any other type of relaxation). He was married in Boston in 1934 to Elizabeth Yolande Gilbert, daughter of Henry Franklin Belknap Gilbert and Helen Kalisher Gilbert, of Cambridge. They have two children: Eric Gilbert, born November 15, 1936, in Luxembourg, and Ellen Gilbert, born December 8, 1943, in Pittsburgh. The boy is a high school Freshman.

MORRIS YALE KROSNICK. Physician, 38 Trumbull Street, New Haven, Conn.; residence, 119 West Park Avenue, New Haven.

Krosnick, who took his M.D. at Yale in 1930, has been engaged in the practice of pediatrics in New Haven since 1933, with special interest in pediatric allergy. He has been an associate clinical professor of pediatrics at the Yale Medical School since 1946 and is attending pediatrician to the Grace-New Haven Community Hospital and the Hospital of St. Raphael and consulting pediatrician to the Griffin Hospital in Derby, Conn. Krosnick is a fellow of the American Academy of Pediatrics and since 1930 has been a member of Sigma Xi.

From November, 1943, to January, 1946, he was on active duty in the Medical Corps of the Army Air Force, entering service as a captain and receiving a terminal promotion to major. He served in Texas with the Southwest Training Command for a time and was subsequently with the 4th Air Force in California.

Krosnick, whose avocation is music, particularly violin, has for years been a member of the first violin section of the New Haven Symphony Orchestra. He has taken part in chamber music activities of all sorts, especially string quartettes. He was married in New Haven, February 24, 1929, to Estelle Grossman, daughter of Murray and Lulu Kaminer Grossman, of Ansonia, Conn. They have two sons: Aaron Burton, born June 28, 1937, and Joel on April 3, 1941, both in New Haven.

FRANK DANBY LACKEY, JR. Independently engaged in the brokerage business; address, care R. L. Day & Company, 14 Wall Street, New York 5, N.Y.; residence, 1368 Park Lane, Pelham Manor, N.Y.

From 1926 to 1928 Lackey was assistant superintendent of W. R. Ramsey & Company. He was then a partner in the brokerage firm of C. E. Welles & Company until 1941, from 1933 to 1937 also being assistant treasurer and a director of C. W. Young & Company, investment counsel, and from 1937 to 1940 a director of another investment counsel firm—Clarke, Sinsabaugh & Company. Lackey, who is a member of the New York Stock Exchange, has been independently engaged in business since 1942. He has been a member of the Pelham Board of Education since 1945, served as president of the Yale Club of Pelham from 1944 to 1946, and belongs to the Pelham Country Club.

As to other things, he says, "I have worked on the local committees of Cub Scouts, Red Cross, Community Chest, and various other groups. I have collected stamps in the last ten years and still like to play softball, tennis (weekly), bowling, and golf. Still enjoy all athletic events. Travels have been as follows: 1932—West Indies cruise to Trinidad, South America, Panama, Jamaica, Havana, and Nassau; 1936—Pacific Northwest and Canadian Rockies; 1938—North Cape cruise, including four days in Russia; 1949—trip to Pacific Northwest—Glacier Park, Victoria, Seattle, Jasper Park, and Canadian Rockies with Mrs. Lackey and all the children."

Mrs. Lackey, whose maiden name was Katharine T. Davis, is the daughter of William S. and Eliza West Davis. They were married in Georgetown, Del., on April 2, 1927. Their older son, Frank D., 3d, who was born April 23, 1928, graduated from Andover in 1947 and is now a Senior at Yale; he was on the baseball squad in 1949 and 1950. Mary Katharine Lackey, who is a graduate of Abbot Academy and now a Junior at Connecticut College for Women, was born August 27, 1930. The second girl, Elizabeth Ann, was born October 9, 1935, and is at Chatham Hall, where she is president of her Class. The younger boy, William Davis, was born October 10, 1939. The children were all born in New York.

LESTER DUFFIN LADEN. Address, care Mrs. Robert W. Sheehan, 55 East 10th Street, New York 3, N.Y.

JOSEPH LAMOUREUX. Service manager, Connecticut Motor Club, 399 Temple Street, New Haven, Conn.; residence, 87 Lake Street, West Haven.

Lamoureux has been service manager for the Connecticut Motor Club since 1940. His marriage to Helen Cahill, daughter of John and Lenna Horton Cahill, took place in West Haven on April 22, 1935. They have three children, all of whom were born in New Haven, Joseph Edward on August 17, 1939, Suzanne on February 6, 1941, and Judith on March 21, 1945.

JOHN SPEER LAUGHLIN. Engaged in farming, Land's End Farm, Queens-town, Md.

In 1929 Laughlin graduated from the Yale Law School and was admitted to the bars of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, the U.S. District Courts, etc. He practiced with the firm of Moorhead & Knox in Pittsburgh from January, 1930, to May, 1942. Since June, 1947, when he bought Land's End Farm, he has been specializing in the husbandry of Aberdeen-Angus breeding stock and Duroc and Hampshire hogs.

Laughlin served as chairman of the Selective Service Appeal Board of Allegheny County, Pa., from 1940 through April, 1942, when he was commissioned a lieutenant in the Naval Reserve. He served for twenty-two months in the 15th Naval District, Panama Canal Zone, spent the next six months as assistant Naval attaché in Cairo, and was then for fourteen months assistant and acting Naval attaché in Athens. He has the permanent rank of lieutenant commander, U.S.N.R.

His first marriage, to Margaret Carnegie Perkins, daughter of Frederick Curtis Perkins, Yale '93, and Florence Carnegie Perkins, took place in Southampton, N.Y., on June 22, 1928. Her home was formerly in New York City. They were divorced in 1946. On June 28, 1946, he was married in Devon, Pa., to Janina Roussen, daughter of Pericles Jerome and Angelica Nicholas Economou Roussen, of Athens. His daughter, Cynthia, who was born in Pittsburgh on January 6, 1930, graduated from Farmington in 1947 and from Finch Junior College two years later.

Laughlin's brief comment: "To me, an interesting and varied life so far—and by far the most interesting is 'back to the land,' where you can view The Rule in Shelley's Case with more or less perspective."

WILLIAM KENNAN LAUGHLIN. With Curtis, Mallet-Prevost, Colt & Mosle, lawyers, 63 Wall Street, New York 5, N.Y.; residence, 6 East 69th Street, New York 21.

Laughlin has been associated with the above law firm for a number of years. He served in the Navy from February, 1942, to September, 1945, starting as a lieutenant and winding up as commander. He was in the South Pacific areas and was awarded a Bronze Star.

Laughlin's marriage to Cynthia Pratt, daughter of A. D. B. and Beatrice Benjamin Pratt, took place in New York City on February 16, 1932. They have two children: William P., born on June 3, 1934, and Linda on September 3, 1939.

WILLIAM BURROWS LAVENTURE. Member, Reynolds, Richards & McCutcheon, lawyers, 68 William Street, New York 5, N.Y.; residence, 3 Ardsley Terrace, Irvington-on-Hudson, N.Y.

LaVenture graduated from the Yale Law School in 1928 and was admitted to the New York Bar the following year. He has been a member of the firm of Reynolds, Richards & McCutcheon for some time.

He was first married in 1928 in New York to Beatrice Holt. They were divorced in 1937. In 1938 he was married in New Jersey to Barbara Walton, whose home was formerly in New York. He has a daughter, Beatrice Grace, who was born on May 19, 1931, in New York City and is at present at Rollins College.

CHARLES WESLEY LETCHER. Physician and surgeon, 317 First National Bank Building, Miami, Okla.; residence, Bedside Manor, Rockdale Addition, Miami.

Letcher was at Jefferson Medical College until 1930 and practiced in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., until going into the Navy ten years later. Since his release from service he has been practicing in Oklahoma. He has written numerous medical articles "of very little importance," and "was writing a book about one of the more interesting diseases. The sulfonamides came out—making the entire work obsolete. Used pages of manuscript for lighting pipe."

Letcher gives the following details of his service record: "Entered service in 1940. Designated Aviation medical examiner at Pensacola same year; Naval flight surgeon in 1941; selected for commander, M.C., in 1942. Three years' sea duty. Wounded at Linguyan operation. Decorated three times for extraordinary bravery (two Silver Stars). Now wear fourteen ribbons. Out of service in 1946. Saw more carrier landings than any other living flight surgeon (over thirty thousand). Most of them on U.S.S. Sable and U.S.S. Manila Bay (CVE 61)."

Letcher played considerable tennis up to the time of his sea duty in the Navy and won several minor titles. He was married October 14, 1933, at Forty Fort, Pa., to Isabelle Menzies Scott and is the proud father of four sons: Charles Scott, born September 1, 1934, John Henry, 3d, on July 18, 1936, Frank Scott on September 5, 1941, and William Frederick on March 17, 1950. The three oldest were born in Wilkes-Barre and the youngest in Miami.

ALFRED MANUEL LICHTMAN. President, Progressive Silk Manufacturing Company, Inc. (warp knit fabrics), 96 Guy Park Avenue, Amsterdam, N.Y.; residence, 245 Guy Park Avenue, Amsterdam.

Lichtman took his LL.B. at Yale in 1928 and practiced in association with the firm of Myers & Searle from 1929 to 1931. He did research and other work on Myers' edition of Heaton on Surrogate (N.Y.) Practice. He has been in the silk manufacturing business for some years and since 1940 has been president of the Progressive Silk Manufacturing Company. He is also president of the Mohawk Fabric Company, Inc., and has been vice-president of the Temple of Israel in Amsterdam since 1940 and treasurer of the United Jewish Appeal since 1945. Lichtman is a member of the Montgomery County Bar Association, the Elks, Masons, B'nai B'rith, and Phi Alpha.

"Being single, my interests are still bridge, dancing, charming young ladies, bowling," he says. "One regret—I should have married in 1926. I have been teaching Sunday school since 1938 and really love working with the kids."

DANIEL ALLEN LINDLEY. President, Canton Company of Baltimore (real estate) and Canton Railroad Company, 300 Water Street, Baltimore 2, Md.; residence, 1215 Bolton Street, Baltimore 17.

Lindley spent the year 1927-28 at Trinity College, Cambridge University. He was in the brokerage business in New York from 1929 to 1941, for three years as a partner in Lindley & Company and subsequently in Shields & Company. He then moved to Baltimore to take the position of assistant to the president of the Canton Company and the Canton Railroad Company (industrial switching and terminal railroad). He has been president of both companies since 1948 and at present is also a special partner in Seeley & Lindley of 61 Broadway, New York, and a director of the Mercantile Trust Company of Maryland, the Baltimore Association of Commerce, and the American Short Line Railroad Association of Washington. From 1942 to 1945 Lindley served in the European theatre as a lieutenant colonel in the Air Force.

His marriage to Marion Hunt Miller, daughter of Dr. James Alexander Miller and Marion Hunt Miller, took place in New York on December 10, 1931. Their son, Daniel Allen, Jr., who was born in New Haven on August 28, 1933, is a Senior at the Millbrook School. Lindley doesn't satisfy our curiosity as to whether young Dan shows signs of becoming a good baseball player.

SAUL SIDNEY LIPKIND. Address, care Mrs. R. E. Lipkind, 8 Dunmoyle Place, Pittsburgh 17, Pa.

ISRAEL MORTON LIPMAN. Address, 1353 Stanley Street, New Britain, Conn.

HOWARD SCHILLER LIPSON. Director and one of management, Wall Rope Works, Inc., 48 South Street, New York 5, N.Y.; residence, Woodbury Road, Huntington, N.Y.

"I began with a few regrets," says Lipson. "1) I missed the 'travels' during college summers to work through the rope mill—what a summer it must have been Junior year, when Red Gonzalez, Jimmy Marshall, and at least half the Class toured France, Austria, England. 2) That my golf and tennis didn't get more play, and my frustrated efforts never did achieve Frank Lackey's basketball nor Dan Lindley's baseball team anyway. The philosophical note is that there have been rewards to every effort I ever made with or in our Class. As to the baseball, it came late. An intense rivalry between Long Island North Shore Harvard and Yale softball teams ended in victory for Yale last September, when we won the rubber game of five annual affairs and a big silver tray. Who do you think captained the Yale team? Right—the Old Man himself—and my Harvard friends finally awarded me my 'Y'—shades of Lindley.

"On the more serious side and only slightly sentimental, our Class individually and collectively has had the greatest influence on hopes, ambitions, and satisfactions. We all have lived through varied times since 1926. When the sense of insecurity and the uncertainty in the world and all around beset me, the other guys in this book, and what they stand for, can always dispel the clouds. Between selling rope, raising a family, fooling around with the farm [Noah's Acres Farm], and community affairs—and recovering from week-ends—I keep busy."

In addition to his connection with the Wall Rope Works, Inc., Lipson is assistant secretary and a director of the Wall Wire Products Company of Plymouth, Mich. He is the author of Wall Rope Catalogue, a book on rope manufacturing, fibres, and products, and of a booklet entitled The Story of the United States Cordage Industry. He is a co-founder and trustee of the East Woods School at Oyster Bay, which was started seven years ago with thirty children and now has 170, running from the nursery class through the seventh grade. From 1928 to 1938 he was a member of Squadron A, 101st Cavalry, New York National Guard, and during World War II served for four years in the U.S. Coast Guard Temporary Reserve. Lipson belongs to the United States Olympians (was on the Olympic Bob-sled Team, 1932), the Seawanhaka Corinthian Yacht Club, and the Yale Club of New York.

He was married April 30, 1937, in New York, to Katharine Schuyler Cammann, daughter of Schuyler and Katharine V. R. Fairfax Cammann and sister of Schuyler Cammann, Yale '34. Her home was formerly in Merrick, N.Y. The children were all born in New York, Elizabeth Sandra on April 9, 1939, the twins, Katharine Fairfax and Eleanor Van Renssalaer, on July 16, 1941, and Peter Schuyler on February 11, 1945.

ELLERTON ALLISON LODGE. Assistant vice-president, First National Bank of Chicago, 38 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.; residence, 659 Irving Park Road, Chicago 13.

Lodge has been employed by the First National Bank of Chicago since January 1, 1931, and has held the position of assistant vice-president since January, 1946. His marriage to Alice Abigail Olson, daughter of Andrew Cullen and Josephine Huxford Olson, took place in Chicago on March 6, 1934.

ROBERT MORITZ LOEB. Address, 43 Carlton Road, New Rochelle, N.Y.

Since 1944 Loewenstein has been president of the E. & S. Loewenstein Company, with which he has been associated since 1926. He is a member of the Chicago Real Estate Board and the Lake Shore Country Club.

He was married on December 20, 1930, in Chicago to Martha Gutlohn, daughter of Gabriel and Rose Lubosher Gutlohn. They were divorced in 1949. Loewenstein has two sons: Michael, born November 25, 1933, and John Sidney, born October 18, 1944, both in Chicago. The older boy is in the Class of 1951 at the Highland Park High School.

DON CARL LOGIUDICE. Architect and engineer, Woolworth Building, 244 Main Street, Derby, Conn.; residence, 18 Woodbridge Avenue, Ansonia, Conn.

LoGiudice, who is independently engaged in the practice of architecture and engineering, was admitted to practice in the State of Connecticut in 1937. He took a course in landscaping at Columbia in 1930 and one in woods at the Yale School of Forestry, which he explains was in connection with the war work he performed during World War II. He is a member of the Connecticut Society of Architects and is currently serving as president of the Ansonia and Seymour Lions Club.

LoGiudice says that his hobby is ship designing in regard to propulsion and that he holds a patent on hydrodynamic synchronized oscillation. He developed a pattern of flow, today known as Von-Karman Vortex Flow Street. He has constructed many models and hopes to have a showing of this work some day.

DANIEL CALDWELL LONG. Address, 5231 Watson Street, N.W., Washington 16, D.C.

ARTHUR STONE LORD. Associate director, Office of University Development, Yale University; office, 137 College Street, New Haven; residence, Kettle Creek Road, Weston, Conn.

"Those of you who remember me as a quiet, bookish fellow will have it about right," Lord says. "I still have a book, but I also have five small children, so my book gathers dust and I have become an expert on Little Abner and Donald Duck. In fact, my life revolves almost entirely around my lovely wife and five grand kids.

"My travels have included a trip around the world in 1926-27, financed with my ill-gotten gains from the Yale Daily News, two trips to Bermuda, and repeated trips all over the United States except the Deep South (I'm allergic to corn pone). My principal recreations are beating McKee at golf and trying to raise a lawn on the stubbornest five acres in southern Connecticut. If the moles don't get you, then the crab grass must.

"One of my great satisfactions, certainly in recent years, has been the arrival of a son to be named for my brother Jack, who died shortly after graduating from Yale in 1927."

In 1928, after a year with Galey & Lord (textiles) in New York, Lord entered the Yale Law School. He received his LL.B. in 1931 and during the next nine years was with the New York law firm of Davis Polk Wardwell Gardiner & Reed. He was admitted to the New York Bar in 1932. He did graduate work in economics at Yale from the fall of 1940 until March, 1942, and during the next two years was secretary and counsel of the Export-Import Bank of Washington. From 1944 to 1949 he was in Livingston, Mont., as administrator of the Estate of Walter J. Hill and during this period served for two years (1946-48) as chairman of the Republican County Committee for Park County and as a trustee of the Park County Memorial Hospital from 1947 to 1949. Since July, 1950, Lord has been associate director of Yale's Office of University Development, with which he had become connected the previous October. He is a trustee of the Fairfield Country Day School and belongs to the New York Yale Club, the Faculty Club in New Haven, the Weston Field Club, and the Madison (Conn.) Beach Club. A current chore—"Helping to edit this blasted Class book!"

He was first married June 1, 1933, in St. Paul, Minn., to Dorothy Hill, daughter of Walter J. and Dorothy Barrows Hill. Her home was formerly in Pasadena. They were divorced in 1947. On April 2, 1949, he was married in Weston to Helen C. Williams, widow of Edgar M. Williams, Jr., Yale '34, Yale Architecture '38, who died in 1946. Mrs. Lord is the daughter of John F. and Ella M. Walsh Curran, of New Haven. Lord's daughter, Elizabeth Adams, was born in New York on May 26, 1939, and his son, John Clarendon, 2d, in New Haven on March 27, 1950. He also has three stepsons: Edgar Mark Williams, 3d, born February 20, 1940, in Pittsburgh; Paul Jonathan Williams, born November 19, 1941, in New Haven; and Peter Sexton Williams, born April 26, 1944, in New Haven.

OSWALD BATES LORD. Vice-president, Galey & Lord, Inc., 57 Worth Street, New York 21, N.Y., and Aberfoyle, Inc., Norfolk, Va. (both textile concerns); residence, 770 Park Avenue, New York 21.

Lord spent the first year after graduation on a trip around the world with his brother and four other members of the Class. He then settled down to work with Galey & Lord and in 1942 became vice-president of the company, as well as of Aberfoyle, Inc., in Norfolk. In May, 1930, he made a quick trip to Paris to be best man at Bates McKee's wedding. He went abroad again in 1931 and has also taken trips to Havana and Nassau. Since 1943 he has been president of the Judson Health Center of New York. He belongs to the Merchants Club of New York and the Virginia Club of Norfolk.

His marriage to Mary Stinson Pillsbury, daughter of Charles S. and Nell Winston Pillsbury, took place in Minneapolis on December 7, 1929. Their oldest son, Charles Pillsbury, who was born September 28, 1933, in New York, is in the Class of 1952 at Hotchkiss. The second boy, Richard, was born July 30, 1935, in New York, and died the following October 14th. The youngest, Winston, was born in New York on August 14, 1937.

WILLIAM KINNEY LOWRY. Owner and operator, Lowry Ranch, Alamosa, Colo.; residence, 521 Albion Street, Denver 20, Colo.

During 1927-28 Lowry was part owner of the Park Avenue Galleries in New York City, and from 1930 to 1932 he worked in the engineering department of Bellanca Aircraft in Newcastle, Del. Since 1935 he has been engaged in raising commercial Hereford cattle as the owner and operator of the Lowry Ranch. He is a director of the Wichita Flour Mills Company of Wichita, Kansas, and he belongs to the Denver Athletic Club and to Albert Pike Lodge, the Scottish Rite Consistory, and the Shriners in Wichita.

He was first married in February, 1929, in Paris to Chloe Champcommunal, daughter of Joseph and Elspeth Hodgson Champcommunal. They were divorced in 1936. Lawry's second marriage, to Marie Catharine Robinson Durham, daughter of John Cyrus and Nancy Lucinda Dennett Robinson, took place in Wichita in April, 1944. At the time he adopted her daughter, Nancy Louise, who was born in Wichita on March 1, 1935. Nancy attended Mt. St. Gertrude's Academy in Boulder, Colo., and is now a Sophomore at the Brownmoor School in Phoenix, Ariz.

Lowry writes: "I like to travel, but business and travel restrictions in recent years have prevented any but short trips here in the West and even these were of a business nature. As a hobby, my wife and I raise horses. We have raised some of the best Quarter Horses and our brand is "11 over Triangle." Recently we have changed to Tennessee walking horses, but so far haven't showed any of them, as we have just started. Our girl, Nancy, is a finished rider and spends much of her time at Brownmoor at this sport. I derive my greatest satisfaction from my family. If I have any regrets, I have forgotten what they are.

"I hope that the world gets straightened out soon and that the Republicans finally win—anything."

ALEXANDER MACOMB LUKENS. Rector, St. Barnabas' Episcopal Church, East 13th Avenue at Vine Street, Denver 6, Colo.; residence, 1212 Race Street, Denver 6.

Lukens graduated from the General Theological Seminary in New York in 1929; in 1928 he took a summer course in case work with the Charity Organization Society. He was ordained as a deacon in the Protestant Episcopal Church in July, 1930, and as a priest in November, 1931. He was in charge of St. Paul's Church, Virginia City, Mont., from 1929 to January, 1935, and of St. James' Mission, Deer Lodge, Mont., for the next three years. He then went to Minneapolis as assistant at St. Mark's Church, leaving there in June, 1940, to become rector of St. Luke's at Fort Collins, Colo., where he remained until entering the Navy as a chaplain (rank of lieutenant) in February, 1945. He was assigned as chaplain of the Naval Hospital at Camp LeJeune, N.C., from May to September, 1945, and at the Naval Operating Base in Bermuda for the next ten months. In September, 1946, a month after his release from service, Lukens accepted a call to St. Barnabas' Church in Denver.

He is chairman of the department of social welfare of the Denver Council of Churches and has been president of the Denver Ministers' Alliance (1949) and of the Colorado Industries for the Blind, a member of the Governor's Committee on Migrant Labor, and a director of the Sertoma Foundation.

While in Fort Collins, he was chairman of the advancement committee of the Boy Scouts (1941-45) and chairman of the County Red Cross (1941) and of the Community concert series (1943), and when he was in Bermuda during the war, he was on the executive committee of the Colonial Fair. Back in 1936 he was a fellow of the College of Preachers in Washington.

Lukens was married August 6, 1932, in Philadelphia to Julia Parks Remington, daughter of Joseph Percy and Georgianna Mabry Parks Remington. They have three sons: John Lawrence, born July 11, 1933, in Portland, Oregon; David Clough, born December 11, 1934, in Helena, Mont., and Alexander Macomb, Jr., born May 11, 1938, also in Helena. John was a member of the Bermuda Home Guard at the age of thirteen and is now a Senior at the Kent School, preparing for Yale or Colorado University. David is in the Class of 1952 at Kent, preparing for Yale or Massachusetts Tech.

"When nobody's around I play the ocharina (sweet potato)," Lukens confides. "The only 'important date' in this field is September, 1941, when in Estes Park, I played for a herd of elk. The cow elks left their bellowing mates for this whistling and wandered my way. At least they appreciated my music!

"As occupational therapy, I find myself painting tin cans and trays to sell at the church bazaar. House paint is relief as a simple ductile medium, and nothing is more satisfying than having a price paid for hand work. Paint never argues back or scolds.

"My travel, recreation, hobby, and interest is now a 'ranch' up the Cache la Poudre River west of Fort Collins. There, in eight years, I have caught five trout; most of the time in my month off (if I can get it) is spent trying to do a year's carpentering and plumbing in a month and the inevitable fence mending. I am confident there is gold on the place, but no prospect shows a trace of it yet. Hobby reading runs mostly to Arctic exploration, but I notice that a comfortable chair in a warm room is the extent of my heroism in that field.

"Somehow, building a parish house seems to take a lot of time, but getting it done gives satisfaction to all concerned.

"On all these welfare committees, I get curious as to how things happen when a bunch of people get together—why what makes whom click. There is entertainment of a gruesome kind just in watching it. And one can get a lot of aggression out of the system by pitching in with some and against others to get things done.

"Some Yale news I get from the Colorado Yale alumni group. Happiest news was meeting Art Bazata, now a forward-looking booster for Denver, and very much thought of as a constructive citizen. (In case he doesn't answer, he is manager of the Cosmopolitan Hotel and the brains and oomph of the Denver Better Business Bureau.)

"Partly from meeting Sea Bees in the Navy and partly from living in the growing West, I have the slant that life is a possible thing and that the world has not come to an end, but is just starting. The Neo-gloom that drifts in from the East seems to have an infantile unreality.

"Once I hoped to write a book on George Crabbe, priest, physician, and realist poet, but find that not a word has been written yet.

"Be seeing you at the 1951 reunion."

ELMER CORNELIUS LUPTON. Chief, Management Branch, Division of Field Operation, Federal Security Agency, Social Security Administration, and Bureau of Old Age and Survivors Insurance, Equitable Building, Baltimore 2, Md.; residence, 4307 Marble Hall Road, Baltimore 18.

"Life, so I have found out, is not always just a bowl of cherries," says Lupton. "Along with many others, I was caught in the chaotic conditions of the early Thirties. Ultimately I entered the governmental Civil Service with the Social Security Board and have been with the same organization since 1937. Have had many interesting assignments, during which I have been in practically all parts of the United States. I can honestly say that my work has always been interesting. At present, with a boy age five, I am hoping that some day he may wish to go to Yale."

Lupton was in the insurance business until entering government work in 1937. He has held his present position since 1944. He was married on November 18, 1930, in Wellington, Kansas, to Rita Leoni Potucek, daughter of Joseph and Aloise Schmid Potucek. Their son, Elmer Cornelius, Jr., was born on August 8, 1945, in Baltimore.

FREDERIC AUGUST LUYTIES, JR. Vice-president, Luyties Pharmacal Company and Walker Pharmacal Company, 4200 Laclede Avenue, St. Louis, Mo.; residence, 4 Greencroft, Champaign, Ill.

Luyties has been vice-president of both of the above companies since 1936. He also owns and operates the Avon Stock Farm (a livestock and grain farm) in Champaign.

His marriage to Alma Martha Giese, daughter of Joseph and Louise Sattelle Giese, took place in St. Louis on October 13, 1938. They have two children, Frederic A., 3d, who was born January 24, 1941, and Alma Louise, born November 4, 1943, both in St. Louis.

RICHARD EUGENE McBRIDE. Address, McBride & Company, Inland Building, Indianapolis, Ind.

LYMAN SHEPARD McCRARY. Address, 4851 Reservoir Road, Washington 7, D.C.

EDWARD JOHN McDONALD. Address, 50 Vanderbilt Avenue, New York 17, N.Y.

ELLIOTT BATES McKEE. General partner, Richard W. Clarke & Company, brokers, 527 5th Avenue, New York, N.Y.; residence, Norfield Road, Weston, Conn.

From 1926 to 1928 McKee attended Cambridge University, where he took his M.A. with honors in history and law, and in 1937 he received a certificate with honors from the Graduate School of Banking at Rutgers, after studying there for two years. He was with the National Savings & Trust Company in Washington, D.C., during 1928-29 and was assistant cashier of the Paris branch of the National City Bank of New York for the next three years. In 1932 McKee became connected with the investments and new business department of the City Bank Farmers Trust Company in New York and was elected assistant secretary in 1937 and assistant vice-president in 1947. He resigned in December, 1948, to become a general partner in Richard W. Clarke & Company, members of the New York Stock and Curb exchanges. He is vice-president, secretary, and a director of its affiliate, the Richard W. Clarke Corporation, which is engaged in the underwriting and distribution of securities. He was a co-founder of the Boys' Club of Mt. Kisco, N.Y., serving as its secretary from 1937 to 1940, was president of the Weston Parent Teachers Association from 1941 to 1943, of the Weston Gun Club during 1948-49, and has been president of the Weston Field Club since 1950.

Back in 1926 McKee was commissioned as a second lieutenant in the Coast Artillery Reserve. In June, 1942, he was commissioned lieutenant (j.g.) in the Navy and subsequently served as assistant to A. V. Stout in the New York Port Director's office in charge of the Armed Guard personnel. He replaced Stout as head of the section when the latter was transferred to Naval Aviation in 1943. McKee himself was transferred to the Amphibious Forces in June, 1944, and went to the Mediterranean as operations officer of a landing craft. He took part in the invasion of southern France and remained in the Mediterranean until July, 1945, moving troops and supplies. At the time of his discharge from service in September, 1945, he ranked as a lieutenant commander.

On May 24, 1930, he was married in Paris to Katharine S. Pillsbury, daughter of Charles S. and Nell Winston Pillsbury, of Minneapolis. They have three sons: Philip W., born January 20, 1932, in Paris, Bates, Jr., on January 10, 1934, in Mt. Kisco, and Charles Dunn on June 26, 1940, also in Mt. Kisco. The oldest boy graduated from Westminster in 1949 and then spent half a year with the Yale Class of 1954. Bates, Jr., is a Senior at St. Paul's.

McKee lists the following in conclusion: "Travels: Europe almost continuously, 1926-32; except for war didn't get abroad again until 1949 and 1950.

"Recreations: Almost every sport except bull-fighting, all of which I do with great enthusiasm and mediocre skill. My favorites are sailing and tennis, and particularly cruising New England with my wife and three sons.

"Satisfactions: My greatest sources of personal satisfaction are my civic endeavors, having helped to found the Boys' Club of Mt. Kisco and the Field Club of Weston. I'm glad I could serve in the Navy and particularly that I could spend fifteen months in the Mediterranean with Amphibious Forces, whence I returned with the greatest admiration for the Combat Infantry. I've enjoyed my small part in the activities of the Class of '26 in the last five years, particularly now that I'm an elder statesman and can needle instead of having to produce."

HAROLD EMERSON MACKEEN. With The Travelers Insurance Company, 700 Main Street, Hartford, Conn.; residence, 60 Tobey Avenue, Windsor, Conn.

Lamenting that he feels like a forgotten man when reviewing the past twenty-five years, MacKeen writes: "The time has been spent working, paying taxes, and contributing. We have managed to support an occasional trip around the Northeastern states, where we live, and Canada. In the first few years after graduation we used to take in a number of football games, but during the Depression we got out of the habit. Now, we get to about one a year if it doesn't rain on the day of the game we plan to see.

"Our older daughter, Louise, is a member of the Class of 1954 at Denison University at Granville, Ohio. Our other two children, David and Janet, are still in grade school."

MacKeen's work with The Travelers is in connection with the mathematical and statistical angle. He is an associate member of the Casualty Actuarial Society, served as secretary of the Windsor Zoning Commission from 1946 to 1949, and is "reasonably active" in the Central Baptist Church of Hartford.

His marriage to Elvira P. Schlatter, daughter of William and Louise Perkins Schlatter, took place in Hartford on May 30, 1931. The children were all born there, Louise Dickey on March 12, 1932, G. David on April 7, 1936, and Janet Lee on August 6, 1937.

JOHN OAKEY MCKNIGHT. Lawyer, 1501 Franklin Avenue, Mineola, N.Y.; residence, 38 Squirrel Hill Road, East Hills, Roslyn Heights, N.Y.

McKnight writes: "Upon leaving college, my first ambition was to complete my law school education so as to support myself, which I accomplished despite the Depression, and, to my amazement, I found that in the dark year of 1933 I could also support a wife. From then on the family grew, and we managed to travel to Bermuda, Nassau, Canada, and some time later even to Cuba, where, through the kindness of Jake Lobo, we got entry to the Havana Yacht Club and Country Club. Not having had any recreation except golf, but always wanting to resume sailing, this activity was somewhat delayed by the arrival of a son, who was immediately named Skipper. Two years later, in 1948, we acquired a sailboat and have ventured on the waters of Long Island Sound even as far as Southport. This last summer we spent a very enjoyable day with Johnson Stoddard and his family. Sailing has not only become a sport but also a hobby, inasmuch as when the boat comes out of the water we live in the boatyard during the winter and spring and then on the boat in the summer.

"Regarding my hopes and ambitions, I can only say it is my hope and ambition that my children will look back upon their father as I have upon mine with love, honor, and respect. I have few regrets, but I take great satisfaction in the building up of a home and a family."

McKnight, who studied law at Yale, George Washington University (LL.B. 1929), and New York University, was admitted to practice in New York in 1930. He was a title searcher with the Title Guarantee & Trust Company in Mineola during 1926-27 and right-of-way negotiator for Nassau County from 1927 to 1938. Prior to 1942 he was a member of the firm of McKnight, Niesley & McKnight (successors to McKnight & Dodge) at Great Neck and since then has been independently engaged in practice at Mineola, specializing in municipal law. He has been deputy county attorney of Nassau County since 1938 and is counsel for the incorporated villages of Old Westbury, North Hills, Roslyn Harbor, and East Hills. He served as police justice of the Village of East Hills for eight years (1940-48) and has been acting police justice for North Hills since 1942. A member of the Republic County Committee since 1945, McKnight held the office of president of the Roslyn Republican Club during 1947 and 1948. He has been a member of the New York State Council of Social Workers since 1946; the executive committee of the Roslyn Red Cross since 1944 (chairman, Section 3, in Nassau County drives, 1944 and 1945); an associate member of the Girls Scouts of America since 1943; and a vestryman of Trinity Church, Roslyn, since 1942; and has been a delegate to the Diocesan Convention of Long Island several times. He is a charter member of the Roslyn Kiwanis Club and in 1945 served as its president. He is a life member of the Nassau County Bar Association, belongs to Pausmonok Lodge, F. and A.M., and the Manhasset Bay Yacht Club, and was formerly a member of the New York State Magistrates Association. As a member of a panel at the Regional Planning Association Conference last October, he gave a paper on the legal aspects of the minimum size home.

Mrs. McKnight was Kathryn Brassil, daughter of Joseph P. and Lilla Giles Brassil. They were married in New York City, June 29, 1933. Their children are: Lilla Giles, born April 30, 1934, in Flushing, N.Y.; Mary Dudley, born August 17, 1937, in Mineola; and John Oakey, Jr., born July 29, 1946, in Glen Cove. The older girl is a high school Junior.

HERBERT PAUL McLAUGHLIN. President, W. F. McLaughlin & Company, coffee importers and wholesalers, 610 North LaSalle Street, Chicago, Ill.; residence, 1240 Sheridan Road, Lake Forest, Ill.

From October 1, 1926, to December 31, 1930, McLaughlin was with Ross & Browne Real Estate, first as salesman and then as manager. Since April, 1931, he has been with W. F. McLaughlin & Company (Manor House Coffee Company), of which he became president on January 1, 1945. He is a director of Wakem & McLaughlin, Inc., and also of the Catholic Charities of Chicago and the Lake Forest Hospital and is serving on the budget committee of the child welfare division of the Community Fund. He is a member of the board of trustees of the Canterbury School in New Milford, Conn.

On January 17, 1931, McLaughlin was married in Chicago to Corinne Harris Brewer, daughter of Edward Harris Brewer, Yale '97 S., and Amy Waller Brewer. They have three children, all of whom were born in Chicago, Peter Brewer on October 24, 1931, Herbert Paul, Jr., on June 15, 1934, and Corinne Amy on September 19, 1937. Herbert, Jr., is at the Canterbury School. Peter graduated there in 1949, spent the following year at Williams College, and has since been at Colorado College.

JOHN TIMOTHY McMAHON. Second vice-president and manager, Chase National Bank of the City of New York, 11 Broad Street, New York 5, N.Y.; residence, 315 Manhasset Woods Road, Manhasset, N.Y.

Since January, 1948, McMahon has been vice-president and manager of the Chase National Bank, with which he has been connected since graduating from Yale. He is a director of the Brady Security & Realty Corporation of New York, is serving on the nominating committee of the Sands Point Golf and Tennis Club, and belongs to the New York Yale Club.

His marriage to Alletta Bayley Post, daughter of Richard Bayley and Silvie Livingston Strong Post, took place in New York City on December 11, 1926. Her home was formerly in Babylon, N.Y. They have two children: Kathleen Berryman, born September 6, 1928, in New York, who has attended the Greenvale School, Miss Walker's School, and Miss Hewitt's, and Richard B. P., born May 3, 1930, also in New York. He received his preparatory education at the Greenvale School and St. Paul's.

"Two years ago Richard was turned down as a candidate for Yale," McMahon says. "He therefore went to Kenyon College, Gambier, Ohio, which was founded by one of his ancestors, namely Bishop Bedell. At Kenyon this unacceptable Yale entrant is now on the Dean's list as a leading student. He is also pledge boss at his chapter of D.K.E., the same fraternity his father belonged to at Yale.

ROBERT CRUISE McMANUS. Writer; residence, Hopewell, N.J.

"I am very sentimental about Yale, and the lines in 'Bright College Years' about 'time and change shall naught avail' have proved true in my case," says McManus. "My hobby now, as it was twenty-five years ago, is to do all the talking any time I am assembled with one or more other persons. My favorite topic, ditto, is any story in which I figure as the hero. The best of these has to do with Alger Hiss. Charlie Willard and I briefly shared an apartment with Alger in Washington twenty years back, when Charlie was a brilliant young attorney for the Wickersham Commission of sainted memory, Alger was a brilliant young secretary for Oliver Wendell Holmes, and I was a brilliant young journalist. (I still am young, but not as brilliant as I was in those days.) A couple of years later I was a brilliant young employee of the New Deal—including the rascally Tugwell's Resettlement Administration—when I got a vague idea that something funny was going on. The impression deepened through the years, and it is now being worked into the pages of a book I'm writing. But anyway, when the Hiss-Chambers thing broke, I went straight to Alger with what I had heard about him. The net result was that I told him flatly he was lying to me, which, of course, ended our friendship, as I intended it should. Then I spent five hours in the New York Yale Club one night with Whittaker Chambers, and ended up fully convinced that he was telling the truth. As far as I know, I'm the only person who has gone to the bottom of this thing on an intimate, personal basis, with both those involved. It'll all come out in the book.

"I've contributed to publications ever since I graduated in Sophomore year, else I couldn't eat. As a New York Sun reporter, I accompanied President-elect Hoover on a Good-Will Tour of Latin America in 1928. Also covered Roosevelt's first campaign for Governor of New York, Jimmy Walker's City Hall, the flight of the Bonus Army from Washington, the N.R.A. under Hugh Johnson. As editor of the New Jersey Spokesman, spent three blissful years editorially belting Frank Hague in the kisser, with Frank complaining to the papers that I was brought into the state to annoy him. Wrote an article in 1944 for Farm Journal [of which he was associate editor], 'Communist Beach-head in Agriculture,' which produced a $7,600,000 libel suit that Farm Journal won. The piece still causes an occasional fistfight on the floor of the U.S. Senate.

"As war correspondent for Farm Journal, I participated in an interview at Tinian, of crews which dropped both A-bombs on Japan. Made landings with 4th Marines in Tokyo Bay previous to formal Jap surrender on Missouri.

Covered surrender. As far as I know, was only Yale man on board Missouri that day. Saw the flag go up in Tokyo on MacArthur's order. After surrender, went to Philippines and investigated uprisings of Hukbalahap in northern Luzon. As far as I know, my story on the Huks—who now menace Philippine security and ours—was the first published anywhere. What a man! And so good-looking, too!

"I am a brilliant and versatile amateur actor, in demand on all occasions. Last seen with Cobbles Sturhahn, '27 S., in a home-hewn musical produced by Princeton Community Players. What a triumph!"

At present McManus is contributing to The Freeman, the fortnightly established last year, of which John Chamberlain, '25, is editor. One of his early journalistic connections was with the Washington Post, and at various times he has been national affairs editor of Newsweek, special assistant to the chief of the U.S. Forest Service, information officer with the Resettlement Administration, and executive secretary of the New Jersey Committee for Constitution Revision—"the 'people's lobby,' which agitated for and got a new constitution for New Jersey. The new constitution has been described by an official of the National Municipal League as 'one of the best, if not the best, state constitutions in the United States.' It was adopted by the largest plurality ever given any man or measure in the history of the state."

McManus was married January 26, 1934, at Mt. Kisco, N.Y., to Mary Borden, daughter of Alfred and Mary Elizabeth Tuthill Borden. They have three children: Maureen Lynn, born October 22, 1939, in Flemington, N.J., Nora Borden on November 13, 1941, also in Flemington, and Terence Borden on December 12, 1943, in Lawrenceville, N.J.

JOSEPH HEARNE McNEIL. Residence address, Box 1208, Montagu Heights, Nassau, Bahamas.

The following covers all the data that McNeil has given us: B.A. and M.A. Oxford; military record: Royal Observer Corps, England; married May, 1935, in London to Dora Kathleen Harney, daughter of Sir George Harney and Sara Kenward Harney.

GEORGE HENRY MACY. Captain, U.S.A.F.; assigned to 103d Supply Squadron, Suffolk County Air Force Base, Westhampton Beach, N.Y.

Macy was engaged in the tea importing business until 1936 and was then in the real estate and insurance business until being inducted for field training with the 7th Regiment, New York National Guard, in February, 1941. He had joined the regiment in March, 1931, and at the time he went on active duty ranked as a supply sergeant. He was commissioned a first lieutenant in the Air Force in April, 1942, was promoted to captain in March, 1943, and served with the Air Transport Command in the United States and Europe until his discharge in March, 1946. He was recalled some months ago and after an assignment to the 1st Air Force at Mitchel Field, is now with the 103d Supply Squadron at the Suffolk County Air Force Base.

Macy's marriage to Dorothy Dexter Blake, daughter of Clinton H. and Margaret Coe Blake, took place in New York on April 7, 1943. Her home was formerly in Englewood, N.J. They have two sons, both of whom were born in New York City, Carleton on September 10, 1944, and Clinton Blake on November 27, 1947.

WARD NAPIER MADISON. Executive secretary, board of trustees, American University at Cairo; office, 801 Land Title Building, Philadelphia 10, Pa.; residence, 459 Montgomery Avenue, Haverford, Pa.

During the first two years after graduation Madison was private secretary to John R. Mott. He served as under secretary of the Commission of Appraisal of the Laymen's Foreign Missions Inquiry from 1931 to 1933 and from then until 1937 was private secretary to John D. Rockefeller, Sr. During the next four years he was connected with the General Education Board as assistant in Southern education and since July, 1947, has held his present position. He mentions that there have been a few other connections, but doesn't list them specifically.

Madison was in the Army from 1942 to 1946. He went on active duty as a captain in the Quartermaster Corps and ranked as a major at the time of his discharge. He had a number of assignments, including the following: camp special services officer, Camp Lee, Va.; detachment commander, Enlisted Specialist Branch, Engineer School, Ettrick, Va.; battalion commander, Army Specialist Training Unit, Lehigh University; chief of reconditioning service, Regional Hospital, Fort George G. Meade, Md. He took courses in two Army Schools for Special Services—at Fort Meade in July, 1942, and at Washington and Lee University from February to April, 1944.

He was first married February 7, 1936, in Ormond, Fla., to Laura Lee Sage Locker, daughter of George and Mary Eno Bassette Sage. They were divorced in 1939. His second marriage, to Miriam Faith Clarke (Ph.D. Yale 1933), daughter of Alma Arthur and Mary Jane Watkins Clarke, took place in Montclair, N. J., on October 31, 1940. Her home was formerly in Bronxville, N.Y. Madison's son, Ward Napier, Jr., was born March 23, 1937, at Daytona Beach, Fla.

When he came to the final question on our questionnaire, he said, "That word 'travels' gives me a clue here: two trips to Europe with stops in most of the capitals in 1927 and 1928, the second including brief stops in Egypt, Palestine, and Turkey; a ten months' trip around the world in 1931 and 1932, with considerable travel in India, China, and Japan, also stops at Ceylon and Hawaii; a winter visit to Egypt in 1947-48, for contacts at the American University at Cairo; and all kinds of travel and journeys in the U.S.A., chiefly up and down the Eastern seaboard. Residence has moved from Montclair, N.J., to Ormond, Fla., then Bronxville, N.Y., Richmond, Va., and now here in Pennsylvania. These 'travels' have all been in connection with various jobs, the earlier ones made possible by working my way with a typewriter—there's nothing like it for varied experiences: I recommend it to any one who wants to avoid a local rut or the surfeit of sight-seeing.

"There's very little other personal news except that my boy, 'Nick,' hopes to be a member of the Class of 1958. He is now a student at Christ School, Arden, N.C."

OTTO MADLENER. President and treasurer, First Inland Credit Corporation (commercial receivables and factoring), 209 South LaSalle Street, Chicago 4, Ill.; residence, 874 Hill Road, Winnetka, Ill.

Madlener is another one of the lucky ones. "Life has been good to me," he says. "Didn't lose my money in Depression; fairly successful in my own business, but nothing to brag about; have good health (although almost bald) and nice home in suburb; would like to run a farm, and hope it will not be too far off. All in all, lead a quiet life and still see some of my old classmates, although not as much as I would like to.

"Married at old age of thirty-five; had my social whirl before then, so am now settled down with a nice wife who would like to go out more. Gave up liquor two years ago—was drinking too much then, so decided to give it up for good. Am wondering if I will enjoy the Twenty-fifth Reunion without liquor."

From 1927 to 1930 Madlener worked in various departments of the Dallas Brass & Copper Company and for the next three years was in the sales department of Halsey Stuart & Company. He was vice-president and treasurer of the Scottish American Company of Chicago from 1933 to 1938 and then of the First Factoring Corporation of Chicago until 1940. At that time he became president and treasurer of the company, the name of which was changed in 1949 to the First Inland Credit Corporation. Madlener is secretary and a director of the Streator Manufacturing Company and a director of the North Side Boys Club of Chicago and of the Grant Hospital (formerly vice-president of both).

Mrs. Madlener, whose maiden name was Elaine Wetmore, is the daughter of Leonard and Mary Russell Wetmore. They were married in New York on July 6, 1939, and have two sons: Richard Albert, born on June 7, 1940, and William Conrad on May 11, 1943, both in Chicago.

WILLIAM CONRAD MADLENER. Vice-president and treasurer, Estes & Company (investments), 112 West 7th Street, Topeka, Kansas; residence, 3535 Huntoon Street, Topeka.

"There won't be any 'literary polish' to this one," said Madlener, starting his "story"—"I can't say I have accomplished too much during these last twenty-five years—spent about ten years in the banking and real estate loan business in Chicago [Cosmopolitan State Bank]. My travels consisted of wasting my vacations lolling on the sands of Palm Beach a few weeks each winter and visiting Hot Springs, Va., for golf and riding in the fall. I might add, I thoroughly enjoyed 'wasting' my vacations thusly.

"During the war—War II, I mean—I had an interesting job dishing out Air Force supplies at the Topeka Army Air Field. Uncle Sam rated me 4F; hence this job. I worked as a civilian, of course. At Topeka I became acquainted with the ways of living of a small city and have remained here ever since. I own a small investment business—Estes & Company—here, a small town house, and a small farm near town. Am keenly interested in the most beautiful of all animals, the American saddle-bred horse—own a very fine riding pleasure mare—an even finer show mare—shown and trained by a professional (my ego seems to enjoy this vicarious pleasure)—also a brood mare and young filly. My hope and ambition (depending on Estes & Company) is to own a nice stable with my own trainer, etc. Oh yes, I am a bachelor—sometimes a satisfaction and sometimes a regret."

JOHN MOORE MALONE. Vice-president and secretary, C. A. Turner, Inc. (industrial supplies; steel warehouse), 117 3d Avenue, Pittsburgh 22, Pa.; residence, R.D. 2, Coraopolis, Pa.

Since 1933 Malone has been vice-president, secretary, and a director of C. A. Turner, Inc. He has the same connection with the Pittsburgh Trolley & Forge Company and is also a director of the Pittsburgh Terminal Warehouses, Inc.

Malone's marriage to Isabel Bray Gardner, daughter of Kirtland Cutter and Myrta Frank Neubauer Gardner, took place in Coraopolis on December 28, 1927. They have three children: Emily Gardner, born September 20, 1929, John M., Jr., on June 1, 1935, and Carolyn Gardner on March 10, 1939. Emily, who was married in Coraopolis on June 21, 1950, to Richard A. Champagne, has a daughter, Frederica, born in March, 1951. She graduated from the Winchester-Thurston School in 1946 and received a B.A. at Radcliffe in 1950. John, Jr., is in the Class of 1953 at Shady Side Academy, and Carolyn is at the Sewickley Academy.

"I've been to Europe twice, Mexico five times," says Malone. "Am interested in shooting, chess, and more recently, in sailing, mainly in racing Thistle

No. 310. Have invented and designed a number of pieces of special equipment being used by the companies with which I am associated."

GRIFFITH MARK. Chairman of the board and treasurer, Clayton Mark & Company, manufacturers, 1900 Dempster Street, Evanston, Ill.; residence, Sunset Ridge Road, Box 444, Northfield, Ill.

Mark writes: "I left Yale at the end of my Junior year in 1925 and spent the following year and a half traveling in Europe, Africa, India, and the Far East with three or four friends. The highlights of the trip were big game hunting in Kenya Colony and in India. I returned to Yale at the conclusion of my trip and graduated with the Class of 1927.

"My chief form of recreation in the sports line is swimming. I have no special hobbies other than reading. Under special interests, I might include a camp which I own in the remote sections of southern Oregon. During the past several years I have been quite active in Chamber of Commerce work, both in Evanston and the state of Illinois. In the former I am one of the vice-presidents and a director, and in the latter I am a member of the personnel and labor relations committee and chairman of a federal employment practices commission sub-committee.

"I left my position as assistant treasurer of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York in 1938, about a year and a half after the death of my father, to help manage the affairs of Clayton Mark & Company, which he founded in 1888. Being one of the trustees of my father's estate, this was a logical move.

"My business ambitions do not go beyond the successful conduct and normal expansion of our family manufacturing business, of which I am chairman of the board and treasurer. My main satisfaction is the pleasant and enjoyable business environment and the progress which our company has made in the past ten years. My chief regret is that I have not kept in closer touch with Yale, its fraternities and clubs."

To the above we need only to add that Mark is a director of Kendall College in Evanston, a member of the legislative committee of the Illinois Manufacturers Association, and that he belongs to the University Club of Evanston, the Sunset Ridge Country Club of Winnetka, and the Yale and Racquet and Tennis clubs of New York.

He was first married May 20, 1929, in Norristown, Pa., to Elinor Medill Patterson Codman, of New York City, daughter of Joseph Medill and Alice H. Higgenbotham Patterson. They were divorced in January, 1942. Mark's second marriage, to Janet Moffett Moore, of Washington, D. C., daughter of Admiral William A. Moffett and Jeannette Whitton Moffett, took place in Annapolis, Md., January 23, 1942. He has three children: Adrienne Mark Baker, born June 9, 1934, in New York City; Griffith, Jr., born February 15, 1943, in Washington; and Peter Michael, born August 4, 1945, in Chicago.

He also has three stepchildren: Janet Moore, born July 24, 1927, in Washington, who married Kent Maynard in Winnetka, June 25, 1949; William Moffett Moore, born August 8, 1929, in Chicago; and Elliott McFarlan Moore, Jr., born December 8, 1930, in Chicago. Janet attended Sarah Lawrence, William is a Junior at Yale, and Elliott a Freshman at Trinity.

JOHN NEILSON MARQUIS. Physician, 207 Bradford Street, Charleston, W. Va.; residence, 4906 Staunton Avenue, Charleston.

Following his graduation from the University of Pennsylvania Medical School in 1931, Marquis interned at the Methodist Hospital in Philadelphia and then went to Germany for a year as resident at the Staedisches Krankenanstalten at Mannheim. From 1933 to 1935 he was back at the Methodist Hospital as an assistant in the surgical service. He has been practicing in Charleston since then, with the exception of World War II, when he spent two years in the South Pacific and a similar period at the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery in Washington as an officer in the Naval Medical Corps Reserve. He received Commendation Ribbons, both individual and unit, for his South Pacific duty.

Marquis is a director of the Family Service, the Kanawha Welfare Association, the American Red Cross, the Community Chest, and the Planned Parenthood Association of Kanawha County. He belongs to the American Medical Association, the American College of Surgeons, the American Association for the Advancement of Science, Alpha Omega Alpha, the National Rifle Association, the Charleston Light Opera Guild, the Army and Navy Club of Charleston, the Press Club, the Anvil Club, and the Kanawha Players. It is easy to see that he has diversified interests outside of his profession.

On February 21, 1930, he was married in Philadelphia to Henrietta Burr Lowenburg, daughter of Harry Lowenburg. They have three children: John Henry, born April 14, 1934, Joan Taggart on December 5, 1939, and James Neilson on December 20, 1945.

ALFRED HOWARD MARSHALL. Address, 173 Edwards Street, New Haven, Conn.

EDWARD GAY MASON. Captain, Naval Air Force; plans and policies officer, Office of Coördinator, Naval Air Reserve, Pentagon Building, Washington, D.C.; residence, 6413 Western Avenue, Washington 15.

Mason started out as a member of the Army Air Force Reserve, spending the year 1927-28 at March Field, Calif. In 1929 he was with the Wright Aeronautical Corporation in Paterson, N.J., and about this time joined the Naval Air Reserve. He had flight training at Pensacola in 1930, was assigned to active duty at San Diego in 1931, but later that year returned to the Wright Aeronautical Corporation and spent the next ten years in Paterson. During this period Mason was a member of the organized Naval Air Reserve Weekend Squadron.

In January, 1941, he went back on active duty with the rank of lieutenant and from then until October, 1942, was executive officer at the Aviation Machinist Mate School at Jacksonville, Fla. At that time he was promoted to lieutenant commander and assigned to the Aviation Technical Training School at Memphis as superintendent of training, remaining there until the following March. During the next nine months he was officer in charge of the Connecticut Area, Aviation Technical Command, in Hartford, Conn. He was promoted to commander in December, 1943, and subsequently served successively as commanding officer of Carrier Aircraft Service Unit 39 in the Pacific and of Acorn 13 at Bougainville and Samar. He was commander of the Samar Naval Air Base during August and September, 1945, commanding officer of the Carrier Aircraft Service Unit at Charlestown, R.I., from November of that year until April, 1946, executive officer at the Naval Air Reserve Training Unit at Norfolk, Va., until January, 1948, and then for nearly two years executive officer at the Naval Air Station at Willow Grove, Pa. In November, 1950, he was appointed executive officer at the Naval Air Station at Squantum, Mass. He remained there until June, 1951, when he was appointed plans and policies officer in the Office of the Coordinator of the Naval Air Reserve in Washington. He has just bought a new home in Washington across the street from the Maryland line at Chevy Chase. Mason was promoted to captain last March. He received a commendation for his service at Bougainville and the Bronze Star Medal for service at Samar.

Mason was first married October 30, 1930, in San Diego to Grace Norris, daughter of Dr. Richard Norris, of Philadelphia. They were divorced in 1937. His second marriage, to Ruth Warner, daughter of George L. and Ruth Loring Warner, took place in New York City on December 23, 1939. Her home was formerly in Nantucket. They have two sons: Edward G., Jr., born July 30, 1941, and John G. on October 31, 1946.

As to his travels, Mason says: "When supplemented by my war travels, they probably come to quite a bit more than the average—Colombia (eight years of my early youth), Paris, summer 1926, Hawaiian Islands, 1927, Panama, 1930, Honduras, 1933, Rio de Janeiro, 1934; Pacific duty—Hawaii, Spiritu Santo, Guadalcanal, Bougainville, Ruml Islands, Australia, Philippines—all by air, except for last lap back from Pearl Harbor by jeep carrier in September, 1945.

"Recreation: Pretty mild now—surf and sand, swimming; hobby and special interest—this very worth-while 'Week-end Warrior' Naval Air Reserve Program."

GEORGE GRANT MASON, JR. Engaged in management of personal investments and as aeronautical consultant; residence, 2301 North Uhle Street, Arlington 7, Va.

In 1925 Mason was district manager of the new business department of the Corn Exchange Bank of New York City. He spent the following year doing graduate work in aeronautical engineering at the Guggenheim School of Aeronautics, New York University, and in 1927 was one of the founders of Pan American Airways, Inc. He was associated with them until 1938, being their representative before twenty-one governments in the Caribbean area, with his headquarters in Havana. From 1933 to 1938 Mason was also president and general manager of the Compañía Nacional Cubana de Aviación in Havana and for the next three years was with the Civil Aeronautics Board (known as Civil Aeronautics Authority prior to 1940), being one of the five original members appointed by the President. By Presidential appointment he was chairman of the American delegation to the fourth International Conference on Private Air Law held in Brussels in September, 1938, and also chief of a special mission to survey European aviation on behalf of the U.S. Government. A year later he was sent as a delegate to the U.S.-Canada Civil Aviation Conference in Ottawa.

From January to July, 1942, Mason was with the Defense Supplies Corporation in Washington as administrative assistant in charge of South American aviation activities. On July 1 he was appointed a major, A.U.S., and assigned as assistant chief of staff plans at the headquarters of the Air Transport Command, Army Air Force, in Washington. He served in that capacity for two years and was then chief of the Civil Aviation Branch in the office of the Assistant Chief of Air Staff Plans until 1946, when he was relieved from active duty. He had been promoted to lieutenant colonel in November, 1942, and to colonel in July, 1943, and now holds that rank in the Air Force Reserve (with mobilization assignment to the headquarters of the Military Air Transport Service which he assisted in organizing in March, 1948).

Among the special assignments which he had during the war were the following: War Department representative with Wendell Willkie on his round-the-world trip, fall, 1942; member, U.S. delegations to "Quadrant" Conference of Combined Chiefs of Staff in Quebec, August, 1943, and to "Sextant" Conference in Cairo, November, 1943; designated by Joint Chiefs of Staff as special adviser to American Embassy at Lisbon, December, 1943-March, 1944; chief, special mission representing Headquarters, A.A.F., for survey of the European and Middle East theatres in connection with the satisfactory accomplishment program of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, approved by the President, for orderly post-war transition of military to civil air transportation and related services throughout Europe, August-October, 1945; one of military advisers to U.S.-British Aviation Conference, Bermuda, January-February, 1946. For his services Mason was awarded the Legion of Merit and also the Army Commendation Ribbon.

From March, 1948 to July, 1949, he served as special assistant to the Assistant Secretary of the Air Force and then for a year as consultant to the Secretary. Mason, who is now engaged in the management of personal investments and as an aeronautical consultant, is a member of the board of directors of the Latin American magazine, Vision. From 1929 to 1938 he was vice-president and a director of the American Chamber of Commerce of Cuba and a governor of the Havana Country Club and the Jaimanitas Yacht and Country Club. He still belongs to the American Club of Havana and the Havana Yacht Club and is also a member of the Biscayne Bay Yacht Club of Miami, the Metropolitan Club of Washington, the Yale and University clubs of New York, and the Tuxedo (N.Y.) Club.

He was first married June 11, 1927, in Bethesda, Md., to Jane Welch Kendall, daughter of Proctor and Elizabeth Coyle Welch. They were divorced in 1940. On May 18, 1946, he was married in Washington to Martha Evelyn Ashley McMakin, of Coronada, Calif., daughter of Harry Leigh and Martha Greenwood Ashley. He has four children: Antony, born July 6, 1930, in Horsham, England, Philip on December 6, 1932, in London, George Grant, 3d, on December 4, 1946, in Washington, and Martha Peak on December 6, 1947, also in Washington. Mason also has two stepchildren: Richard A. McMakin, born November 28, 1940, in New York, and Leigh Ashley McMakin on March 1, 1943, in Coronado. Antony, who graduated from the Haverford School in 1948, is a Junior at Trinity College, while Philip is in the Junior Class of the Dublin School in New Hampshire.

WILLIAM PAINTER MEEKER. Assistant to general manager, Crown Cork & Seal Company, Baltimore 3, Md.; residence, 44 Warrenton Road, Baltimore 10.

Meeker writes: "I was married soon after the completion of my Freshman year at New Haven. After the lapse of years, I recall that Dean Angier, who at the time was dean of Freshmen, wrote me telling me that I was of course automatically dismissed from college as he had read in the papers about my marriage to Ruth Owen, a granddaughter of William Jennings Bryan. Nevertheless, Dean Angier added, he wanted to extend his congratulations and best wishes to my bride and to me!

"After several months of travel in Europe and a voyage around the world, I entered the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania, graduating from there with the degree of B.S. in economics in 1927. Following my graduation from the University of Pennsylvania I spent several months in Europe and later in the West Indies. During the years 1928 and 1929 I engaged in the investment banking business. A few months after the crash in 1929 I moved to Coconut Grove, Fla., where I resided until 1935. At that time I came to Baltimore and secured a position with the Crown Cork & Seal Company, with which I have been ever since.

"Despite the demands of an active business life, I find time to indulge my love of sports, principally duck hunting, fishing, and sailing. A rather numerous family has first call on the remainder of my available spare time."

The investment banking firm in Baltimore with which Meeker was connected as a statistician during 1928 and 1929 was Dillehunt, Lewis & Company. In his position as assistant to the general manager of the Crown Cork & Seal Company, which he has held since 1947, he specializes in the manufacture and distribution of tinplate among the various branch plants and subsidiary companies of the concern. From 1937 until receiving an honorable discharge in February, 1941, Meeker was an inactive member of the Naval Reserve. He belongs to the Society of Colonial Wars.

His marriage to Ruth Owen, daughter of Reginald Altham and Ruth Bryan Owen, took place at Cape May, N.J., June 23, 1923. They were divorced in 1933. On December 1, 1934, he was married at Long Beach, Calif., to Eleanor Hyland Nichols, daughter of Newton Lord and Ella Vincent Kuhns Nichols. Her home was formerly in Panama Canal Zone. Meeker's children are: Ruth Meeker Miller, born June 30, 1924, Helen Meeker Bilby on July 20, 1928, Katherine Meeker Bhonslay on May 13, 1931, Eleanor Hyland Meeker on August 4, 1936, Dorothy Painter Meeker on September 25, 1938, and Mary Vincent Meeker on May 13, 1945. The two oldest girls were born in Miami and the others in Baltimore. Ruth attended Foxcroft and Miss Harris' School in Miami; she was married in April, 1945, and has one child, Shelley. Helen who attended the Spence School in New York, was married in March, 1948, and has a daughter, Barbara. Katherine, who also went to Spence, was married on June 10, 1950, in New York.

RALPH CHESTER MEIMA. Management consultant, Office of the Secretary, Department of the Interior, Washington, D.C.; residence, 7411 Glendale Road, Chevy Chase 15, Md.

There can be hardly a dissenting voice to Meima's first statement—"I am probably unique among Yale men in government, because I have never had my name in the papers, been investigated by a Congressional Committee, or been elected to anything." He amplifies: "This may be explained by the vague kind of work I do. It baffles even old bureaucrats. A passion for anonymity goes with the job, too. In short, I am a kind of physician to federal bureaus and programs. I have been present and attended at their birth; administered the pills the morning after some of their really fabulous binges; cut away some foul growths; and yes, I have eased the death pains of a few, though some people maintain no government bureau ever really dies.

"Again, like all ethical physicians, I refrain from having any part in the conception of my patients. Nor do I take any responsibility for their acts, or failure to act. My job is to try to get them to function with a modicum of effectiveness and efficiency, a matter of concern to some earnest souls. It has taken me to every part of the country and brought me in contact with some famous and fantastic characters.

"Examples: I participated in working out some of the basic procedures and organizations of Social Security; I assisted in rationalizing some rationing procedures of the O.P.A. and straightening out the organization of its local boards; I overhauled the effort control system of the Foreign Economic Administration; helped work out a reorganization plan for a bureau established in 1789; and right now I am starting on a management analysis of the U.S. Geological Survey, where I bump into Yale men under every stone.

"To retain some semblance of sanity in such a job, of course, I have an avocation. It is a place down in the northern neck of Virginia on the broad banks of the Potomac. It has a really magnificent hardwood forest on most of it. This is the chief crop. It yields some satisfying scenery too, and for those who care for it there is an abundance of history. Here my wife (who is an art teacher) and I repair on most week-ends in all seasons and most weathers. Any member of the Class who cares for such things and happens to be in Washington is invited to go down and sample same."

His answer to our question about writings: "Legislative drafts, regulations, reports, memoranda, ad infinitum, ad nauseam—of interest to no one, except perhaps professional bureaucrats, of which, fortunately, the Class seems to have few. Now decently interred in government files." Before going into government work in 1935, Meima was engaged in private business.

His marriage to Grace Georgene Larson, daughter of John L. and Georgene Alexia Larson, took place at Crown Point, Ind., August 25, 1925. Her home was formerly in Oak Park, Ill. They have two children: Ralph C., Jr., born March 27, 1927, and Jonquil Allegra on November 25, 1931. Ralph, Jr., attended the Landon School in Washington, spent two years at Yale, and is now in the Class of 1952 at Mexico City College; during 1945-46 he was a petty officer 3/c in the Navy, serving on the U.S.S. Warrick with the Amphibious Forces in the Pacific. Jonquil, who is a Sophomore at Mt. Holyoke, prepared at the Washington Friends School.

HAROLD THURSTON MERRIMAN, JR. Sales representative; James B. Draper & Sons, Inc. (wool tops), 421 Summer Street, Boston 10, Mass.; residence, 37 Cooke Street, Providence 6, R.I.

Merriman was treasurer of the Lippitt Woolen Company of Woonsocket, R.I. from 1940 to 1943 and during the next six years was connected with the Lippitt Worsted Mills, Inc., as vice-president and general manager. He became a sales representative for James B. Draper & Sons, Inc., in December, 1949—and we'd really like to know what wool tops are!

On October 24, 1925, Merriman's marriage to Jeannette W. Sherer, daughter of Joseph F. and Marion Osborne Sherer, took place in Worcester, Mass. They have three children: Marion O., who was born July 3, 1926; Harold T., 3d, born July 14, 1928; and Duncan C., born January 16, 1931. Harold was married on June 3, 1950. Marion graduated from Middlebury in 1948, and Duncan is a Sophomore at Trinity.

RICHARD MEYER. Managing director, Green & Collier, Ltd., rubber brokers, Ocean Building, Singapore, Malaya; residences, Singapore Club, Singapore, and 424 East 52d Street, New York 22, N.Y.

After leaving college, Meyer became a rubber buying agent for the United States Rubber Company and its subsidiaries in New York, London, Colombo, and Singapore. He still has this connection, although since January, 1949, it has been supplementary to his position as managing director of Green & Collier, Ltd. At present he is also serving as rubber consultant to the Economic Coöperation Administration Mission to Thailand. He was assistant to the Rubber Director in Washington from 1943 to 1945 and a special representative to Indochina for the Rubber Development Corporation the following year. There must be a lot of interesting things he could tell us, but he didn't enlarge on the bare facts.

Meyer was married on February 14, 1931, in Scarsdale, N.Y., to Helen Brown. Their daughter, Valerie, who was born in London on October 25, 1933, graduated from King's Hall, Compton, Quebec, in June, 1950, and entered Hollins College in Virginia the following September.

MILTON HENRY MEYERS. Member, Meyers & Meyers, lawyers, 182 Grand Street, Waterbury, Conn.; residence, 116 Stephana Lane, Waterbury.

Meyers is practicing law in association with his brother, Judge Mitchell G. Meyers (B.A. Yale 1924, LL.B. 1926). He and his brother were for some years owners and operators of radio stations in Connecticut and Massachusetts, and at present he is president of the Mattatuck Broadcasting Company. For many years he has been radio director of the Connecticut Republican State Central Committee.

His marriage to Helen Rubena Gaunt, daughter of James and Rhoda Leach Gaunt, of Waterbury, took place in Miami, Fla., on February 16, 1945. They have two sons: Robert Michael, born April 17, 1946, and Jeffrey Arthur, born June 22, 1950, both in Waterbury.

"You suggest that we write you of our travels, recreations, and hobbies," Meyers says. "Well . . . I did. For twenty years . . . I did, and believe me,

I did . . . and how! Then I was saved!! Having been married rather late in life—at forty, and now at forty-six with two sons, I have the ambition to be around to watch these boys grow up to be Eli graduates, healthy in mind and body. I pray that their contributions will be deserving.

“For the children of my less errant classmates who may pick up this volume, I urge upon them, that which parents too often abstain from, an admonition of not waiting too long. Marry early—for all too soon it becomes ‘later than you think’! By waiting, years of genuine happiness are lost.

“NOTE: The foregoing was inspired, but not dictated by my wife.”

ANTHONY LEE MICHEL. Partner, Gardner, Carton & Douglas, lawyers, 33 South Clark Street, Chicago 3, Ill.; residence, 1170 Oakley Avenue, Winnetka, Ill.

In 1929 Michel took his LL.B. at Harvard and was admitted to practice in Illinois. He has practiced there continuously, except for a temporary residence in South Bend, Ind. (1933-35), in connection with the receivership and reorganization of the Studebaker Corporation, and a period in Washington (1942-43) while working in the Navy Department. Michel, who has specialized in corporation finance and reorganization, was associated with Winston, Strawn & Shaw until 1942 and has since been a partner in Gardner, Carton & Douglas.

Since 1947 he has been a member of the Winnetka Zoning Board of Appeals, of which he is currently chairman. He is also serving on the board of managers of the Presbyterian Hospital of Chicago, the executive committee of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, the advisory board of Dwight Hall, and as a trustee of the Chicago Sunday Evening Club. In the past he has been a trustee of the Yale Scholarship Trust of Chicago and the Olivet Institute, a director of the Lawson Y.M.C.A., and a member of the National Student Council of the Y.M.C.A. He belongs to the American, Illinois, and Chicago Bar associations and to the Law, Legal, Chicago, Mid-Day, University, Commonwealth, and Economic clubs of Chicago, the Indian Hill Country Club of Winnetka, and the Chevy Chase Club of Washington. He was married November 29, 1933, in Cleveland to Sarah Barnard Prescott, daughter of O. W. and Eda Sherwin Prescott. Their children were all born in Chicago, Eda Sherwin on August 5, 1935, Anthony Riker on April 3, 1937, and Mary Carolyn on September 20, 1940. Eda is a Sophomore at the New Trier Township High School.

Michel appended the following: “Travels: Coast to coast—Canada to Peru; recreations, hobbies, and special interests: Farming (Hol-Bart Farm, Bartlett, Ill.)—golf, fishing, photography; hopes: Peace on earth; ambitions: Not to die just another lawyer; satisfactions: Family and friends.

"I take vain pleasure in the corporate births, deaths, and resurrections I have attended. I take real pleasure in counseling where I draw not on law books but enlightenment from personal experiences, whether out of a feeling of: fright—(from a deaf beggar in India); disappointment—(from being cut from the Oak Park High School midget baseball squad); success—(when S.B.P. finally—after eight years—agreed to marry me); frustration—(from selling Standard Dictionary of Fact in Greenwich, Conn., or attending the 'Washington Scene'); discouragement—(from the evident lack of unselfish devotion to their tasks by too many of those in public office); apprehension—(from watching but not seeing loved ones walk through the shadow of death); hope—(from the supreme gifts of friends not as selfish as I) or faith—(from within me and from the all without)."

ALBERT KENDALL MILLER. Address, 1000 California Street, San Francisco, Calif.

FRANCIS GUION MILLER. Manager, home agency office, Baltimore Life Insurance Company, 215 Baltimore Life Building, Baltimore 1, Md.; residence, Ruxton and Millard roads, Ruxton 4, Md.

Miller, who has been an insurance executive for over twenty years, is a member of the Baltimore Life Insurance Trust Council and the Baltimore Life Underwriters' Association, L'Hirondelle Country Club, and the Chesapeake Bay Yacht Club of Easton, Md., and is president of the Psi U Club of Maryland. He is on the Republican Executive Committee of Baltimore County and a member of the board of governors of the Republican Headquarters in Towson.

In March, 1942, he went on active duty at a first lieutenant of Field Artillery. He served as battalion supply officer at Camp Lee, Va., until August, 1942, and in the same capacity at Camp Pickett for the next three months. He was then assigned as headquarters detachment commander at Camp Shenango (later Camp Reynolds), remaining there until June, 1943, when he was transferred to Charlestown as recruiting district commanding officer. From September, 1943, until he returned to civilian life in March, 1946, he was at Fort Hayes, Ohio, as special projects officer, his assignment involving the re-orienting of German prisoners of war. Miller was promoted to captain in August, 1942, and to major in September, 1943.

He was married January 14, 1927, in Baltimore to Ruth D. Jenkins, daughter of Major Micah John Jenkins and Natalie Whaley Jenkins. Her home was formerly in Charleston, S.C. Their son, Francis Guion, Jr., Yale '48, was born in Easton, Md., June 23, 1928. He had a year's active duty at Fort Riley, Kansas, as a second lieutenant in the Field Artillery and is now with the Ogden Advertising Agency in Towson.

Miller writes: "I lived with my family in Sharon, Pa., Charleston, W.Va., Blackstone and Petersburg, Va., and Columbus, Ohio, during the war years, and have attended insurance meetings, usually with my family, at The Homestead, Greenbriar, Ocean House, Edgewater Beach, Cavalier Hotel, Shawnee-on-the-Delaware, etc. The only trips out of this country were leave in Canada (where we stayed at the Guild of All Arts in Toronto) and Bermuda.

"My hobbies of harmony (music) and boating have not been properly indulged—but I do have the glorious Chordette records, and I hope to shop around for boats this summer.

"Our classmates, Jim Oliver and Henry Rowell, are physically located in this fair city, but they live mentally in some exalted realm. However, I have occasionally been able to bring them down to earth. I even got Jim to attend a Psi U club luncheon once (third Tuesday of each month at the Merchants Club for those interested—guests and non-Psi U's welcome)."

MOORE RUDOLPH MILLER. Minister, First Presbyterian Church, 125 East 4th Street, East Liverpool, Ohio; residence, 426 Thompson Avenue, East Liverpool.

Miller writes: "As an undergraduate it was my highest ambition to find a place, after graduation, in the Department of State. I had high visions of travel and residence in foreign countries. But being an orphan without home or family, I responded quite readily to the blandishments and persuasive arguments of her whose dossier is recorded under Item 18. The establishment of a home required an immediate job, and since I was without point of contact in the State Department, I became a wage slave for the Western Electric Company.

"During my two years of employment at the Western Electric Company in Pittsburgh I became a member of the First Presbyterian Church of Wilkinsburg, Pa., where under the inspiration and influence of its minister, I became a candidate for the ministry and entered the seminary. So in two years' time, I did enter a State Department of a great government. On graduation at the seminary as valedictorian I received a traveling fellowship, for excellency, of all things, in Hebrew, and thus I entered the consular service of a spiritual kingdom. Two years later I was in Oxford and traveling extensively on the Continent.

"In my ministry I have been fortunate in serving appreciative congregations. My special hobby has been the Army. In 1942 that avocation became my vocation for forty-six months. Again I was fortunate in my commanding officers and assignments. For six months I was stationed at Boston, where I drank deeply of the springs in Symphony Hall. The next eighteen months were spent in New York Harbor, where I was as confirmed an attender at the opera as the most devoted dowager. My Army service in Europe covered practically the same ground that I had been over ten years before, even to being stationed at Oxford. That experience gave me the most realistic picture of 'before' and 'after' scenes. Although most of my service in the E.T.O. was with staff headquarters in Versailles, my work as supervising chaplain took me on every front in Europe, and often left me in the middle of combat. On the other hand, I enjoyed the Opera Comique every bit as much as I did the opera in New York, and grew quite friendly with members of the orchestra near whom my almost regular seat was located.

"I never regretted missing the Consular Service of the State Department of our nation, for my life in the great consular service has been one of complete joy and satisfaction. I have collected little, if any, of the world's riches, but nothing can take away the riches of my inner life and experience. Although I have many aspirations, I have only two ambitions; namely to see my elder son take his degrees at Yale and then go to Princeton to become, some day, professor of English literature. Why Princeton? Because I consider that Princeton has great need of Yale men. My second ambition is to see my younger son become a brigadier general in the United States Army. As for regrets, I have none. As long as I have been an alumnus of Yale, I have had the most charming wife, I have a loyal parish, two exceptional sons, and at the present moment I owe only $150."

It was at Western Theological Seminary in Pittsburgh that Miller received the degree of Bachelor of Sacred Theology in 1931. While at Oxford, where he was a member of Mansfield College, he did research in church history and liturgics. Following his ordination to the ministry in 1931, he served for two years as pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Newell, W.Va., leaving there to accept a call to Saltsburg, Pa. He has been in East Liverpool since 1939 and is at present serving as a trustee of the Carnegie Library and the City Manager Association and as a director of the Y.M.C.A. and Red Cross. He is chairman of the ministerial relations committee and the restoration fund of the Steubenville Presbytery and in the past has been moderator of that presbytery, as well as the presbyteries of Wheeling and Kittanning. He belongs to the Reserve Officers Association, the Fraternal Order of Police Associates, the Masons, the Kiwanis Club (past trustee), The Cleric of Pittsburgh, and the Church Service Society of Scotland. Miller has had occasional magazine articles published in The Presbyterian, with reprints in other national weeklies and church papers.

He was appointed a first lieutenant in the Chaplain Corps, U.S. Army Reserve, in October, 1938, and was called to active duty in April, 1942. He served as chaplain of the 16th General Hospital until October, 1942, and from then until February, 1944, was post chaplain and regimental chaplain of the 245th and 7th Coast Artillery regiments at Fort Hancock, N.J. He was promoted to captain in December, 1942. Miller was in the European theatre from March, 1944, to October, 1945, serving first as chaplain of the 850th Engineer Aviation Battalion and then as staff chaplain of the 9th Engineer Command, 9th Air Force; he was in combat at Metz, Strassbourg, and Düren and received commendations from two commanding generals. Miller, who was released to inactive duty in January, 1946, now ranks as major in the Reserve.

His marriage to Miriam Melchoir Witmyer, daughter of William Grant and Doretta Stotz Melchoir Witmyer, took place in Harrisburg, Pa., June 16, 1926. The older boy, Michael Rudolph, was born February 26, 1935, in Liverpool, and the younger, Stephen Kurt, on February 22, 1939, in Pittsburgh. Michael is a high school Junior.

RALPH WRIGHT MILLER. Designer and stylist, Norcross, Inc. (greeting cards), 244 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y.; residences, 143 East 63d Street, New York 21, and R.F.D. 3, Brewster, N.Y.

Miller has had the above connection since September, 1946. From 1929 to 1941 he was a free-lance artist and illustrator. He is still a bachelor.

On April 17, 1942, Miller enlisted as a private in the Army Air Force. He was assigned to Cochran Field in Macon, Ga., and was promoted first to corporal and later to staff sergeant. From March to June, 1943, he attended the Medical Administrative Corps Officer Candidate School at Camp Barkeley, Texas, and after receiving his commission as second lieutenant, served with the Medical Administrative Corps at Davis-Monthan Field, Tucson, Ariz., until January, 1946, when he was released to inactive duty with the rank of captain. He had served as adjutant and chief of administrative services of the 600-bed A.A.F. Regional Hospital and as chief of the Air Evacuation and Air Rescue units.

ROBBINS HUNTINGTON MILLER. Architect, Office of Douglas Orr, 111 Whitney Avenue, New Haven, Conn.; residence, 30 Old Orchard Road, North Haven.

Miller graduated from the Yale Architectural School in 1930 with the degree of B.F.A. and traveled extensively for the next five months. He had traveled in Europe in 1926 and spent the summer of 1928 at Fontainebleau. Since 1932 he has been associated with the Office of Douglas Orr, although during the war he worked at Chance-Vought. Miller is a member of the American Institute of Architects.

His marriage to Imogene Louise Perkins, daughter of George F. and Louise Perry Perkins, took place in Stockbridge, Mass., on June 9, 1934. Her home was in Jersey City before she was married. They have two sons: Barton H., born April 2, 1936, and Timothy P., born September 15, 1940, both in New Haven. The older boy is in the Class of 1954 at Hopkins Grammar School in New Haven.

"The practice of architecture has proved pretty time-consuming, particularly in recent years," Miller says. "I have taken some part in North Haven affairs (non-political), being chairman of the Building Commission and of the Planning and Zoning Commission. I am also an original member of the Regional Planning Authority of South Central Connecticut. I am able to play a little tennis and play golf whenever the opportunity offers. In fact, until just recently I haven't felt much older than in 1926. I still have all my own teeth and hair—still don't like questionnaires."

ARTHUR MILLIKEN. Headmaster, Westminster School, Simsbury, Conn.

Milliken, who has been headmaster of Westminster since June, 1936, writes: "A quarter of a century ago, whenever a classmate heard that I intended to become a schoolmaster, he usually hastened to inform me that I would soon find myself in an awful rut. My stock answer was that I liked ruts. However, I was not as sure as I sounded either of his statement or mine. Since then I have come to believe that we were both right, and indeed it now seems to me that most occupations provide ruts. Anyway I like mine.

"A year at Groton taught me that a school so perfectly put together was a pleasant place to live, but did not offer a young master much of a chance to feel that he could make a constructive contribution. My nine years at Brooks, however, were spent at definitely constructive work, for I was lucky enough to start in with Frank Ashburn at the beginning and have a hand in building a new school. The fifteen years at Westminster have offered me the challenge of reconstruction, and I have found it a rewarding job, thanks to the choice of a wife who is constituted to make a happy family out of a group of one hundred and fifty boys. A new brick dormitory and a new gymnasium are among the tangible signs of progress at Westminster, but I take greater pride in the intangibles, which classmates are invited to judge for themselves by visiting the school and joining us for a meal. They will also have a chance here to see the sons of a number of their classmates, some of whom are distinctly better scholars than their fathers.

"Sue and I have taken over my father's place at Hyannisport, so that our rut extends a four hours' drive from Simsbury to Cape Cod. There in the summers our family shrinks to five. Sue works just as hard as ever, while I loaf and play a little golf. Nod, our oldest, will soon give up small boat sailing for emptying baskets in some one's office, but seems inclined to find an office in Denver, where he can continue to ski on the week-ends. He graduates from Yale this year. Charlie is a Junior at Yale, where he combines his interest in music with activity on behalf of WYBC, the undergraduate broadcasting station. Peter, a third-former at Brooks, threatens to become the first athlete in the Milliken clan. Some day he may read a book, perhaps even in time to get into Yale.

"Service on the executive committee of the Alumni Board has helped to keep me moderately up to date on what is happening at Yale. As a director and member of the trust committee of the local bank, I can take a little part in the affairs of a small New England town. As secretary of the Headmasters Association, I have an opportunity to sit in on the counsels of my elders and betters within the profession and enjoy the fellowship of an extraordinary group of men. Any one who has spent a couple of days in the company of a hundred headmasters realizes that the rugged individualists of this country are not all drawn to careers in finance and industry. They have one common denominator aside from their liking for boys and that is an unwillingness to change places with any one. It is a good life."

Milliken is a director of the Fuller-Merriam Company of West Haven, Conn. He is a lay reader in the Protestant Episcopal Church and a vestryman of St. Andrews-by-the-Sea at Hyannisport. He belongs to the Century Association, the New York Yale Club, the Graduates Club of New Haven, the Hartford Golf Club, and the Hyannisport Club (director).

His marriage to Susan Lord Buckland, daughter of Edward Grant Buckland (who has an LL.B. and two honorary degrees from Yale) and Sally Tyler Clark Buckland, took place in New Haven on June 21, 1928. The two oldest boys were born in New Haven, Arthur Norris on August 12, 1929, and Charles Buckland on June 2, 1931. The youngest, Peter Lord, was born in Lawrence, Mass., June 13, 1936. Nod prepared for Yale at the Brooks School and Charlie at Groton.

LLEWELLYN MILLS, JR. Address, Kent School, Kent, Conn.

CENTURY ALLEN MILSTEAD. Insurance counselor, Equitable Life Assurance Society, 450 7th Avenue, New York, N.Y.; residence, 47 Spring Lane, Hicksville, N.Y.

"Writing about the past is akin to living in the past, which is not to be recommended," Milstead says. "My early ambition was to attend Yale, study law, and then prepare myself for a public career by studying international law at Oxford. These plans were knocked into a 'cocked hat' when Dean Jones refused to approve my transfer to Sheff as accepted by Dean Warren, when my secret marriage of eighteen months was discovered in the latter part of my Junior year. The faculty action and Dean Jones' insistence on my resignation was a shock and a bitter disappointment to me. My interest in football had been keen but secondary to my desire to fit myself for a career. Since I was a transfer, I was eligible for only one season at Yale, which was my Sophomore year. Yet after that season I refused a large offer to play professional football to accept a few hundred dollars as Freshman line coach while I continued my studies. (I think the 'vets' proved that married men could do creditable work.)

"For some time I was embittered towards Yale, because, while I realized I had been wrong in violating a rule about undergraduates marrying, I felt that a group of intellectuals should have been able to figure out a punishment less drastic—Dean Warren did. I expressed this feeling to Frederic Johnson, the bursar, on an occasion a couple of years later when my note was called (if I had graduated I would have had five years). I am indebted to him for his reply. He said in effect that he understood my feeling and to an extent agreed with me, but he added that I was condemning Yale for the acts of men who were on the passing stage—Yale was Yale long before they were born and would continue to be Yale long after they were forgotten. Needless to say, I stopped criticizing Yale and returned to the fold more loyal than before.

"While I may have made an error in breaking the rule I felt was wrong, I made no mistake in marrying the girl I chose. I picked a girl who has been able to endure me for these twenty-eight years, raise a fine son and three lovely daughters, and still remain the same as the girl that I married!

"The vicissitudes of life hit us all. The years of the Depression and the dislocation brought about by military service caused many of us to sail a rough sea and necessitated the recharting of our course several times. Some of us have found it difficult to compromise our fundamental ideals and early teachings that a man is only as good as his word. From observation this hasn't seemed to bother many people and in many cases has been a boon to their success.

"The closest I have come thus far to my early ambition for a public career was when I ran as a candidate for State Senator in Connecticut in 1934. I have taken great pleasure in seeing adopted much worth-while national and international legislation which has expressed the will of the American people for the benefit of all people ultimately. I wish I might have played a bigger part."

Milstead gives the following summary covering his occupations: investment security business, three years; personnel director, six years; business manager, two years; branch manager of a national sales organization, two years; insurance, five years (insurance counselor with Equitable Life since May, 1950); professional football—New York Giants, 1925-28; Yale football coach, three seasons—1929, 1930, and 1934. He joined the National Guard in 1937 and in September, 1940, was inducted as a captain in the 157th Field

Artillery, 45th Infantry Division. He was promoted to major in 1942 and during the next two years was headquarters commandant and provost-marshal for the 44th Infantry Division and the Northwest Sector Troops and commanding officer of special troops. He attended the Field Artillery School at Fort Sill in 1941 and again in 1943. He was placed on inactive duty in September, 1944.

Mrs. Milstead was Mildred Bechtel, daughter of Oman Olindus and Violet Louette MacLean Bechtel, of Milford, Conn. They were married in Port Chester, N.Y., July 6, 1923. Their oldest daughter, Millicent J., who was born in Greenwich, Conn., September 26, 1926, graduated from Vassar in 1948; she was married May 14, 1949, in Ridgefield, Conn., to John Jennings Seymour and has a daughter, Sharon Bechtel, born July 29, 1950, in Sharon, Conn.; the family now lives in Lakeville, Conn. The second girl, Violet Louette, born January 1, 1930, in Hartford, Conn., graduated from the Washington (Conn.) High School in 1947; her marriage to Charles A. Brown took place in Old Westbury, N.Y., December 17, 1950. Century A., Jr., born August 3, 1932, in New Haven, is in the Class of 1953 at the White Plains High School; he enlisted as a Pfc. in the Marines last November. The youngest child, Mildred Dawn, was born in Philadelphia, September 23, 1940.

MACNEIL MITCHELL. Lawyer, 36 West 44th Street, New York, N.Y.; residence, 116 East 53d Street, New York.

After graduating from Yale, Mitchell attended the Columbia Law School and then the University of California School of Jurisprudence in Berkeley, where he received the degree of LL.B. in May, 1929. From that time until his admission to the bar in 1931, he served a clerkship with his father, George H. Mitchell, Yale '99, in New York City and subsequently practiced with him until his death in September, 1949. Since then Mitchell has been practicing independently—a general practice with emphasis on corporation, estates, and trusts. He was a member of the New York State Assembly from 1938 to 1946 and since 1947 has been a member of the State Senate, his present term expiring in December, 1952. From a campaign circular we learn that the nonpartisan Citizens Union has said of him: "One of the most useful, industrious, effective members of the Legislature. . . . He has sponsored a wide variety of constructive proposals and often showed exceptional discernment in the public interest in his votes."

Mitchell is a director and general counsel of the Marine Aircraft Corporation. He was the founder and is currently an officer of both the Omega Foundation and the Columbia University Club Foundation, and he is a member of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York and of the Delta Theta Phi legal fraternity.

He was married on January 13, 1938, in Chapman, Ala., to Martha Katherine McGowin, daughter of Willis M. and Ethel Bennett McGowin. Her home was formerly in Greenville, Ala. They have a son, Charles MacNeil, born September 15, 1942, and twin daughters, Martha Evelyn and Marian McGowin, born March 15, 1947.

ALFRED CARL MOHR. President, Mohr Motors, Inc., 5 Brookside Avenue, Caldwell, N.J.; residence, 91 Roseland Avenue, Caldwell.

"I bet I'm the only automobile dealer in our Class!" says Mohr. [We're not so sure of that, but it's our guess that he is the only one who abandoned concentrated study for a Ph.D. to enter the field.] He adds, "It took me a long time to find myself work that was exclusive enough to warrant that blissful distinction. First a banker under the tutelage of Harry E. Ward, Yale '01, then an instructor of modern languages at McBurney Preparatory School for Boys in New York City. Thence to Yale [after taking his M.A. at Columbia in 1932] to study for my Ph.D. and as an instructor in the Department of Germanic Languages.

"In 1933 my wife and I left for Europe, where I continued my studies for my Ph.D. at the University of Berlin. After a further spell of traveling in Europe, I returned to the good old U.S.A. and entered the automobile business as a chassis lecturer at the New York Automobile Show (on the strength of my debating experience at Yale). I must have been quite convincing, for automobiles have been my life work and hobby ever since."

Mohr was formerly district manager of the Dodge Brothers Corporation Division of the Chrysler Corporation and from 1942 to 1945 was a technical specialist and resident representative of the Dodge Chicago plant at the Wright Aeronautical Corporation in Paterson, N.J., where B-29 bomber engines were being made. Since 1945 he has been president of Mohr Motors, Inc., and he has also been president of the Detrol Company, Inc., since 1946 and of Almor, Inc., since 1948. He has been chairman of the business division in the Community Chest campaigns in the Borough of Caldwell, has taken an active part in the Red Cross drives, in 1949 was president of the Caldwell Athletic Association, and is serving as president of the Men's Club of St. Peter's Episcopal Church in Essex Fells. In 1936 he was a radio commentator and public speaker for the National Republican Committee. Mohr is a member of the Essex County and National Automobile Dealers associations, the Caldwell and National Chambers of Commerce, the Modern Languages Association, the Steuben Society (trustee, 1927), the Essex Fells Country Club, the Caldwell Kiwanis Club, and the Masonic order.

His marriage to Dorothy Dulany Ruark, daughter of Wallace and Eleanor Tull Ruark, took place at Garden City, Long Island, on June 25, 1932. Her home was formerly in Salisbury, Md.

CHARLES ALEXANDER MOORE. Chairman, Philosophy Department, University of Hawaii, Honolulu, Hawaii.

Moore, who took his Ph.D. at Yale in 1932, was an instructor in philosophy at the University from 1933 to 1936 and has since been a member of the faculty of the University of Hawaii; he studied at the Oriental Institute there from 1936 to 1941. He was promoted from assistant professor to associate professor of philosophy in 1940 and in June, 1947, became professor of philosophy and chairman of the department. His special field is Oriental and comparative East-West philosophy, and in 1939 and 1949 he was director of two East-West Philosophies Conferences held at the University of Hawaii.

Moore is the editor and co-author of Philosophy—East and West, the co-editor of J. Takakusu's Essentials of Buddhist Philosophy, and the editor of a quarterly journal, Philosophy East and West. Essays in East-West Philosophy, of which he is editor and co-author, it at present in press. He is a member of the American Philosophical Association, the Indian Philosophical Congress, the American Oriental Society, the Institute of Pacific Relations, and the Masons and a director of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis (Honolulu chapter), the Child and Family Service, and the Honolulu Stadium.

He was married December 19, 1929, in New York City to Anne G. Mayo, daughter of Frederick A. Mayo. Her home was formerly in New Haven. Their son, Charles Alexander, Jr., was born in Honolulu on February 2, 1939.

Moore writes: "I traveled around the world during 1947-48, working at Benares, India [on a Guggenheim Fellowship], and at Oxford on a book on Indian philosophy. I went to Europe (England, Germany, Holland) in 1950 to participate in conferences on world religion and peace and on world culture and human rights. I have been a member of the Board of Athletic Control at the University of Hawaii for many years and am at present chairman. I regret that I won't be able to attend the Twenty-fifth Reunion."

EDWARD JAMES MOORE. Registered representative, Eastman, Dillon & Company (investments), 15 Broad Street, New York 5, N.Y.; residence, 240 West Midland Avenue, Paramas, N.J.

Moore, who has been with Eastman, Dillon & Company since March, 1943, summed it all up as follows: "Graduation—Wall Street, and everything going fine until 1929. Collapse and the long fight back to solvency. Arguing pro and con about New Deal philosophy. During this period, until the outbreak of the war, I nearly made a fortune—but didn't. Stomach ulcers, the occupational disease of Wall Street, took its toll, and my health was precarious at times.

"War clouds and my hatred for Hitler. I tried every branch of the service, but was turned down for physical reasons. Finally was able to join the 7th Regiment, New York Guard. Since the war I have married and have taken one notable trip to the Virgin Islands. Best climate in the world! Hope to go again this winter.

"Ave atque vale, frater!"

Mrs. Moore's maiden name was June Elizabeth Blackmore. She is the daughter of Theodore Hornblower and Agnes V. McDermott Blackmore, and they were married in Allendale, N.J., on October 8, 1949.

MARR MORRIS. Geologist and mineral, oil, and gas broker; business address, 121 South 11th Street, Grover City, Calif.; residence, 120 South Airport Avenue, Santa Maria, Calif.

From 1927 to 1935 Morris was an executive in India of the Standard-Vacuum Oil Company. He was engaged in farming from 1935 through 1937 and then took up the study of geology at Stanford University, where he spent two years. Since 1939 his time has been devoted primarily to geology, although he is also a mineral, oil and gas broker. On March 4, 1934, he was married in New York City to Anna Maude Herbert, of London.

Morris says that he has taken three trips around the world—at Standard-Vacuum's expense—and adds, "Still a dub golfer. Take as many strokes on the 19th also as any one else. It is only a par 4 hole, though. I would like to have 500 happy and contented steers working for me twenty-four hours per day by taking on all the grass they can eat—natural grass, green and succulent the year round. To have to irrigate or feed would spoil the deal.

"I won't get into politics. There is not enough room on the paper, and it might curl it up."

JOHN WILLOUGHBY MUNRO. Address, 111 West Monroe Street, Chicago 3, Ill.

OGDEN KING MYERS. Administrator of estates, City Bank Farmers Trust Company, 22 William Street, New York, N.Y.; residence, Hollow Tree Ridge Road, Darien, Conn.

Myers, who has been with the City Bank Farmers Trust Company since graduation, has held the position of administrator of estates for some time. He was married some years ago to Helen M. Whelan, in New York City. He subsequently married Camilla Moore Gay, daughter of Caleb C. and Elizabeth A. Moore, their marriage taking place in Darien. Myers has a son, Ogden K., Jr., who was born in 1929, a daughter, Joan H., born in 1931, and two stepsons, F. Ernest Gay, Jr., born in 1926, and Peter A. Gay, born in 1928, all in New York. The three boys prepared for college at the Westminster School. Ogden, Jr., later attended the University of Arizona and Ernest, Columbia College. Peter, who is at present at the University of Virginia, is on the Varsity football team. Ogden, Jr., served overseas for three years as a Pfc. in the Army. Ernest was also abroad for three years as a technical sergeant and is now a second lieutenant in Military Government; he has been working for the McGraw-Hill Publishing Company. Peter had a year's Army service as a corporal. Joan attended Rosemary Hall and Merrill's Business School in Stamford.

CLAIR WAYLAND NAYLOR. Associate professor of mathematics, Catawba College, Salisbury, N.C.; residence, Salisbury.

Naylor, who took his M.A. at Yale in 1928, was an instructor at Yale the following year and again during 1931-32. His other connections have been as follows: professor and head of the Mathematics Department at Pennsylvania Military College; teacher at Phillips Exeter; assistant professor at Amherst; professor and head of the Mathematics Department at Rutland Junior College; associate professor of mathematics at Catawba since September, 1949. Naylor organized, trained, and conducted glee clubs at Pennsylvania Military College, Rutland Junior College, and Catawba. During the period from 1942 to 1945 he was a sergeant in the Air Force, serving as a weather observer. He is still a bachelor.

ERIC BERNHARD NELSON. Address, 225 East 73d Street, New York 21, N.Y.

EDWARD TREAT NETTLETON. Account executive, C. W. Hoyt Company, Inc. (advertising), 551 5th Avenue, New York 17, N.Y.; residence, 290 South Street, Morristown, N.J.

For nine years after graduation Nettleton was with the Holland-American Line. He has been associated with the C. W. Hoyt Company, Inc., since 1935, with the exception of a year (1937-38), when he was with the Calco Chemical Company, and the period from October, 1942, to July, 1945, when he served as Armed Guard officer on merchant ships, making one Atlantic crossing and five Pacific ones, "staying at relatively safe distance behind front."

In his job with the C. W. Hoyt Company, Nettleton handles advertising for the KLM Royal Dutch Airlines, the Netherlands National Tourist Office, the Netherlands West Indies Tourist Committee, the New Hampshire State Planning and Development Commission, and the Dominican Republic—certainly an interesting group.

On June 11, 1932, he was married in Hartford, Conn., to Frances Blake, daughter of F. Minot and Adele Knapp Blake. Their son, Minot Blake, who was born May 24, 1934, expects to enter Yale following his graduation from Groton in 1952. The older girl, Mary Treat, born April 23, 1935, is at the Kent Place School in Summit, N.J., preparing for Vassar. Martha, who was born on September 29, 1940, is at the Peck School in Morristown.

Nettleton's report on other angles: "Travels—Have made about twenty-five trips to Europe, last eight by air; also two trips to South America. My business connection with KLM keeps me 'in the air' a lot of time. I commute to Curacao about four times a year.

"Recreations—Play squash tennis and tennis; hobbies—still planning to have one when I find time; special interests—my work on the Morristown Planning Board [of which he is secretary]; hopes and ambitions—to earn more dollars; satisfactions—nice family, home, and interesting job; regrets—relatively few—chiefly 'middle-age spread.' "

JOHN LOWE NEWBOLD. President, Merchants Transfer & Storage Company, 920 E Street, N.W., Washington 4, D.C.; residence, 2435 Tracy Place, N.W., Washington 8.

In March, 1931, Newbold became president of the Merchants Transfer & Storage Company, with which he has been associated since graduation. He has worked on various charitable drives and is at present first vice-president of the Metropolitan Club of Washington, of which he had been secretary during the preceeding three years; he has been on the board of governors since 1947 and has been a governor of the Chevy Chase Club since 1929. He belongs also to the University and Alibi clubs of Washington and the Marlborough Hunt Club of Upper Marlborough, Md.

In March, 1933, Newbold was commissioned a first lieutenant in the Reserve and detailed to the Office of the Assistant Chief of Staff, G-1, to attend the conferences of the joint Army and Navy Selective Service Committee. He was promoted to captain four years later and in September, 1940, was ordered to indefinite active duty, with an assignment to the headquarters of the Selective Service System, Division of Finance and Supply. He served as chief of the printing section, chief of procurement, and assistant chief of the division and was promoted to major in February, 1942, and to lieutenant colonel the following December. In June, 1944, he was assigned as soldier voting officer for the Persian Gulf command and went overseas in July, remaining until December. He was relieved from active duty in October, 1945.

He was first married in December, 1928, in Philadelphia to Mariamne Meade Morris, daughter of Cheston and Anna Parker Morris, of Springhouse, Pa. They were divorced in 1932. His second marriage, to Katharine E. Wilkins, daughter of John Franklin and Julia Harris Wilkins, took place in New York in May, 1934. Newbold has four children: Mariamne Meade, born in 1929, John Lowe, 3d, in 1935, Fleming, 2d, in 1937, and Nickolas Wilkins in 1946. The boys were born in Washington. Mariamne, who was born in Philadelphia, attended the Springside School at Chestnut Hill and is now a Junior at Connecticut College for Women. John is in the fourth form at St. Paul's, while Fleming is at the Fessenden School; they had previously attended St. Albans in Washington.

"Through 1939 my nose was kept pretty close to the grindstone," Newbold says. "Then things began to ease up a bit, and I started playing golf and continued to do so as many times a week as possible; weather permitting, it is always twice a week and usually oftener. During the winter months I play badminton two or three times a week.

"I have always enjoyed bird shooting of various types, starting the season off the first of September with rail bird shooting in the marshes and following up with pheasants and grouse in New York State in October, duck on the Potomac, Chesapeake, and North Carolina when the season is open, and quail shooting in South Carolina or Georgia after the first of the year. I am going to try to go salmon fishing each summer and deep-sea fishing in the winter. I had a sample of the former two years ago on the Upsalquitch and the latter at Acapulco this winter where I went sail fishing and we landed five, about ten feet long each; unfortunately, no marlin.

"During my six months overseas in 1944 I took quite a few pictures with a Leica which I purchased for that trip. Since then I have a good deal of fun recording events and trips with it. I haven't seemed to have the time or wherewithal to do the traveling I would like, but in the last six months I've spent a couple of weeks in the Virgin Islands and more recently five weeks in Mexico, all for pure pleasure. If the world situation doesn't get worse, I am hoping to take the family to Europe in '52.

"I still play cards in whatever form is in vogue; rarely poker any more, some bridge and Canasta, but more often gin rummy. Since our last remaining legitimate theatre closed its doors here in Washington several years ago, I try to get to New York several times a year to keep up with the theatre. I never used to care much for seashores, but in the last few years, I have changed my mind and never miss an opportunity to get on a beach, relax, and be lazy. In fact, I am planning on building a swimming pool at our house when the restrictions are lifted. I resisted television until last year, when my company decided to put on a program. I felt I had to know what it was all about. Unfortunately, I have now become an addict.

"There are no dogs or other animals around the house, but I have two aquariums of tropical fish. At one time I used to raise them, but I gave that up and now they are purely decorative.

"I haven't been in a train in so long I don't think I would know what one looks like. I either motor where I am going or fly."

GEORGE ALMER NEWHALL. President, H. M. Newhall & Company and Pacific Diamond H Bag Company, and owner, George Newhall Ranches; business address, 260 California Street, San Francisco, Calif.; residence, 2438 Filbert Street, San Francisco.

Newhall writes: "Upon graduating, I joined the import and export firm of H. M. Newhall & Company, established by my grandfather in 1852. Shortly after this the firm acquired the Pacific Diamond H Bag Company. I traveled extensively in the Orient and United States for both firms and am at present president of both.

"The family were in the quicksilver mining business in early days, and I acquired several mines in the Thirties which I sold at the war rumblings in Europe of World War II and shifted money made into ranches, as the family had always been in this business. I operated them for a while and am at present a director of the Newhall Land & Farming Company. I built up a personal cattle ranch of 120,000 acres in northern California, sold it last year, and bought several smaller ranches and orange orchards.

"My main hobby is hunting, which I do a lot of, in fact, I am off to Africa in January, 1951, to hunt big game.

"In between found time to get married a couple of times and raise four children."

Newhall has been president of H. M. Newhall & Company since 1930 and of the Pacific Diamond H Bag Company since 1932. His first marriage, to Marion Jones Thierbach, of San Francisco, daughter of H. C. and Grace Clement Jones, took place in New York in 1930. They were divorced in 1942. He was married later that year in Carson City, Nevada, to Dorothy M. Smith, daughter of Delbert G. and Bertha Wilson Smith. Her home was formerly in San Francisco. The children are: Henry Mayo, born in 1932, Diana in 1933, George A., 3d, in 1944, and Caroline T. in 1945. The two oldest were born in San Francisco and the others in Willits, Calif. The boys have both attended the Town School for Boys in San Francisco, and Henry went on to the University of California at Berkeley. Diana went to the Sarah Dix Hamlin School in San Francisco.

FRANK NEWKIRK NORRIS. Staff industrial engineer, executive department, Westinghouse Electric Corporation, East Pittsburgh, Pa.; residence, 80 Churchill Road, Churchill, Turtle Creek P.O., Pa.

From 1926 to 1929 Norris was manager of the New Albany (Ind.) plant of the Ames Shovel & Tool Company. He has been with Westinghouse since then and has held his present position since 1947. He is an elder in the Beulah Presbyterian Church and belongs to the Pittsburgh chapter of the Sons of the American Revolution, various Scottish Rite bodies, and Syria Temple.

Norris' marriage to Lois Eleanor Ashworth, daughter of Homer D. and Rhoda Scott Ashworth, took place in Pittsburgh on November 3, 1932. They have two children: Frank Newkirk, Jr., born June 23, 1934, and Susan on May 4, 1938, both in Pittsburgh. The boy is a Junior in the Wilkinsburg High School, and Susan is in junior high school.

To the above factual data, Norris adds, "In 1946 I helped in designing, laying out, and equipping an electrical manufacturing plant which is located fourteen miles from Mexico City. Westinghouse supplied the technical assistance and 'know how.'

"If the rate of exchange is favorable fifteen years from now, I would like to be able to retire in Alcapulco or in our own great state of California. My particular hobby, at this time, is geriatrics.

"I went abroad after graduation, expecting to be able to see the U.S. in later years. Now almost twenty five years have passed, and I still have the West to visit. Two years ago we motored to Florida and last summer we visited New England and, of course, New Haven."

JOHN RINGLING NORTH. Address, care Ringling Brothers & Barnum & Bailey Circus, 10 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N.Y.

FREDERIC JUDSON NORTON. Assistant advertising manager, United States Envelope Company, Springfield, Mass.; residence, 109 Westmoreland Avenue, Longmeadow, Mass.

Norton has held the above position with the United States Envelope Company since 1948. His marriage to Ruth Steele took place in Longmeadow on June 30, 1930. They have two sons: Frederic J., Jr., who was born on May 26, 1933, and John Bradley, born May 21, 1936, both in Springfield.

CALVIN HAWLEY OAKES. With Central Intelligence Agency, Washington, D.C.; residence, 2507 Massachusetts Avenue, Washington.

Oakes, who attended l'École Libre des Sciences Politiques in Paris during 1928-29, became an American Foreign Service officer in 1930 and during the following year was vice-consul at London. He served in the same capacity at Genoa during 1932-33 and at Kingston, Jamaica, for the next two years, was third secretary of legation and chargé d'affaires ad interim at Tirana, Albania, in 1936, and was then assigned to Calcutta until 1941, serving as vice-consul for a year and subsequently as consul. He was on duty in the Department of State for the next four years and in 1945 graduated from the Army-Navy Staff College, which he attended in a civilian capacity. Oakes concluded his service in the Foreign Service as consul at Colombo, Ceylon. Following his resignation from the Service in December, 1946, he accepted an appointment with the Central Intelligence Agency. In 1948 he served as deputy United States representative on the United Nations Commission for India and Pakistan. Oakes belongs to the Army and Navy and University clubs of Washington and the Carolina Yacht Club of Charleston, S.C.

He was married in Manila on February 21, 1940, to Sarah Elizabeth Lawrence Bisland-Frederick, daughter of Pressley Eugene and Anna Bates Lawrence Bisland. She had previously lived in Cairo, London, and Bronxville, N.Y. Their daughter, Sarah Lawrence, who was born in Washington on April 10, 1942, is at the Holton Arms School in Washington, which Oakes' stepdaughter, Anne Bisland-Frederick, also attends.

JAMES HENRY OLIVER. Professor of Greek, Johns Hopkins University; residences, 322 St. Dunstons Road, Baltimore 12, Md., and North Wilmot, N.H.

Oliver did graduate work at the University of Bonn, the American Academy at Rome, and at Yale, where he took his Ph.D. in 1931. He was an instructor in Latin at Yale from 1930 to 1932 and spent the next four years as excavator and epigraphist in the American Excavations of the Athenian Agora. He was assistant professor of ancient history at Columbia from 1936 until 1946, although he was on leave of absence for the last four years of that period. In 1943 he went on active duty as a captain, A.U.S., and subsequently served in the Mediterranean. He was promoted to the rank of major in 1944. Since 1946 Oliver has been at Johns Hopkins as professor of Greek.

He is the author of three books: Metropolitan Museum Egyptian Expedition, Volume XIV (1938), on the Greek inscriptions of Hibis (written in collaboration with H. G. Evelyn White); The Sacred Gerusia (Hesperia, Supplement VI, 1941); and The Athenian Expounders of the Sacred and Ancestral Law (Baltimore 1950). To date he has had thirty-seven articles published, plus a number of reviews. His contributions have appeared in the Transactions of the American Philological Association, the American Journal of Philology, the American Journal of Archeology, Aegyptus, the Memoirs of the American Academy in Rome, Classical Philology, Harvard Studies in Classical Philology, the Harvard Theological Review, and Hesperia.

Oliver's marriage to Janet Carnochan, daughter of Fred and Edna Funston Carnochan, took place in Athens on June 26, 1936. Her home was formerly in New York.

SHATTUCK WESTON OSBORNE. Eastern district sales manager, Beltraction Company, 1813 Winona Street, Chicago 40, Ill.; office and residence, 362 Mystic Street, Arlington 74, Mass.

In May, 1948, Osborne started as territorial sales representative in Massachusetts for the Beltraction Company, which manufactures and sells a treatment for power transmission belts (belt dressing) and also makes a special-purpose cutting oil. He became Eastern district sales manager on April 1, 1950, with responsibility for the area of New England, New York State, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, etc. He says that his previous connections are too numerous to give in detail, but included Henry L. Doherty & Company of New York, La France-Republic Industries, the General Fireproofing Company, Swift & Company (for five years), Foster Brothers (as general manager before going into the Navy), and Frost-Cooked Foods, Inc. (after the war until making his present connection).

His military record: "Entered the Navy as a lieutenant (j.g.) in December 1942. After indoctrination and training, was on convoy communication duty until January, 1944. Further training in New York, then assignment as communication officer in Port Director's offices in Boston (lived at home and commuted to work) and Pearl Harbor. Released as lieutenant commander in September, 1946, and have since been active in the Reserve as executive officer of volunteer MSTs Unit 1-1 (L) in Boston. No decorations, but served in European theatre and American and Pacific areas."

During the period from 1939 to 1949 Osborne was active in the Arlington division of the Greater Boston Community Fund in a variety of capacities. He belongs to the Yale Club of Boston, the Touchdown Club of Arlington, and the Yale Football "Y" Association. He was married June 10, 1939, in Arlington to Helen Jenkins Foster, daughter of John Roy and Georgietta Kingsley Foster.

"As you can see by the foregoing answers to specific questions," he says, "I have not greatly distinguished myself by any extraordinary achievements since leaving Yale. I have done some traveling (a trip to Europe the summer after graduation, during a couple of business connections—including my present one—and in my Navy duties during the late unpleasantness), and I enjoy it, as does my wife, when she can go with me. We are not blessed with children, so she does occasionally join me in my jaunts. I like to try to play golf—in my first few years out of college I played often, but don't get as much chance now—and I do enjoy watching practically all kinds of sporting events. These two are as near to hobbies as I have ever achieved. As to my hopes, if I can remain in as good health for the next twenty-five years as I have in the past twenty-five, I'll be satisfied."

WASHINGTON IRVING OSBORNE, JR. President, Cornell Wood Products Company, manufacturers of paperboard, cartons, and shipping containers, 230 North Michigan Avenue, Chicago 1, Ill.; residence, 349 King Muir Road, Lake Forest, Ill.

Osborne was construction supervisor with D. H. Burnham & Company, architects, from 1926 to 1929 and has since been with the Cornell Wood Products Company, manufacturers of paperboard, folding cartons, and corrugated and solid fibre shipping containers. He became president of the concern in 1933 and is also a director of the Belden Manufacturing Company, the Universal Match Company, the Chicago, North Shore & Milwaukee Railway Company, the First National Bank of Lake Forest, and the National Boulevard Bank of Chicago. He is a trustee of the Institute of Paper Chemistry of Appleton, Wis., a director of the Lake Forest Hospital Association, and a vestryman of the Episcopal Church of the Holy Spirit in Lake Forest. During World War II Osborne served on several industry advisory committees to government agencies (W.P.B. and O.P.A.) in Washington and also as a consultant to the War Production Board.

On December 2, 1931, he was married in Chicago to Elsa Armour, daughter of A. Watson and Elsa Parker Armour. They have three daughters, all of whom were born in Lake Forest, Adrienne Armour on October 24, 1932, Gwendolyn Elsa on December 10, 1933, and Karen on May 5, 1940. Gwendolyn is a Senior at Miss Porter's School. Adrienne graduated there in 1950 and is now in the Class of 1954 at Sarah Lawrence.

"My hobbies are my work, my family, and my vacations," Osborne says. "The latter must include substantial amounts of mediocre golf. Outside of this, I endeavor to be a good citizen in the communities where I live and work, so have nothing spectacular or unusual to report on."

CHARLES PAGE. Vice-president, Johnson & Higgins of California, insurance brokers and average adjusters, 311 California Street, San Francisco, Calif.; residence, 2430 Scott Street, San Francisco.

Page was with the Insurance Company of North America for five years after graduation, at first in the Philadelphia office, then in Montreal for two years, and subsequently in New York City. He was in the San Francisco office of the Hartford Accident & Indemnity Company from 1932 to 1935 and from then until 1939 was executive vice-president and general manager of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce. He has since been associated with the Pacific Coast offices of Johnson & Higgins of 63 Wall Street, New York City, of which he became a partner and director in 1945. He is vice-president of Johnson & Higgins of California and a director of the Crocker First National Bank and the Union Sugar Company of San Francisco.

In 1938 and 1939 Page was a commissioner of the San Francisco Housing Authority. He is currently serving as vice-president of the board of trustees of the California Academy of Science, as treasurer (since 1941) of the Musical Association of San Francisco (which maintains the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra under Pierre Monteux), a director of the Family and Children's Agency, and chairman of the board of the San Francisco Bureau of Governmental Research. He belongs to the Pacific Union Club of San Francisco (director, 1948-49), the Stock Exchange Club of San Francisco, the California Club of Los Angeles, and the Rainier Club of Seattle.

On September 16, 1933, he was married in San Francisco to Mary Catherine Hall, daughter of James E. and Mignon Mecartney Hall. They have a son, Charles Hall, who was born in San Francisco, October 24, 1938.

Page writes: "Since coming back to San Francisco in 1932, I have endeavored to take an interest in alumni activities. I served one term as president of the Yale Alumni Association of Northern California and acted as northern California chairman for the Yale Placement Service following World War II.

"Fortunately, my partnership in Johnson & Higgins takes me to New York at least once a year, so I have been able to maintain contact with many classmates in Eastern cities—also have been able to take in a few football weekends at New Haven. We are still trying to get Yale to schedule a game with Stanford University, but no luck so far.

"Hobbies and similar interests principally riding horseback almost daily, as I have a registered American saddle-bred mare, and we have an early morning engagement on the bridle paths of Golden Gate Park here in San Francisco; motion picture photography; gardening on a summer-week-end country property located about thirty miles north of San Francisco. Travel during recent years has been limited to the United States and Canada, except for four months in Japan in 1939, when conditions were becoming rather tense there—a most interesting experience."

HAROLD ALAN PAGET. Address, 2651 Ottawa Street, Hollyburn, B.C., Canada.

FRANKLIN LEE PAYER. Address, 2025 N.B.C. Building, Cleveland, Ohio.

ALFRED KITTREDGE PEARSON. Vice-president, Goodnow Pearson Company (department store), 16 Main Street, Gardner, Mass.; residence, 34 Woodland Avenue, Gardner.

From 1925 to 1928 Pearson was with R. H. Macy Company in New York, ending as assistant buyer. He has been with the Goodnow Pearson Company since then and in 1932 was made vice-president of the company. He has served on the usual committees, drives, etc., and during the war was a deputy chief air raid warden. Pearson belongs to the Rotary Club, the Williams Club of New York, the Appalachian Mountain Club, the Bulldog Club of New England, and a barber shop singing group—"SPEBSQSA, Inc."

He was first married in 1926 in Fitchburg, Mass., to Carolyn Cushing, daughter of Milton L. and Gertrude Brown Cushing. They were divorced in 1939. In 1940 he was married in Petersham, Mass., to Julia Rockefeller Hammond, of West Boylston, Mass., daughter of Arthur H. and Susan Turner Rockefeller. He has three daughters, all of whom were born in Gardner, Joan on July 14, 1929, Barbara on May 6, 1932, and Ann on March 4, 1934. The older girls are at Wellesley—Joan a Senior and Barbara a Freshman. Ann has gone farther afield, to Oklahoma University, where she is in the Freshman Class.

The following covers other angles: "Travels: none since the conventional European bender; recreations: communing too closely with nature in Berkshires; sports: a little middle-aged tennis and climbing; special interests: jazz afficiando and collector; bulldog kennels (inactive)."

Pearson became national advertising manager of Charm (one of the Street & Smith publications) on August 15, 1950. He had previously been business manager for Living for Young Homemakers Magazine and a space solicitor for Glamour and Vogue. During World War II he served as a lieutenant commander in the training division of Naval Aviation.

Pearson's marriage to Marjorie Simonds, daughter of Henrietta Jones, took place in New York City in 1937. They have a daughter, Virginia, who is in the seventh grade at the Greenvale School at Greenvale, Long Island.

WILMOT WALKER PEIRCE. Address, 768 Yale Drive, Mansfield, Ohio.

BERNARD PELLEGRINO. Lawyer, 157 Church Street, New Haven, Conn.; residence, 102 Rochford Avenue, Hamden, Conn.

"I've lived a quiet but active life since my graduation from the Yale Law School in 1928," Pellegrino tells us. "All of my social and business life has been centered in and about the city of New Haven. I've applied myself exclusively to my law practice and my family to the exclusion of hobbies and other special interests. In August, 1949, my wife and I spent three months traveling in Europe, where we visited, in the hurried manner of the American tourist, Lisbon, Fatima, Lourdes, Paris, London, Brussels, Lucerne, Geneva, Milan, Venice, Florence, Rome, Naples, and Palermo.

"My only regret is that I was not born twenty-five years earlier when the government permitted you to keep the money you earned."

Pellegrino was admitted to the Connecticut Bar in July, 1928, and has since been engaged in the general practice of law. He has been town counsel for Hamden since 1937 and was judge of the Town Court from 1947 to 1949.

He is a member of the Connecticut State and New Haven County Bar associations and of the Holy Name Society of St. Ann's Church. He is serving as parish chairman of the Bishop's campaign for Catholic high schools and during the war was an air raid district warden.

Pellegrino was married June 28, 1934, in New Haven to Frances Irene Quatrano, daughter of Achille and Maria Vecchione Quatrano. They have twin sons: Joseph Harry and Bernard Albert, who were born in New Haven on June 9, 1936. They are Freshmen at the Notre Dame High School.

JOHN PEPION. Manager, green coffee importing division for the United States and Canada, Volkart Brothers, Inc., importers and exporters, 60 Beaver Street New York 4, N.Y.; residence, Fairmead Road, Darien, Conn.

Before becoming associated with Volkart Brothers, Inc., Pepion was president and treasurer of the William Boardman & Sons Company, coffee roasters, in Hartford, Conn.

He was married in that city on January 21, 1928, to Dorothy Corbin, daughter of Harvey W. and Ethel L. Twiss Corbin. They have three daughters: Joan, born June 4, 1929, Suzanne on January 31, 1934, and Annis Corbin on May 21, 1938, all in Hartford. Suzanne is in the Senior Class at the William Hall High School in West Hartford. Joan, who is a Senior at Smith, is to be married this summer to J. Mark Thompson, Harvard '51, who has been accepted to enter the Yale Divinity School in the fall.

HENRY AUGUSTUS PERKINS, JR. Engineer, television components section, General Electric Company, Electronics Park, Syracuse, N.Y.; residence, 105 Lea Lane, Syracuse 6.

From 1927 to 1930 Perkins worked in the traffic department of the New York Telephone Company. He attended the Columbia University School of Engineering for the next three years, receiving the degree of B.S. in 1932 and that of E.E. the following year; he was awarded the Illig Medal. He was an electrical engineer with Fleetwings, Inc., airplane manufacturers, during 1933-34 and an instructor in the industrial engineering department of the Newark College of Engineering during 1936-37. Since February, 1942, he has been with General Electric and is now an engineer in the television components section of the electronics department—receiver division.

Perkins mentions that part of his training as a television engineer was received at the R.C.A. Institute in New York and that he has designed radio receivers and radar equipment and, while with Fleetwings, Inc., where he was in charge of all electrical work, designed spot-welding equipment. He formerly wrote editorials for the Foreign Language Information Service in New York which were published in the foreign language press of the United States (9,000,000 readers). He is serving on the committee on definitions of the Institute of Radio Engineers. Perkins is unmarried.

"I have traveled a good deal," he says, "and enjoyed one trip to Europe after graduation in 1926, where I joined Hal Pulver and Ken Baxter. That included Portugal, Spain, France, Andorra (!), Switzerland, and Italy. Since then I have traveled all over Canada, including the northwest territories, and to Cuba, Costa Rica, Panama, and Mexico (two trips). Have made several trips to the West and seen Grand, Bryce, and Zion cañons, Yellowstone Park, Glacier Park, Yosemite, Black Hills, Crater Lake, Mt. Rainier, Estes Park, Mesa Verde National Park, etc. I am very fond of the West, especially the mountains and the desert country.

"My hobbies include color photography and oil painting. I am fond of outdoor activities, like swimming, walking, mountain climbing (three ascents in the Alps), sailing, fishing, hunting. I like to drive a car and have made several trips to Florida (from New York) and others to the West. Also tinker around the car—and repair or tune it up myself often. An indoor interest is dancing. I became interested in square dancing in 1936 and have enjoyed it a lot ever since. [We hope he and Dan Allen have a chance to compare notes at Reunion.] Also have done folk dancing with Michael Herman's group, and others, in New York City. Made a few professional (paid) appearances in 1937-38, in several amateur shows, and some night clubs (one-night stands). This involved a stage tango, tap dancing, and a Spanish tarantella. I became interested in folk singing and took lessons for two years. I built and enjoyed operating one of the first 2,000 television receivers in New York City (1939-40).

"I have maintained a keen interest in business and the stock market and have made a quite detailed study of the latter, with some periods of success."

He added that one of his oil paintings was exhibited for two months in a museum and a library exhibit in Syracuse (1950), one of his photographic portraits was exhibited for a month in a store window in Syracuse (1949), and that he won second prize in a vacation photograph contest sponsored by General Electric in Bridgeport (1947).

EDWIN WRIGHT PETERSON. Agent, The Travelers Insurance Company; address, care Alexander & Baldwin, Ltd., Box 3440, Honolulu 1, Hawaii; residence, 2881 Pacific Heights Road, Honolulu.

Peterson writes: "Being connected with an audit firm at first, I found the work uninteresting, so changed my occupation to sales work with a lumber and building firm; here, although I liked the type of work, due to certain conditions and slow-up from the 1929-33 Depression, I felt I could do better for myself by being in business on my own. Entering the life insurance business in January, 1936, it was tough going for a while, but in time has built into a reasonably profitable business and an extremely interesting and pleasant one, and I believe I have attained a reasonable amount of recognition in my own community.

"Social life has always been pleasant in the islands and I have many friends. In 1927 several classmates stopped off in the islands on their way around the world: Al Choate, Os Lord, Squidge Lord, Chan Goss, George Flinn, Charlie Peet; Peet returned some two years later with his bride on his honeymoon. During World War II I saw many classmates who were in the armed forces: 'Shorty' Clarke, Hank Rowell, Shad Osborne, and others. Charles Moore, Doctor of Philosophy, is the only other member of my Class who has made Hawaii his home for any length of time.

"There are a large number of Yale men in the islands, so there is a fairly active alumni association; for many years we held luncheon meetings once each month, but the interest has not been kept active with the newer or younger classes. There has always been a good turn-out for special events, such as the arrival or brief stay of prominent Yale figures such as Bob Kiphuth; we have had the great pleasure of seeing Bob several times in the islands since 1926.

"I made one pilgrimage back to New England and took time out to visit New Haven, my headquarters temporarily being in Hartford; this was in 1947. I saw several of my classmates throughout the East and visited New Haven during Easter week-end; most of the colleges were closed, but Delaney Kiphuth showed me around; I visited Mory's briefly, the Bowl, and other places which have changed more than those mentioned.

"I would like to get back to the Twenty-fifth, but will be unable to because my wife and I are expecting an addition to our family on or about the middle of May; we are rather anxious because one child, a boy, was stillborn in January of 1950. Everything appears to be in perfect order for the event.

"I will certainly be with you fellows in spirit and shall make every attempt to get back to some of the reunions to come, or at least visit those classmates I can on any business trip I might be taking during the coming years."

The lumber and building firm with which Peterson was connected from 1927 to 1936 was Lewers & Cooke, Ltd. He was with the B. F. Dillingham Company, insurance agents, from 1936 to 1941 and has since been associated with Alexander & Baldwin, Ltd., general agent for The Travelers Insurance Company of Hartford. He was manager of the life department from 1941 to 1949 and has since been an agent. He has been a member of the Life Underwriters Association of Hawaii since 1936, serving as its secretary in 1938 and as president since 1950, and from 1941 to 1949 was also a member of the Life Managers Association of Hawaii, holding the office of president in 1943. Peterson has completed special studies in various fields of life insurance underwriting besides the home office courses, including "research and review" and the life underwriters training council courses. He was a member of the Honolulu Police Department Reserve from 1942 to 1946 and during the war was also in the Business Men's Training Corps. He served as a scoutmaster for the Boy Scouts from 1928 to 1930 and for some years was a solicitor in the Community Chest drives. He describes himself as an amateur musician—not performer or actor.

He was first married July 21, 1931, in San Antonio, Texas, to Leroy Brown, daughter of Hal and Bel Denman Brown. They were divorced the following November. His second marriage, to Ruth Short Brandt, of San Francisco, daughter of George and Kathryn Short, took place in Honolulu on February 1, 1939. They were divorced in 1944. On July 15, 1947, Peterson was married in Honolulu to Dora Martha Silver, daughter of Jiles E. and Nettie Hunt Silver.

BASIL B. PETROV. Address, 440 East 23d Street, New York 10, N.Y.

GEORGE WILSON PIERSON. Larned professor of history, Yale University; mailing address, 1321 Yale Station; residence, Red Cottage, Ives Street, Mt. Carmel, Conn.

Pierson writes: "After graduation I stayed on at Yale and have since been studying, teaching, and trying to write. It has taken all the time there was to learn just a little of what it is to be a scholar. Such a life has for landmarks a few courses taught, a few articles and books.

"In 1933 I began to give a course on the foreign contacts of the American people, that is, the cultural relations of American civilization rather than the diplomatic relations of the American state. From 1930 to 1938 I worked on Tocqueville and Beaumont in America (Oxford, New York, 1938)—a study of the background of Alexis de Tocqueville's Democracy in America. This took me to France for three summers and into the affectionate circle of two families from the old nobility of the provinces, an unforgettable experience. Next came a venture in reinterpreting the American past through a criticism of the 'frontier hypothesis' of Frederick Jackson Turner. This great and influential interpretation attributes an exaggerated importance to our frontier experiences in converting us from Europeans into Americans.

"The war then drew some of us, not into uniform but into a struggle to preserve what a university must preserve, or itself lose its mission. With me this took the form of an intense concern for liberal education, and for the defense of the liberal arts: in the training of future soldiers no less than for noncombatants. This proved a trying, difficult, disappointed cause, ignored by too many. Yet the concern of the best colleges for a better liberal or 'general' education after the war testifies to the faith of those who stayed at the academic plough during the crisis. The best of what we have now did not come back from the camps or the government offices, but grew right out of the trials of those left behind. I am proud to have had even a small part in the making of the new Yale curriculum under Dean DeVane.

"Meanwhile the opportunity had been offered to undertake a long range history of Yale University, looking towards 1951, so I am now finishing two books, dealing mainly with Yale College since the Civil War. Whether it will be possible to complete the modern story with a companion volume on the modern University, I do not know. I am only sure that a great university is a subject to challenge the abilities and understanding of greater writers than myself.

"Living in such a university, studying its past, one grows to see things we as undergraduates hardly dreamed about. We knew that a part of Yale's greatness lay in men: in great teachers. But 'teaching' we defined perhaps a little crudely. We liked the spectacular and the brilliant. Being a showy Class ourselves, we rewarded showiness on the platform. To live here and enter the faculty is to learn how much that is quiet can also be wonderful. In particular I value the friendships and companionship of the Fellows of my college. Talking with scientists, art historians, bone-diggers, musicians, collectors, metallurgists, librarians, scholars of government or war or disease, is to walk abroad every day of one's life.

"For ten years after graduation I remained single and lived the life of an instructor, conscientiously devoted to teaching, dining, dancing, and bridge. Then I had the luck to make a very happy marriage with Mary Laetitia Verdery, of New Canaan. Letty and I now have two daughters, Norah and Laetitia Deems, who take a dim view of some of father's ideas, and may yet graduate from Yale if the invasion of women, which has infiltrated the rest of the University, penetrates soon enough into Yale College. Co-education, whether disguised or admitted, will be with us sooner or later, without question."

Pierson took his Ph.D. at Yale in 1933, receiving the John Addison Porter Prize for his thesis on "Two Frenchmen in America" which was later enlarged into the book he mentioned above. He was an instructor in English during 1926-27 and in history during 1929-30 and again from 1933 to 1936, when he was promoted to assistant professor. He was advanced to associate professor of history in 1939, to a full professorship in 1944, and was appointed to the Larned Chair two years later. He served as an Executive Fellow of Davenport College under Emerson Tuttle for nine years and as chairman of the Fellows briefly after the latter's death. He is a member of a number of historical societies and has published articles and reviews on a variety of subjects; among these are a "A New Madison Manuscript Relating to the Federal Convention of 1787" (American Historical Review, October, 1930), a record of the Fellows of Davenport College, a "faintly humorous" history of a summer colony on the south shore of Long Island, and four articles on the frontier theory of American history. He is a joint contributor to The Modern University (Cornell University Press, 1950), with an essay on "American Universities in the Nineteenth Century: the Formative Period."

Mrs. Pierson is the daughter of Marion Jackson and Eleanor Hearn Simmonds Verdery. They were married in New York City, September 10, 1936. Their daughters were both born in New Haven, Norah on June 14, 1940, and Laetitia Deems on January 12, 1943.

LEWIS EUGENE PIERSON, JR. Address, Westhampton Beach, N.Y.

GIFFORD PINCHOT, 2D. Address, Apartado 38, Legunas 210, Havana, Cuba.

JAMES CONE PINE. Head, History Department, Gilman School, Baltimore 10, Md.; residence, 5616 Boxbill Lane, Baltimore 10.

From 1926 to 1929 Pine worked in the traffic department of the Southern Railway. He has since been at the Gilman School and has been head of the History Department since September, 1940. He is a deacon of the Roland Park Presbyterian Church.

Pine's marriage to Elizabeth Kent Heiner, daughter of Gordon Graham and Elizabeth Kent Heiner, took place in Baltimore on July 26, 1940. They have two sons: Frank Woodworth, born May 17, 1941, and Robert Graham, born January 11, 1946, both in Baltimore.

MATTHIAS PLUM. Partner, Breed, Abbott & Morgan, lawyers, 15 Broad Street, New York 5, N.Y.; residence, 136 East 79th Street, New York 21.

Plum received the degree of LL.B. at Harvard in 1929 and has since been associated with Breed, Abbott & Morgan. He is a director of Arkell & Smiths, Exomet, Inc., the Ritter Company, Inc., the United Board & Carton Corporation, Greenwich House, and the National Audubon Society and for many years has been a director and secretary of the United Hospital Fund of New York. He is a member of the American and New York State Bar associations, the Association of the Bar of the City of New York, the Racquet and Tennis Club, the Union League Club, and the Yale Club.

On November 14, 1932, he was married in New York to Bertha Andrews Rainey, daughter of Roy A. and Bertha Andrews Rainey. Their oldest son, Matthias, Jr., is in the Class of 1952 at St. Paul's School. He was born on August 29, 1933, in New York City. The other children were born there also, Roy Rainey on May 13, 1937, Patricia Grace on June 9, 1940, and Samuel Andrews on May 15, 1944.

"Have had a lot of fun over the years and look forward to more of it; and this applies to business, as well as to the family and our friends," Plum says. "Am looking forward to the day when I can settle down at Cape Cod, where we have a place at Chatham and where the family spends the summer months as well as an occasional week or two at Christmas and the Easter holidays. By the way, this ambition involves the ability to travel for a couple of months each year and accordingly its realization is subject very much to Uncle Sam and the Internal Revenue Bureau."

SEBASTIAN LAWRENCE POND. Engaged in dairy farming, Good Hill Farm, Woodbury, Conn.

Pond has been engaged in dairy farming since 1933, when he purchased Good Hill Farm. He was with the Keystone Aircraft Company from 1927 to 1929 and with American Airlines, Inc., for the next three years and during World War II was on active duty in the Air Transport Command with the rank of captain. He received the Distinguished Flying Cross for work done while flying in Russia in 1944.

His marriage to Marguerite C. Harkins, daughter of Thomas B. and Margaret Bell Harkins, took place in New York City on September 23, 1929. Her home was formerly in Waterbury, Conn. The Ponds have three children, all of whom were born in Cambridge, Mass., Nancy L. on September 25, 1930, Nathan G. on July 21, 1932, and J. Lawrence on December 28, 1936. Nancy graduated from St. Margaret's School in 1948. Nathan entered the Freshman Class at Cornell last fall from The Choate School.

CHARLES GRAYDON POORE. Co-editor, Books of The Times; business address, New York Times, Times Square, New York, N.Y.; residence, 223 East 49th Street, New York 17.

In his capacity as co-editor of the Books of The Times and chief book critic of Harper's Magazine, Poore has over the years written many penetrating and interesting reviews of current books and articles on writing in general. He has contributed other articles to Harper's and also to the Yale Review and other magazines. His biography, Goya, was published by Scribners in 1938, and he's "always planning to write 'My Three Years without MacArthur.' " He is on the publications committee of the Yale University Council and on the New York Yale Club Council and the American Newspaper Guild Council and belongs also to the Century Club.

Poore, who was in the Army from 1942 to 1945, had twenty-eight months of service overseas with AFHQ and SHAEF in Africa, the Mediterranean, and Europe. In 1945 he was awarded the Croix de Guerre, and at the time of his release from service he ranked as a major.

His marriage to Mary Elizabeth Carter, daughter of Charles Gibbs Carter, Yale '91, and Mary Elizabeth McBride Carter, took place January 11, 1930, in New York. Their son, Charles Graydon, 3d, who was born March 27, 1931, and who prepared for college at Andover, is now at Harvard, and their daughter, Susan Chapman, born April 27, 1935, is at the Friends Seminary in New York.

Poore's concluding note: "Very fond of hunting wild asparagus in Cham-bord."—[Yoicks!]

HENRY CODMAN POTTER. Free-lance motion picture director and stage director; residence, 193 North Carmelina Avenue, Los Angeles 49, Calif.

"Things were at an impasse when I graduated," Potter says. "My father said Wall Street (in something called international banking, remember?). I plumbed for the theatre. So I went into international banking.

"London for two months, and I came down with acute appendicitis, which proved my point. Returned to America, enrolled in Baker's School for Aspiring Dramatists, and got happily married.

"Thought I was going to be a dramatist—turned out to be a director. Thought I was going to be Dove of Peace between George Pierce Baker and Monty Woolley—turned out to be Grain of Wheat between Millstones. Marriage and the theatre went much better.

"Travels: Los Angeles is home plate, with a certain amount of shuttling between home and New York, London, and Paris. Couple of trips to Mexico—caught a 350-pound black marlin off Acapulco which was a big thrill, photo on request.

"Recreations: Week-end tennis all year round (adv.); about 5,000 hours of flying (none to speak of since the war and not so damn recreative at that, looking back on it). Between pictures I work with enthusiasm in my wood-working shop; pleasurable, but no Chippendale he.

"Special interests: my job. It has its drawbacks, but sometimes I'm good at it, and it's never dull.

"Directorial satisfaction: plays I've done like 'Double Door,' William Bolitho's 'Overture,' 'Kind Lady,' 'A Bell For Adano,' Maxwell Anderson's 'Anne of The Thousand Days'; and the motion pictures, 'Beloved Enemy,' 'The Story of Vernon and Irene Castle,' 'Mr. Lucky,' 'The Farmer's Daughter,' and 'Mr. Blandings Builds His Dream House'—of all of which I am probably immoderately proud. Also, I am somewhat smug about being the only character in the New York theatre world not mentioned in Joe Reed's indictment of same, The Curtain Falls. Probably because my advice to him was not to raise it.

"Regrets, aside from the usual dissatisfaction with personal shortcomings:

"(1) A special sigh for an inoffensive little comedy, my first New York production which opened on the night the market crashed in '29. The coincidence may have nothing to do with it, but it died in four performances and its epitaph is the heading of the Herald Trib's review: 'A New Low.'

"(2) Eheu fugaces (ah there, Professor Rowell), we wish we could spend more time in the East.

"(3) Work has kept me from getting to any and all reunions—so far. I am hoping for a break on the occasion of our Twenty-fifth."

Some supplementary data:

"1927—Co-founder (director and co-manager-producer) of summer stock theatre, the Hampton Players, at Southampton, Long Island (this makes me one of the grandfathers of the Straw Hat Circuit). Labored in the vineyard every summer for eight years. Directed about thirty plays for them.

"1928—Assistant stage manager and stage manager for New York Theatre Guild and other New York firms: 1929—General production assistant for Bela Blau, Inc., and others; 1931—Some acting and stage managing, then directing, then director and co-producer for Potter & Haight (until 1934); 1934—In June came to Hollywood for Samuel Goldwyn and have been legal-resided here ever since, except during war years. Have been under contract to or on free-lance one-picture deals for Samuel Goldwyn, Paramount, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Universal, R-K-O, 20th Century-Fox. Stage employment now and then, courtesy of Leland Hayward.

"Have stage managed and/or acted in eight New York shows, the first of which was O'Neill's 'Marco Millions' (1928). Have directed ten New York productions and have directed twenty motion pictures and still at it. Co-author 'Double Door,' 1932 New York dramatic success (thank God), and still making a buck.

"1941—American Red Cross. Organized and set up Los Angeles Blood Bank; 1940-41—Civilian instrument (blind flight) flight instructor to ferry pilots flying Lockheed Hudsons to British, part-time.

"1941-42—Civilian flight instructor, R.A.F. Flying Training School No. 4, Falcon Field, Mesa, Ariz.—primary, basic, and advanced phases. Also simultaneously served as superintendent of operations for nine months at this field. Fondest memory: instructing night landings from back seat of an AT-6.

"1942-August, 1944—Civilian airline pilot (captain's rating). Flew Army Air Force cargo all over the U.S. West Coast for the Air Transport Command, Airline Contract Branch (under the weather and over the High Sierras department). Fondest memory: dead end cañons. Intrepid birdmen we."

Potter has been a member of the board of the Screen Directors Guild of America since 1950 and belongs also to the Dramatists Guild. His marriage to Lucilla Anne Wylie, daughter of Robert Hawthorne Wylie, Yale '83, and Belle G. Mulford Wylie, of New York City, took place at Quogue, N.Y.,

September 25, 1926. Their children are: John Daniel, born October 11, 1927, in New York, Robert Alonzo on December 28, 1934, also in New York, and Earl Wylie on August 14, 1943 in Los Angeles. John received a B.A. at Pomona in 1950 and is at present a pre-medical student at Western Reserve. Robert goes to the Webb School in Claremont.

HOLLAND POTTER. Engaged in farming, Spring Cove Farm, Centreville, Md.

Potter has been engaged in farming in Centreville for some years. His marriage to Virginia Bartlett, daughter of William H. and Virginia Millard Bartlett, took place in Santa Barbara, Calif., on December 19, 1931. They have a son, William Bartlett, who was born in Washington, D.C., on January 4, 1938.

FREDERIC AUGUSTUS POTTS. President, Philadelphia National Bank, Philadelphia 1, Pa.; residence, Skippack Pike, Whitemarsh, Pa.

Potts was with Dominick & Dominick in New York for two years after graduation. On July 1, 1928, he was elected a partner in J. W. Davis & Company, members of the New York Stock Exchange, and remained in this connection until May, 1941. Since then he has been with the Philadelphia National Bank, of which he became vice-president in December, 1941, and president six years later. During the period from 1941 to 1943 Potts took evening courses at the Wharton School of Finance. He is a director of the Baldwin Locomotive Works of Philadelphia and the Pullman Company of Chicago and a member of the board of managers of the Western Savings Fund Society of Philadelphia, the board of directors of the Children's Hospital, and the governing board of the Greater Philadelphia Movement. He is a trustee of St. Mark's School, where he prepared for college, and belongs to the Yale Club of Philadelphia, the Union League, and the Philadelphia Club.

On September 11, 1930, he was married in Burlingame, Calif., to Alice Helen Eastland, daughter of Thomas Butler and Helen Wagner Eastland. Her home was formerly in San Francisco. They have three children, all of whom were born in New York, Alice B. on April 30, 1933, Nancy E. on August 1, 1934, and Frederic A., Jr., on July 27, 1937. Alice is a Senior at Westover, Nancy is in the Class of 1952 at Miss Porter's School, Farmington, and Frederic, Jr., is in the same class at the Indian Mountain School, Lakeville, Conn.

Potts writes: "Prior to moving to Philadelphia, my hobby of dairy farming, which I pursued for six years, nearly caused my then vocation of investment banking to be discarded for the milk business. In retrospect, there are no complaints from me that the change wasn't carried out.

"Of course, the mileage one covers in the banking business is colossal, and in my case there is no exception. My most recent trip, in the spring of 1950, brought me to England, Scandinavia, and Europe.

"Perhaps my most pleasant experience during these twenty-five years since graduation has been the frequent contacts with the Class of 1926 through the Alumni Fund. The generous support and friendly quips received through the mail and otherwise turned what might have been a hardship into a most agreeable task."

BURLYE BLACKSTONE POUNCEY. President, Pouncey & Shaw, Inc., mortgage brokers, 135 East 44th Street, New York 17, N.Y.; residence, Glenwood Road, Tenafly, N.J.

Until 1946 Pouncey was mortgage officer of the Guardian Life Insurance Company of America and during the next four years was independently engaged in the mortgage brokerage business. He has been president of Pouncey & Shaw, Inc., since 1950 and is also acting as a special consultant on housing and property financing for a varied clientele. During the war Pouncey was vice-chairman of the Tenafly branch of the American Red Cross and organized and became chairman of the blood bank. He served as chairman of the Board of Adjustment for the Borough of Tenafly during 1946 and 1947, was vice-president of the Fathers' Association of the Englewood School for Boys during 1950-51, and is currently vice-president of the Yale Alumni Association of Bergen County.

He was married in Jersey City on June 24, 1933, to Lillian Palmer Church Older Erickson, of San Francisco, daughter of Frank Egbert and Bertha Mabel Salt Older. Their son, Burlye Blackstone, Jr., who was born in Englewood, August 4, 1934, is preparing for college at the Englewood School for Boys. Pouncey has adopted his wife's daughter by her first marriage—Charlotte Elisabeth Pouncey, born May 3, 1927, in San Francisco. She graduated from the Dwight School for Girls in Englewood in 1946 and from Southern Seminary Junior College two years later.

IRVING ELY PRESS. Vice-president, J. Press, Inc. (retail men's wear), 341 Madison Avenue, New York 17, N.Y.; residence, 190 Woodside Drive, Hewlett Bay Park, Hewlett, N.Y.

Press received the degree of LL.B. at Yale in 1928. He was admitted to the Connecticut Bar that year and to the New York Bar in 1929, but was engaged in practice for two years only—first in Connecticut and later in New York. Since 1931 he has been vice-president of J. Press, Inc. From August, 1942, until April, 1946, Press served in the Army, his highest rank being captain. He was awarded a citation and received the Army commendation ribbon.

He was married on April 27, 1941, in New York City to Florence C. Mandel, daughter of Max and Dora Katz Mandel. They have two sons, both of whom were born in New York, Thomas Jay on January 20, 1945, and Michael Sheldon on October 30, 1948.

GEORGE E. PROBERT, JR. Divisional merchandise manager, Hahne & Company (department store), Newark, N.J.; residence, 228 West South Orange Avenue, South Orange, N.J.

Probert has held the position of divisional merchandise manager with Hahne & Company since September, 1944. He was in the sales department of the Quaker Oats Company for a time after graduation and then went into merchandising as a buyer with L. Bamberger & Company. He belongs to the Maplewood Country Club and the Orange Lawn Tennis Club. Hobbies: "My annual salmon fishing trip to Maine—and it's fly casting; golfing in the family foursome—usually a week-end affair."

The other members of the foursome are: Mrs. Probert (Ethel Loring Whitford, daughter of Edward Dwight and Edith Loring Whitford), their daughter, Penelope, born May 22, 1933, and son, Edward W., born May 27, 1936. The Proberts were married in Boston on March 18, 1929, and the children were both born in East Orange. Penelope is a Senior at the Beard School in Orange and Edward a Freshman at the Pingry School.

HENRY HULL PULVER. Address, 312 Jackson Avenue, Glencoe, Ill.

ALBERT GEORGE PURDUE. President and treasurer, Fluid Systems, Inc. (specialty engineering), 1881 Dixwell Avenue, New Haven 14, Conn.; residence, Deer Run Road, Woodbridge, Conn.

Purdue has been president and treasurer of Fluid Systems, Inc., since 1945. His marriage to Christine Meehan, of New York City, took place in 1933 in New Haven, where their son, Peter B., was born on November 16, 1938.

MAURICE JAMES QUINLAN. Professor of English, College of St. Thomas, St. Paul, Minn.; residence, 98 Cambridge Street, St. Paul.

Quinlan, who took his M.A. at Columbia in 1929 and his Ph.D. in 1941, has been a professor of English at the College of St. Thomas since 1949, his field of specialization being English literature of the eighteenth century. He writes: "I have taught English at Cooper Union, Dartmouth, and Lehigh and have been a visiting lecturer at Ohio State and the University of Minnesota. During the war I was a field representative for the O.P.A. in Connecticut (yes, Chester Bowles was my boss), and later I worked in personnel and labor relations for the New Departure Division of General Motors in Bristol, Conn.

"I spent the summers of 1930 and 1936 in England and had a whole year there in 1937-38, when Columbia University granted me a fellowship to do research on the change from the outspoken eighteenth century to the prudish taciturnity of the Victorian period. You will find the answer in my book, Victorian Prelude. A few copies left—cheap at four dollars.

"When I was in New England, I used to ski. I once came down the Nose Dive on Mt. Mansfield—riding a toboggan with a broken leg. But the flat terrain of Minnesota, a bulging waistline, and stiffening knees have caused me to abandon skiing for bridge.

"My chief satisfaction is that I have never been tapped for A.A. My chief ambition is the same as it was forty years ago—to be a fireman. My chief regret is that I can't seem to get over that hump of making the first million."

Quinlan's book, Victorian Prelude, was published by the Columbia University Press in 1941. He has written various articles and reviews for such quarterlies as English and Germanic Philology, the Review of Religion, the Review of English Studies, and the Pennsylvania Magazine of History and Biography. He is a member of the Modern Language Association and the American Association of University Professors. He is not married.

VICTOR ALEXANDER RAPPORT. Dean, College of Liberal Arts, Wayne University, Detroit, Mich.; residence, 2234 Chicago Boulevard, Detroit 6.

After taking his Ph.D. at Yale in 1930, Rapport was on the faculty of the University of Connecticut at Storrs until 1940, first as an assistant professor and then as associate professor. He was on active duty in the Army from September, 1940, until January, 1946, and since then has been dean of the College of Liberal Arts at Wayne University. He is the co-author of two bulletins published by the Storrs Agricultural Experiment Station and the author of numerous articles which have appeared in professional journals. Rapport has been chairman of the committee on pre-professional education of the American Conference of Academic Deans, and he is a member of the American Sociological Society, the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the National Education Association, the Engineering Society of Detroit, and the Michigan Linguistic Society. He served as president of the Consumers League of Connecticut from 1932 to 1940 and as a commissioner of the State Board of Milk Control from 1933 to 1935. For the past three years he has been chairman of the research committee of the Detroit Metropolitan Area Regional Planning Commission.

Rapport had been a member of the Organized Reserve from 1930 to 1940 (second lieutenant, then captain). Upon going on active duty in the fall of 1940, he was assigned to the Office of the Undersecretary of War. Until July, 1941, he served as liaison officer at the New York City Selective Service

Headquarters and from then until June, 1942, was with the Manpower Division in Washington. He was then assigned as chief of the Control Division at the headquarters of the Services of Supply in the E.T.O. From February, 1943, to February, 1945, he was executive and assistant G-4 (Logistics) at headquarters, S.O.S., and theatre headquarters and during the next four months was chief of the Procurement Division, G-4. He was promoted to major in February, 1942, and to lieutenant colonel nine months later. Rapport returned to the United States in August, 1945, and was released to civilian status the following January. He has remained in the Organized Reserve and at present is commandant of the Detroit Organized Reserve Corps Training Center. He has two battle stars and was awarded the Bronze Star Medal, the Legion of Merit, the French Croix de Guerre, with palm, and the Order of the British Empire.

On July 20, 1935, he was married in Staten Island, N.Y., to Anne Kennedy. Mrs. Rapport, who is the daughter of Ernest and Anne Reid Kennedy, graduated from the Yale Law School in 1931. They have two children: Reid V., born in Hartford, Conn., November 2, 1939, and Anne Victoria, born at West Point, N.Y., on October 25, 1942.

JEFFERSON FRANKLIN RAY, JR. Director, program review staff, Special Mission to Korea, Economic Coöperation Administration, 800 Connecticut Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C.; residence, 3519 Quebec Street, N.W., Washington 16.

From Ray: "They say the child is father to the man. The silver span of my personal retrospect from 1951 to 1926 well illustrates the adage. My precocious enrollment in Yale College as a Sophomore of eighteen years followed a rootless and uncalm childhood of oscillation with my missionary parents between the Orient and the southern United States. Yale was the ninth institution of learning to receive me, and after only eight mostly broken years of formal preparation, which included a Freshman year at Vanderbilt in Tennessee. At Yale I found my first calm and took root after a fashion, making friends both of the town and of the gown.

"The first phase of my twenty-five years since graduation lasted eight years to 1934 and was essentially a prolongation of shelter under the elms: first, in post-graduate study [1926-29] and later in financial research and other chores for a wealthy and kindly New Haven banker whose fortune rode securely through the Great Depression with a rising income which he shared with his staff. But security palled and inbred wanderlust would out; I left New Haven in 1934 and have only rarely revisited the city.

"Through a shorter second phase from 1934 to 1940 my interests and activities were along the New York-Washington axis, divided almost equally between a round of exciting administrative posts in the New Deal's controversial public relief and reëmployment program and an almost as nerve-wrecking series of investment counseling adventures in Wall Street. The rosy light of memory tells me that my New Deal bosses thought me a curious strayed conservative whose analytical training was useful in engineering the details of the brave new world; my Wall Street chiefs felt that the radical quirk revealed in my government service could sometimes help them guess what the madmen in Washington might do next. I only remember that I was not fully happy in either of these domestic pastures.

"The approach of war in early 1941 resolved my personal schizophrenia in favor of the third career which I have since pursued through war, reconstruction, and cold war, as a handyman in American foreign relations with the Far East. I cannot point to much in results; on the contrary, American relations with each of the three countries I have come to know best—China Korea, and India—could hardly be much worse as this is written. In both modesty and self-defense, I must disclaim full responsibility for the current unhappy state of affairs in Asia.

"In selfish terms, however, I have found satisfaction in extensive travels through and beyond the varied scenes of my childhood, in friends of all hues in many lands, in lessons learned which I hope to have a continuing opportunity to try to apply in the service of my country and in the quest of happier American-Asiatic relations in a happier world somehow sometime again at peace with itself."

In the period from 1934 to 1937 Ray was connected both with federal and New York City municipal relief agencies. His Wall Street "chiefs" (1937-41) were first Young & Ottley, Inc., and then Delafield & Delafield. His government jobs have included the following: assistant administrator, Lend-Lease Administration, 1943—; special assistant to the American Ambassador to China, 1942-45; member, U.S. Delegation to Far Eastern Commission, 1948-49; economic commissioner and attaché of Embassy, Seoul, Korea, 1949-50. He was appointed director of the program review staff of the Special Mission to Korea in March, 1949. Ray is a trustee of four private trusts and a member of the Institute of Pacific Relations and the Far Eastern Association. His monograph, UNRRA in China, was published by the Institute of Pacific Relations in 1947. He has also had articles in the Far Eastern Survey, the Voice of Korea, the Educational Record, and the publication of the Foreign Policy Association.

He was first married August 19, 1934, in Elkridge, Md., to Mary Sharretts Hamman, daughter of Louis and Mary Sharretts Hamman, of New York City. They were divorced in 1945. On July 6, 1946, he was married in Shanghai to Hilda Austern Bretholtz, of New York. She is the daughter of Lester and Gertrude Phillipps Austern. Ray has four children: Jefferson Franklin, 3d, born May 24, 1937, in New York; Louis Hamman, born October 20, 1941, also in New York; Lester George Austern, born October 8, 1947, in Washington; and Gerda Winston Pettus, born April 25, 1950, in Seoul.

PAUL CHAPPELL RAYMOND. Vice-president, American National Bank & Trust Company of Chicago, 33 North LaSalle Street, Chicago 90, Ill.; residence, Golf, Ill.

Since January, 1949, Raymond has been vice-president of the American National Bank & Trust Company of Chicago, with which he becomes associated in April, 1933. He is a director of the National Casualty Company of Detroit and an instructor at the Northwestern University School of Commerce. He belongs to the University Club of Chicago and the Medinah (Ill.) Country Club.

Raymond's marriage to Martha Osgood, daughter of Dr. Luther J. Osgood and Margaret Hall Osgood, took place in Waukegan, Ill., on July 3, 1933. They have two children, both of whom were born in Evanston, Ill., Geoffrey Hall on August 15, 1938, and Wendy Osgood on June 21, 1943.

JOSEPH VERNER REED. Founder, The Triton Press, Inc., 601 West 26th Street, New York 1, N.Y., and owner, Triton Publications, 131 East 64th Street, New York 21; residence, Denbigh Farm, Quaker Ridge, Greenwich, Conn.

Reed was a cub reporter on the Chattanooga Times during 1927-28 and was with Brown Brothers Harriman & Company the following year. About that time he founded Macgowan & Reed, Inc., which presented during the next few years, Basil Sydney and Mary Ellis in "Children of Darkness," Jane Cowl in "Twelfth Night" and "Art and Mrs. Bottle," Leslie Banks and Nigel Bruce in "Lean Harvest" and "Springtime for Henry," and Edith Evans in "Lady with a Lamp." From 1936 to 1938 he was associated with Maurice Evans and Margaret Webster in theatrical production and in 1946 entered another field, when he founded and became a partner in Reed & Stevens, Inc.—wall decorations. In July, 1949, Reed founded The Triton Press, Inc., which is devoted to color reproduction by collotype—the photogelatin method of printing fine art and commercial subjects. Among their customers are the Metropolitan Museum of New York, the Museum of Modern Art, the Addison Gallery of American Art in Andover, and the Associated American Artists of New York. Triton Publications, which he also owns, was founded in February, 1950. This concern published and distributes fine art prints. During the period from May, 1942 to August, 1945 he was on active duty in the Army as a major in the Special Services Division.

Reed's book, The Curtain Falls, was published by Harcourt Brace in 1935. He is a director of the Hobe Sound (Fla.) Company, the parent company of the Jupiter Island Club at Hobe Sound, of which he and Mrs. Reed are co-managers. He is also a director of the Lighthouse of the New York Association for the Blind and the Greenwich Hospital (and a member of the corporation of the Greenwich Hospital Association and of the hospital building committee) and a member of the board of the Round Hill Church in Greenwich. In 1949 he served as chairman of the Greenwich Community Chest. Reed belongs to the Union Club of New York, the Round Hill and Field clubs of Greenwich, and the Seminole Golf Club of Palm Beach.

Mrs. Reed, whose maiden name was Permelia Pryor, is the daughter of Samuel F. and Ruby Jacques Pryor. They were married in Greenwich on December 31, 1927. Their children were all born in New York, Laurel on July 23, 1929, Adrian Pryor on April 26, 1931, Nathaniel Pryor on July 22, 1933, Samuel Pryor on November 8, 1934, and Joseph Verner, Jr., on December 17, 1937. Laurel spent three years at Smith. Nathaniel and Samuel are now at Deerfield Academy; Adrian graduated there and is now in his second year at West Point.

JOHN GORDON REEL. Vice-president, Ernest T. Bower, Inc. (real estate and insurance), 2672 Broadway, New York, N.Y.; residence, 316 West 70th Street, New York.

Reel was an assistant manager with the New York Telephone Company for four years and then from 1930 to 1932 was assistant service engineer with the Foster Wheeler Corporation. During 1932-33 he was engaged in New York City relief fund raising activities—before Roosevelt and the New Deal.

Upon graduating from Yale, he had been commissioned as a second lieutenant in the Field Artillery Reserve and from 1933 to 1937 was in the Army as a C.C.C. camp commander. Since 1939 he has been with Ernest T. Bower, Inc., with time out for Army duty from 1942 to 1946. He has been vice-president of the concern since June, 1950. Reel's entire W.W. II service was spent at the New York Port of Embarkation, where he eventually commanded several of its sub-installations ("no decorations other than mythical one to be awarded for successful completion of 2,000 missions on the B.M.T.") He was promoted to lieutenant colonel in the Transportation Corps in July, 1944.

Reel is a member of the General W. W. Atterbury Post of the American Legion and of the New York Yale Club. He was married on November 4, 1935, in Brooklyn, N.Y., to Roberta Orgill, daughter of Robert V. and Nellie Fox Orgill. Her home was formerly in Birmingham, Ala. They were divorced in 1947.

"The trouble is I have nothing to expand about," was Reel's comment when he came to that fatal No. 21 question. And then—"What the Class has here is no doubt its least distinguished member. I can lay claim to no great attainments. Some might be interested to know that so far I have not run afoul of the law and have stayed clear of jail, but I doubt it.

"Other than Yale, my fondest memories are those connected with twelve years of marriage to a wonderful girl and five guide trips to Europe after the war with opportunities to resist that wonderful Paris. Don't know which I love the more."

FREDERICK FRANKLIN REHBERGER. Member, Burke & Burke, lawyers, 72 Wall Street, New York, N.Y.; residence, 15 Shadow Lane, East Williston, N.Y.

Rehberger writes: "When I graduated from Yale, I went to Columbia Law School. I attended two summer sessions to speed up the painful process and graduated in February, 1929, with a reasonably decent record. Got a job almost immediately with a law firm in New York City, namely Burke & Burk, quite by accident. But it stuck, and I've been there ever since. I'd like to report a spectacular case or two, but no can do—instead a good deal of work and variety, including some for our classmates. No particular ambitions or hobbies in this field except to make enough money to retire.

"As for family life, I didn't get married for almost ten years and lived with my family in Brooklyn. Played a lot of baseball and did some traveling in the U.S.A., and generally had a good time with no particular hobbies and interests except sports, where I kept up an active interest. On April 4, 1936, I got married to Martha Halvorsen, of Brooklyn, where we lived a little over a year. We then moved to East Williston, a small town then and now, in suburban Long Island. We are raising a family of a girl and two boys, know a great many of our villagers and generally have a pleasant and easy existence. Like a lot of other fellows, I had hoped some day to travel some, but thus far a family and wars have prevented. I suppose my hobbies, if I can call them that, at the moment are my interest in local educational and community problems and affairs and a continuing interest in baseball. Recreations are golf, swimming, reading, dancing, seeing a show now and then, and hobnobbing with neighborhood gardeners."

Rehberger was admitted to the bar of the State of New York in November, 1929, and he is now also a member of the bars of the U.S. Supreme Court, the Court of Appeals, the District Courts of Southern and Eastern New York, and the Tax Court. He belongs to the New York State Bar Association and the New York County Lawyers Association, is a director of Damcker & Sellew, Inc., and has served on the Board of Zoning Appeals of the Village of East Williston and as a trustee of the Board of Education.

Mrs. Rehberger is the daughter of Simon C. and Christina Dickson Halvorsen. The two oldest children were born in Brooklyn, Linda on January 1, 1937, and Frederick F., 3d, on November 7, 1939. Edward H., the youngest, was born in Mineola, N.Y., on July 15, 1942.

ALEXANDER WOLCOTT REID. Washington representative, alemite division, Stewart-Warner Corporation (lubrication devices) of Chicago; business address, 1317 F Street, N.W., Washington, D.C.; residence, 2500 Q Street, N.W., Washington.

"I'm about due for the Army again," said Reid when he sent in his questionnaire last February. In World War II he was in service from November, 1942, to March, 1946, ranking as a major in the Ordnance Department. He has been with Stewart-Warner since 1926 and has been their Washington representative since September, 1950. Reid belongs to the Lake Shore Club of Chicago.

His marriage to Alice Dean, daughter of William and Henrietta Dean, took place in St. Paul, Minn., on August 6, 1929. Their daughter, Constance, who was born in Chicago on August 19, 1930, spent her Freshman year at Smith and is now a Junior at the University of Houston.

CLIFFORD WILLIAM REID. President, W. C. Reid & Company, Inc., lumber dealers, 40 Provost Street, Brooklyn, N.Y.; residence, 6 Burns Street, Forest Hills, N.Y.

Reid has been president of his company since October, 1944, and is also vice-president of the Gagetown Lumber Company, Ltd. He belongs to the West Side Tennis Club. His marriage to Jean Arthur, daughter of Leland P. and Agnes Thorne Arthur, took place in Evanston, Ill., on July 14, 1928.

JOSEPH AUGUSTINE REILLY. Address, 127 Alden Avenue, New Haven, Conn.

MAURICE RIEDER. Manager, Community Theatre (moving pictures), Fairfield, Conn.; residence, 54 Warwick Avenue, Bridgeport, Conn.

From 1928 to 1936 Rieder was in the brokerage business with White, Weld & Company in New York City. Since then he has been manager of the Community Theatre in Fairfield. His marriage to Barbara M. Calechman took place in New Haven in 1931. They have a daughter, Marjorie Ellen, who was born in New Haven in 1938.

WILLIAM CHARLES RILEY. Residence, 373 East Road, Bristol, Conn.

Riley reports: "Spent the year after graduation at Oxford University [studying English literature at Jesus College], with too much time out for doing up Paris and a side trip to Algiers City during the New Year holiday, the latter an education in itself. Like most of us, was caught with pants down on Black Friday, 1929, but spent what was left on a ten-day trip to Havana in January, 1930. March, 1931—three weeks' trip down the Windward and Leeward Islands, staying a week on Barbados, and made a serious attempt to lower the rum supply at each stop.

"Still a Black Republican and right now highly pleased at the defeat of that old advertiser, Chester Bowles. Also voted agin Roosevelt every time.

"To date still have twenty-nine teeth, most of my hair, pretty gray, have added ten pounds, all on the waistline, and am never insulted by an invitation to bend the elbow.

"Used to play a lot of golf, but haven't done so the past two or three years. In 1931, before they developed some real players, managed to stagger to championship of local club. Main recreation, plenty of reading on any and all subjects. Still a fan on football and baseball.

"Like every one, there are a few regrets over things left undone, but, having just been married three weeks ago for the first time, I'm naturally completely happy at present and expect to stay so. Though things look pretty rugged and gloomy at times throughout the world, I think I can say that, on the whole, I'm an optimist."

Riley was a stock trader and statistician with the brokerage firm of Goodwin, Beach & Riley in Hartford, Conn., from 1927 to 1932 and from 1940 to 1944 was president and treasurer of the Old Fort Restaurant, Inc., in Bristol. At present he gives some time to supervising hotel property and other real estate in Bristol. He is a member of the Chippanee Country and West End Athletic clubs of Bristol and "any and all pubs."

Mrs. Riley was Ann Cleveland Magill, daughter of Samuel Jackson and Mary Elizabeth Cleveland Magill, of Atlanta, Ga. They were married in Elkton, Md., on October 26, 1950.

PAUL DANIEL RITTER. President, Red Jacket Coal Corporation, bituminous coal miners, 115 East Rich Street, Columbus 15, Ohio; residence, 288 North Ardmore Road, Columbus 9.

Ritter graduated from the Columbia School of Journalism with the degree of Bachelor of Literature in 1927 and then went into newspaper work—with the Nashville Tennessean and the Columbus Citizen, as reporter and advertising salesman respectively. He sold coal with the Red Jacket Coal Sales Company, of which he is now a director and vice-president, for ten years beginning in January, 1930, and since December, 1945, has been president of the Red Jacket Coal Corporation. He is also vice-president and a director of the W. M. Ritter Lumber Company. He belongs to the Columbus Club and the Columbus Country Club.

On April 11, 1928, he married Alice Doran Shannon, daughter of Arthur Earle and Clara Lawler Shannon. Their marriage took place in Columbus, and the children were both born there, Alice Doran on December 30, 1928, and Paul Daniel, Jr., on December 28, 1930. Alice graduated from the Columbus School for Girls in 1946 and from Ogontz Junior College two years later and is now a Senior at Denison University. Paul, who is a member of the Class of 1953 at Princeton, prepared for college at Choate.

In conclusion, Ritter says, "Travels have been mostly in line of business—spent one year in Tennessee, six years in Michigan. Now go to mines in West Virginia practically every week.

"Recreations—golf, bowling (no good at either); hobby—stamp collecting.

"Ambition—to see kids through college and safely launched on sea of life, either in business, married, or both.

"Hope—to see some day the coal operators in a position where they can run their own business and meet 'Dogcatcher' John L. Lewis on equal footing. This will probably mean I should live to about age 140.

"Satisfactions—too numerous to mention, but chiefly the fact that life has given me a nice family and a decent living for them.

"Regret—my boy chose Princeton, but next to Yale I like it best!"

HENRY PIERCE ROBERTS. Director, management engineering staff, yards and docks supply office, U.S. Naval Station, Port Hueneme, Calif.; residence, 636 Robert Avenue, Oxnard, Calif.

It isn't surprising to have Roberts say, "After working for the Navy for ten years, I am slightly questionnaire happy, viewing them all with both uninterest and distaste." He adds, "However, for the record, my deepest ambition is to install a small machine shop in the garage for the building of model steam engines."

During the Thirties Roberts worked for printing establishments and commercial photographers and also conducted an independent photographic business. His first work with the Navy was in the shipping division at the Naval Air Station at Quonset Point, R. I., in 1941. Among their operations was the shipment of the first construction materials to Port Hueneme, where Roberts has been stationed since September, 1942, except for a brief period in 1945, when he was in Attleboro, Mass. He served as superintendent of Navy shipping at the Advanced Base Depot for a time and in March, 1946, became supervisor of the surplus material section. Later, after a brief tour of duty as supervisor of the station salvage yard, he was appointed material group supervisor, in charge of the storage and traffic divisions and the labor and equipment pool. In May, 1948, he became branch supervisor in management control at the yards and dock supply office and in January, 1950, was promoted to director of the management engineering staff.

Roberts was married on December 23, 1931, in Pawtucket, R.I., to Thelma J. Carpenter, daughter of Jesse A. and Ida M. Lees Carpenter. Her home was formerly in Cumberland, R.I.

ALEXANDER LAUGHLIN ROBINSON. Vice-president and secretary, National Electric Products Corporation, Box 897, Pittsburgh 30, Pa.; residence, Scaife Road, Sewickley, Pa.

Robinson, who has been with the National Electric Products Corporation since graduation, has been vice-president and secretary, as well as a director of the company, since April, 1934. He is on the board of directors of the Peoples First National Bank & Trust Company and is secretary and a trustee of the Sewickley Valley Hospital and secretary and a governor of the Allegheny Country Club.

His marriage to Martha Shields Brooks, daughter of Frank Faber Brooks, Yale '96 S., and Mary Leet Williams Brooks, took place in Sewickley on October 15, 1928. She formerly lived in Shields, Pa. They have three sons: Alexander Laughlin, Jr., born October 28, 1929; Frank Brooks, born October 5, 1931; and Thomas Shields, born April 28, 1940, all in Pittsburgh. The two oldest prepared for college at St. Paul's and are now at Yale, Alexander being a Junior and Brooks a Freshman.

NATHAN ROBINSON. Rent examiner, New York State Temporary Housing Rent Commission, 89-09 Sutphin Boulevard, Jamaica 2, N.Y.; residence, 103-26 68th Road, Forest Hills, N.Y.

For three years following his graduation from the Yale Law School and his admission to the Connecticut Bar in 1928, Robinson was engaged in the private practice of law in New Haven. He was admitted to the New York Bar in March, 1932, and subsequently practiced in New York until April, 1945, when he became rent attorney and rent examiner with the Office of Price Administration (later Office of Price Control, Office of Temporary Controls, and Office of the Housing Expediter). He continued in that connection for five years and since May, 1950, has been with the New York State Temporary Housing Rent Commission. An essay, "What are We Fighting For?" which he had previously broadcast in 1942 over Station WEVD, New York, was published in the January, 1943, issue of The Freeman. Robinson has been president of Branch 400-E of the Workman's Circle, New York City, since 1947. He belongs to the Men's Club of the Forest Hills Jewish Center.

On January 5, 1930, he was married in Brooklyn, N.Y., to Theresa Muriel Shradnik, daughter of Louis and Anna Rabinowitz Shradnik. Their daughter, Lois Priscilla, who was born on December 11, 1937, in New York City, is at the Stephen A. Halsey Junior High School in Forest Hills.

PAUL HAVILAND ROBINSON. With General Motors Acceptance Corporation, 1775 Broadway, New York 19, N.Y.; residence, 14 Hawthorne Avenue, Port Washington, N.Y.

Robinson writes: "Since 1935 I have been in charge of the leasing of office space for the accommodation of the 250-odd offices maintained by the General Motors Acceptance Corporation in the United States and Canada. I have been continuously with them since graduation and in the executive office since 1933. Prior to then I served in various capacities in the G.M.A.C. branches in Boston, Mexico City, and Jamaica, N.Y.

"Mine is the usual life of a typical suburbanite who by fortune and circumstance finds himself earning a living in New York City. With crossed fingers, I ride the Long Island Railroad twice a day, where I do some of my best sleeping, and most of my free hours are devoted to the many odd jobs which constantly face every owner of a small home in the country. The maintenance of it, gardening, etc., have enabled me to keep a slender figure and afford the necessary exercise, though through the fall and winter months I also bowl weekly (and weakly) in a league which we have in our community. Outside of choosing 1926 Ac as my Yale Class, the two best things I ever did were marry the girl whom I found with the help of Freddie Rehberger of our Class and buy our home here in Port Washington in 1941, when a dollar had some real value. We have enjoyed it more and more every day since and have no idea of ever leaving it. Fred lives not so far away, so is one of the few classmates I see fairly frequently, as well as my old roommate, Frank Lackey, for whom I stood up as best man and later (of course) served as godfather for three of his four fine and handsome children. Thus far I have not missed any of our reunions and hope to carry on with a perfect record—in spite of the fact, which I have never forgotten, that on our graduation day one Os Lord remarked that even then I was probably close to being Yale's oldest living graduate! Maybe I should challenge him now to a count of gray hairs.

"That about covers the situation, I guess. The years have passed by all too quickly, but there has been a lot of fun in them and we have had our share of troubles too. And that, after all, is Life—as Yale taught us to live it."

Robinson's marriage to Evelyn Pray Burns, daughter of Thomas Joseph and Julia Agnes Shea Burns, took place in Brooklyn, N.Y., on December 9, 1936. Their daughter, Julia Evelyn Pray, who was born in Brooklyn, August 7, 1938, is now in her first year of junior high in Port Washington and is looking forward to going away to school and college.

SAMUEL JOSEPH ROBINSON. Address, 148 Jefferson Avenue, Miami Beach, Fla.

EDWIN OSCAR ROBSON. President, Midland Industrial Finishes Company, manufacturers of enamels, resins, lacquers, and specialty finishes for production use, East Water Street, Waukegan, Ill.; residence, 228 Woodlawn Street, Hubbard Woods, Ill.

"I have been pursuing the paint industry since 1926," Robson tells us. "During this time I acquired a wife and two sons—the oldest is now a Junior at Yale, and the youngest, Kenneth, is graduating from the New Trier High School this coming spring (1951). He is turning his eyes towards New Haven. Hobbies are traveling, fishing, and golf."

Robson has been president of the Midland Industrial Finishes Company since 1943. Until 1940 he was with the Standard Varnish Works as vice-president and industrial sales manager of the Western Division.

He was married in Cleveland, Ohio, on July 1, 1929, to Elizabeth M. Stone, daughter of William and Alma Arnstein Stone. The older boy, John Edwin, was born in New York City on June 21, 1930, and the younger, Kenneth Stone, in Chicago on October 25, 1933.

ROLAND FRANCIS ROCK. Partner, Baxter & Rock, investment counsel, Continental American Building, Wilmington, Del.; residence, 604 West 19th Street, Wilmington.

After ten years in New York, Rock moved to Wilmington in 1936 to take a position with Laird & Company as a security analyst and investment adviser. He has been a partner in Baxter & Rock since January 1, 1945. During the first year after graduation he was with H. L. Doherty & Company—first with a training group and then as a statistician. He was a statistician with Paine Webber & Company from 1927 to 1929 and then went with Munds, Winslow & Potter as a statistician and stock market letter writer. He remained with them until the early part of 1936 and then had a brief connection with E. W. Clucas & Company as security analyst. From 1942 to 1945 Rock was a block warden in the civilian defense organization, and he also served as a bond salesman for all war loan drives. He has been chairman of the finance committee of the McCabe Memorial Methodist Church in Wilmington since 1949. He belongs to the New York Society of Security Analysts and the Bankers Club of New York.

He was married January 22, 1932, in New York, to Leona Elizabeth Newlander, daughter of Eugene Peter and Elizabeth Adelaide Uhlemann Newlander. Their daughter, Joyce Katharine, graduated from the Friends School in Wilmington in 1950 and is now a Freshman at Wellesley. She was born in New York on March 1, 1933.

AVERY ROCKEFELLER. Address, Box 558, Lake Avenue, Greenwich, Conn.

HAROLD ALBERT ROCKWELL. Vice-president, Outdoor Advertising, Inc., 60 East 42d Street, New York 17, N.Y.; residence, Harbor View, South Norwalk, Conn.

Rockwell became vice-president of his company in 1933. His marriage to Elizabeth Platt, daughter of Harry Hartshorn and Elizabeth Jarrold Platt, took place in New York City on January 5, 1929. Mrs. Rockwell's home was formerly in New Rochelle, N.Y. Their daughter, Elizabeth Susan, who was born on November 15, 1930, in New York, graduated from the Low-Heywood School in 1948 and is now a Junior at Connecticut College for Women. Their son, Fulton Platt, was born on October 31, 1932, also in New York. He entered the Freshman Class at Yale from Exeter in the fall of 1950.

FREDERICK ROE. Partner, Stein, Roe & Farnham, investment counsel, 135 South LaSalle Street, Chicago 3, Ill.; residence, 70 East Scott Street, Chicago 10.

Roe attended the Harvard Business School during the spring term of 1926. He then became associated with A. G. Becker & Company and continued with them until 1932, when he became a partner in Stein, Roe & Farnham, which was formed at that time. He is a director of the Stein, Roe & Farnham Fund, Inc. Roe was with the War Production Board from 1941 to 1944, serving as assistant executive secretary for two years and then as assistant to the operations vice-chairman. He belongs to the New York Society of Security Analysts, the Yale Club of New York, and the Lake Shore Country Club of Glencoe, Ill.

His marriage to Florence McGuire, daughter of Harry McGuire, took place in Washington, D.C., on April 3, 1944.

THOMAS WILSON ROGERS. Treasurer and active head, T. W. Rogers Company (department store), 274 Union Street, Lynn, Mass.; residence, 84 Ocean Avenue, Swampscott, Mass.

Since February, 1930, Rogers has been treasurer and active head of the T. W. Rogers Company, with which he became connected upon graduating from Yale. He is a trustee of the Rogers Realty Trust and the Lynn Five Cent

Savings Bank, a director and clerk of the Essex Trust Company, and a director of Modern Coffees, Inc. He belongs to the Tedesco Country Club, the Oxford Club of Lynn, and the Yale Clubs of New York and Boston.

"My travels have been about all in one direction," Rogers says, "because each March, for the last fifteen, I have watched the ball teams in Florida. My hope is to live long enough to see a Republican President again. I have no hobby, as such, and that can go under the heading of a regret, and my recreations are, in part, golf and cards (not to include canasta)."

On May 17, 1930, he was married in Portland, Maine, to Mary Pennell, daughter of Charles Albert and Hazel Cole Pennell. They have four children: Judith Rogers, born October 15, 1931, in Lynn, Polly on January 21, 1934, in Cambridge, Mass., Sally on April 25, 1937, also in Cambridge, and Thomas, Jr., on August 4, 1942, in Salem, Mass. Judith was in the Class of 1950 at Dana Hall and is now at Briarcliff. Polly is a Senior at the Swampscott High School.

REGINALD DEAN ROOT. Assistant football coach, University of Washington; residence, 7050 52d Avenue, N.E., Seattle 5, Wash.

Root, who has been assistant football coach at the University of Washington since January, 1948, has been engaged in coaching and teaching since graduation—at Yale, the National University of Mexico, the New Haven High School, The Taft School, and Cheshire Academy. He received an LL.B. at Yale in 1929 and a degree, in causa honoris, at the University of Mexico two years later.

Root's marriage to Mabel Evelyn Fritzell, daughter of Oscar T. and Hilma Johnson Fritzell, took place in LeRoy, N. Y., on June 30, 1938. Her home was formerly in New Haven. They have two sons: John Pierson, born on August 30, 1946, in New Haven, and David Merritt in Seattle on February 20, 1950.

RALPH LAWRENCE ROSE. Address, 5 Merrieles Road, Great Neck, N.Y.

EDWARD ROSENBERG, JR. President, Fashion Park, Inc., manufacturers of men's clothing, Rochester, N.Y.; residence, 1545 East Avenue, Rochester 10.

Rosenberg writes: "After getting out of school, I had the great fortune to travel often. Have made trips abroad over the years and occasional Mediterranean and Caribbean cruises. In the early years, this time was available because I was a salesman in a seasonal business and my vacations weren't too hard to manage. However, as I got along in business I found less and less time for myself. My summers were shorter and shorter. With Lake Ontario fifteen minutes from my office, I became a zealous sailor. In the Twenties I outgrew a couple of cruisers, finally turned to sailboats. In the Thirties I won a number of races in my class with 'Azure,' a 42-ft. Sparkman & Stephens yawl. I entered the Rochester race in 1949 and didn't come in last. My present yawl is large and comfortable, and except for a couple of two-week trips, I have evenings and week-ends to sail.

"In winter I maintain my U.S. Mint postage stamp collection and read and listen to radio. A gal is lonesome once in a while.

"My year-round hobby is color photography—lots of fun. I also enjoy watching the children and grandchildren of my friends grow up. Unfortunately, I haven't met the gal yet, but I haven't given up hope."

Rosenberg spent a year at the Harvard Business School and then joined Fashion Park, Inc., in the fall of 1927. The company, which makes Fashion Park and Stein Bloch clothes, has a wholly-owned retail subsidiary—Weber & Heilbroner, Inc., of New York City. Rosenberg was general sales manager for a time and then successively operations manager, assistant to the president, executive vice-president, and, since April, 1950, president. He is secretary of the Clothiers' Exchange of Rochester. He belongs to the Rochester Club, the Rochester Yacht Club, the Sodus Bay Yacht Club, and the Army and Navy Club of Washington.

He gives the following details of his service in World War II: "Went to the Philadelphia Quartermaster Depot in May, 1942. Became wool garments contracting officer. As first lieutenant, left Philadelphia after one year and was temporarily attached to headquarters, 3d Service Command, at Baltimore, Md., in supplies and services. Then with headquarters at Fort George G. Meade. Became C. and T. officer, maintenance branch. Was separated as a captain, January 1, 1946. Received Army Commendation Ribbon, December, 1945."

BERNARD ROSENMAN. Lawyer, 261 Broadway, New York 7, N.Y.; residence, 1664 New York Avenue, Brooklyn 10, N.Y.

Rosenman writes: "At an early age traveled through Europe from Russia. Am I glad we didn't miss the boat. Otherwise saw only New Haven and its environs until Mosey King took me on a trip to Montreal and Queens College, Ontario. I still remember how he wouldn't let me buy more than beans, dessert, and coffee out of our 6-buck meal allowance on the Pullman trip home. Those prices! And I retained my amateur status—irregardless (Brooklyn influence).

"Since college, I have done a little traveling, limited to the U.S.A. and Canada. I have had no desire to return to the place of my birth. Would probably have ended up in Siberia.

"For many years I was interested in Boys' Club work, Boy Scouts, and at camp as counselor and head counselor, with an interest in a camp in 1938. That year waded into real estate and again with partners, waded in too deeply. With the aid of a life preserver and a lot of struggling, finally made shore. Since then I have coupled my law with an interest in real estate matters.

"My children's only war records have been made in victories over their old man. The only time I lift my hands now is in self-defense, and even there I have discovered that speed in footwork, by increasing the distance between the enemy and yourself, is still good strategy. My hopes are to be able to send my two youngsters through Yale and see them have as swell a time as I did with my Class. After that I can go back to working for myself."

Rosenman received an LL.B. at Yale in 1928. He was admitted to the Connecticut Bar that year and subsequently worked with Judge William Koch as clerk and associate. Since his admission to the New York Bar in 1931 he has been practicing in Manhattan. Rosenman has served as a special assistant attorney general at election time and as to other activities, says, "In 1938 [after giving up his partnership in the children's camp] I ventured into the renovation and modernization of old houses with two partners. Within three months we had three houses, and within one month thereafter I was minus two partners and was left with three houses in various stages of renovation. Pulled out nicely in time. Should have continued with further operations then. Since then have made several real estate ventures with varying success. Learned an awful lot about what goes into a building, besides your blood. Served as officer of Knights of Pythias and upon all committees of the organization. Have been past chancellor for nine years and am now retired to an advisory capacity and pinochle player."

Rosenman's marriage to Theresa Harriet Marks, daughter of Harry H. and Bertha Truer Marks, took place in New Haven in 1937. Her home was formerly in Brooklyn, and their children were both born there, Mark H. on April 26, 1943, and Stephen D. on October 4, 1945.

HERBERT ARTHUR ROSENTHAL. Member, Schulist, Rosenthal, Roesch & Creadon, lawyers, 1078 Union Commerce Building, Cleveland 14, Ohio; residence, 16701 Fernway Road, Shaker Heights 20, Ohio.

Rosenthal writes: "After graduation I spent two and a half months traveling in Europe with John A. Sherman, Yale '27. Upon returning to this country, I intended to study law at Harvard, but due to an urgent request from my father that I look after a coal mine investment of his, I deferred my legal education. In September, 1927, I entered the Harvard Law School, graduating in 1930. I was admitted to the Ohio Bar in September, 1930, and immediately commenced practice with Simmons, DeWitt & Vilas. Charles Simmons and Malcolm Vilas were both Yale men. I left the firm in the spring of 1932 to open an office for myself. Since then I have been practicing with approximately the same persons I became associated with at that time. My law practice has been a very satisfying one. Although I do not specialize, the nature of my work is largely corporate, real estate, and wills and trusts.

"I have regularly spent a portion of my summers each year at my father's island in Georgian Bay, Ontario. Fishing at first held some interest, but commencing about 1935 was replaced by hunting, and I look forward every year to the fall season and bird and duck hunting. I acquired another hobby in 1938, when I purchased a Comet sailboat which I sailed week-ends at Pymatuning Lake. Due to restrictions on travel, as well as limited time, I sold the boat in 1942. I have not purchased another one since, but long to resume sailing.

"I remained a bachelor until 1939, when I met what I thought was 'the girl of my dreams.' The termination of that marriage is noted elsewhere. I have two swell boys as a result of my marriage. They are living with me and are great pals for me. I look forward to their becoming Yale men. They are good companions, and we often take trips together.

"During the war I took a job in defense work with the W. J. Schoenberger Company, but continued my law practice during the entire time. My average day was fourteen to sixteen hours long. The heavy schedule didn't impair my health; in fact, I thrived on it. The only bad feature of it was the little time I was able to devote to my home and family.

"I spent considerable time and effort during my post-college years in social and civic work. I became a group work volunteer leader in a settlement house in 1931 and spent about five years doing that. It was a very gratifying and profitable experience and education. I became a member of the board of trustees and an officer of that particular settlement house and have been on the board of trustees of a number of social agencies. Because of the heavy schedule of my work during the war, I gave up most of the positions with these agencies. I spent a few years in going through the chairs of the large B'nai B'rith Lodge in Cleveland. I am a past president and still a member of the board of trustees. In 1945 I became actively interested in the local American Jewish Committee chapter and became chairman of that and a member of the national executive committee. I am still very much interested in that movement.

"I am a member of the Oakwood Club and in spite of it I am a very poor golfer. My present handicap of 23 gives evidence of that. I like the game in a mild sort of way. My interest in it doesn't compare with my interest in hunting and a recently acquired hobby of ice skating, to which I devoted a great deal of time this past winter."

Rosenthal is secretary of Gordon Arcade, Inc., and secretary and a director of the Gordon Square Hotel Company and of the West 10th Apartment Company of Erie, Pa. He is a charter member and incorporator of the Suburban Temple of Cleveland and has served on the board of trustees since its inception in 1948. From 1934 to 1948 he was a trustee of the Cleveland Council of Educational Alliance—and for several years he was a principal member of the cast of the Cleveland City Club's Anvil Revue. He belongs to the American, Ohio State, Cuyahoga County, and Cleveland Bar associations.

He married Ruth Bonhard, daughter of Marcus and Anne Lepon Bonhard, in Cleveland, August 23, 1939; they were divorced in 1949. The boys were born in Cleveland, Herbert Arthur, Jr., on April 28, 1941, and Stuart Samuel on May 12, 1944.

CHARLES WALTON ROSS. JR. Executive director, Housing Authority of the City of Seattle; business address, 825 Yesler Way, Seattle 4, Wash.; residence, Twin Ravines, Poulsbo, Wash.

"The first ten years were spent pretty much in floundering about, searching for a purpose," Ross says. "Did considerable traveling during the period, here and abroad. With my removal from East to West Coast, Life with a capital began to shape. For the past ten years I've felt that I've been of some use to my fellow men in working in housing—better housing for the less stable, economically and socially, so that they can be given the little boost to their self-respect that often is all that's needed to bring constructive forces into play.

"For recreation, I live on Hood Canal, where I built (with suitable help) my own house and have plenty of room. I couldn't possibly live long enough to fulfill all the plans I have for developing the home place."

Ross may have been floundering about during the early period, but the process certainly sounds most interesting. During 1928-29 he was engaged in designing and making furniture. He attended the Columbia School of Architecture during 1930-31 and then for two years studied architecture, with specialization in community planning and housing, at Bauhaus, Dessau, and Berlin, Germany, with a lot of travel on the side. During 1933-34 he was studying and working with Henry Wright in community planning and housing, then became associated with the New York City Housing Authority as housing technician and later as director of the technical research department. Upon going to Washington State in 1939, he was for two years secretary, treasurer, and the principal stockholder in a small contracting firm and in 1941 joined the Seattle Housing Authority, of which he has been executive director since June, 1945. Ross, who is a member of the National Association of Housing Officials, was regional member of the federal-local relations committee in 1944, 1950, and 1951. He has been active in the Seattle Community Chest and Welfare Council, serving on the executive committee of the recreation division (1950) and the budget committee (1951). He belongs to the Rainier Club of Seattle.

Ross was first married in August, 1927, in Auburn, N.Y., to Nancy L. Wilson, of New York City. They were divorced in 1942. His second marriage, to Alice M. Presley Miller, daughter of Clyde W. and Ella May Smith Presley, took place in Seattle on November 7, 1942. They have two children: Merrilee Anne, born April 29, 1944, and Geoffrey Charles on May 15, 1946, both in Seattle.

HIRAM GOODRICH ROSS. President, H. W. Ross Lumber Company, 535 East 6th Street, Sioux Falls, S.Dak.; residence, 10 Riverview Heights, Sioux Falls.

"The 1929 stock market crash ruined any ideas of ever becoming a financial wizard, so since then my thoughts have been occupied in raising a family and trying to keep two steps ahead of the wolf," says Ross. He was with the new business department of the Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Company in Chicago from 1927 to 1933 and has since been with the H. W. Ross Lumber Company, of which he became president in February, 1945. The company has a line of lumber yards in Minnesota, South Dakota, and Iowa. Ross is a director of the National Retail Lumbermen's Association and of the Northwest Security National Bank & Trust Company of Sioux Falls and is serving as chairman of the Naval Reserve Advisory Council for South Dakota. During the war he was engaged in processing applicants for the Naval Reserve and V-12 programs as a member of the State Civilian Committee of the Naval Reserve Advisory Council.

He served as president of the Sioux Falls Chamber of Commerce during 1940-41, of the Sioux Falls Rotary Club during 1942-43, and of the Sioux Falls Associated Retailers in 1946, was secretary of the South Dakota Lumbermen's Association from 1937 to 1948, a director of the Northwestern Lumbermen's Association from 1945 to 1949, and during 1945-46 acted as state chairman for the National Yale Placement Service. He is a member of the Masons and the Elks.

Ross was married in Sioux Falls on October 14, 1926, to Margaret J. Koenig, daughter of William Koenig, Jr., and Otelia Glaesmer Koenig. They have two daughters, both of whom were born in Chicago, Ellen G. on November 6, 1928, and Jean K. on November 17, 1931. The older girl attended St. Mary's at Faribault, Minn., from 1944 to 1946, Mt. Vernon Junior College, Washington, D.C., the following year, and has since been at Northwestern University. Jean was at Ferry Hall, Lake Forest, Ill., from 1947 to 1950 and is now at Pine Manor Junior College.

HENRY THOMPSON ROWELL. Professor of Latin and chairman, Classics Department, Johns Hopkins University; residence, 244 West Lanvale Street, Baltimore 17, Md.

Rowell, who went to Johns Hopkins in 1940 as professor of Latin, has been chairman of the Classics Department for the past five years. He took his Ph.D. in the classics at Yale in 1933 after graduate work there and at the University of Munich. He was a scientific assistant at the excavations at Dura-Europas from 1929 to 1931 and taught at Yale for the next nine years, as an instructor in the classics until 1935 and subsequently as assistant professor of Latin. He has been professor-in-charge of the summer sessions at the American Academy in Rome since 1937 and a trustee of the academy since 1946. He has also taught in summer sessions at Columbia (1940) and the University of Chicago (1946) and for some years has served on the Mayor's Art Commission of the City of Baltimore. Rowell has been on the editorial board of the American Journal of Philology since 1940 and editor-in-chief since 1946. He has contributed articles on the Roman Army and Latin literature to professional periodicals and is the editor and revisor of Daily Life in Ancient Rome, published by the Yale University Press in 1940. A member of the Archeological Institute of America, he served as president of the Baltimore society from 1946 to 1949, during the same period being on the executive committee of the Atlantic States division of the Classical Association. He belongs also to the American Philological Association, the 14 West Hamilton Street Club of Baltimore, and the New York Yale Club.

Rowell served with the Corps of Military Police as major and lieutenant colonel from 1942 to 1945 and is now in the Inactive Reserve. His assignments included the following: director of instruction, Military Government Schools in North Africa; officer in charge of education, Rome Area Command; chief, education subcommission, Allied Commission for Italy; G-3 Philippine Civil Affairs Detachment; executive officer, Military Government Section, Headquarters, Middle Pacific. He has five battle stars, was awarded the Bronze Medal, and received the decoration of Cavaliere Ufficiale della Corona d'Italia.

Rowell was married in Paris, February 21, 1931, to Tanja Ramm, daughter of Carl Theodore and Dagny Koren Ramm. Her home was formerly in New York City. They have two daughters, both of whom were born in New Haven, Louisa Ferrero on August 17, 1935, and Margit Ruth on November 2, 1937. They are at the Roland Park Country School in Baltimore.

The sources from which Rowell's philosophy of life and living has evolved—

"From Yale College: seeds sown by a few sanguine teachers which were to give the direction of learning and teaching which my life has taken; inestimable friendships; sharpening of youthful wit and talents; rebelliousness.

"From the Yale Graduate School: intellectual discipline; the meaning of scholarship; the foundations of professional knowledge; the need to be thorough.

"From constant traveling abroad: the greatness of our American heritage; its weaknesses; a respect but not an idolatry for the past; some self-sufficiency; some knowledge of gastronomy.

"From a wife and children: greater tolerance for others; profounder aspects of love; the honor of true responsibilities.

"From war: the incredible capacity for sacrifice and nobility in my fellow men; stupidity and self-seeking at its worst.

"From the great poets: inexhaustible delight; wider horizons; the angel ape within us.

"From colleagues: the incomparable world of learning.

"From human beings: nil admirari.

"From Epicurus: that the theta besides one's name is not to be feared.

"From all of them: something between Faust's

Da steh' ich nun, ich armer Tor,

Und bin so klug als wie zuvor and Wagner's

Zwar weiss ich viel, doch möcht' alles wissen."

JOHN QUINTARD ROWLAND. Manager, sale and purchase department, Simpson, Spence & Young, shipping agents and brokers, 52 Broadway, New York 4, N.Y.; residence, Woodbury Road, Cold Spring Harbor, N.Y.

Since July, 1945, Rowland has held his present position with Simpson, Spence & Young. During the period from June, 1926, to March, 1941, he worked for various firms in Wall Street, being employed at various times as a customers' man, branch office manager, and over-the-counter trader. He was with the British Ministry of War Transport from March, 1941, to July, 1945, serving until July, 1943, as assistant to the deputy representative in the United States and then as manager of the ship repair department. He is a vestryman of St. John's Church, Cold Spring Harbor, and belongs to the Whitehall Club and the Lloyd Neck Bath Club.

Rowland's marriage to Ruth Farjeon, daughter of Harry Russell and Grace Thorn Farjeon, took place in New York on October 13, 1926. Their daughter, Cynthia, who was born in New York on October 21, 1930, attended the Greenvale School and Oldfields, where she graduated in 1948.

DONALD KEITH RUSSELL. Address, 30 Overton Road, Scarsdale, N.Y.

FRANK FORD RUSSELL. Chairman of the board, Cerro de Pasco Copper Corporation, 40 Wall Street, New York 5, N.Y.; residence, Longview, Newtown, Pa.

"After over twenty years I became, a couple of years ago, a refugee from New York," says Russell. "We bought an old stone house in Bucks County, Pa., did a Mr. and Mrs. Blandings act in rebuilding it, and now thoroughly enjoy a rural existence, even at the cost of four hours of commuting.

"We spend a couple of months a year in Peru and the change to completely different surroundings and people is interesting and stimulating, particularly since it is a long way from wars, scandals, and Washington."

Russell, who has been associated with the Cerro de Pasco Copper Corporation since 1944, was president of the company until May, 1950, and has since been chairman of the board. His first business connection was with the Guaranty Company of New York during 1927-28. He was with the National Aviation Corporation for the next thirteen years, during the latter part of the time being president of the concern, and then served for a year as general manager of the National Aircraft War Production Council. At the present time Russell is a director of the Bank of Manhattan, the National Aviation Corporation, the Otis Elevator Company, and the Union Sulphur & Oil Corporation, and in the past he has been on the boards of the Lockheed Aircraft Corporation, the Bell Aircraft Corporation, the Irving Airchute Company, and the Laurance Engineering & Research Company. He belongs to the Institute of the Aeronautical Sciences and the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgy.

He was first married on May 26, 1928, in New York, to Ruth Kingsbury, whose death occurred in September, 1933. On August 9, 1938, he married Dorothy Milburn in New York; they were divorced in 1946. On April 11 of that year he was married in New York to Alice Abely. Russell's step-daughter, Louis Gulda, who was born in Boston on November 9, 1931, graduated from Milton Academy in 1948 and is now a Junior at Vassar.

BENJAMIN SACHS. Owner, Benjamin Sachs Department Store, 906 Whalley Avenue, New Haven, Conn.; residence, 150 Lowin Avenue, New Haven.

Sachs has owned the Benjamin Sachs Department Store since 1935 and is also engaged as an insurance agent. He is active in the work of the B'nai Jacob Synagogue in New Haven as a member of its board of directors. He was married some years ago and has two sons: Martin William, born on September 30, 1937, and Joel Alan, born on December 29, 1939, both in New Haven.

All that he tells us in addition to the above is that he went to Bermuda on his honeymoon and has taken trips to Williamsburg, Canada, and Nassau.

BERNARD SACHS. Owner, Bernard Sachs (5 cents to $1.00 store), 281 Main Street, East Haven, Conn.; residence, 54 Vernon Street, New Haven.

Sachs has been the sole owner of the above concern for a number of years. He had one year at the Yale Law School (1928-29) and from February to September, 1941, was on active duty in the Army. His marriage to Faye Lazaroff, daughter of Susman and Anna Epstein Lazaroff, took place in New Haven on June 18, 1945.

LIVINGSTON GROVE ST. GEORGE. Address, Middletown Avenue, North Haven, Conn.

MARSHALL GROSSCUP SAMPSELL. Partner, Isham, Lincoln & Beale, lawyers, 72 West Adams Street, Chicago 3, Ill.; residence, 999 Lake Shore Drive, Chicago 11.

Following his graduation from the Harvard Law School in 1929, Sampsell became associated with Isham, Lincoln & Beale. He has been a partner in the firm since May, 1938, and is a director of the Dearborn Chemical Company, the Locomotive Firebox Company, and the Universal Castings Corporation.

His marriage to Margaret Emily Carr, daughter of Walter Scott and Mary Adams Carr, took place in Chicago on January 13, 1934. They have two daughters, both of whom were born in Chicago, Mary Adams on December 19, 1941, and Miranda Carr on June 1, 1943.

PAUL BRAINERD SARGENT. Lawyer, 75 Federal Street, Boston 10, Mass.; residence, 8 Hidden Road, Weston 93, Mass.

From July, 1928, to December, 1929, Sargent was connected with the stock department of Spencer Trask & Company of Boston and from then until August, 1931, was assistant to the trust officers of the Lee Higginson Trust Company. He has since been independently engaged in the practice of law in Boston, specializing in probate and trust law. The preliminaries were in somewhat reverse order, for he was admitted to the Massachusetts Bar in 1929, although he didn't take his LL.B. until 1932 (at Yale). He was admitted to practice before the Federal Bar in 1933 and the Supreme Court Bar in 1934.

Sargent has served on miscellaneous committees of the Massachusetts and Boston Bar associations and has also been a member of the council of the latter (1945-48 and again since 1950) and chairman of its legal education committee from 1945 to 1948 and of the probate practice committee during 1949-50. He is also a member of the American Bar Association and the Union Club of Boston. From 1940 to 1942 he gave courses in banking and negotiable instruments at Northeastern University on a part-time basis and since 1945 has lectured at the Boston University Law School on trusts and estates, sales, and domestic relations. He contributed articles to the January and June, 1950, issues of the Boston University Law Review and has also had occasional articles and reviews in the Boston Bar Bulletin.

He was married in New York City on January 31, 1929, to Isobel Macpherson Virtue, daughter of Herbert S. and Edith Jack Virtue. Her home was formerly in Newton Highlands, Mass. They have three daughters: Diane, born April 22, 1931, and the twins, Joyce Howard and Judith Virtue, born September 21, 1936. The older girl has been at Cornell since 1948.

CHARLES SPENCER SARNOFF. President, Woodrow Stores, Inc. (men's retail chain stores), 404 4th Avenue, New York, N.Y.; residence, Grand Park Avenue, Scarsdale, N.Y.

Sarnoff writes: "After graduation I immediately went into my present business (which was my father's) and have remained here in one capacity or the other from that time up to now. In 1933, with retail business badly affected by the Depression, I decided to try the professional field and attended Fordham Law School at night. However, I was unable to complete my law course due to my father's sudden death and after one year gave up all thoughts of law. Since that time I have been in my family's different enterprises.

"I travel a good deal, but most of my traveling is in this country on business, and I imagine I have covered the Eastern seaboard from Maine right down to Florida as thoroughly as any one can possibly do. I did go to Europe twice after graduation, but I have not been there since 1930. However, I have covered this neck-of-the-woods pretty thoroughly, having been in Nassau, the West Indies, Canada, Mexico, and California at one time or the other in the past years. Up to 1945 I lived in New York City continuously, but at that time we lost our lease and, just having had an addition to the family, decided to try living in the suburbs. We found this so pleasant that we bought a home in Scarsdale last year and hope to live in it for quite a while.

"Strangely enough, for one city bred, I have developed a great interest in gardening, and in the past year I have enjoyed this as much as playing tennis, which I used to do, so that my tennis is now getting worse, if such a thing is possible. In the winter months I have always managed to keep fit by playing squash-tennis, and I hope to continue doing this for quite a few years more.

"I do not think that I have any particular regrets about my life since graduation. Although I have had the usual disappointments that come as one grows up, I have tried to take them in stride. I had one ambition when I graduated, to be an attorney, which I tried to fulfill several years after graduation, but, of course, was prevented from doing so by my father's death. However, looking back, I find that my business has been very interesting and very exciting and has kept me very much occupied."

Sarnoff has been president of Woodrow Stores, Inc., since January, 1941. He is also president of Sarnoff-Irving Realty, Inc., vice-president and a director of the Sarbro Corporation, and secretary and a director of the Holbrook Hat Company, Inc., with all of which he has been connected since 1926. During the war he was an air raid warden for a year and then switched to driving an ambulance as a civilian from 1942 to 1945, working for the Unity Hospital in Brooklyn, on the night shift twice weekly. He belongs to the New York Yale Club.

He was first married June 4, 1928, in New York to Carolyn Graham, from whom he was divorced in 1929. His second marriage, to Harriet Berger, daughter of Samuel Berger, took place in New York on January 16, 1934. They were divorced in 1941. On March 23, 1945, he was married in New York to Eleanor Garfield Grabosky, daughter of Isaac and Sally Garfield. Her home was formerly in Philadelphia. Their son, Jeffrey Garfield, was born in New York on May 2, 1946. Sarnoff's stepdaughter, Janet Grabosky, who was born in Philadelphia, December 7, 1931, graduated from the New Rochelle High School in 1949 and is now a Sophomore at Smith.

STEWART SCHACKNE. Assistant manager of public relations, Standard Oil Company (New Jersey), 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N.Y.; residence, 160 Dellwood Road, Bronxville, N.Y.

"My ties with Yale were attenuated by the fact that I spent only two years there," says Schackne. "Early in my Junior year I contracted typhoid. (As I recall, I was one of three men in the college who got the disease at the same time.) There were no sulfa drugs at that time, and my bout with the illness was a long one. When on my feet again, I went abroad for a while, then entered Dartmouth in the fall of 1925. I graduated there with the Class of 1927. Now, when I visit the Bowl in New Haven, I cheer for the team from Hanover."

Schackne, who has been assistant manager of public relations for Standard Oil since January, 1945, is a member of the Public Relations Society of America and also of the American Petroleum Institute and the University Club of New York. He has written a number of magazine articles and a children's book and is the co-author with N. D. Drake of Oil for the World, published by Harper & Brothers in 1950. From 1940 to 1942 he was a vestryman of Christ Church, Riverdale, N.Y.

His marriage to Julie Pendleton, daughter of Dr. Philip Barbour Pendleton and Alma Stafford Pendleton, took place in Covington, Ky., on June 5, 1929. Her home was formerly in Toledo, Ohio, where their son, Stewart, Jr., was born on May 20, 1930. He, too, will be rooting for Dartmouth when he comes to New Haven, as he is now a Junior there. He prepared for college at the Riverdale Country School.

ELLIOTT SCHIEFFELIN. Studying for Ph.D.; home address, 2992 Margaret Drive, Pasadena 10, Calif.

Schieffelin writes: "Perhaps the most continuing interest during the past twenty-five years of my life has been my study of and experience in using modern languages, especially English and French. The art of transmuting thoughts into words that clearly reflect them has always had a fascination for me. When, during the year that followed graduation from Yale, I read in French several plays of the comic dramatist Molière, they left a deep impression with me. Since that time, and particularly during my years as a teacher, it has been my ambition to interpret Molière's art and writings for persons who may not as yet have had the luck to enjoy them in the original. At present my wife and I are living at Aix-en-Provence, Bouches du Rhône, France. She is improving her knowledge of French, and I am writing a book on social implications in Molière's work, in partial fulfillment of the requirements for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy at Columbia University."

WILLIAM RICHARD SCHLEICHER. Address, 88 Rockwood Road, Hamden, Conn.

ROBERT HUTCHINS SCHUTZ, JR. Partner, Schutz & Goodwin, architects, 12 Haynes Street, Hartford 3, Conn.; residence, 1075 Prospect Avenue, Hartford 5.

After graduation Schutz returned to Yale to study architecture, his work there being supplemented by a course at the Fontainebleau School of Fine Arts in France during the summer of 1928. He received the degree of B.F.A. in 1930 and during the following year was a draftsman in the office of Strickland, Blodgett & Law in Boston. From then until 1945 he was an associate of Carl J. Malmfeldt in Hartford and since January, 1946, has been practicing in partnership with H. Sage Goodwin, '27.

We give you Schutz' account of his Army service (August, 1942-November, 1944): "Was rejected for a commission because of deafness, but the draft board was more broad-minded. Spent the duration fighting the battle of Fort Devens—giving aptitude tests to recruits and interviewing illiterates. There was time out for three months to be wired for sound and study-like reading—at the taxpayers' expense—and then being returned to the playing fields of Devens to relieve a Wac for active duty. It took two of us—and she a grandmother. Two months later the Army gave up and sent me home with such absurd trophies as a Pfc. stripe, Good Conduct Medal, and ear trumpet."

Prior to entering the Army, Schutz served on the Hartford Defense Council. He has been a captain in the special gifts division of the Community Chest, is on the board of directors of the Cedar Hill Cemetery, and was formerly assistant treasurer of the Travelers Aid Society of Hartford. He belongs to the American Institute of Architects, the Hartford Society of Architects, the Connecticut Historical Society, the Wadsworth Atheneum, the Connecticut Antiquarian and Landmarks Society (on structure committee), the Hartford Club, the Hartford Golf Club, the University Club of Hartford, the Farmington Valley Polo Club, the Dauntless Club of Essex, and the Hampstead Hill Club (on board of managers). He is still a bachelor.

NORMAN VON POST SCHWAB. Engaged in Moral Re-Armament Program; residence, 741 Canton Avenue, Milton, Mass.

Schwab writes: "One of my children was asked recently what her father did. She said, 'He's a minister.' 'Where is his church?' asked the friend. 'Oh he hasn't got a parish,' was her reply, 'he's on Broadway.'

"Not that I've deserted the Church for the Stage! But it has been one of the many activities I've been drawn into in the exercise of my ministry. Others have included: hotelier (having had a share in operating the largest hotel property in Europe), concert artist (singing with an international chorus before the crowned—or once-crowned—heads of Europe), professor and librarian of a college (thus following in my father's footsteps), and movie actor (after first having helped create a first-rate studio out of whole cloth, with a tri-lingual production staff). Such is the variety in the life of an ideological parson!

"To condense the last twenty-five exciting and rewarding years into a few paragraphs is a difficult task. They have been years lived at top speed in the company of one of the great men of our times, Dr. Frank Buchman, and the men and women of Moral Re-Armament. It has been, in his words, 'a race with time to remake men and nations,' to get democracy to understand its true heritage and to live by it, and to create the inspired, uniting ideology that will answer the ideologies of hatred and division.

"The drama has played a great part in this enterprise, and I have become more and more of a trouser in the past ten years. I've had a share in producing and acting in plays in half a dozen countries. In one of them, 'The Forgotten Factor,' which President Truman called the 'most important play to come out of the war,' I have had a part which called for a very dramatic entrance at a tense moment with an injured girl in my arms. This has been going on since 1942, and in an idle moment I computed that I had carried twenty tons of her onto the stage.

"I was privileged to go with the cast of this play to Europe in 1946, where we had an eight-month run in London, during the coldest winter on record. We tasted the usual rewards of acting in a successful hit, but had the added satisfaction of seeing the effects of the play at a crucial time in the life of Britain. At a time when the lag in coal production was throttling her efforts to recover, we showed it to thousands of miners and their families in the coal fields of the Midlands. One of the miners' officials said, 'When MRA comes in, production goes up, absenteeism goes down, and Communism goes out,' During the winter of 1949-50 I spent my time in Germany with the German version of this play, which had a large part to play in turning the tide in the ideological battle there. My German being what it is, however, I devoted my talents to the box office!

"In 1946 also I helped to establish and have subsequently had a share in operating a World Center for Moral Re-Armament in the heart of Europe at Caux-sur-Montreux, above the Lake of Geneva. There for the past five summers over thirty thousand people have come from more than a hundred countries and territories. During most of these summers I've been on hand to welcome and entertain these guests, from the chancelleries and parliaments of Europe, industrialists, labor leaders, military brass, and just ordinary mortals. It has been a fascinating experience of living behind the headlines, for these people have been among those whose decisions have directed the course of current history, and what has happened to them at Caux has had its effect on the headlines. For instance, the British New Statesman and Nation commented that the Schumann Plan could only have come to birth because of the new atmosphere of trust which had been created between France and Germany by Caux.

"Currently I am back in this country, acting in a musical play, 'Jotham Valley,' which ran for a month on Broadway this winter and has just been in Miami for two months as part of a program of training initiated by the air lines. You may have read of the recent settlement of difficulties in National Airlines as a result of this program.

"My family has been very much with me in all this. My wife and two oldest children spent part of a year with me in Europe, and my son has been on the road with this force for two years, from California to Lapland. My brother-in-law, Francis Bradley, '26, has also been with me in this program, and our combined households, whom we have seen at too infrequent intervals at our home outside Boston, join us in the summers when we are in this country, at Mackinac Island, Mich., the North American 'Caux.' We have a cottage there and hope to be there again this summer. The latch-string is out there or in Milton to any of you, if you can stand the prospect of nine children at once."

Schwab, who graduated from the Protestant Episcopal Theological Seminary in Virginia in 1929, was ordained as a deacon that year and as priest in 1930. He was a curate at Calvary Church, New York, from 1929 to 1931 and at Trinity Church, Asheville, N.C., for the next five years and was then associate rector of St. Peter's in Cambridge, Mass., until 1938. He is a member of the Chorus Equity Association and the New York Yale Club.

Mrs. Schwab was Sarah Elizabeth Bradley, daughter of Luther Daniels Bradley, Yale '77, and Agnes Floyd Smith Bradley, of Brookline. They were married in Camden, Maine, August 6, 1930. The children are: John Christopher, born December 7, 1931, in Asheville, Edith Aurelia on July 5, 1933, also in Asheville, Margaret Emily on October 23, 1935, in Cambridge, Katharine on August 15, 1938, in Cambridge, Peter Muhlenberg on July 30, 1939, in Northampton, Mass., and Irene Elizabeth on March 24, 1948, in Boston. John, now a Yale Freshman, graduated from the Milton High School in 1948 and subsequently studied for two years at the College of the Good Road (Los Angeles and Caux-sur-Montreux). Edith is entering Bryn Mawr this fall; Margaret, Katharine, and Peter are in high school.

JOSEPH HENRY SCHWARTZ. Vice-president and treasurer, United Manufacturing Company (printing papers), Springfield 7, Mass.; residence, 152 Sumner Avenue, Springfield 8.

"My wife and I travel whenever business pressure permits," Schwartz says. "We've been to many points of interest in North, Central, and South America. My wife has traveled abroad extensively. Our business is an interesting and enjoyable one. However, it keeps me pretty tied down. I hope our son will go to Yale, and our daughter will very likely go to Wellesley, where her mother went.

"Have been very active for many years in Sinai Temple of this city and am proud to say we have just dedicated a new building which is the last word in religious housing and efficiency. Put in a lot of work during the war years on Red Cross and, especially, Ration Board work [panel head, 1942-45]."

Schwartz is a director, as well as vice-president and treasurer, of his company. He has been active in Community Chest campaigns and during the period from 1943 to 1945 was a member of the executive committee of the Connecticut Valley Yale Club.

Mrs. Schwartz was Hilda M. May, daughter of William and Helen I. May. They were married in Springfield on January 28, 1932. Their son, William B., who is at present at Cheshire Academy, was born on August 1, 1934, and their daughter, Barbara M., on May 2, 1940.

GURDON TRUMBULL SCOVILLE. Pastor, Westminster Church, West Hartford, Conn.; residence, 1873 Boulevard, West Hartford 7.

Scoville writes: "While teaching English at Exeter [1926-29] as the curtain dropped on the 'Tinselled Twenties,' I reversed my field and found that life instead of starting with God and Country and ending at Yale, could start at Yale and keep going with God. So I got called into the ministry.

"Major adventures since then have included: getting married and begetting four 'hostages to fortune' (cf. Bacon in Nettleton's Sophomore English); serving as chaplain for nine years of the Hershey Industrial School in the 'chocolate town' of Hershey, Pa.—M. S. Hershey's parallel for Pennsylvania orphan boys of Father Flanagan's Boys' Town; minister for seven years of the Second Presbyterian Church in Johnstown, Pa., with the earth full of soft coal and sky full of the smoke and glow from steel mills; home missionary for one year in West Hartford, organizing a new Presbyterian Church in the midst of Congregationalists, heathen, and Yale men.

"This past year has been a demonstration of what is happening in new residential areas all over our country today—that when the going is roughest, Christian faith is toughest. We started in the basement of a good-neighbor Congregational Church. We blossomed into a golf clubhouse in the summer. We grew into a school auditorium in the winter. And now with seventy families whose average age is forty-five, we have secured a permanent three-acre property at the heart of a rapidly expanding area—a small but significant part of the return that Americans are making all over our land to the faith of our fathers."

Scoville studied theology at the Virginia Episcopal Seminary at Alexandria from 1929 to 1931 and at the University of Edinburgh the following year. His marriage to Elizabeth Evelyn Bowman, daughter of Maurice W. and Mellie Fortenbaugh Bowman, of Germantown, Pa., took place in Philadelphia on June 16, 1934. The four young Scovilles are: Elizabeth Beecher, born May 26, 1935, Samuel on June 30, 1938, Jonathan Bowman on January 28, 1943, and Susan Trumbull on March 30, 1947. The two oldest were born in Philadelphia and the others in Johnstown.

DAVID FROELICH SEIFERHELD. President, N. Erlanger, Blumgart & Company, Inc., converters and distributors of rayon fabrics, 356 4th Avenue, New York 10, N.Y.; residence, 1175 Park Avenue, New York 28 (to be changed within year to 812 Park Avenue).

Seiferheld writes: "Plugged away in this business from shortly after graduation until the eve of War II with reasonable satisfaction and contentment and few outside interests apart from photography and occasional experiments in drawing and painting. In the later Thirties, with, I suppose, an increasing sense of the need for action of some constructive sort, became active in some obscure unfashionable activities such as American Association for a Democratic Germany, Emergency Rescue Committee, Short-Wave Research, Inc., and finally a spell, first in Washington, then in New York, with O.S.S.

"Finding O.S.S. even more frustrating than my business office, returned to work, and being a fervent admirer of F.D.R., joined P.A.C. in '44 because it seemed to me an effective instrument for his reelection. To the great relief of my friends, resigned from that organization early in 1945, when it seemed to me clear that it was coming under Communist control. My chief extra-curricular activity since then has continued to be the Emergency Rescue Committee, now become International Rescue, Inc. [treasurer and director since 1940]. Its orientation has, of course, changed with the times. We now save from Stalin numbers of pro-democratic scientists, public figures, writers, statesmen, artists, and intellectuals, of various kinds, even including professors. We used to rescue these people from Hitler.

"If in twenty-five years I have progressed at all, it would seem that my interests have gradually broadened to include a certain amount of dabbling in both domestic and world affairs, with spare time largely devoted to such hobbies as the collection of modern paintings (when not too dear); antique furniture (ditto); a little drawing and painting; a growing absorption in old china; and some occasional photography, plus considerable diversified reading."

Seiferheld, who has been president of his company since 1941, is a voting trustee of the Monarch Aluminum Company of Cleveland. His service with the Office of Strategic Services covered the period from November, 1942, to September, 1943. His marriage to Elizabeth S. Deutsch, daughter of Raymond and Ethel Shrier Deutsch, took place in Cleveland on October 28, 1929. Their son, James David, was born in New York on December 12, 1939.

LOUIS MORRISON SHANOK. Executive director, New Haven Jewish Community Center, 7 Dwight Street, New Haven, Conn.; residence, 1325 Boulevard, New Haven.

"Serving in the field of social work, my days are very full," Shanok says. "My work gives me the opportunity for many novel experiences and to meet many interesting people. Promoting forums, concerts, classes, socials, athletic events, and other such activities for various segments of the community is most fascinating. My work also gives me frequent opportunity to travel to attend conferences and meetings. I manage to keep busy and enjoy it.

"I try to find time for reading, theatre, and music, which are my special hobbies. From time to time I have occasion to contribute book reviews or to write articles dealing with my field of endeavor. When I do have the opportunity for a vacation, I enjoy taking my family to Provincetown on Cape Cod and there take it easy in the sun or riding the harbor on a commercial dragger. I was president for a term of the Port Chester Kiwanis Club and an organizer of the Port Chester Zionist Organization and B'Nai B'rith Lodge.

"During World War II I gave up my vocation and served as a volunteer for the J.W.B.—U.S.O. at Newport News, Va., serving the members of our armed forces in the various camps about. One of my regrets is that circumstances did not allow me to serve overseas. I am now occupied with the planning for the construction of a new community center. With the completion of this project and now with my family growing up, it is my hope some day to be able to take a leave of absence and take on a assignment for a social service agency for a period of service in Europe or Asia."

In 1927 Shanok received a $1,000 fellowship for the study of social work at the New York School of Social Work (now a branch of Columbia University) and at the Graduate School for Jewish Social Work. He graduated in 1928 and during the next two years was assistant to the director of the Jewish Community Center in Omaha, Nebr. While there, he took up the study of law at Creighton University and in 1930 received his LL.B. degree and was admitted to the Nebraska Bar. He has been a "briefless barrister," for he has continued in the field about which he is so enthusiastic. He went to Pittsburgh in 1930 as assistant director of the Irene Kauffman Settlement and from there to Fall River, Mass., in 1931 to take the position of executive director of the Jewish Community Center. He remained there until 1934, had a similar connection in Port Chester for the next ten years, and since February, 1944, has been executive director of the New Haven Jewish Community Center.

Shanok's articles have appeared in the Creighton University Shadows, the Omaha School Teachers Quarterly, and various Jewish Center publications. He is a member of the American Association of Social Workers and in 1949 served on the program committee of the Connecticut Conference of Social Work. He has also been chairman of the Association of Jewish Center Workers of Connecticut and Western Massachusetts, treasurer and chairman of the legislative committee of the New Haven Social Workers Club, secretary of the New Haven committee of the Associated Services for the Armed Forces, a member of the executive committee of the National Association of Jewish Center Workers, and a director of the New England section of the National Jewish Welfare Board.

On June 10, 1934, he was married in Hartford, Conn., to Sylvia M. Ellovich, daughter of Charles and Toba Ellovich. They have two children: Michael Elliott, born November 10, 1938, and Tobe Rose on October 20, 1941, both in Port Chester.

THADDEUS STEVENS SHARRETTS, JR. Field director, American Red Cross, Fort Lewis, Wash.

Our questionnaire didn't reach Sharretts, but his nephew told us that he served with the U.S. Army until 1943 and has since been with the American Red Cross. "Thad did a fine job with the A.R.C. during the last war in Italy and later in Japan," he said. "I believe that in Italy he received several citations for his labors. When he was visiting us several years ago, he indicated that he would probably make the A.R.C. a career."

WADE WHEELER SHAW. President, Franklin Oil & Gas Company, Bedford, Ohio; residence, 79 Columbus Road, Bedford.

All that Shaw tells us is that he is president of the Franklin Oil & Gas Company, vice-president of the Metalene Chemical Company, and has two children: Marilyn J., born February 9, 1936, and Terry W., born January 26, 1938, both in Bedford.

STEPHEN HUNTINGTON SHERMAN. Physician in charge of receiving service, Oregon State Hospital, Salem, Oregon; residence, 15 Centre Street, Salem.

Sherman has been physician in charge of the receiving service at the Oregon State Hospital, a psychiatric institution, since June, 1950. He was a fellow in psychiatry at the Institute of the Pennsylvania Hospital in Philadelphia in 1935 and psychiatrist to the Student Health Service at the University of Pennsylvania for the next two years. From 1938 to 1940 he was physician to the Blythewood Sanitarium at Greenwich, Conn., and was also engaged in private practice there. He continued in the private practice of psychiatry in New York City for another two years, also serving as consultant to the Rockefeller Foundation in studies on alcoholism during this period, and then became physician in charge of the United Seaman's Service rest center at Oyster Bay, N.Y. Later in 1942 he entered the U.S. Public Health Service and in January, 1943, was commissioned as passed assistant surgeon. He served six months at Oyster Bay and was then transferred to duty as officer in charge of the War Shipping Administration hospital unit at Annapolis, Md., where he continued until January, 1945. He was then assigned to the New York office of the War Shipping Administration and the following May was transferred to the Public Health Service clinic unit in Washington, where he remained until the close of the war. From 1946 until going to Oregon in 1950, Sherman was at Halloran General Hospital on Staten Island as consultant in psychiatry to the Veterans Administration and chief of the department of psychosomatic medicine. From 1943 to 1948 he had an additional appointment as associate in psychiatry at the Long Island College of Medicine and during 1941-42 was psychiatrist to the Alcoholic Consultation Bureau in Newark, N.J. He is the author of various medical articles and publications "not worthy of record" and belongs to the Nassau County Medical Society, the Philadelphia Psychiatric Society, and the American Psychiatric Association.

He was married to June Marie Feiker, daughter of George Edward and Violetta Harrison Martin Feiker, in Mt. Vernon, N.Y., June 19, 1948. Her home was formerly in Garden City, N.Y.

"You really want to know this?" was Sherman's query when he came to our appeal to all. "As briefly and painlessly as possible then," he said, "I feel that I made a great mistake in entering professional life and if I had to do over again would have tried to make a go of one of the arts. I've always been a repressed writer and still hope to break away from this professional grind and get something on paper. Am at work now on a novel which is basically a study in the psychology of murder but rather along a special line: the unreliability of circumstantial evidence, but particularly from the psychological side. Would also like to get at a novel involving certain aspects of school and college life, as well as the New York scene.

"Chief hobby outside of writing is sculpture in wood, with which I have had some little success; a small statue of Freud in African mahogany attracted some attention. Have done a bit of traveling in France, England, and Italy and also in the northwestern United States, which drew me to live in this sector, where the fishing is something extraordinary. Am now an angler-maniac with special attention to the scholarship of Ted Trueblood and Byron Dalrymple. Looking back on college, I feel a little bitter about there being so little done for the undergraduate to orient him to his own deeper impulses and goals, with too much accent on the noodle. Hence am deeply envious of the chaps like Peter Arno or Ben Cutler or a hundred others who knew what they wanted to do all the time and did it. Nuff said."

GEORGE GOODYEAR SICARD. Business address, 271 North Avenue, New Rochelle, N.Y.; residence, Centerville, Cape Cod, Mass.

Sicard skipped blithely over our questions 4-17, so we can't give you any details about what he is doing. His first marriage, to Dorothy Cole, daughter of John N. Cole, took place in Andover, Mass., on June 20, 1925. They were divorced in 1934. On August 2, 1935, he was married in Elkton, Md., to Billie Brown, of Chicago, daughter of William Brown. He has three children: Stephen, born in 1927 in New York City; Nancy, born in 1930, also in New York; and George M., born in Boston in 1942. The older boy, who is a Senior at Yale, prepared for college at Hotchkiss and subsequently served for fourteen months as a third class signalman in the Navy.

ERNEST SAMUEL SILK. Teacher, Hand High School, Madison, Conn.; residence, Maple Avenue, Madison.

Silk, who received the degree of M.S. at Yale in 1930, after three years of graduate work, has been teaching at the Hand High School since the fall of 1934. Madison supplies the proper facilities for his hobbies and recreations—salt water fishing, swimming, and boating. He has been abroad once, during the summer of 1931, and has taken several trips around the western part of the United States and Canada and has also spent several very brief winter vacations in Florida.

Silk's marriage to Edna A. Magnuson, daughter of Carl M. and Agda E. Nelson Magnuson, took place in Shelton, Conn., on June 24, 1939. They have two children: Nancy E., born in 1941, and James N. T., born in 1946, both in New Haven.

HENRY MANN SILVER. Adviser on publications, American Council of Learned Societies; business address, 425 West 117th Street, New York 27, N.Y.; residence, 94 MacDougal Street, New York 12.

"I live a life which is interesting and full," says Silver, who is probably the only printing economist in the Class. "After studying in, and wandering about, Europe for a couple of years, I was employed by the Columbia University Press, where I remained for nearly twenty years. My work with the Council of Learned Societies is, in a sense, an extension of the same activity, since I am the council's staff adviser on publications.

"My second wife was a member of the WASP organization and disappeared while ferrying a new P51 from its factory. I live with my little girl [Ann Vreeland Tompkins Silver, born September 18, 1943, whom he adopted in 1947] in part of a house I purchased in 1937 in partnership with Sidney Dean, '26. I also own a summer cottage at Bridgehampton, where Annie and I go every week-end beginning as soon as the ground is soft enough to work. So far as travel is concerned, I do a lot of it, since I am supposed to visit every major research center in the country at least once a year. This is made possible by my being upstairs from the Deans, who take affectionate care of my little girl while I am away.

"I have two ambitions: first, to write a decent handbook of scholarly printing and publishing; second, to get over to Europe once again for an extended trip. The only hobby would be vegetable gardening; I love it. There is, of course, a collection of both satisfactions and regrets. So far as the one may weight the other, I will simply say that there is no time in the past I want to return to at the expense of giving up the present."

In addition to his study abroad (University of Dijon, 1926; Sorbonne, 1926-28), Silver did graduate work at Columbia during 1930-31. His connection with the Columbia University Press covered the period from 1930 to January, 1949, when he became associated with the American Council of Learned Societies. He has made many contributions to various learned journals and periodicals of information and delivered addresses to learned societies "in fulfillment of my duties with them." He belongs to the American Folklore Society and the American Association of Geographers and is a life member of the Sons of the Revolution and the New England Society of New York.

Silver enlisted in the Army in June, 1942, and was discharged as a technical sergeant in October, 1945, after service in this country both in the Coast Artillery and the Ordnance Department.

He was first married January 10, 1930, in New York to Rhoda Mitchell Satterthwaite, daughter of T. Wilkinson and Lucile Carnes Weeks Satterthwaite. They were divorced in 1937. His second wife was Gertrude Vreeland Tompkins, daughter of Vreeland and Laura Towar Tompkins, of Summit, N.J. They were married in Bridgehampton on September 25, 1944, and her death occurred a month later—on October 27.

CHARLES HERBERT SIMMONS, JR. Associate, Rogers & Butler, architects, 219 East 44th Street, New York 17, N.Y.; residence, R.F.D. 1, Mt. Kisco, N.Y.

Simmons, who has been associated with the firm of Rogers & Butler since 1949, is a member of the American Institute of Architects. He was with the architectural firm of York & Sawyer from 1929 to 1941, being an associate of the firm for the last three years of this period, and from 1942 to 1948 was connected with the Vermilya-Brown Company, builders, of which he was a director from 1946 to 1948. At the present time he is president and a director of Simmons Realty, Inc., and a director of the Vulcan Rail & Construction Company and the Powhatan Brass & Iron Works. During the period from 1943 to 1946 Simmons served in the New York State Guard.

He was married in 1938 in New York City to Roxane Page Ruhl, daughter of Robert W. and Mabel Works Ruhl. Mrs. Simmons' home was formerly in Medford, Oregon. They have four children, all of whom were born in New York City, Charles Herbert, 3d, in 1940, Robert Ruhl in 1943, Jane Horner in 1945, and Sanford in 1948.

JOSEPH WARREN SIMPSON, JR. First vice-president, First Wisconsin National Bank, 743 North Water Street, Milwaukee, Wis.; residence, 2024 East Lafayette Place, Milwaukee.

Since November, 1950, Simpson has been first vice-president of the First Wisconsin National Bank, with which he has been connected since graduation. He is treasurer and a director of the Milwaukee Association of Commerce, the Citizen Government Research Bureau, and the Wisconsin Heart Association. From 1946 to 1948 he was chairman of the board of Milwaukee Downer Seminary, and he was chairman of the Milwaukee branch of the American Cancer Society in 1949 and vice-chairman of the Milwaukee Community Fund's special gift committee in 1948.

Simpson's marriage to Mydelle Edmonds, daughter of William Alexander and Bernie Booker Edmonds, took place in Milwaukee on May 26, 1928. Their daughter, Charlotte, who was born in Milwaukee on May 11, 1930, graduated from Smith in June, 1951, three months after her marriage on March 31 to Hilton Wright, Amherst '50, of Baltimore. Joseph W. Simpson, 3d, born May 29, 1930, in Milwaukee, is a Junior at the Milwaukee Country Day School.

EPHRAIM EDWARD SINN. Lawyer, Town Hall Plaza, Milford, Conn.; residence, Far View Beach, Milford.

Sinn, who graduated from the Yale Law School in 1930, was admitted to the Connecticut Bar that July and has since been engaged in the practice of law, with the exception of four years in the Army. In 1944 he was admitted to the bar of the U.S. District Court of Connecticut. He was a candidate for judge of probate of Milford several times, but says he has been interested more in governmental policies than in partisan politics. Sinn was a member of the Milford Board of Education from 1934 to 1940 and of the Board of Health in the latter year.

He served as an enlisted man in the A.U.S. from 1942 to 1944. In December, 1944, he was commissioned as a second lieutenant at Camp Lee, Va., and subsequently served in the Philippines and with the Army of Occupation in Japan. He was released from active duty as a first lieutenant at Zama in February, 1946, and now has a Reserve commission in the Judge Advocate General's Department. After his release from service he remained in Japan for a year as prosecuting attorney for the Allied Powers in the prosecution of Japanese war criminals.

He is at present serving on the committee on legislation and practice of the New Haven County Bar Association and formerly, while a member of the State Bar Association, was on the committee on the selection and tenure of judges. From 1947 to 1949 he studied the Japanese language at the Institute of Far Eastern Languages at Yale, and he is a member of the Far Eastern Association and also of the American Legion. Sinn is the author of a monograph, The Referendum Provision of the Connecticut Constitution, published by the Milford News Publishing Company in 1950, and of articles in the Connecticut Bar Journal and the Bulletin of the New Haven County Bar Association. He is unmarried.

He writes: "My contact with the Japanese during my sojourn in Japan has made me sensitive about self-praise. Among the Japanese, self-laudation is considered extremely impolite. Thus, I hesitate to say that I have been the pioneer of judicial reform in the state of Connecticut. My bill to compel the Probate Court judges to file annual reports with the Secretary of the State of Connecticut showing their earnings was adopted in 1941; and upon this rests the widespread criticism of these courts. My objection to the reappointment of Judge Pickett in 1941 led to the reorganization of the Court of Common Pleas. I introduced the resolution at the annual meeting of the State Bar Association in 1947, calling for a questionnaire to be sent to all members of the bar to determine the fitness of judges of the higher courts eligible for reappointment; this practice has been followed since 1948. I was the only practicing lawyer in the state to object publicly to the appointment of Senator Raymond E. Baldwin to the Supreme Court of Errors of Connecticut in 1949 (on the ground that he bartered one public office for another).

"My other interest has been the Japanese language. With the aid of a couple of dictionaries, I can read, understand, and translate a page of Japanese written in Chinese characters.

"I acted as unofficial adviser to the Chinese Military Mission in Japan during 1946-47, and in gratitude the Chinese said they would bestow an award, but the victory of the Communists has apparently postponed this honor.

"I have been happy in the last few months writing my column for the Milford News. I revel in my freedom. I comment on local political events in an ironic tone. My appraisal of Governor Bowles was praised by Arthur Krock of the New York Times; and my article, entitled 'Variation on a Cabel-lion Theme,' received the flattering notice of Mr. James Branch Cabell.

"After twenty-five years I still consider Professor Keller my most inspiring teacher. Cabell is my favorite author. Swimming is my only sport. Cigar-smoking is the worst of minor vices. Hypocritical and incompetent public officials constitute my chief abomination. The late Mr. Justice Benjamin N. Cardozo I revere as the greatest modern American. Robert M. Hutchins, among the living, has my greatest admiration. I count myself singularly fortunate that I had the benefit of a Yale education and shall always regret that I knew so few of my classmates."

HARRISON PRESERVED SMITH, JR. Owner, Harrison P. Smith Company (real estate), 40 Church Street, Montclair, N.J.; residence, 786 Valley Road, Upper Montclair.

"When I observe the outstanding records made by so many of our classmates in business and public life, I feel very backward in trying to relate my very ordinary post-college history," Smith says. "In business I hit-and-missed a bit in the beginning, slightly resentful of the fact that I had no real technical knowledge of any kind. Through sheer experience and patience in the real estate field, plus a little extra schooling, I have managed to pay my old college bills, make a precarious living, and get a home fairly well paid for. Finally, this year, I was able to accomplish one of my ambitions by starting my own office. I hope it will be successful.

"I have a marvelous wife and a fourteen-year old boy of whom I am very proud. I hope he can live up to his promise. He hopes to go to Yale from College High School (Upper Montclair). We have been to New Haven at least once a year for the past nine or ten years, one of the attractions being the pool. We attended the Twentieth Reunion and hope to come to the Twenty-fifth.

"In many ways, however, I have had a very contented life. I have taken considerable interest in various forms of civic activities, church affairs, and social doings. I have kept up my tennis, chess, and other hobbies. I have not done as much reading as I should have done, but I have read more than some on serious subjects, notably history, geology, and politics. In 1946 I resumed long-distance running for the Jersey A.C. and actually won two team medals. In 1949 I competed in the 17-mile National Road Championships and ran well for 13½ miles. At that point I decided to call it a day.

"I have developed an amateur flair for 'pamphleteering' and have done some ghost writing and behind-the-scenes work related to local civic and semi-political programs. I do my gardening, take care of my rather large lawn, amuse the kids of the neighborhood by playing 'kick-the-can' with them, help put on attractive programs for our scout troop [of which he was chairman in 1949 and 1950], and am a sucker for committees of any kind.

"I thought Coolidge and Hoover were O.K. until the effects of the Depression loomed so large. Then I became an ardent New-Dealer because I felt the need of corrective reforms. Now I feel the New Deal-Fair Deal has gone too far, and I would like to see a period of conservation to give the pendulum a chance to swing the other way and the American people a chance to benefit from the beneficial improvements which were brought about. I am, generally speaking, for Truman's foreign policy as I understand it (although history will probably reveal many absurdities and abuses and wastes), but his domestic policies are, to my way of thinking, about as dangerous as anything I can imagine. Sometimes I doubt if he realizes the terrific undermining influences which he has encouraged, and their ultimate results.

"For some years we have spent part of each summer camping in the foothills of the White Mountains and hope, sometime, to have a small summer place in the hills overlooking the lovely Connecticut Valley.

"I have kept up some of my Yale contacts; read the Y.A.M. religiously; think that Yale is the greatest place on earth and one of our best influences; and am ever thankful that I had the privilege of her teaching and inspiration."

Smith was a salesman with the Prudential Insurance Company during 1926-27 and with the brokerage firm of Kountze Brothers for the next two years. He has been in the real estate business since then—with H. B. Cushman (until 1931), the Murdoch-Fairchild Company (1931-32), and the Simpson-Merritt Company (1932-50). He served on the Mayor's Committee for Veterans' Housing in 1946, has been active in local budget study work, the Y.M.C.A., Red Cross, and Community Chest, was one of the organizers of the Mountain-Heights Association and the Council of Neighborhood Associations in Montclair, and was formerly a deacon of the Upper Montclair Presbyterian Church. Smith served in the State Guard from December, 1941, to January, 1946, his final rank being that of sergeant.

His marriage to Gladys Adams Pritchard, daughter of George Oscar and Gladys Adams Sewaal Pritchard, took place at Budd Lake, N.J., December 8, 1934. Her home was formerly in Montclair, where their son, Harrison Preserved, 3d, was born March 3, 1936.

JOHN WENDELL SMITH. Production manager, Rock of Ages Corporation (granite quarrying and manufacturing), 83 Main Street, Barre, Vt.; residence, 21 Queen Street, Barre.

The above covers all the data that Smith has given us other than that he was married on September 24, 1927, in New Haven to Elisabeth Hun, daughter of Elisabeth Tucker Hun, and that her home was formerly in New York.

KINNEY SMITH, JR. Address, 123 South LaSalle Street, Chicago, Ill.

PAUL ALEXANDER SOLANDT. Reference specialist, Library of Congress, Washington 25, D.C.; residence, 1400 North Veitch Street, Arlington, Va.

Solandt attended the Yale Graduate School for two years, receiving his M.A. in 1928, and he took summer courses at Middlebury in 1931 and 1948 and at Columbia in 1936. He was a master of Latin and French at the Lenox (Mass.) School from 1928 to 1931 and spent the next seventeen years at Washington College, Chestertown, Md., as assistant professor of Latin and French. During the academic year 1939-40 he suspended his regular teaching assignments to serve as acting director of the college library. He has held his present position at the Library of Congress since September, 1948.

He is a member of the American Association of University Professors, the American Classical League (regional representative on its public relations committee, 1947-48), the Baltimore Classical Club, and the Classical Association of the Atlantic States (regional representative on executive committee, 1945-47; vice-president, 1947-48). During the war he was an associate member of the Advisory Draft Board and a civilian volunteer in the Army Aircraft Warning Service and was also for a year (1942-43) a Pfc. in the Headquarters Platoon, 5th Battalion, Maryland State Guard. Solandt is still a bachelor.

"On the whole," he says, "the record is distinctly prosaic, but rather peaceful withal. The quiet countryside of Maryland's eastern shore and the routine activities of a small liberal arts college are not conducive to high blood pressure. Family responsibilities and small salaries did not permit much travel, but sailing, boating, and fishing at my back door were partial compensations. One or two cruises on Canada's Rideau and Trent were welcome interludes. On the death of my last parent in 1947, a change seemed advisable. Chance and some previous library experience brought me to Washington and my present position, which is proving varied and stimulating. After so many years in the country, city life is somewhat confining, but it has certain advantages and will do for the present."

MAXWELL NORMAN STABECK. Address, Apartment 301, 1172 North New Hampshire Street, Los Angeles, Calif.

WILLIAM SHELDON KERRUISH STAGE. Manager, metals department, Cerro de Pasco Copper Corporation, 40 Wall Street, New York 5, N.Y.; residence, Eagle Drive, Deepwood, Stamford, Conn.

Stage graduated from the Harvard Business School with the degree of M.B.A. in 1928 and during the next nine years was with the brokerage firm of Paine Webber & Company as assistant to one of the partners. He was in the order department of Blair S. Williams & Company from 1937 to 1941 and then became credit manager with James B. Clow & Sons of Chicago. He left there in April, 1942, upon entering the Army as a private. He was on duty at the headquarters of the Anti-aircraft Artillery Command, Eastern Defense Command, at Fort Totten, N.Y., until his discharge from service with the rank of staff sergeant in January, 1945. In addition to his purely military duties, Stage served as business manager of America's Alertmen, the official weekly newspaper issued by the Intelligence and Public Relations Section of the Command.

From 1945 to 1948 he was assistant to the chairman of the Mayor's Business Advisory Committee of New York City. Since May, 1949, he has held his present position as manager of the metals department of the Cerro de Pasco Copper Corporation.

He was first married in December, 1929, in New York City to Lael Tucker. They were divorced in 1940. His second marriage, to Jessie Rivers Savage, daughter of Marion A. and Jessie Rivers Savage, took place in Schenectady, N.Y., on August 1, 1942. Mrs. Stage had formerly lived in New York City.

Europe and during 1926-27 studied at the University of Munich. Then in the spring of 1932 I made a round-the-world trip, which included such countries as Japan, Netherlands East Indies, French Indo China, Siam, and India. The total length of the trip was about eleven months. Its purpose was to become acquainted with the foreign sources of supply and methods of operations of our foreign subsidiaries in Java and Holland. I also was in Europe for my firm for about five months in 1931-32. In 1936 my wife and I made a honeymoon trip to Mexico. In 1946 I spent six months abroad, partly in Europe and partly in the Far East, revisiting sources of supply and also to spur the rebuilding of our foreign subsidiaries that had been put out of business by the war. One of my hobbies is certainly foreign travel, and I hope to do more of it, although in the last few years I have not been further away than Bermuda.

"When I was younger, I also liked climbing mountains and spent quite a bit of time in Switzerland and in the French Alps. In 1947 I probably engaged in my last strenuous mountain climbing by ascending the Grand Teton in Wyoming. Roger Whitney of the Class of 1928 was a member of the same expedition, and there were several other Yale men in the group. At the present moment a good deal of my spare time is taken up with my family, plus local activities in my area of Westchester County."

The local activities include the following: director, Chappaqua Coöperative, 1942-43, treasurer, Cherry Lawn School, Darien, 1935-41, and of the Briarcliff Coöperative Nursery Group, 1949-50; member, citizens committee appointed by the Board of Education, Briarcliff School District; member, price panel in Pleasantville for O.P.A., during the war and volunteer in the medical ward, Grasslands Hospital. Stein has been a member of the New York State Board of Americans for Democratic Action since 1948 and served as chairman of the central Westchester chapter from 1948 to 1950. He has been chairman of the export-import division of the United Jewish Appeal for about four years and during 1949-50 was chairman of the export-import division of the March of Dimes. He has made speeches on foreign trade for the Briarcliff League of Women Voters, the Kiwanis Club of Montreal, the University Club of Pleasantville, the Americans for Democratic Action, etc., a few of which have been published. A member of the Westchester Symphony Orchestra (amateur) from about 1942 to 1944, he is now starting to learn the violin all over again, he says. He belongs to the University Club of Pleasantville and the Java Tiffin Club of New York, of which he was secretary for about six years.

Stein was married January 30, 1936, in New York to Anita H. Gettner, daughter of Herman and Clara Hamburger Gettner. Their children are: Elizabeth C., born September 18, 1938, Robert M. on January 20, 1942, and Helen B. on November 10, 1945, all in New York.

GARDNER HENRY STERN. Vice-president, Hillman's, Inc. (retail grocery chain), 16 West Washington Street, Chicago 2, Ill.; residence, 41 East Burton Place, Chicago.

Stern has been with Hillman's, Inc., since graduation and became president of the company in 1936. He is a trustee of the University of Chicago, the Roosevelt School, and the Chicago Latin School and a director of the Jewish Federation of Chicago and the Chicago Council of Boy Scouts. He entered the Navy with the rank of lieutenant in 1942 and was returned to inactive duty as lieutenant commander in November, 1945. His duty included two years' service at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station and fifteen months as an instructor at the Supply Corps School at Bayonne, N.J.

Stern was married in Chicago on February 12, 1927, to Hanchen Strauss, daughter of Joseph L. and Gussie Mendelsohn Strauss. They have four sons: Gardner H., Jr., born March 27, 1928, Harry L. on June 10, 1930, John L. on August 3, 1933, and Jeffrey L. on January 1, 1936, all in Chicago. Gardner, Jr., Yale '49, was married on June 14, 1950, to Jill Pfaelzer. Harry is a Junior at Yale, John a Senior at the Chicago Latin School, and Jeffrey a member of the Class of 1954 at Andover.

Taking pen in hand when he came to the last question, Stern wrote, "This is something I wouldn't advertise to my secretary, who has done the above typing. I'm just another dull tool from the Class of 1926, with no accomplishments of note (outside of helping produce four new Yale men) and nothing to brag about. I'm in a good income bracket, thanks to careful selection of parents, and hold a responsible position in the firm because my father owned a large interest in it. Otherwise the information given previously would be vastly different. Enjoy golf, swimming, cards, and travel—the usual, in other words. Sorry I can't be more useful in giving interesting data and blowing my own horn a bit, but felt that here at least I should stick to the truth."

JOSEPH ALEXANDER STEWART. Vice-president, Louisville Axe & Tool Company, and vice-president and treasurer, Atlas Plaster & Supply Company, 30th and Greenwood Streets, Louisville 11, Ky.; residence, 2526 Glenmary Avenue, Louisville 4.

Except for a year at the Yale Architectural School and a summer at the Columbia Architectural School, Stewart has been connected with the above companies since graduation. He became vice-president and treasurer of the Atlas Plaster & Supply Company in 1929 and vice-president of the Louisville Axe & Tool Company six years later. He is a director of the Federal Chemical Company and a member of the Louisville Council for Historical Sites and Buildings. He served on the City Zoning and Planning Committee from 1938 to 1940, on the board of the Louisville Philharmonic Society for six years and as its president for two, and on the board of the Mental Hygiene Clinic for three years. Stewart is a life member of the Sons of the American Revolution, the Society of Colonial Wars, (governor, 1940-41; deputy governor general since 1949), the Virginia Historical Society, the Filson Club, and the J. B. Speed Museum. He is a director of the Wynn Stay and Louisville Country clubs and belongs also to the Louisville Beagle Club and the Racquet and University clubs of Chicago.

On April 10, 1929, he was married in Louisville to Virginia Bayless Lyons, daughter of S. Clay and Virginia L. Bayless Lyons. They have three children: Anne Carter, born January 14, 1930, Lyle Bayless on April 24, 1932, and J. Adger, 2d, on July 5, 1939, all in Louisville. Anne is in the Junior Class at Vassar and Lyle at Bennett Junior College.

Stewart writes: "Shortly after college, realizing how unsatisfactory our winter climate was for out-of-door use, mostly too cold for golf and tennis and not too good under foot for riding, some of us started a Beagle Club which is still struggling. We have hunts about every ten days on different friends' farms and usually a drink and a bite afterwards. It has been very pleasant and sociable and we hunt a fine pack of beagles.

"I usually get to Florida a few weeks each winter in the general vicinity of Delray Beach, which has a considerable Louisville colony. If the Northerners keep on voting Democratic, I would like to move down there and quit struggling.

"I enjoyed being president of our city's orchestra, the Louisville Philharmonic Society, in 1944 and 1945. I was able to increase our childrens' program from 400 up to about 8,000 at each concert. It was plenty of work but fun.

"I see Bill Stewart and Crosby occasionally. Crosby and Barlow and their spouses flew in Crosby's new plane and spent a few days this past fall. I have been East only a time or two, to see my daughters graduate from Chatham Hall and Dobbs Ferry. The older one is about to be married to a Princeton youth. Ain't that awful?

"Anybody that gets down this way is always welcome. Just let me know."

WILLIAM STEELE STEWART. District sales manager, Lincoln Electric Company (arc welders, electrodes, and supplies), Cleveland 1, Ohio; residence, 2235 Woodmere Drive, Cleveland Heights 6.

From August, 1926, to February, 1928, Stewart worked for the Lincoln Electric Company in the shop and on the road. From then until August, 1930, he was San Francisco district manager and has since been Cleveland district sales manager. He is a member of the American Welding Society and the Association of Iron and Steel Engineers and has served as a member of the Republican Precinct Committee.

His marriage to Sarah Pope, daughter of Henry Francis and Sarah Rogers Collins Pope, took place in Cleveland on October 22, 1928. Their older daughter, Sarah Pope, who was born in San Francisco, June 8, 1930, attended the Hathaway Brown School in Cleveland and is now in the Class of 1952 at Connecticut College for Women. The other children were born in Cleveland, Nancy Emily on October 21, 1934, and William Peter on June 18, 1939. Nancy is in the eleventh grade at the Hathaway Brown School and William in the sixth grade at the Hawkins School for Boys.

CHARLES LATIMER STILLMAN. Executive vice-president and treasurer, Time, Inc., 9 Rockefeller Plaza, New York 20, N.Y.; residence, 1 East End Avenue, New York 21.

In January, 1948, Stillman became executive vice-president, treasurer, and a director of Time. He is also a director of the General Precision Equipment Corporation and the Pacific Press, a member of the branch committee of the Chemical Bank & Trust Company, president and a director of the Henry Luce Foundation and the Leland Stillman Foundation, a member of the board of managers of the Vocational Service Center, a branch of the Y.M.C.A. in New York, and of the board of United Service to China and of the Foreign Policy Association. He is an associate of the Addison Gallery of American Art in Andover, Mass. In 1948 Stillman went to China as consultant on the China program of E.C.A. He belongs to the Links, Union, Cloud, University, and River clubs of New York, the Fairfield County Hunt, the Country Club of Fairfield, and the Chicago Club.

He was first married on November 18, 1932, in New York to Frances Disoway Johnson, daughter of Norman Gildersleeve Johnson. His second marriage, to Marjorie Marie Hodgson Peters, of Greenwich, Conn., took place in New Orleans on January 14, 1950. She is the daughter of Daniel B. Hodgson and of Dona Maria Invernizio y Alvarez. Stillman has three children, all of whom were born in New York, Charles L., Jr., on April 13, 1934, Stanley Wells on June 12, 1939, and Louise Lombard on August 23, 1940. The older boy is in the Class of 1952 at Andover.

COLBY STILSON. Address, care Breed, Abbott & Morgan, 15 Broad Street, New York, N.Y.

CARLOS FRENCH STODDARD, JR. Director, Office of University Development, Yale University; office, 137 College Street, New Haven; residence, Blue Hills Road, North Haven.

From Stoddard: "Twenty years almost to the day, after the News, under Stoddard, the Lords, McKee, et al., hurled its last anti-chapel editorial in the general direction of Dwight Hall and Dean Brown, Stoddard was invited to be a graduate adviser and treasurer of Dwight Hall. Same Dwight Hall; same Stoddard, according to his passport. Anyway, I accepted, and I'm glad. Haven't yet ventured to break this news to L. Beebe, but will when I've fully recovered from the initial surprise.

"Life in New Haven has a lot to recommend it, especially the presence of the University community. However, the intellectual surroundings have a limited effect upon the country tastes of this member of '26, who is more likely than not to be pruning his apple trees, or mowing an orchard, or heading with family to Martha's Vineyard to sail.

"Perhaps this a deceptively simple picture. Life in any town in New England is waist-deep in demands and responsibilities, often highly personalized. That, as you all know well, is close to the best of it."

Stoddard became connected with the Office of University Development in May, 1948, not long after its establishment. He served as associate director until July, 1950, when he became director.

He was a reporter on the New Haven Register during the first year after graduation, was "office boy and runner" for Dominick & Dominick in New York during the autumn of 1927, and thereafter, until returning to Yale, was vice-president and a director of Day, Stoddard & Williams, investment bankers in New Haven, and treasurer and a director of the Red River Valley Company (the Bell Ranch). Stoddard is a director of the General Hospital Society of Connecticut and the Grace-New Haven Community Hospital.

On December 11, 1926, he was married in Birmingham, Ala., to Caroline Lyons Harris, daughter of Arthur Buckner and Caroline Lyons Harris. Their older daughter, Sandol, who was born in Birmingham, December 16, 1927, graduated from Chatham Hall in 1944 and from Bryn Mawr in 1948. Her marriage to Felix Max Warburg, 2d, Harvard '48, took place in New Haven on April 2, 1949; their son, Anthony Stoddard, was born September 6, 1950. Caroline, the younger girl, born May 26, 1934, in New Haven, is graduating from the Ethel Walker School in 1951 and will enter Smith in the fall.

JOHNSON STODDARD. Partner, Boardman, Stoddard & McCarthy, lawyers, Bridgeport City Trust Building, Bridgeport 3, Conn.; residence, Greens Farms Road, Southport, Conn.

Stoddard, who was admitted to the Connecticut Bar in 1930, was associated with Marsh, Stoddard & Day from 1929 to 1934. He was a partner in the firm of Curtis & Stoddard from then until 1942, becoming a partner in Boardman, Stoddard & McCarthy upon its formation at that time. He was appointed conciliation commissioner under the Frazier-Lempke Act in 1934 and served as public defender for Fairfield County until 1942. He taught business law at Bridgeport University for two years, served as chairman of the Fairfield Zoning Board of Appeals from 1934 to 1946, and has been chairman of the Westport Town Planning Zoning Commission since 1948. Stoddard was the unsuccessful Democratic candidate for judge of probate in Fairfield in 1932 and 1934, and when he sent in his report for our book last October, he said that he was then a candidate for judge of probate in Westport on the Democratic ticket. He is secretary of the Bridgeport Automobile Dealers Association, assistant secretary of the Atlantic Coast Line Company, secretary and treasurer of the Dartis Corporation (real estate developers), president of the Family Service Society, and a director of the Bridgeport-Stratford Community Chest (president, 1946-47), the Blue Ribbon Garage, Inc., the Fairfield Land & Title Company, and the Volunteer Bureau. In 1944 he served as president of the Connecticut Conference of Social Workers. He is a member of the Connecticut State Bar Association (formerly on the executive committee and chairman of the committee on civil rights), the Bridgeport Bar Association, the American Bar Association, the American Counsel Association, the Phi Delta Phi legal fraternity, the University and Comedy clubs of Bridgeport, the Country and Aubichwi Gun clubs of Fairfield, the Pequot Yacht Club of Southport (governor), and the Yale Club of New York.

On September 5, 1931, he was married in Stockbridge, Mass., to Constance Brandon, daughter of Henry J. Brandon, Yale '93, and Helen Armstrong Brandon, of Indianapolis. They have three children: Anne, born June 10, 1932, Cecily on February 26, 1934, and Brandon on March 31, 1937. Cecily is a Senior at the Ethel Walker School in Simsbury. Anne graduated there in 1949 and is now a Sophomore at Vassar. The boy is in the Class of 1954 at Deerfield Academy.

As supplement to the above, Stoddard tells us, "Right after a month's wedding trip to England in 1931, we went into production of the next generation and with the exception of intra-country travel, were restricted until 1949, when we took a month in Haiti and St. Croix in the Virgin Islands. Most vacations are spent on the family farm in the Berkshires, still operating after 108 years of ownership.

"Practicing law has been fun, but the best part was inviting my lawyer-father to join my firm. Had quite a time defending alleged criminals from 1935 to 1942, with a few fine murders to liven things up, but now have relaxed into easier and more lucrative lines, though I still like to try cases.

"Because somebody said I couldn't do it, I fixed a grandfather's clock and since then have had an on-and-off hobby of collecting and fixing Connecticut weight clocks. Furthermore, I challenge any classmate to produce as good a bar as mine of which he did all the plumbing. I have built three small buildings, two of which are still standing and may even be when this is printed—never mind the third. I also like to sail and used to have a Star, but if you will look at the schools my children attend you will see why I haven't a boat now. Another hobby maybe is the collecting of Victorian houses (I've owned two) of the Charles Addams variety with bats and ghosts, but plenty of room—eight acres of land and a big bar, with just a small view of Long Island Sound. Guess land and country give most satisfaction—heard a pheasant squawk on the lower two acres this A.M. I guess I've got it good. Little woman caused it.

"Kids are healthy, get far better marks and are better adjusted than we or anyway I was at their ages—in fact, the improvement is noticeable in the entire 15-20 year bracket to which I have been considerably exposed through my daughters.

"I want an M.G., a yawl, and a billiard table, but don't and haven't a radio or television set."

MORTON JOSEPH STONE. Address, Berkshire Road, Gates Mills, Ohio.

ANDREW VARICK STOUT, JR. Partner, Dominick & Dominick, investment bankers, 14 Wall Street, New York 5, N.Y.; residence, Farms Road, Stamford, Conn.

Stout writes: "I have been with Dominick & Dominick ever since I graduated from college, with the exception of four and a half years, from 1941 to 1945, which were spent in the Navy. I commute every day from my home in Stamford, where we live all year round.

"I have been active in recent years in Yale affairs. Bates McKee, Al Choate, and I were somewhat instrumental in organizing the constitution and executive committee of the Class of 1926. I was chairman of this committee for one year. I also am vice-chairman of the University Committee on Endowment and Gifts. This is a pleasant job, in that I work with Toddie Stoddard and Squidge Lord at New Haven, although raising large amounts of monies these days is difficult, as we all know.

"I have been fortunate in that I have traveled rather extensively during the last twenty-five years and have seen many of our classmates during these travels."

Stout, who became a partner in Dominick & Dominick on July 1, 1927, was a governor of the New York Stock Exchange from 1930 to 1936. He is a director of the National Shares Corporation and has been a trustee of St. Luke's Hospital since 1935 and a member-at-large of the Yale Alumni Board since 1949. He belongs to the Racquet and Tennis Club of New York (governor, 1933-41), the Lunch Club (president, 1941-42), the Yale Club, the River Club, the Round Hill and Field clubs of Greenwich, and the Laurentian Club.

In 1940 Stout was commissioned a lieutenant in the Naval Reserve. From July, 1941, to February, 1943, he was assigned to the Port Director's Office in New York in charge of the Armed Guard on merchant ships. In May, 1943, following a three months' course at the Air Combat Intelligence School at Quonset Point, he was assigned to Jacksonville, Fla., where he was in charge of the Air Combat Intelligence Section on the staff of the Commander of the Air Operational Training Command until October. From then until September, 1944, he was attached to the Naval Air Office on the staff of the Commander of the Naval Air Forces, European theatre, in London, his principal duties being in connection with liaison work with the R.A.F. Coastal Command. After two months at the Navy Department in Washington, he was at Pearl Harbor on the staff of the Commander of the Naval Air Forces in the South Pacific until April, 1945, when he was assigned to the staff of Admiral Radford, Commander of Carrier Division 6 on board the aircraft carrier Yorktown, attached to the 3d Fleet and Task Force 38 (in charge of air intelligence). During his five month's service on the Yorktown he participated in the battles of Okinawa, Iwo Jima, and the Japanese home islands. He was detached from active duty with the rank of commander in November, 1945. Stout received a Presidential Unit Citation and Commendation.

He was first married December 31, 1926, in New York to Juliet Carleton, daughter of Richard High and Juliet C. Buck Carleton. They were divorced in 1946. On October 4, 1946, he was married in New York to Elizabeth Sprague Simonds, daughter of Phineas and Elizabeth Shaw Sprague, of Boston. He has two children: Juliet Carrington, born December 29, 1927, and Andrew Varick, 3d, on August 2, 1930; and four stepchildren: Elizabeth Sprague Simonds, born July 16, 1929, Daniel Simonds, 3d, on May 11, 1931, Charles Sprague Simonds on February 20, 1934, and Holly Simonds on September 15, 1940. The two oldest were born in New York and the others in Boston. Juliet attended the Garrison Forest School and Lawrence College in Wisconsin, and Elizabeth went to Farmington and Smith. Andrew is at the Westminster School, Daniel at Harvard (after preparing for college at St. Paul's), and Charles at the Brooks School.

GARDNER DOMINICK STOUT. Partner, Dominick & Dominick, investment bankers, 14 Wall Street, New York 5, N.Y.; residence, 150 East 73d Street, New York 21.

Stout became a partner in Dominick & Dominick on July 1, 1929. He has recently been elected a director of the New York Air Brake Company and the National Shares Company and has for some time been a director of the American Bank Note Company and vice-president and a director of the Association of Stock Exchange Firms. Stout is a trustee of his old school—St. Paul's—and chairman of the finance committee of Inwood House and of the executive committee of the National Audubon Society.

On March 1, 1942, he reported for active duty in the Navy with the rank of lieutenant. He was assigned to the staff of the Commander of the Eastern Sea Frontier, his first duties there being in anti-submarine warfare and convoy control and later as assistant operations officer until he was detached late in 1944. He then reported for duty to the Commander of the 7th Fleet in New Guinea as assistant operations officer, and in March, 1945, was assigned in the same capacity to the Commander of the Philippine Sea Frontier. He was promoted to lieutenant commander in June, 1944, and to commander in October, 1945. His release to inactive duty followed in November.

Stout's marriage to Clare Kellogg, daughter of John Prentice and Ethel Thornell Kellogg, took place at Monmouth Beach, N.J., on August 9, 1930. She had previously lived in New York City. There are three boys in the family: Gardner Dominick, Jr., born June 30, 1931, and the twins, Richard Varick and Prentice Kellogg, on January 10, 1933, all in New York. They have all attended the Buckley School. Gardner and Richard went on to St. Paul's, where the latter is a Senior; Gardner graduated in 1950 and is now in the Freshman Class at Princeton. Prentice attended the Dublin School in Dublin, N.H., and is now in the Class of 1952 at the Ransom School in Miami.

THOMAS BELL SWEENEY, JR. General agent, Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States, 708 Hawley Building, Wheeling, W.Va.; residence, Highland Park, Wheeling.

Sweeney joined the staff of Time Magazine in 1928, after a year at Oxford. He was staff political reporter on the New York Herald Tribune during 1929-30 and subsequently became associated with the Equitable Life Assurance Society. Since 1940 he has been a general agent and partner in the organization.

Sweeney, who has been a civilian pilot since 1922, had four years' active service (1942-46) as a lieutenant commander in the Naval Air Force, with duties as teacher and navigator at Naval Air Training stations in the African, European, American, and Asiatic zones. He was promoted to commander, U.S.N.R., in July, 1948. In 1950 he was appointed civilian director and coordinator for disaster relief in Wheeling. Sweeney is a member of the board of directors and the budget committee of the Wheeling Community Chest, serving as general chairman of the campaign committee in 1949, and in 1941 was head of the employee salary deduction division in the West Virginia War Bond drive. He was president of the Ohio County Young Republican Club from 1936 to 1940, served as a State Senator from the 1st District from 1938 to 1942, was elected a delegate-at-large to the National Convention in 1948, and was Republican nominee for the U.S. Senate from West Virginia in 1940 and 1946. (The latter was contested before the U.S. Senate Election Committee for two years before it was decided in favor of Senator Kilgore.) The Ladies Home Journal for September, 1948, contained an article, "Will

They Count Your Vote," of which Sweeney was the co-author with Bob McManus of '26.

During the Thirties Sweeney was on the board of directors and workshop chairman for the Wheeling Little Theatre and directed several plays. He is a member of the Association of Life Underwriters (past president of the state organization), the American Legion, AmVets, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Kiwanis, the Elks, Moose, and Eagles and is an associate member of the Fraternal Order of Police.

"My hobby, resorted to only in despondent moments, has been the composition of chess problems," he says. "I have had a number published in periodicals at home and abroad, the most recent appearing in the September issue of the American Chess Problemist. My efforts at literary composition have met with less appreciation—in fact, I long ago concluded that book publishers, magazine editors, and producers of Broadway plays must be every bit as stupid as the 1925 board of editors of the Yale Literary Magazine. I am not quite as much of an 'old man' as when I was in college. Repeated matrimonial rejections have spared me from domesticity and made me younger and younger, in fact a 22-year-old girl looks older to me now than when I used to be in college."

HENRY GORDON SWEET. Managing trustee, Henry C. Rowe Trust, 70 Ferry Street, New Haven 13, Conn.; residence, Joydon Farm, Mt. Carmel, Conn.

"It all happened a long time ago," says Sweet, hitting a nostalgic note. "To some it is doubtful that they were the shortest, gladdest years. There are many satisfactions in these times, and the years grow shorter. Memory throws people like Charlie Bennett into sharp relief. I wish he knew how many times he is remembered by reluctant students of Ethics 4. I miss Archie Quarrier and the great gangling Frissell.

"But all is not yet gone, my brothers. Tot Stoddard, suave Olympian, a man of parts and power, exerts influence for the greater glory of Yale. Sherman Kent, historian, terrifies successive classes of students with intellectual passion and violence, becoming one of the Greats. Wilson Pierson, shrouded in dignity and granite calm, inhabits the accustomed places and views our collective fate with grim humor.

"Somewhere there is the sense that it is a good show; that certain humane insights were offered to us in Yale College which are still of significance in the business of living."

The assets of the Henry C. Rowe Trust, of which Sweet has been managing trustee since 1943, include H. C. Rowe & Company, growers and packers of Northern oysters, a business established in 1868. He is also president, treasurer, and board chairman of three subsidiaries. Sweet has been engaged in the same business since graduation, with the exception of the year 1945, when he served as a consultant to the Division of Ship Requirements, War Shipping Administration, in Washington. On the side: dirt farming (gray birch, poison ivy, scrawny apples, re-forestation, and amateur photography ("of some merit but not yet widely known!"))

During 1943-44 Sweet was controller of the New Haven Warning District of the Connecticut Civilian Defense. He served as president of the New Haven Rotary Club in 1947 and of the New Haven Tuberculosis and Health Association the following year. He is a director of the Oyster Institute of North America, a fellow of the American Geographical Society, an associate fellow of Pierson College at Yale, a trustee of Eta chapter of the Zeta Psi Association, and a member of the Bermuda Biological Laboratories for Research and the Century Association of New York. He had an article, "Oyster Conservation in Connecticut," in the Geographical Review for October, 1940, and one on "Starfish Prevalence and Production Problems" in the Bulletin of the Bingham Oceanographic Collection of Yale for April, 1946.

On May 16, 1931, he was married in Boston to Joy Singleton Copley Greene, daughter of Henry Copley and Roslind Huidekoper Greene, of Cambridge. They have two children: Jonathan Copley, born July 24, 1935, and Gay on August 25, 1942, both in New Haven. Jonathan is a lower middler at Exeter.

FRANK FIFE SYMINGTON. Proprietor, F. F. Symington & Company, manufacturers' agent, 1415 Mercantile Trust Building, Baltimore 2, Md.; residence, 16 West Mt. Vernon Place, Baltimore 1.

Symington was engaged in sales work for four years after graduation, first with the Gibson Island Company, later with the American Radiator Company, and then with Gillete & Company, investment bankers. From April, 1930, to September, 1935, he was a partner in the investment counsel firm of Symington, Wright & Galligher and during the next six years a director and member of the executive committee of the Colonial Trust Company of Baltimore. From July, 1941, to February, 1947, he was president of the Clay Realty Corporation and the Auto Realty Corporation, in the meantime (October, 1943) becoming associated with the Brandt-Warner Manufacturing Company, of which he was first executive vice-president and then president until April, 1949. Since then he has been president of the York Axle & Forge Company and, in addition, has been proprietor of F. F. Symington & Company since last September. From 1938 to 1943 he handled numerous special assignments in accounting procedures, setting up cost systems, corporate financing, etc.

Symington is chairman of the Anti-Fireworks Committee, and among other special interests have been the Maryland Society for the Prevention of Blindness, of which he was treasurer and a director from 1938 to 1943, and the Community Chest, on whose special gifts committee he served from 1934 to 1943.

He was first married August 18, 1926, in Garrison, Md., to Grace Romaine Cover, daughter of Loring Andrews and Grace Stayman Cover. They were divorced in 1947. On December 27, 1947, he was married in New York City to Helen Elizabeth Carr, daughter of George W. and Sarah Henry Carr. His son, Macduff, who was born December 1, 1927, graduated from the Woodberry Forest School in 1945 and from Yale in 1949. On September 1, 1950, he enlisted as a private in the Air Force and subsequently entered the Officer Candidate School at Lackland Air Force Base in San Antonio, Texas; he was to be commissioned on March 8, 1951. Symington's older daughter, Grace S., born June 15, 1929, attended Farmington and then entered Vassar as a member of the Class of 1951. She left in June, 1949, and on February 17, 1950, was married in Garrison to William F. Rienhoff, 3d. The younger girl, Emily Harrison, born May 12, 1936, is at the Garrison Forest School. The children were all born in Baltimore.

PHILIP BRADFORD TABER. Chairman of board, American Extract Company (tanning materials), 291 Elm Street, Buffalo, N.Y.; residence, 16 Middlesex Road, Buffalo, N.Y.

Describing himself as a typical middle-aged manufacturer, gradually graying, threatened with ulcers, Taber says he has no regrets yet. He adds, "Golf handicap rising. Martini capacity lowering. Traveled considerably abroad before the war on business and pleasure—mostly South and in Canada since. Do quite a bit of hunting and fishing."

Since 1945 Taber has been chairman of the board of the American Extract Company, with which he became connected upon graduating from Yale. He is also treasurer and a director of the Taber Pump Company. On May 15, 1942, he was commissioned a captain, A.U.S., and assigned to the Ordnance Department at the Aberdeen Proving Ground. He was transferred in June to the Office of the Chief of Ordnance and served in Washington until June, 1945. He was promoted to major in 1943 and to lieutenant colonel the following year.

He belongs to the Pytouga Fish and Game Club of Quebec, of which he was president from 1947 to 1950, the Pack Club of Buffalo (president, 1949), and also to the Buffalo Country Club, the Buffalo Tennis and Squash Club, and the Rolling Rock Club of Ligonier, Pa.

Taber's marriage to Ann Penn took place in Lewiston, N.Y., on September 3, 1930. She is the daughter of Edwin Forrest Kitson and Anita Penn Kitson. Their daughter, Anita Penn, who was born in Buffalo on July 23, 1934, is at the Foxcroft School.

HARRELL NEWTON TAGUE. Instructor in English, Louisville Male High School, and in public speaking, University of Louisville; residence, 2602 Landor Avenue, Louisville 5, Ky.

Tague, who has been an instructor at the Louisville Male High School since 1926 and at the University of Louisville since 1930, says, "I find myself thinking often, during my teaching, of Chauncey Tinker and William Lyon Phelps—two men very unlike but who have influenced my thinking a lot." He adds, "I served as a reader in English for the College Entrance Examination Board off and on from 1938 to 1948. In 1933 I did a lot of traveling in North Africa, Palestine, Russia, and southern Europe."

Tague is chairman of the board of trustees of Seneca Vista, a small suburb of Louisville. He took his M.A. at the University of Louisville in 1932. His marriage to Anna Troutman Wells, daughter of Yelverton Peyton and Lottie Harned Wells, took place in Warsaw, Ky., on March 16, 1935. Mrs. Tague's home was formerly in Louisville. They have two children: Bette Anne, born on August 13, 1938, and Harrell Newton, Jr., on July 20, 1945.

DONALD PHILLIPS TAYLOR. Address, 439 Central Avenue, Rahway, N.J.

JOHN CORWIN EMERSON TAYLOR. Assistant professor and head, Fine Arts Department, Trinity College, Hartford 6, Conn.; residence, 30 Four Mile Road, West Hartford 7.

Taylor writes: "In addition to teaching, I am also an artist and have exhibited regularly since 1929 in both local and national shows—for example, in Hartford, Boston, Rockport and Gloucester, Mass., New York, New Orleans, and San Francisco; exhibited at the Corcoran Biennial (Washington, D.C.) in 1935 and Pepsi-Cola in 1946. I have won two prizes and three honorable mentions; pictures are included in many private collections."

Taylor was a member of the faculty of the Lawrenceville School from 1936 to 1938 and again during 1940-41, in the meantime having taken his M.A. at Yale in 1940. He was appointed an instructor at Trinity in 1941 and since 1946 has been assistant professor and head of the Fine Arts Department. During the war he was one of the civilian instructors in the Navy V-12 Unit at Trinity, teaching engineering drawing and descriptive geometry. From 1942 to 1945 he was a part-time member of the faculty of the Loomis and Chaffee schools in Windsor, Conn., and he was a lecturer at the Neuropsychiatric Institute in Hartford from 1943 to 1945 and at the Hartford Art School during the next two years.

He belongs to the Rockport Art Association, the North Shore Arts Association, the Connecticut Academy of Fine Arts, the American Archeological Society, the Society of Colonial Wars, the Salmagundi Club, and the University Club of Hartford.

Taylor was married June 26, 1937, in Hartford to Eleanor V. D. Beckwith, daughter of Oliver R. and Sara Goodrich Beckwith, of West Hartford. They have had four children: John C. E., Jr., born April 26, 1938, in Trenton, N.J., who is now in his first year of junior high; Eleanor V. D., born November 28, 1940, in Hartford; Oliver B., born July 19, 1943, in Hartford; and William A., born March 10, 1947, in Hartford, and died May 23, 1948, in West Hartford.

PRESCOTT RICHARDSON TAYLOR. Assistant to head of tax department, Kidder, Peabody & Company, investment bankers, 75 Federal Street, Boston, Mass.; residence, 20 Stowell Road, Winchester, Mass.

Taylor writes: "A mild desire to become an architect enrolled me at the Harvard Graduate School of Architecture and Landscape Architecture in the fall of 1926. By the following spring, however, the ole debbil higher mathematics in the shape of trig and calculus had laid me low, so I switched to the Landscape School. There followed summer school in 1927 and further study in this field in 1927-28. During the latter summer a chance to get some practical experience seemed like a good opportunity, but two or three months in the office of Arthur A. Shurtleff (during which time I had the pleasurable experience of working on the Williamsburg Restoration plans) and a further stint in the office of Bremer W. Pond convinced me that as an architect I might become a good draftsman and nothing more. A chance meeting with George Riggs, '27, at a wedding party, one highball too many, and I succumbed to the lure of Mammon and the first week in December, 1928, joined the First Boston Corporation as a member of their investment supervision department. This happy association continued until January, 1934, when the firm, deciding they had too many statisticians and not enough salesmen, handed me three months' salary, a thousand good wishes, and bade me good-bye. (Yes, that's right, I got fired!)

"There followed a period of about six weeks 'between shows,' and the end of February I joined the firm of Kidder, Peabody & Company as a general investment analyst and wound up as manager of the statistical department of the Boston office, which position kept me fairly well occupied until I assumed my present post in July, 1945. Just why I decided to take up tax work, I'll never know, except that as the man said when asked why he jumped through a plate glass window, it seemed like a good idea at the time. Six years of it have left me with considerably less hair, a badly frayed disposition, incipient ulcers, and on my third pair of bifocals! Leave us now consider some of the more pleasant highlights of the past twenty-five years.

"August, 1929, and the day I said, 'I do,' in a small stone church on the side of a mountain in our beloved Catskills and February 8, 1938, when the nurse at the hospital said, 'It's a boy!' stand out as chief of these. At thirteen my son is now taller than his mother, can almost best his father in a rough and tumble, and shows a definite leaning towards Princeton! Perhaps it's just as well as, with four members of the family Elis, one shouldn't get into a rut! As for travels, let me think—Canada and the White Mountains, various and sundry 'alarms and excursions' to parts of the Eastern seaboard (particularly Williamsburg, Va.), Bermuda in 1935, and a six weeks' motor trip through England and parts of Scotland and Wales in 1936 rank among the tops. Three months of most summers are spent by the family in the Catskills at Haines Falls, N.Y., and I commute by car on week-ends and look forward to the day, if ever, when I can retire there for keeps.

"For hobbies there are photography, playing golf and the piano (both badly), and attempting to build a summer home, which at long last has been finished after three years of blood, sweat, toil, and tears. The pursuit of ancient motor vehicles ranks as a major interest at the present time, and any member of the Class who has any knowledge of the whereabouts of a 1914 Mercer Sport Touring is urgently requested to run, not walk, to the nearest telephone and wire me collect!

"To sum it all up, the past twenty-five years have been busy ones, but I cannot report any outstanding achievements which would call for headlines in the newspapers, an article in the New Yorker, or my picture in a magazine ad as a Man of Distinction. In other words, 'No banners, no bugles!' "

Taylor was a member of the 1st Motor Squadron, 1st Corps of Cadets, Massachusetts State Guard, from September, 1940, until it was officially disbanded in October, 1946. He enlisted as a private and ranked as a sergeant at the time of his discharge. He belongs to the Veterans Association of the 1st Corps of Cadets, the Antique Automobile Club of America, the Veteran Motor Car Club of America, and the Yale Club of Boston. He is a director of the Twilight Cottagers and co-chairman of the governing board of Twilight Park.

All Angels' Church, Haines Falls, was the scene of his marriage on August 10, 1929, to Elizabeth Cleveland Birch, daughter of John Harvey and Ellen Cleveland Crane Birch, of New York City. Prescott Richardson Taylor, Jr., who is a native of Boston, is now in the second form of the Belmont Hill Upper School in Belmont, Mass. He was born February 8, 1938.

ROSWELL FLOWER TAYLOR. Lawyer, 34 Flower Building, Watertown, N.Y. (P.O. Box 1); residence, 224 South Massey Street, Watertown.

In 1929 Taylor graduated from the Cornell Law School and was admitted to the practice of law in the State of New York and Federal courts. Until 1934 he was employed as an attorney by Cobb, Cosgrove, Harter & Wright of Watertown, with which he had first become connected in 1926. He was a partner in the firm of Cosgrove, Scanlon, Harter & Wright from 1934 to 1938 and has since been independently engaged in the practice of law. Taylor served as a member of the City Council from 1930 to 1933 and was corporation counsel for the city the following year. He is president and a director of three Watertown concerns, the Woodruff Holding Corporation, Mosher-Baker, Inc., and the Taylor Refiner Company, Inc., treasurer and a director of the Woodruff Hotel Company, vice-president of the Oswego (N.Y.) Soy Products Corporation, and a director of the Watertown National Bank, the Agricultural Insurance Company of Watertown, and H. J. Howe, Inc., of Syracuse. He is a trustee of the House of the Good Samaritan, a Watertown hospital, and a vestryman of Trinity Church.

Taylor was commissioned an ensign, U.S.N.R., for deck duty in 1928 and during part of the time until 1933, when he resigned his commission, served as commanding officer of the 13th Separate Fleet Division at Watertown and Sackets Harbor. In February, 1936, he was re-commissioned as a lieutenant and in April, 1941, went on active duty. He was commissioned a lieutenant commander at that time and served in this country until March, 1945, when he had a short tour of duty in Puerto Rico. He then returned to the 3d Naval District, New York, where he was stationed until he was ordered to inactive duty in April. He resigned his Reserve commission in March, 1947.

Taylor is a member of the New York State and American Bar associations, the Jefferson County Golf and Black River Valley clubs of Watertown, the University and Century clubs of Syracuse, the Thousand Islands Yacht Club (governor), the Crescent Yacht Club of Chaumont, N.Y., the Madison Square Garden and Yale clubs of New York, Tappi, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and the American Legion.

On September 14, 1926, he was married in Watertown to Helen Marie Baker, daughter of Ralph Steven and Sybil Coughlin Baker. Their son, Roswell Flower, Jr., who was born in Watertown, February 26, 1930, attended the Fessenden, Hotchkiss, Cascadilla, and Westminster schools and is now a Senior at the New York State Institute of Technology. Their daughter, Terry Baker, born April 9, 1932, in Watertown, graduated from the Ethel Walker School in 1950 and is now in the Class of 1952 at Bennett Junior College.

Our formidable question 21 produced the following: "I fear to answer this question because I probably would say too little or bore you with too much. Therefore, I will stand on the foregoing."

HENRY HUGH THOMAS. Address, care British Embassy, Shanghai, China.

HUGH CURRIE THOMPSON, JR. Partner, Tucson Clinic, 110 South Scott Street, Tucson, Ariz.; residence, 135 South Palomar Drive, Tucson.

Thompson took his M.D. at Columbia in 1930 and served internships in New York—at St. Luke's Hospital from 1930 to 1932 and at the Babies Hospital the following year. From 1933 to 1938 he was engaged in the private practice of medicine in Albany, N.Y., and then went to Tucson, where he was on the medical staff of the Desert Sanatorium for a year. In January, 1940, he joined the Tucson Clinic as a pediatrician and eight years later became a partner in the clinic. He is pediatrician to the Tucson Medical Center, St. Mary's Hospital, and the Pima County Hospital of Tucson and has been chief of staff at the latter hospital since 1948.

While in New York, Thompson was for three years a member of Squadron A, National Guard, and from February, 1943, to December, 1945, was on active duty as a major in the Medical Corps, A.U.S. He was at the Air Force Station Hospital at Lincoln, Nebr., until January, 1944, and was then assigned to the medical service of the 216th General Hospital, with which he served for twenty months in England, France, and Germany.

Thompson has contributed articles to the American Journal of Diseases of Children, the Journal of Pediatrics, the Archives of Pediatrics, and the New York State Journal of Medicine. He is a member of the American Academy of Pediatrics, the Pima County Medical Society (president, 1950), the Arizona Association (chairman, professional board, 1947-48; Council member, 1949-50), the Arizona Pediatrics Society (president, 1948), the Nu Sigma Nu medical fraternity, the Old Pueblo Club, the Tucson Country Club, and the American Legion.

He was married September 20, 1933, in New York City, to Victoria Buel, daughter of Clarence Clough and Maria Victoria Tomlhon Buel. They have three children: Hugh Currie, 3d, born August 13, 1935, in Albany, Richard Maxwell on April 12, 1937, also in Albany, and Betsy Clough on February 14, 1940, in Tucson. Hugh, Jr., is at the Tucson High School and Richard in junior high.

"My chief interest is the practice of medicine, but during the years I have developed considerable interest in the public relation of physicians to the community at large," Thompson says. "My hobbies include travel and deep-sea fishing. Last spring I landed my first marlin at Guaymas, Mexico. I hope to take the whole family on a trip across the country next year, arriving in New Haven in June. Our most memorable trip was to Rainbow Bridge in the Navajo country of northern Arizona. Incidentally, we took it with Sidney Dean, '26, and his wife. It's country few people have ever seen, and you have to pack in."

CHARLES TERRY TREADWAY, JR. President, Bristol Bank & Trust Company, 200 Main Street, Bristol, Conn.; residence, 30 Ledyard Road, West Hartford, Conn.

From September, 1926, to June, 1935, Treadway was associated with Conning & Company, an investment brokerage firm in Hartford. Since then he has been with the Bristol Bank & Trust Company, as secretary until January, 1940, as vice-president for the next seven years, and as president since then. He has been a director since 1940 and is at present on the boards of the Horton Bristol Manufacturing Company, the Terryville Trust Company, and the E. Ingraham Company. He is president and a trustee of the Oxford School and a trustee of the Hartford Seminary Foundation and the Gaylord Farm Sanatorium.

Treadway served on the West Hartford Town Council from April, 1930, to October, 1935, being vice-president from 1931 to 1933, and he was on the Board of Finance from April, 1930, until January, 1946 (vice-chairman, October, 1935-January, 1939; chairman the remainder of the time). Back in 1940 he attended the Rutgers University Graduate School of Banking.

On June 18, 1927, he was married in Plantsville, Conn., to Kathryn Louise Dickerman, daughter of Raymond Porter and Louise Carter Clark Dickerman. They have two children: Ann Louise, born July 25, 1928, and Charles T., 3d, on August 17, 1931, both in Hartford. Ann attended the Oxford School and the Madeira School, where she graduated in 1946, and then entered Smith with the Class of 1950. Her marriage to B. Botsford Young, Jr., of Lake Forest, Ill., took place June 4, 1949. Charles went to the Kingswood School in West Hartford, graduated from Taft in 1950, and is now a Freshman at Yale.

"My particular interest during the last few years," Treadway says, "has been a yearly fishing trip to Canada to the St. Bernard Fish and Game Club. Mrs. Treadway and I have been fortunate enough to be able to do a little traveling, but have not made any extensive trips. I still play golf on occasion, but my game has not seemed to improve during the last twenty-five years."

PERCY TUCKER. President, Tucker Motor Company, 3415 South Grand Street, St. Louis 18, Mo.; residence, Creve Couer, St. Louis County.

The Tucker Motor Company, of which Tucker became president in 1927, deals in Oldsmobiles. He is a director of the Greater St. Louis Automotive Association and the Missouri Automobile Dealers Association.

His marriage to Ethel E. Soucier, of St. Louis, took place in Chicago on July 5, 1932. They have two children, both of whom were born in St. Louis, Alice Marie on July 4, 1933, and Paul Lawrence on April 15, 1936.

RICHARDSON VERNON TURNER. Address, Sandy Hollow Road, Northport, N.Y.

RICHARD HIRSH ULLMAN. President, Richard H. Ullman, Inc. (syndicated radio transcriptions), 295 Delaware Avenue, Buffalo 2, N.Y.; residences, 717 Lafayette Avenue, Buffalo, and Rose Hill, Ontario.

"Since the happy, unbudding days of New Haven, when all of us awakened every day with dew in our eyes, life has treated me moderately well," Ullman says. "I have experienced the bitter with the sweet. I have lost parents, friends, and a brother. These include Jules Randal, '26, and Frederic Ullman, '25.

"I have watched a son grow up with four years under the able guidance of Arthur Milliken, '26, at Westminster School. Two years ago I organized my own business, and we deal with radio stations and advertisers throughout the United States. Progress has been steady and, in general, I'm happy."

From 1930 to 1948 Ullman was with the Buffalo Broadcasting Corporation as director of sales. The programs of the firm of Richard H. Ullman, Inc., which he formed in December, 1948, include "Musical Tune-O," "The Beatrice Kay Show," "Dollar Derby," "Jingl-Library," and "Joe McCarthy."

Ullman belongs to the Buffalo Club. He was first married in 1927 in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., to Ruth Claire Weitzenkorn, daughter of Benjamin and Daisy Rosenberg Weitzenkorn. They were divorced in 1945. He was married that year in Pass-A-Grille, Fla., to Phyllis Nichols, of Buffalo, daughter of Phillip and Albertine Barnard Nichols. His son, Richard Benjamin, who was born October 9, 1931, is now a Freshman at Colby College.

EDWARD DAVID UNTERMYER. President and treasurer, Fairfield Marine Products Corporation, 433 Main Street, Stamford, Conn.; residence, Skymeadow Drive, North Stamford.

"Left Wall Street soon after Pearl Harbor and delved into electronics," Untermyer reports. "After the war decided to combine this interest and that in boating and have been equipping yachts, fishermen, and work boats with telephones, direction finders, depth records, etc., since then. Take care of their generating and wiring problems, sell them charts, and cadge a sail or cruise when possible. Our business expanded into land mobile communications, and we keep the home town police on the air. Have kept clear of amateur radio, but mix in amateur boating from time to time. Opened Florida branches, which require personal attention during the harsh New England winters and when Fred Potts passes the plate. [Good timing!]

"Have had many fascinating experiences in life which might be of interest to the Class: 1. Seen Van Wood married and surrounded with wife and children!! 2. Seen Charlie Haight two days running in the U.S.A.!!! 3. Heard Gardner Stout's personal story of the defeat of an admiral by a lieutenant!!!! 4. Worn a Tenth Reunion cap on a Caribbean Beach with Ren Bartram!!!! 5. Attended a private lecture by Ed Hogan in Economics 30 (Stamford politics!!!!!!)"

To go back a bit—Untermeyer attended the Columbia Law School from 1926 to 1928 and during 1929-30 was employed by the Chemical Bank & Trust Company in New York. He was with various Stock Exchange firms during the next six years and from 1936 to 1947 was a member of the New York Stock Exchange. During 1942-43 he attended the R.C.A. Institutes, the New York Electrical School, and the Radio and Television Institute, receiving a certificate from each, and subsequently was a radio technician with the WSTC radio transmitter, the Luders Marine Construction Company, and Maguire Industries. Since January, 1946, he has been president and treasurer of the Fairfield Marine Products Corporation, and he is also secretary and a director of Electrocraft, Inc., in Stamford, vice-president and a director of the Downes-Smith Company of Stamford, and a special partner in Prescott & Company of Cleveland. Untermeyer is a member of the U.S. Power Squadrons, the Stamford Harbor Patrol Club, and the New York Yale Club.

He was first married December 2, 1927, in Baltimore to Emily Delbridge Greene, daughter of Fred Remington and Estelle Delbridge Greene. Mrs. Untermeyer, whose home was formerly in Amsterdam, N.Y., died on February 19, 1936. On June 19, 1939, he was married in Sydney, Australia, to Mary Chance Ward, of Pennant Hills, New South Wales, daughter of George Harold de Peyster and Maud Gowland Chance, of Vancouver. Untermeyer has two daughters: Fannie E., born in Lucerne, Switzerland, September 12, 1928, and Emily Anne, born in New York, September 12, 1931, and two stepsons: George A. Ward, who was born in Whitehaven, England, February 27, 1925, and David H. Ward, born in Vancouver, May 26, 1928. His older daughter, who attended the Holmquist and Bartram schools, was married in 1946 to Arthur S. Swenson, Jr., of Rutherford, N.J., and has two children: Arthur, 3d, born in 1947, and Linda Anne, born in 1950. Emily graduated from the Shipley School and is now a Senior at Finch Junior College. George prepared for college at Tabor Academy and attended Yale with the Class of 1950. He was in the Army for three years, serving in the Philippines, and was discharged as a sergeant (T/4) in the Field Artillery. His marriage to Barbara Lambert, of Stamford, took place in 1947, and they have a daughter, Wendy Lambert, born in 1949. David attended Brown and Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute. He is now on leave for Navy service.

HUBERT PRIOR VALLÉE. Address: 6611 Santa Monica Boulevard, Los Angeles 38, Calif.

ABRAHAM READING VAN DOREN. Sales representative, International Business Machines Corporation, 310 5th Avenue, New York, N.Y.; residence, Ingleside Road, Stamford, Conn.

Van Doren was with Lee Higginson & Company in New York City for two years after graduation and from 1928 to 1930 with M. Samuel & Company of New York and London. He then became connected with the I.B.M. Corporation and during the next eleven years worked for them in New York and in Geneva, Switzerland. During 1941-42 he had a position with the Munitions Manufacturing Company in Poughkeepsie, N.Y., and he was with the Watson, Flagg Machine Company of Paterson, N.J., the following year and then with the Dorr Company in New York during 1943-44. Since July, 1944, he has been back with I.B.M. as a sales representative. Van Doren says that he has been engaged in sundry social and relief activities, including work on Finnish relief under Mr. Hoover.

He was first married January 21, 1931, in New York to Matilda P. Fowler, daughter of Charles N. Fowler, Jr., Yale '05, and Mabel Higgins Fowler, of Elizabeth, N.J. They were divorced in 1941. His second marriage, to Jean F. Holberg, daughter of G. W. and Helen Greer Holberg, took place in New York on August 12, 1944. Mrs. Van Doren formerly lived in Troy, N.Y. He has four children: Abraham Reading, Jr., born October 15, 1931, Charles F. on May 16, 1933, David C. on December 10, 1937, and Phoebe Greer on June 21, 1946. David was born in Geneva and the others in New York. Charles is in the Class of 1951 at St. Paul's School. The oldest boy also prepared for college there and is now a Sophomore at Yale.

DIMITRI VON MOHRENSCHILDT. Professor of Russian history and literature, Dartmouth College; residence, Hanover, N.H.

von Mohrenschildt took an M.A. in the Romance languages and literature at Yale in 1930 and a Ph.D. in comparative literature at Columbia in 1936. He also has an honorary M.A. from Dartmouth, received in 1947. From 1929 to 1931 he was a master in French at the Loomis School and during the next ten years was engaged in independent writing, lecturing, and free-lance editorial and research work for various New York publications, including Life and Fortune. His articles have appeared in various historical and literary magazines, and he is the author of Russia in the Intellectual Life of Eighteenth Century France (Columbia University Press, 1936) and a contributing editor of Guide to Comparative Literature and Intracultural Relations (American Library Association, 1950). In 1941 von Mohrenschildt founded the Russian Review, a quarterly magazine, and has continued as its editor since then.

He was appointed a visiting lecturer in Russian civilization at Dartmouth in 1942 and since 1947 has been professor of Russian history and literature.

During the summer of 1947 he was a Slavic fellow at the Hoover Institute of Stanford University. He is a director of the Tolstoy Foundation of New York and a member of the American Historical Association, the Modern Language Association, the Foreign Policy Association, the American Association of Teachers of Slavic and East European Languages, and the New York Yale Club.

His marriage to Winifred Holhan Hooker took place in New York City on January 19, 1937. They were divorced in 1946.

GORDON BUTLER WADHAMS. Address, St. Mary's Academy, Baltimore 10, Md.

DONALD KIMBALL WALKER. Manager, Office of Admissions, Yale University; office, Welch Hall; residence, 453 Calhoun College.

Walker returned to New Haven in the fall of 1948 as executive secretary of the Committee on Enrollment and Scholarships, and in September, 1950, took on the additional duties of secretary of the Freshman Scholarship Committee. He has just been appointed manager of the Office of Admissions. During the first four years after graduation he was with W. A. Harriman & Company, Inc., and for the next three was secretary of the American Trustee Share Corporation. He became a manager of Brown Brothers Harriman & Company in 1934 and served in that capacity until 1948. Walker was a trustee of the Boys' Club of New York from 1926 to 1950 and has been on the board of managers of the New Haven Boys' Club since 1949. He is a Resident Fellow of Calhoun College and belongs to the Yale Club of New York (member of committee on University) and the Graduates Club of New Haven. He is still a bachelor.

In September, 1942, Walker was commissioned a lieutenant in the Naval Reserve. He was stationed in New York at the Office of Naval Officer Procurement until March, 1944, when he was transferred to the Bureau of Naval Personnel, Officer Procurement Division, where he served until his release to inactive duty in July, 1945. He was promoted to lieutenant commander in December, 1944.

FREDERIC WILLIAM WALLACE. Engaged in real estate development and management; business and residence address, Casey Key, Nokomis, Fla.

Until 1941 Wallace was a partner in Adams, Merrill & Company, members of the New York Stock Exchange. He was called to active duty in the Naval Reserve in May of that year, subsequently served in the Pacific area afloat and ashore, and was released from service in November, 1945, with the rank of lieutenant commander. During the next four years Wallace was connected with the mortgage loan department of the Farmington (Conn.) Savings Bank and has since been engaged in real estate development and management in Florida.

His marriage to Caroline W. Parker, daughter of Lewis D. and Carrie K. Parker, took place in New Lebanon, N.Y., on June 15, 1929. Mrs. Wallace lived in Hartford, Conn., before she was married, and their children were both born there, Frederic W., 3d, on November 3, 1931, and Amory W. on November 24, 1936. Frederic, 3d, is a Senior at the Berkshire School, and Amory goes to Miss Porter's School in Farmington.

WILLIAM SANFORD WALLACE. Assistant sales manager, insecticide sales, U.S. Industrial Chemicals, Inc., 60 East 42d Street, New York 17, N.Y.; residence, Bridgewater, Conn.

From 1927 to 1932 Wallace was a research chemist with the Air Reduction Sales Company in New York. He has since been with U.S. Industrial Chemicals, Inc., except for the period of his Army service. He was division manager of the Pittsburgh division from 1932 to 1938 and of the Boston division for the next four years, sales manager (specialty item) during 1946-47, was engaged in market research the following year, and since 1948 has been assistant sales manager of the insecticide division. Wallace is not married.

In 1942 he went on active duty as a captain, A.U.S. He was transferred to the Chemical Warfare Service in 1943 and the following year was promoted to major. His first assignments were all in connection with biological warfare—first, with the Resources and Production Division, A.S.F., in Washington, during 1942-43; then in Maryland, in the technical division at Edgewood Arsenal and later at Camp Detrick, and subsequently at Horn Island, Miss. From 1944 to 1946 he was stationed at the Dugway Proving Ground in Utah.

THOMAS JAMES BONIFACE WALSH. Editor and manager, college department, Charles Scribner Sons, 597 5th Avenue, New York 17, N.Y.; residence, Apartment 2A, Stuyvesant Unit, Glenwood Garden Apartments, Yonkers 2, N.Y.

Walsh has been with Charles Scribner Sons since 1928. He was in the advertising and publicity department for two years and then joined the college division. He spent ten years as a sales representative and became associate editor of the division in 1940 and editor in 1942. During 1949-50 he was chairman of the college publishers group and since February, 1950, has been both editor and manager of the college department, as well as a member of the board of directors of the company.

His marriage to Mabel Ruth Coates, daughter of Thomas Jackson and Dellah Myers Coates, took place in Richmond, Ky., on November 23, 1932. They have two children: Thomas Jackson C., born May 31, 1938, in Chicago, and Ruth Dimock, born May 23, 1941, in Greenwich, Conn.

CLARENCE RUSSELL WALTON. Assistant general counsel and assistant secretary, Eastern Gas and Fuel Associates, 250 Stuart Street, Boston 16, Mass.; residence, 8 Berkeley Place, Cambridge 38, Mass.

Walton, who graduated from the Harvard Law School in 1930, was admitted to the Massachusetts Bar that year and to the Federal Bar in 1931. Prior to becoming assistant general counsel and assistant secretary of the Eastern Gas and Fuel Associates (and of its subsidiaries) in 1941, he was with the Boston law firm of Bingham, Dana & Gould. He is a member of the American and Boston Bar associations and is assistant secretary of the Algonquin Gas Transmission Company and a director of the Virginian Corporation. Walton is active in Christ Church, Cambridge, and has been a solicitor for the local Red Cross and Community Fund drives—"hobbies: horticulture and silviculture, with enough surf-casting to supply exercise, but no fish to date."

He was married in 1933 in Pittsburgh to Virgene C. Dupka, daughter of Walter H. and Claribel A. Cox Dupka. They have two children, both of whom were born in Boston, Martha Becket on January 1, 1935, and Russell Reighard on October 6, 1939. Martha is in the Class of 1951 at the Buckingham School in Cambridge.

JOHN FRENCH WATERMAN. With State Bank & Trust Company, 1603 Orrington Avenue, Evanston, Ill.; residence, 2018 Orrington Avenue, Evanston.

Waterman's first job after graduation was that of groundsman at the Crystalia Golf Course near Frankfort, Mich. From 1926 to 1929 he was a wallboard inspector with the U.S. Gypsum Company of Grand Rapids, Mich. He studied at Northwestern University during the next three years, receiving the degree of M.B.A. in 1930 and that of J.D. in 1933, was admitted to the practice of law in Illinois in 1934, and during the next nine years specialized in real estate and probate law in Chicago. He was with Dodd & Edmunds at first, doing legal research in connection with workmen's compensation, and was associated with MacChesney, Becker & Wells from 1934 to 1938, and again from 1941 to 1943, being a legal assistant to Francis L. Boutell in the intervening period. Since going with the State Bank & Trust Company in November, 1943, his work has been principally in connection with probate administration.

Waterman has spoken occasionally before the Cook County Corporate Fiduciaries Association, of which he is a member, and he assisted Nathan William MacChesney in writing Law of Real Estate Brokerage (Foundation Press, 1938), as well as several articles and talks. While in law school, he was on the student board of the Illinois Law Review and of the Journal of Criminal Law and Criminology and became a member of Phi Alpha Delta. Some years ago he served on the unauthorized practice and real estate committees of the Chicago Bar Association. Waterman was a member of the Evanston Plan Commission from 1936 to 1938, was active in the Evanston Young Republican Club for several years, and a Republican precinct committeeman from 1936 to 1940. During the period from 1935 to 1939 he was residential section chairman in the Community Chest campaigns, and during the war he was an air raid warden and in the summer of 1943 helped on a farm for a while. He served as secretary of the Men's Club of the First Congregational Church of Evanston during 1937-38.

His marriage to Gertrude Wilhelmina Nuberg, daughter of Mathys and Wilhelmina Marie Steffens Nuberg, took place in Grand Rapids on June 6, 1927. Their son, John Storrs, who was born June 3, 1930, in Evanston, graduated from the Evanston Township High School in 1948, was at the University of Illinois during 1948-49, and then entered Drake University.

Waterman writes: "My travels have been chiefly in the Middle West, with one trip East in 1929 and a journey to Denver in 1930 to see my nephew. We also go occasionally to Desbarats, Canada, for visits with my aunts in the summer. My recreations chiefly have to do with cutting firewood, taking care of the lawn, and gardening. We have a summer cottage near Frankfort, where we spend a little time each year. My father (Class of 1892) has a farm near there, also, where he does some landscape painting and raises chickens and flowers.

"One of my hobbies is collecting pistols and revolvers, which has not progressed too well so far, although there are several items in it now, including three cap and ball models, in addition to some other oddities. Quite a bit of my time is spent in reading, where my preference is for historical works or geographical descriptions as illustrated by the Rivers of America series, many of which proved to be interesting. Henry Howe's Prologue to New England was enjoyed, particularly his theory that the Pilgrims were not bothered too much by the Indians, when they first arrived, because of widespread disease among the savages before the advent of the settlers.

"My present employment seems likely to continue for a while. It gives me time for other activities. One unrealized ambition is the preparation of a worth-while literary effort. Up to now, this has not received appropriate treatment, but possibly the future may be different."

FRANK ERBIN WATTLES, JR. Address, Saturn Club, 977 Delaware Avenue, Buffalo, N.Y.

GEORGE WILLIAM WELLES, JR. President, Kelley-How-Thomson Company (wholesale hardware and related lines), South 5th Avenue, West, Duluth, Minn.; residence, 3110 London Road, Duluth.

"Much water has gone under the dam since I left New Haven, not in 1926, but in 1923," says Welles. "Since that time I have been working for the same company in many capacities, ranging from traveling salesman to industrial sales manager to department manager, finally general manager and president. Leslie and I were married in 1935. We have four boys, and our home is on the shore of Lake Superior. We spend part of our summers at Lake Vermillion on the Canadian border, where the boys have a chance to swim, fish, and enjoy the wild country. Leslie and I are usually in New York for a week or two in the fall, and for the past few years we have spent a couple of weeks during the first part of April in Pompano, Fla. Our chief recreations are partridge and duck hunting, and for a number of years we have shot at Green Briar at Stuttgart, Ark. Leslie has been very active in the home safety division of the National Safety Council.

"My business connections, both with manufacturers and with customers, bring me into contact with a good many Yale men, although not too many in our Class. Since Cleveland is one of my important points, I usually run into Elton Hoyt, John Sherwin, John Wilbur, Fay Brown, Bill Green, and a great many other Yale men who are in the mining business in that town. One of my hopes is that some day I will be in New York at the time of a luncheon meeting so that I can renew the friendships that have long lapsed after twenty-seven years' absence. In the meantime the latchstring is out to all of the Class of '26 and '26 S."

Welles became president of his company in May, 1950. He is a director of the Marine Iron & Shipbuilding Company and belongs to the Chamber of Commerce, the Kitchi Gammi Club, the Northland Country Club, and the Duluth Athletic Club.

Mrs. Welles was Leslie Griggs, daughter of Richard Leslie and Neva Warner Griggs. They were married in Duluth on September 14, 1935, and their children were all born there, George William, 3d, on July 9, 1940, Christopher on January 15, 1944, McLennan on May 10, 1945, and Jon Leslie on November 4, 1947.

WALTER HART WEST, JR. Vice-president and secretary, Towers, Perrin, Forster & Crosby, Inc., reinsurance and pension consultants, 12 South 12th Street, Philadelphia 7, Pa.; residence, 8725 Montgomery Avenue, Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia 18.

West was assistant secretary of the Commerce Union Trust Company of Asheville, N.C., during 1926-27 and for the next seven years was associated with Henry W. Brown & Company of Philadelphia as manager of the casualty underwriting department. Since then he has been with Towers, Perrin, Forster & Crosby, Inc., becoming vice-president and secretary in July, 1947. He is also vice-president, secretary, and a director of John D. Pryce & Company, Inc.

West, who was commissioned a lieutenant in the Naval Reserve in May, 1942, was at the Naval Air Station at Quonset, R.I., from August to December and then at the Naval Air Station at Whidbey Island, Wash., until March, 1943, when he was assigned to Carrier Aircraft Squadron No. 12 as air combat intelligence and matériel officer. He was stationed at the Naval Air Station in San Diego until September, 1943, and was then assigned to the School of Military Government at Columbia University, where he remained until January, 1944. During the next three months he was at the Naval Air Station, Ford Island, Honolulu, attached to the staff of the Commander of the Air Force, Pacific Fleet. He was next assigned to the U.S.S. Enterprise as air combat intelligence officer and served aboard that ship until February, 1945, when he returned to the United States on leave. After temporary duty at Quonset, he returned in April to Ford Island, where he was on the staff of the Commander of the Air Force, Pacific Fleet, for five months. In November, 1945, he was released to inactive duty with the rank of lieutenant commander, to which he had been promoted in October, 1944. As a member of the crew of the Enterprise West participated in the following engagements: raids on Truk, Palau, Yap, and Ulithi, 1944; the Hollandia-New Guinea operation, 1944; the capture and occupation of Saipan and the battle of the Philippine Sea, 1944; raids on the Volcano-Bonin Islands and the capture and occupation of the southern Palau Islands, 1944; 3d Fleet supporting operations in the Okinawa, northern Luzon, and Formosa attacks and the battle of Leyte Gulf, 1944; the attacks on Luzon, Formosa, and the China Coast, 1944-45.

From 1947 to 1949 he was a Republican division committeeman in the Twenty-second Ward in Philadelphia. He has been a trustee of the Lankenau Hospital of Philadelphia since 1940 and of the Springside School since 1945, was a director of the Associated Hospital Service during 1941-42, and for the past two years has served on the permanent budget committee of the Philadelphia Community Chest. He belongs to the Philadelphia, Racquet, Sunnyside Golf, Midway, and New York Yale clubs.

West was married August 21, 1931, in Philadelphia to Helen Howe, daughter of George and Marie Jessup Patterson Howe. Their daughter, Janet, born November 16, 1933, is a Senior at Westover. Walter Hart West, 3d, born January 27, 1936, is in the Class of 1953 at Westminster. They were both born in Philadelphia.

MURRAY JAYNES BAILEY WHEELER. Director of public relations, National Fisheries Institute, Inc., 724 9th Street, N.W., Washington 1, D.C.; residence, 131 Montpelier Road, Manor Park, Rockville, Md.

"I have spent practically all my business years in food or advertising," Wheeler says. "My wife, Charis, and I have traveled pretty well around the country and have now settled in Maryland, sixteen miles outside of Washington. Since 1943 we have been interested in Boxer dogs. We have no champions, but do have three fine pets.

"Living in Washington is an interesting experience. Despite the book 'Washington Confidential,' it is a fine place in which to live. With world conditions as they are and the trend of our Government towards a controlled economy, the decisions that are made here are more and more determining future world events.

"My main job in the National Fisheries Institute [a trade association representing all management segments of commercial fisheries in the U.S.] is persuading more people to eat more fish and shellfish. If any members of the Class of 1926 are in Washington at any time, I would be delighted to see them. In the meantime I am looking forward to our Reunion this June."

Wheeler has held his present position since November, 1947. His previous connections were as follows: sales work with the Borden Company; account executive with Blackett, Sample & Hummert; assistant sales manager and advertising manager of the John B. Stetson Company; and advertising manager with the Nestle Company.

Wheeler has contributed fisheries articles to various trade publications. He has been a New York county delegate of the Republican Party and belongs to the Manor Country Club of Rockville. He had three and a half years of Army service, all in this country. He ranked as major and was assigned to the Bureau of Public Relations, Industrial Services Division, of the War Department.

Mrs. Wheeler was Charis Elizabeth Welty, daughter of Horace Greeley and Bertha Louise Simpson Welty. They were married in Cleveland on December 27, 1926.

RUFUS ARTHUR WHEELER. Supervisor of music, Department of Education, City of Schenectady, N.Y.; business address, 108 Union Street, Schenectady 5; residence, 208 1st Street, Scotia 2, N.Y.

Wheeler writes: "I went to Europe for six weeks immediately following graduation. Memory dimly recalls that Les Laden and Ben Cutler were in the same ship's band. Twenty-four years of teaching and supervising music in the public schools have brought great satisfaction and few regrets. Both of our girls are musical—play flute and oboe—and sing together at the drop of a hat. They play records continuously, and when they are both home the place is usually a cheerful madhouse. Unfortunately, have kept close contact with relatively few classmates—have seen Charlie Barker and Sherwood Jeter more than others. The Schenectady Yale Club, however, has been a great bunch of fellows to be with. Most of them are engineers at the General Electric Company, but there are a few Ac men around, and we have had some fine times. For the past three years I have served as Schenectady area chairman for interviewing prospective Yale men from high schools. This work with Don Walker and his fine Committee on Enrollment and Scholarships has been both time-consuming and very rewarding. The two recent trips to New Haven for the fall convocations have shown many new and wonderful aspects of the contemporary Yale.

“Other things stand out—like going to the same restaurant and the same table for about seventeen years every Monday night after my chorus rehearsals, and singing the same songs—among them ‘Integer,’ ‘Gaudeamus,’ ‘My Sweet,’ and others. It is safe to say there are several sopranos and altos around here, as well as tenors and basses, that know some of the songs! Summer vacations during Depression years showed that scraping and refinishing old furniture was cheaper (and more fun) than other forms of entertainment. Working with John Holt and Cord Meyer, both Yale men, in helping to set up the Schenectady chapter of United World Federalists was a great experience. Olive and I worked as counselors in a music camp during the war summers. Bridge games by kerosene lamps up in Maine make pleasant memories of recent summers. And so it goes . . .”

In 1927, after working for the Hartford (Conn.) Piano Company for a year, Wheeler became supervisor of music for the West Springfield (Mass.) public schools, but gave that up in 1930 to go to Schenectady as teacher of music at the Nott Terrace High School. He has been supervisor of music in the Schenectady schools since 1940. He took summer courses at the Institute of Music Pedagogy at Northampton, Mass., in 1927 and at Skidmore College from 1929 to 1931. Since 1947 he has been a member of the Graduate School faculty of the summer sessions at Ithaca College. Wheeler has been musical director of several series of choral programs for the General Electric Company's radio station WGY and its television station WRBG. His most recent work in this field was the weekly fifteen-voice program known as “Sweet Sixteen,” which was on the air for six seasons (1945-50). In 1932 he organized the Schenectady Choral Society and has been its conductor since then. He is co-author with Elsie Siegmeister of two song books published by Ginn & Company, Singing Down the Road (for male voices—1947), and Way Up On Old Smoky (for women's voices—1950). He is a member of the New York State Teachers Association, the Music Educators National Conference, the New York State School Music Association, and the Schenectady Rotary Club.

His marriage to Olive Wilcox Holcombe, daughter of Leon Munroe and Belle Maritta Hayes Holcolmbe, took place June 30, 1927, in Granby, Conn. Mrs. Wheeler's home was formerly in West Hartford. The girls were both born in Albany, N.Y., Carolyn Jane on October 5, 1931, and Ann Holcombe on April 13, 1935. Ann is a Sophomore at the Scotia High School. Carolyn graduated there in 1950 and is now in the Class of 1952 at Green Mountain Junior College.

CHARLES CORWIN WHITE. Lecturer and writer; residence, 40 West 45th Street, New York 19, N.Y.; permanent address, 624 Corwin Avenue, Glendale, Calif.

White, who has been a specialist in current history and lecturer-writer on the present world situation with relation to the United States since 1938, says: "I've made two transcontinental surveys on U.S. public opinion (1941—3,172 miles; 1948—4,300 miles) to talk to the great rank and file of American citizens. Both trips were made by bicycle. In 1948 made fifty-five speeches for civic, educational, and social groups, thirty broadcasts from various stations en route, and was interviewed by 164 newspapers. Both trips were covered by U.P. and A.P.

"During the summer of 1951 I made an experimental trip by bicycle, without funds, to demonstrate that Americans ARE interested in good government and that an individual can be influential without financial or political backing. Made numerous speeches and was able to support the experiment. A weekly series of articles, 'These Journeys,' came out of the endeavor, some of which were bought by various newspapers and all of which have excited comment. Have proved two wholly American theories: 1) The average opinions of any large group of our citizens is sounder than the opinions of any small group of men, no matter how 'expert' or 'enlightened,' and 2) The United States republican form of government is the farthest advance of mankind into the good way of governing men. Have lectured professionally from coast to coast. One of the happiest experiences in my travels is meeting classmates whom I haven't seen for years."

We quote a few comments on White's lectures which have come to our attention: "The finest word picture of the world situation that I ever heard"; "It was more than a 'talk,' it was a vital and compelling message—eloquently presented"; "Things you are saying should be said in every newspaper, at every public forum, and from every pulpit, ocean to ocean."

White was president of the Manger Hotel Chain until 1931 and from 1937 to 1941 was co-owner with his brother, Julius A. White, '18 S., of the Woodstock Hotel in New York. During 1941-42 he served as a field director of the American Red Cross in San Francisco and northern California. From 1946 to 1948 he was chairman of two committees (statewide taxation and social security) of the California State Chamber of Commerce and served on the Republican Central Committee from Napa County, and he was chairman of the Napa County Centennial Committee in 1947-48.

On April 28, 1942, he was married in San Francisco to Harriet Elizabeth MacGibbon Kane, daughter of Walter Peter and Gertrude Louise Crary MacGibbon. White's stepson, William MacGibbon Kane, was born in New York, February 2, 1933. Mrs. White, who is an actress, uses her maiden name as a stage name. She played at Elitch's Gardens in Denver last summer—and Bill had a fine time working there in the park, White says. She has done over thirty television and radio shows since last October, among which were the Pulitzer Prize Playhouse, Big Story, and the Ken Murray Show. Bill will graduate from the Trinity-Pawling School in June, 1951, and wants to go to Yale in the fall. He has been an honor student, leading the school with an average of 92.4 this year, is president of his Class, a member of the Student Council, editor-in-chief of the Times, editor of the Year Book, manager of the Varsity football and baseball teams, and founder of the Dramatic Club.

CHARLES LIPPINCOTT WHITE. Vice-president and comptroller, Christmas Club (sale of thrift development systems in banking institutions), 230 Park Avenue, New York 17, N.Y.; residence, 5 Beekman Place, Radburn, N.J.

"After saying farewell to Yale in June, 1926, I started to work in Pittsburgh for Hills Brothers Company of New York (now a division of General Foods Corporation)," White writes. "Not realizing at the time that I was expected to sell—which I did not like—I naturally did not last long, only eleven months. I quit in time to recapture another week at New Haven during the 1927 Commencement. Returning to New York, I started to learn the profession of public accounting, joining the staff of Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Company. Most of the next ten years were spent in checking the financial woes and troubles of various types of businesses. Finally my efforts in the accounting field were rewarded when the State of New York saw fit to award me a certificate designating me as a certified public accountant. During this period, as a struggling accountant, I met the 'one and only gal,' who after several years of persuasion on my part finally decided she couldn't do 'worse' and so succumbed to my wiles and we were married on September 26, 1933.

"Leaving the public accounting field early in 1937, I joined the staff of Christmas Club, and for the last fourteen years I have been working on a year-round basis as Santa Claus' assistant in helping people save enough money to pay their Christmas bills. In my present work, while I still keep my hand in accounting, most of my efforts are spent in sales promotion. Through this work, which requires a substantial amount of travel, I have been in practically every state of the Union, as well as Mexico and Canada.

Since my position calls for my attending numerous conventions, I have found that my early Yale training stands me in good stead in my frequent appearances before the better bars.

"I have managed to steer clear of politics in general, but have assumed a bit of civic responsibility in my home community. I am now completing my fourth year on the board of trustees of the Radburn Association. This year, which will likely be my last on the board, is in the rôle of 'elder statesman,' as I served as president on the board in 1950.

"With regard to hopes, ambitions, satisfactions, and regrets—while I have not made a million, I am enjoying a life which has given me many satisfactions and luckily few regrets. One of my ambitions is to see my son Bill—now age nine—graduate from Yale in about twelve years. One of my joys is my daughter Caryl, who at the age of thirteen is displaying remarkable talent in art. She is studying with a well-known local artist and has already completed and exhibited several oil paintings. My good wife and I consider ourselves very fortunate."

Some additional data: During 1926-27 White took courses in accounting at Columbia. He served on the executive committee of the Fairlawn Taxpayers Association during 1946-47, and he has contributed a number of articles to various banking magazines on the subject of public relations between banks and their customers. He belongs to the New York Yale Club. Mrs. White was Hannah Marie Reinhardt, daughter of George Reinhardt, of Teaneck, N.J., where their marriage took place and where the children were both born, Caryl Marie on April 11, 1938, and William Charles on September 23, 1941.

JAMES MATTOCKS WHITE. Proprietor, James G. White & Son (insurance), 147 Milk Street, Boston, Mass.; residence, 788 Hale Street, Beverly Farms, Mass.

White writes: "A few days after graduation, June 24, 1926, to be precise, I was married [in West Newton, Mass., to Elizabeth H. Gilman, daughter of Edward Harrison and Jane Crosby Gilman]. After a leisurely wedding trip through Europe, returned to struggle with the problems of life.

"On balance, the business of living over the past twenty-five years has treated me probably better than I deserve. Although fame and fortune have eluded me, I have had a most enjoyable and interesting existence, particularly in observing my son's career through school, college, a year at Harvard Law School, and at present in the Army. [He's James M., Jr.—born October 1, 1927, in Brookline, Mass.—Andover '45, Yale '49.]

"When confining domestic problems no longer required close supervision, my wife expressed a desire to take a pass at some business endeavor, particularly merchandising. To satisfy this ambition, we became involved in the establishment of a retail and mail order store known as Johnny Appleseed's of Beverly which appears to have a promising future! In fact, I am beginning to regard it as my personal pension plan. At all events, it has been fun playing store when my insurance business provided a little spare time.

"Four years in the Air Force gave me an opportunity to look back as well as ahead. I reached the conclusion that our way of life—as imperfect as it is—is worth tremendous sacrifices and to preserve its basic assets will require a greater degree of unselfishness, tolerance, and understanding than I am accustomed to see around me."

White, who has been proprietor of James G. White & Son since February, 1929, is a member of the Boston Life Underwriters Association, the Boston Insurance Brokers Association, the Lunch Club of Boston, the Myopia Hunt Club of Hamilton, Mass., and the New York Yale Club. He has taken part in the Community Fund drives and other civic activities and is a trustee of the Fessenden School and of Phillips Academy, Andover, and president of the Andover Alumni Association and its Alumni Council.

In 1940 White had four weeks of C.M.T.C. training at Fort Devens, Mass. He served in the Massachusetts State Guard for fourteen months beginning in 1941 and 1942 went on active duty at the Base Personnel Office and S-1 at Westover Field, Mass. He subsequently served in the Asiatic-Pacific theatre as assistant A-1 of the 91st Reconnaissance Wing and as S-1 and adjutant of the 71st Reconnaissance and 5th Emergency Air-Sea Rescue groups. He took part in the actions at New Guinea, Bismark, the Archipelago, the Philippine campaigns, Ryer Ryres, the China offensive, and the Japan air offensive and was awarded the Bronze Star Medal. White at present has the rank of major in the Air Force Reserve.

JAMES SPALDING WHITE. Address, Colcord Building, Oklahoma City, Okla.

NATHAN HOFER WHITE. In the real estate and insurance business, 59 College Street, New Haven, Conn.; residence, 50 Brookside Drive, Hamden, Conn.

White has had his own real estate and insurance business in New Haven since 1932. He has been a director of the Community Chest for the past four years and back in 1942 was president of the Kiwanis Club.

His marriage to Virginia E. Rogers, daughter of Weaver H. and Analdean Freibertshauser Rogers, took place in Pittsburgh, Pa., on November 9, 1929. They have two daughters, both of whom were born in New Haven, Dorothy A. on May 10, 1931, and Suzanne R. on March 25, 1935. The younger girl is at the Emma Willard School. Dorothy, who graduated there in 1949, is in the Class of 1951 at Katharine Gibbs.

JOHN HAY WHITNEY. Senior partner, J. H. Whitney & Company (venture capital investments), 630 5th Avenue, New York, N.Y.; residence, Manhasset, N.Y.

Whitney spent the first year after graduation at Oxford. He was with Lee Higginson & Company during 1927-28 and has since been an officer or board member of various companies. He was president of Pioneer Pictures from 1935 to 1938, chairman of the board of Selznick International Pictures during 1937-38, and is at present chairman of the board of the Freeport Sulphur Company and a director of the Great Northern Paper Company. He has been senior partner in J. H. Whitney & Company since the establishment of the firm in 1946. Whitney is chairman of the board of the Museum of Modern Art, president of the board of the New York Hospital, a member of the board of trustees of the National Planning Association, president and a trustee of the John Hay Whitney Foundation, and a member of the executive committee of the Yale University Council.

From 1940 to 1942 he was director of the Motion Picture Division, Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, and he served in the Army Air Force for the next four years, ranking as captain at the time he entered service and as colonel at the time of his release. He served in England and the Mediterranean from 1942 to 1945 and in Washington from June to December, 1945. Whitney was awarded the Legion of Merit, the Bronze Star, and the Order of the British Empire (Commander). In 1947 he was appointed a special adviser and consultant on public affairs by the Department of State and during the next two years served as a member of the U.S. National Commission for UNESCO.

He was first married on September 25, 1930, to Mary Elizabeth Altemus. They were divorced in 1940. His second marriage, to Betsey Cushing Roosevelt, daughter of Dr. Harvey Williams Cushing, Yale '91, and Katherine Crowell Cushing, took place in New York on March 1, 1942. Whitney has adopted his wife's two daughters by her first marriage. The older girl, Sara Delano, who was born in Boston, March 13, 1932, attended the Brearley School, graduated from Milton Academy in 1950, and is now at Bryn Mawr. Kate, the younger girl, who was born in New York, February 16, 1936, is now at Brearley.

ARVIN PAUL WIEDEMANN. Development engineer, American Steel & Wire Company, 238 Fairmount Avenue, New Haven, Conn.; residence, 269 Lenox Street, New Haven.

Wiedemann, whose position with the American Steel & Wire Company has been that of development engineer since August, 1947, says that his engineering training was all acquired in the employ of that company and that his work is concerned primarily with wire rope and wire manufacturing equipment.

He was married in New Haven on November 21, 1929, to Esther M. Starbranch, daughter of Nels P. and Hilda M. Johnson Starbranch. They have three children: Paul Arvin, born December 6, 1930, Ernest Peter on October 25, 1938, and Ruth Esther on October 24, 1940, all in New Haven. Paul is in the Class of 1953 at the University of Connecticut.

"In a quiet way, my family and I have had a swell time during the past quarter century," says Wiedemann. "We have had our share of leisure, have seen a good part of the country, and have had an incredible amount of fun and satisfaction in just living, simply doing our job from day to day, mingling with friends. My Mother and Dad are a source of some concern at the moment, both being in wheel chairs, one with a fractured hip. Am acquiring considerable skill as a male nurse, along with a profound respect for the miracles wrought by the devotion and skill of the modern physician. May we keep him forever out of the clutches of bureaucrats and the State!

"The single experience of the past couple of decades that gave me most satisfaction, I think, was leading the local Y.M.C.A. membership campaign in 1949 to 127 per cent of our goal [he has been on its board of directors for some time]. Low point was a ruptured appendix in 1947, from which it took me a year and a half to recover.

"Yale, although I live under its eaves, now seems like an old, old dream, unreal and very remote."

HERBERT WIENERT. Address not available.

LAWRENCE WILKINSON. Director, New York State Civil Defense Commission, 124 East 28th Street, New York, N.Y.; residence, 96 Macdougall Street, New York.

Wilkinson worked for Henry L. Doherty & Company for a short time in 1926 and during the next four years was successively with the Carid Syndicate and the foreign department of The New York Trust Company. During 1930-31 he was assistant treasurer of the Marine Midland Trust Company, and he was connected with the company again in 1935 and 1938 as a special representative and vice-president and in this capacity went on special missions to Ecuador and Colombia. During the period from 1931 to 1940 most of Wilkinson's time was devoted to farming in East Haddam, Conn. From 1949 to 1950 he was in charge of foreign operations for Dillon, Read & Company and since July, 1950, has been director of the New York State Civil Defense Commission.

Entering the Army as a captain in the Ordnance Department in January, 1941, he was assigned to the Office of the Undersecretary of War until July, 1942. He was then assigned to Headquarters, E.T.O.U.S.A., until November, 1945, spent the next seven months in the Office of the Chief of Ordnance in Washington, and the following year in Berlin with the Office of Military Government. In the meantime he had been promoted, first to major and later to colonel. Following his separation from service in 1947, Wilkinson served for two years as economics adviser to the Military Governor in Germany. He was awarded the Legion of Merit, the Bronze Star with oak leaf cluster, the Army Commendation Ribbon, and the following decorations for exceptional civilian service: Croix de Guerre with palm, the Medal of French Gratitude, and the White Lion of Czechoslovakia.

His marriage to Caroline G. Tighe, daughter of Ambrose Tighe, Yale '79, and Harriet Gotzian Tighe, took place in St. Paul, Minn., March 31, 1929. They were divorced in 1949.

Wilkinson concludes with the brief comment: "No hopes or ambitions; reasonable satisfactions; no regrets."

CHARLES HASTINGS WILLARD. Partner, Davis, Polk, Wardwell, Sunderland & Kiendl, lawyers, 15 Broad Street, New York 5, N.Y.; residence, Cross River Road, Katonah, N.Y.

Willard writes: "The story of my twenty-five years since we graduated from Yale in 1926 is a simple one: three years at the Harvard Law School, one year in Washington with the National Commission on Law Observance and Enforcement (the 'Wickersham Commission'), twenty-one years of general law practice with the great New York firm of Davis, Polk, Wardwell, Sunderland & Kiendl (broken by three years of civilian service in Washington during the war), sixteen and a half years of marriage, and an admirable family of one wife and twin boys aged six. All of it has been happy, and I look forward to more of the same. The last twenty-five years have gone unbelievably fast.

"In the field of hobbies and special interests, which the man asked us to write about, I would list gardening (or probably rather 'boondoggling') around my place in northern Westchester and poetry—reading it, not writing it. Most of my reading of poetry is in the classics, especially Shakespeare and Wordsworth, but I think that the 'modern' poets, though often puzzling and very often exasperating, are worth reading. Some of them have brought values to poetry which they probably could not have done without their 'modernism.'

"As I suspect is true of many of our classmates, I regret that our college years were so barren of religion. There was a general indifference to religion, and it was the fashion to say that the Bible is great literature and that Christ was a great teacher, but no more. Our fight against compulsory chapel was right, but it unavoidably brought with it a tendency to be generally antagonistic to the Church.

"Of all the many great qualities that Yale offered us, I think the most important was a dislike for cynicism. In the years when we were at Yale, and in the years since then, the cynics have ridden high, but cynicism did not flourish in the Yale climate in those days, and I profoundly hope it never does."

Willard, who took his Harvard LL.B., cum laude, was admitted to practice in New York in 1932 and became a partner in his firm in March, 1950. He specializes in commercial banking law and is a member of the editorial board for the Uniform Commercial Code, sponsored by the American Law Institute and the Commissioners on Uniform State Laws. He wrote an article (with the late Russell L. Post, '27), The Power of Congress to Nullify Gold Clauses, which appeared in the Harvard Law Review for June, 1933, and another, Liability of Banks for Misappropriations by Fiduciary Depositors, published in the New York State Bar Association Bulletin for October, 1948. He is a member of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York (on committee on federal legislation, 1940-42), the New York State Bar Association (on special committee on uniform commercial code, 1949-50), and the American Bar Association. From June, 1942, to June, 1944, he was in the office of the fiscal director of the Army Service Forces in Washington as loan officer and the following year was assistant general counsel of the Surplus Property Board, serving as acting general counsel during part of this period.

Mrs. Willard was Nancy Olney, daughter of Richard and Anne Kerr McCullagh Olney, of Boston. They were married in Dedham, Mass., October 20, 1934, and the twins, Richard Olney and Albert Hastings, were born in New York on February 15, 1945.

CHARLES EDWARD WILLOCK. Address, 346 Maple Avenue, Edgewood, Pa.

THOMAS LEOPOLD WILLSON. Address not available.

DONALD GODDARD WING. Associate librarian, Yale University; residence, Rimmon Road, Woodbridge 15, Conn.

Wing, who took his M.A. at Harvard in 1928 and his Ph.D. at Yale three years later, has been at the Yale Library since 1929. He became assistant reference librarian in 1930, head of the accessions department in 1939, and has been associate librarian since 1945. Since 1940 he has also been librarian of the Linonia and Brothers Library. He is a Fellow of Silliman College and president of the Yale Faculty Club and belongs to the Bibliographical Societies of America, England, Cambridge, Oxford, and Edinburgh, the Elizabethan Club at Yale, and the Grolier Club. Wing compiled a Short-title Catalogue of English Books, 1641-1700 (three volumes; Columbia University Press, 1945-51) and has had articles in the Yale University Library Gazette, the Yale Review, the Saturday Review of Literature, and the William and Mary Quarterly.

On June 30, 1930, he was married at Sandy Spring, Md., to Charlotte Elizabeth Farquhar, daughter of Francis Farquhar, Yale '88 S., and Charlotte Packard Gibson Farquhar, of York, Pa. They have two children, both of whom were born in New Haven, Cathya on October 7, 1937, and Robert Farquhar on October 31, 1939.

GORDON JOSEPH WOLF. Partner, Cohen & Wolf, lawyers, 111 Union Trust Building, Cincinnati 2, Ohio; residence, 3510 Arnold Street, Cincinnati 26.

Wolf writes: "After graduation I went into the machine tool business with my father in Cincinnati for about a year; entered the Harvard Law School in the fall of 1927 and graduated [cum laude] in the spring of 1930. Was first married in the summer of 1931 and after a honeymoon in England and France, settled down in Cincinnati to continue the practice of law. Moved to the country in 1933 or 1934 and moved back to an apartment in town in 1936, having come to the conclusion that I was a city mouse. Had a cruiser on the river until 1939, when I became intensely interested in aviation and sold the boat in order to buy an airplane. I quickly acquired a commercial pilot's certificate (which I have held ever since), later adding instrument and instructor ratings. I flew considerably during the war in Army light observation aircraft and after the war bought, and still own, a half interest in a twin-engine, five-place Cessna. In 1949 I bought a house and have added to aviation another hobby, woodworking. Have a shop in the basement and find that that is one hobby which you can pursue regardless of the weather. Besides, it doesn't take you out of town."

Following his admission to the Ohio Bar in September, 1930, Wolf was associated with the firm of Bettman, Riesenbergh, Cohen & Steltenpohl in Cincinnati until 1933. Since then, except for the period of his military service, he has been a partner in Cohen & Wolf; his practice is a general one, with emphasis on corporation, probate, and aeronautical law. He was admitted to the bars of the U.S. District Court and the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in 1935. He is a director of the Cincinnati Cotton Products Company and of the Aeronca Manufacturing Company of Middletown, Ohio.

Wolf, who was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Field Artillery Reserve in January, 1926, was active in Reserve affairs. He was promoted to first lieutenant in 1929, to captain in 1933, and to major in 1938 and served as commanding officer of the 2d Battalion, 455th Field Artillery Reserve. In December, 1941, he was called to extended active duty and assigned to the staff and faculty of the Field Artillery School at Fort Sill. As executive (1942-43) and director (1944-45) in the Department of Air Training there, he developed the program for training and employment of light aviation pilots and mechanics in the Army Ground Forces for observation of artillery fire; approximately three thousand pilots and two thousand mechanics were trained under his supervision. Wolf was promoted to lieutenant colonel in July, 1942, and to colonel in April, 1945. As special observer, Headquarters, Army Ground Forces, he was attached to the Artillery section of the Headquarters of the European theatre of operations and subsequently to the Mediterranean theatre, and served in the Rhineland, Central Europe, and Po Valley campaigns. In May, 1945, he returned to Fort Sill and resumed his duties as director of air training at the Field Artillery School. He was relieved from active duty in March, 1946, and now holds a Reserve commission as colonel of artillery, with the current assignment of commandant of the Fort Thomas Organized Reserve Corps School. Wolf was awarded the Legion of Merit.

He is a member of the Hamilton County Republican Club, treasurer and a director of the Cincinnati City Charter Committee, and in 1947 was a candidate for the City Council. He belongs to the American Bar Association, the Cincinnati Bar Association (chairman, committee on aeronautical law), the Greater Cincinnati Airmen, Inc., the Cincinnati chapter of the Reserve Officers Association (past president), the Civic Club, and the Mt. Lookout Civic Club. The November, 1948, issue of the University of Cincinnati Law Review contained his article, "Airport Approach Zoning—A Present Need."

Wolf's marriage to Amanda Roth, daughter of Albert S. and Helen Bernheim Roth, took place in Cincinnati, June 16, 1931. They were divorced in 1948. On October 29, 1948, he was married at Fort Sill to Evelyn Best, daughter of J. B. and Nannie Kelly Best. Her home was formerly in Winters, Texas. He has two children: Joseph Gordon, born April 23, 1944, at Fort Sill, and Alice Margaret on January 16, 1950, in Cincinnati.

CORNELIUS VAN NESS WOOD. President and treasurer, C. Van Ness Wood, Inc., real estate and insurance broker, 577 Odell Avenue, Yonkers, N.Y.; residence, 385 Ardsley Road, Scarsdale, N.Y.

"Like many others, I toured Europe after graduation in 1926," Wood says. "Then until I got married and acquired a family I used to take my vacations in the winter by going on trips to the West Indies and the Caribbean, visiting Bermuda, Barbados, Virgin Islands, Trinidad, Gaudaloupe, Martinique, Dominica, St. Kitts, Venezuela, Panama, Jamaica, and Nassau, also Guatemala and Honduras.

"As a result of Professor Furniss' exhortations on civic duty, as well as believing I owed society, which had enabled my father to give me such advantages as a college education, etc., I went into party politics and helped to remove the Old Guard Republican boss of Yonkers. That took four years, a lot of time, and a good deal of money.

"When I finally, at the age of thirty-eight, settled down and got married, I could not keep up the expense of being an honest politician and still be able to support a family, so I quit politics with the hope that when I made my fortune I could get back into it again. I still entertain that hope.

"For two years, until the O.P.A. put us out of business by insisting that we sell our product at a loss, my wife and I, together with an old Andover classmate, Bob Allen, owned and operated a cheese factory in South Londonderry, Vt. We made what I still believe to be the finest Cheddar cheese, 'Old Londonderry Cheddar,' in the United States.

"Since the war I have specialized in the developing of suburban retail shopping centers and on new housing on large acreage. Two such shopping centers of which I am rather proud are the 'North Shore Mart' on Great Neck, Long Island, where I leased the key store to John Wanamaker. That one is due to open in April, 1951. The other is the 'Cross County Center' in Yonkers, where I sold a large parcel to John Wanamaker. These will be the first suburban stores for Wanamaker in metropolitan New York. The 'Cross County Center,' the largest of its kind on the Atlantic seaboard, will open in the fall of 1952. I am the rental agent for both projects. The latter has been written up by the Urban Land Institute (Technical Bulletin No. 12) as having all the requirements for an ideal shopping center."

Wood attended the Columbia Law School during 1926-27, becoming a member of Phi Delta Phi while there. In 1927 he worked for the Homeland Company, a real estate developing concern, and in 1928 and 1929 for Louis Carreau, Inc., real estate brokers in New York City. Since 1930 he has been in business for himself (Westchester real estate and insurance), except during the war years, when he was general manager of the Yonkers Warehouse Company, which warehoused material for the U.S. Treasury Department under the Lend-Lease Program of Aid for Soviet Russia primarily. He is president of the Vanbick Realty Corporation and the Durlandt-Wood Company, as well as being president and treasurer of C. Van Ness Wood, Inc. Wood's political activities have included the chairmanship of the Third Ward Republican County Committee from 1934 to 1938 and membership on the Yonkers Republican City Executive Committee during the same period and on the Westchester County Republican Committee from 1936 to 1938.

His marriage to Dorothy Esther Fuller, daughter of Blanche Hardy Fuller, took place in North Tewksbury, Mass., June 28, 1940. There are four children in the family: Patricia Durlandt, born March 5, 1941, Barbara Evelyn on July 9, 1943, Oliver Durlandt on November 30, 1944, and Dorothy Hardy on July 11, 1950. Dorothy was born in White Plains and the others in Yonkers.

FREDERICK WILLIAM WOOD. Partner, Arthur, Dry & Dole, lawyers, 1230 6th Avenue, New York 20, N.Y.; residence, Danbury Road, Weston, Conn.

From 1926 to 1928 Wood was an oil field worker and partner with Samuel J. Brown, '26, in an oil well drilling contractors' firm in Colorado. He then returned to New Haven to enter the Law School. He took his LL.B. degree in 1931 and for the next ten years was associated with the New York law firm of Milbank, Tweed, Hope & Webb. Since 1946 he has been with Arthur, Dry & Dole, in which he became a partner in July, 1948. Wood, who was admitted to the New York Bar in 1933, specializes in corporation law and general civil practice. He belongs to the Association of the Bar of the City of New York, the Silver Springs Country Club of Ridgefield, Conn., the Weston Field and Gun clubs, and the University Club of New York.

In January, 1942, he went on active duty as a lieutenant in the Naval Reserve. He attended the first class at the Naval Indoctration School at Quonset Point and was then assigned to the Eastern Sea Frontier as assistant to the air officer of the 6th Naval District at Charleston, S.C., in the anti-submarine program. He subsequently served for eighteen months with shore-based Naval Aviation activities at Espiritu Santo, New Hebrides, and Guadalcanal, including service at Guadalcanal as operations and flight officer for Fleet Air Photographic Squadron 1. Wood's concluding service was as personnel officer for the Naval Air Station at Quonset Point.

He was first married in January, 1928, in Port Chester, N.Y., to Margaret Brown, daughter of Jamot Brown, Yale '99, and Margaret Berger Brown, of Florence, Colo. They were divorced in 1939. In July, 1944, he was married in New Canaan, Conn., to Elizabeth Josephine Tibbs, daughter of Charles Franklin and Olive Northrup Tibbs. Her home was formerly in New York. He has three children: Frederick William, born February 22, 1932, Elizabeth Janet on December 22, 1945, and Eleanor O'Hara on November 26, 1948, all in New York. His son entered Mexico City College as a Freshman last fall.

SIDNEY HOPKINS WYLIE. Treasurer, Auto Owners Finance Company, Inc., 20 Columbus Avenue, Boston, Mass.; residence, 15 Evans Road, Marblehead, Mass.

From 1933 to 1940 Wylie was with the Seaboard Commercial Corporation and has since been treasurer of the Auto Owners Finance Company, Inc. He has recently become a trustee of the Old North Church in Marblehead and some years ago (1931-32) served as personal tax collector in Torrington, Conn.

On September 17, 1932, his marriage to Elizabeth Marie Bouillon, daughter of Constant and Jennie Relyea Bouillon, took place in Torrington. Their daughters were both born there, Susan on September 7, 1934, and Jane Bouillon on September 26, 1938. Susan is a Junior at the Marblehead High School.

"We finally settled in Marblehead six years ago, after having lived in Watertown, Mass., and Hartford and Torrington, Conn.," Wylie writes. "Since reaching Marblehead, the family has become very much pleased with life in a small town. In the winter we try to ski, and in the summer we hope to get in plenty of sailing, having just acquired a small sailboat, which we were tempted to name the H.M.S. Imperceptible, except for the fact that there is not enough room for all those letters on the transom.

"I try to help Don Walker in acquiring good prospects for Yale. We hope to have three entering as Freshmen this fall to improve the representation from the North Shore."

DANIEL WOODBURY WYNKOOP. District manager, Encyclopædia Britannica, 92-32 Union Hall Street, Jamaica, N.Y.; residence, 140 Willow Avenue, Hempstead, N.Y.

"Leaving Yale early in my Senior year, my ambitions were great, my interests manifold," Wynkoop says. "Not too many years 'cut me down to size,' and I learned the many obstacles placed in the way of youth's urge to succeed in all phases of life. For almost twenty years I struggled with sub-standard income and above average obligations. No amount of energy or sacrifice seemed to solve the problem. To keep an even keel mentally I managed to keep a hobby—sailing boats—despite all the financial and physical vicissitudes.

"Over these years I learned a little here and a little there about the essential ingredients for financial success which I did not want for itself but for the fundamental physical and cultural requirements of a family that grew from one to seven people besides myself.

"Now finally these odds and ends of information are tied together in a neat package which makes a game out of business to the extent that the sailing hobby is set aside. The type of work I do meets most of the requirements for a full life; and when coupled with my growing family makes every daily move worth while.

"If a proper concept of selling is that of bringing others an advantage that they would not enjoy but for you—and sales management brings other men opportunities to earn above average income for performing such pleasant service—and the service itself really adds to the cultural and educational capacities of the public and its future generations, then my feelings are justified.

"My chief ambition today is to find other men like myself who could learn my work and share the tremendous ethical and financial rewards paid for honest service to a willing worker. My chief regret is that I did not learn sooner of the 'direct consumer' sales field because I have wasted so much good time."

Wynkoop was a real estate salesman with Brown, Wheelock Company of New York from 1925 to 1929 and then for three years a real estate negotiator with the Firestone Tire & Rubber Company. He was connected with the Bowery Savings Bank of New York as a mortgage inspector from 1932 to 1936 and subsequently had his own real estate brokerage business in Brooklyn for four years. From 1940 to 1943 he was an assistant agency manager with the Equitable Life Assurance Society of New York, although from December, 1942, to March, 1943, he was at Fort Eustis, Va., as a private in the Army. Wynkoop has been with the Encyclopædia Britannica since October, 1943; after a couple of months as a salesman in Brooklyn, he became branch manager in Philadelphia, where he remained for four years. He then became branch manager in Jamaica and since November, 1950, has held his present position.

Wynkoop was first married October 14, 1925, in Babylon, N.Y., to Marie T. Lawrence, daughter of Joseph W. and Mary Byrns Lawrence. Her death occurred on February 4, 1935. His second marriage, to Mary A. Fischer, daughter of Nicholas P. and Agnes Donohue Fischer, took place in Merrick, N.Y., June 30, 1937. His oldest son, Daniel W., 3d, who was born October 31, 1927, in Bay Shore, N.Y., was a seaman in the Navy during 1946-47 and is now a Senior at Yale. His older daughter, Mary Elizabeth, born January 6, 1929, in Merrick, spent some time with the Class of 1951 at the University of Pennsylvania; she was married June 22, 1949 in Hempstead to Donald Stein, of Philadelphia. The other children are: Gerardus Mills, born July 26, 1931, in Bay Shore and now a Sophomore at Fordham; Stephanie Rose, born July 23, 1938; Peter, born April 24, 1940; and Nicholas T., born May 21, 1942; the three youngest were born in Mineola.

CLARENCE CLARK ZANTZINGER, JR. Partner, Kneedler, Mirick & Zantzinger, architects, 12 South 12th Street, Philadelphia 7, Pa.; residence, Abrahams Lane, Ithan, Pa.

Zantzinger writes: "A year at architectural school convinced me that this profession offered a lot of interest and variety. I have been at it ever since and liked it. The well-known but unforeseen events which all of us in 1926 encountered—the Depression, World War II, and the current period (whatever it may come to be called)—developed obstacles, but our firm has grown along general rather than specialized architectural lines. Currently we are doing several nice houses (both modern and Philadelphia), some stores, churches, school, and utility work and are engaged in property development, as well as having a workout with the Army Engineers.

"I have always enjoyed traveling, particularly after a couple of trips to Europe. In 1931-32 I took my bride around the world. Looking back, it was a fortunate movement before our children arrived to tie us down to home routine. Also, we have been able to see a good deal of the U.S. through periodic visits to California, where my mother-in-law has a nice little ranch tucked away in the hills in back of Santa Barbara. Where next? The Inca country in Peru, I hope.

"World War II—Well, I wanted to go in the Navy, Quonset, etc., but, while waiting orders, the Army expressed an interest in young architects to assist with the military construction program. This seemed like a call to duty, so I abandoned my love for the sea and spent three and a half years chair-bound in the Pentagon intimately enmeshed with military construction on General Somervell's staff.

"Extra-curricular? A gardener and sailor by preference. Also with a real interest in various philanthropic activities here in Philadelphia, but with particular interest in the Episcopal Hospital [he is a director]. Recently my outspoken interest in government at the local level got me enmeshed as a commissioner here in Radnor Township, where I live—much work, but very interesting.

"I had come to believe that as an architect I had attained a certain distinction as a S.O.B.; rather well up in this group. A commissioner appears to be a step up the ladder. I wonder if there are any high gradations."

Zantzinger received a certificate from the Fontainebleau School of Fine Arts in 1928 and an M.A. in architecture at the University of Pennsylvania in 1930. He was a draftsman in the office of Zantzinger & Borie from 1929 to 1933, a real estate inspector with the Pennsylvania Company for the next two years, and in 1935 formed a partnership with two Princeton men, H. Martyn Kneedler and Henry D. Mirick, under the name of Kneedler, Mirick & Zantzinger. In 1932 he was registered in Pennsylvania by the National Council of Architectural Registration Boards. Zantzinger is a member of the American Institute of Architects and the Pennsylvania State Society of Architects and a director of the Charity Ball, Inc.

He received a commission as captain, A.U.S., in 1942 and was assigned to the headquarters staff of the Services of Supply until being placed on an inactive status in November, 1945. He was promoted to major in 1944 and received the Army Commendation Ribbon.

He was married October 24, 1931, in Bryn Mawr, Pa., to Mary Amory Cook, daughter of Arthur Byron and Mary Hare Cook. Her home was formerly in Media, Pa. The children, Amory Hare, born March 16, 1936, and Katharine Buckley on December 6, 1938, both in Bryn Mawr, attend the Agnes Irwin School in Wynnewood, Pa.
